The events which shall take place at, and after the second coming of Jesus Christ, are the following:

1. The resurrection of his saints. 2. The change, from mortality to immortality, of the good. 3. The "time of trouble such as never was" on earth. 4. The deliverance of God's "people," "written in the Book," from that "time of trouble." 5. The final action of the nations of earth in "the battle of that GREAT DAY of God Almighty. 7. The resurrection of the wicked at the end of one thousand years from the event of the second advent of Messiah. 8. The action of Gog and Magog, and their overthrow. 9. The renovation of this physical system, and the utter destruction of the enemies of God, by literal fire. 10. The unchangable and eternal existence of the New Heavens and New Earth.

7.

The second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, according to the divine prophecies, must take place immediately, for the following reason: the prophecies that were to be accomplished, before that event, are now nearly, if not quite, all accomplished. Some of the more important of them are the following:

1. The four universal kingdoms that were to arise on earth, have arisen in their successive order. 2. The fourth of those universal kingdoms that was to be divided into fragments, has been so divided. 3. The Papal system that was to arise, has arisen. 4. The peculiar phases through which that system was to pass, have taken place. 5. The decadence of the Papacy, that was to become manifest, has so become. 6. That which the fragments of the old Roman Empire should do, is mostly done, and what is not done, need not occupy any considerable length of time to finish. 7. The peculiar condition of the nations just at the time when the Advent shall occur, they are rapidly coming into. 8. "The tribulation" through which the church should pass, occasioned by Imperial persecution was sometime since finished. 9. The peculiar condition of the church generally, in immediate connection with the Advent, is distinctly marked, and the present condition of it as distinctly manifests those marks. The love of many has waxed, and is waxing cold—the form, instead of the power of godliness is contended for, professing christians, mostly, seek for "pleasure" more than devotion—a class have gone "forth to meet the Bridegroom," and he tarries—one class of ministers, or servants, preach, "My Lord delayeth his coming," and another, "Behold he cometh quickly"—many in different parts of the world have been "purified, made white, and tried," (and are still being tried) in this "time of the end," as a consequence of becoming righteously interested in the prophecies—the true people of God are crying "day and night to be delivered"—"the book" of Daniel's reference, that was to be closed up and sealed, "till the time of the end," is now open to, and largely read by the holy people—many have been, and still are running "to and fro," and knowledge is increasing—in short, the church is "in the day of His preparation." 10. Individuals, and masses, too, outside of the church, are saying and doing precisely what the Word of Prophecy declares they shall say and do when the Lord is especially at hand. "The wicked do wickedly," "none" of them seem to "understand" that the awful day is so near. The "mockers" inquire, "Where is the promise of his coming?" without as well as within the nominal church. "Evil men and seducers wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived;" and they make the "times" "perilous," politically, morally, socially, and generally. The masses, at large, are drinking, to deep and fatal intoxication, the cup of pleasure, gain and strife. This measure of heaven-daring wickedness is almost full. 11. The physical signs that were to precede the Advent, can, many of them, be referred to in the past. There have been "signs in the sun, moon, and stars," and the heavens generally—"blood, fire, and vapor of smoke"—"wonders," also on "the earth," and in the floods—"the sea and the waves roaring," and various and startling phenomena in many departments of nature, speaking the word of warning. But I cease for the present. Let us believe God!

For the Crisis.

Adventist.

What's in a name?

"Much, every way."

Why?

"Because names are supposed to be expressive of qualities, or characteristics."

What is an Adventist?

"One who believes in an Advent."

What does Advent mean?

"It signifies coming."

Then an Adventist believes in the coming of something or somebody; pray who, or what?

"Why, the coming of Christ, to be sure."

Ah! indeed; but the name doesn't express that idea, at all. But do not the great majority of Christians believe that Christ will come?

"Yes."

Then what is an Adventist?

"Adventists believe the Lord will come soon."

So does Dr. Cumming, so do hosts of others, but they are not Adventists. What then, is an Adventist a"

"The Theological dictionary tells us it is a Millerite."

But what is that?"

"A follower of William Miller."

Who was he?

"A good man who preached that the Lord would come about the year 1843."

What else did he preach?

"Faith, repentance, baptism, the new earth, the kingdom of God, the inheritance given to Abraham, &c."

But were not all these truths believed and preached by others before Miller, from the days of Christ down?"

"Certainly, this is clearly shown in 'The Voice of the Church.'"

What, then, was there peculiar in Mr. Miller's views?

"Merely, that the Lord would come about 1843."

Was this all?

"Yes, so far as I can learn."

Well, does any one now believe this to be true?

"No."

Well are there any Millerites now?

"It would seem there could not be, since no person professes to hold views which were peculiar to Mr Miller."

How came Millerites to be called Adventists?

"They themselves changed the name."

Why?

"They thought Adventist more proper, and Millerite was a term of reproach."

Well, Millerite means a follower of Miller, and Adventist must mean a comingite; that is, one who believes in a coming of something; but what, when, or how, the name does not state. In what sense do they understand the term?

"They use it to denote those christians who are expecting the return of Christ."

Yes, but are there not many christians expecting that, who are not Adventists?

"O certainly."

Then what does the name mean?

"Why it is applied to that class which hold certain views on the subject such as Mr. Miller held."

What, on the time of the Advent?

"No."

Well, then, I am to suppose that they all hold his views in regard to the events, irrespective of the time?

"No, not just that, for some differ very materially from others, and frequently preach and write against each other's views."

"Well, what then; do they all co-operate together, irrespective of differences?

"No, there are some among Adventists that are far from being united."

Well, in the name of common sense, what is an Adventist? Is he a good man, or a bad man, or an indifferent man?

"Well, there are some of each among them."

Is he a christian or a worldling?

"Some of both are called Adventists."

Well do tell what an Abventist is?

"That seems to be a difficult matter; indeed, they sometimes disagree among themselves about it."

But how came they by that name, it seems to be new, unlike anything in heaven and earth.

"Well, after the time passed by, many who had been called Millerites met at Albany, and drew up a kind of platform."

What, a sort of confession of faith, or creed?

"Well something like that."

Are all Adventists required to adhere to that?

"O no; many have already changed their position."

Well about the name; how was it?

"Why, you see when there they deliberated upon a name, and Prof. W——g, who knew latin, coined the name Adventist, from a latin word signifying coming, or something of that sort, and they liked the name and have called themselves by it ever since."

Do they profess to be God's children?

"O certainly."

Who gives names to children, the uncle, brother, aunt or father?

"Why, the FATHER of course."

Does the Bible teach that the whole family of God is named of him, or by him, Eph. 3: 15?

"I believe it does."

Well, now suppose your name is John Smith, and you have a number of children what will their names be?

"Why John, Martin, or William Smith, as the case may be."

But suppose that some good uncle, or brother, or step-son should name them John Tinker, Martin Luther, or John Wesley, and not leave them the first letter of Smith about them, how would you like that?

"Like it! I should regard it as an audacious insult, unless I gave them liberty to do so."

But supposing that your children should wish to bear some one's else name, and should prefer being Tinkers, &c., rather than Smiths?

"I should tell them that as long as they were my children they must bear my name, and if they were not suited with my name, they must take care of themselves."

Well, has God given names to his children?

"Yes, in the Bible."

Did he ever give John Calvin, or Martin Luther, or John Wesley, or John the Baptist, or Prof. W——g, any authority to give their names to his children?

"No, I think not."

Did he ever authorize them to coin names for his children?

"No."

Well then, did the Lord ever authorize any of his children when they got sick of the name that their father gave them to go and call on their brothers for new ones?

"Not that I know of."

Well, if it would be an audacious insult for any one else to give names to your children; and if you would disown a child that cast aside your name and chose another, pray tell me how the great God must view such little interferences with his family arrangements?

"Ahem; well I really don't like to say."

Well, did God ever call his children Adventists?

"No."

Did he ever tell any one else to do so?

"No."

Well, would you like to have any one of your neighbors nickname your children?

"No."

Well then, you see that you don't nickname God's children any more.

"Let party names no more
The christian world o'erspread
The Jew and Gentile, bond and free,
Are one in Christ their head."

IRENÆUS.

For the Crisis.

A Word about the Camp-Meeting.

I hope all, that possibly can, will set one week apart to go out into the wilderness for the worship of the God of our fathers, as they did after the gathering in of the fruits of the land. The ark of God was found in the field of the mower.

I intend to secure tent room for one hundred or more, that cannot provide for themselves. None need buy tent frames, for I have made the arrangement on the ground.

All that can will please buy lamps or lanterns to light their own tents. I will see that there is oil on the ground for your lamps.

I shall do my best to have everything in order, and economically arranged for the comfort of the encampment. I expect good weather, good preaching, a good number present, and a great blessing upon the people at large: for many will attend this year in this vicinity, that have had no ears to hear before; hence practical subjects will be necessary to reach them. If the heart is right and leads, the head wont swim. It is much easier to draw a loaded cart up hill than to back it up. I expect the grace of God will give wisdom at the time, sufficient to direct.

Those wishing to board themselves the whole or a part of the time, can get provision on or near the ground as cheap as at home, and save the expense and trouble of transportation.

A boarding tent will be erected on the ground, to accommodate all that do not wish to board themselves, on reasonable terms. Recollect the stopping-place—North Wilbraham, Collins depot.

There will be a baggage wagon from the cars to the ground, to accommodate all that wish to ride 80 rods.

HIRAM MUNGER.

For the Crisis

Elijah.

BY MARY A. GRANT.

Our first acquaintance with Elijah commences at the time when idolatrous Ahab reigned in Israel; a king who had provoked the displeasure of the Lord God, more than any other king who had ruled before him. Evil was dominant in Ahab's heart; and step by step he retrograded from that purity of worship instituted by Jehovah,—for many years maintained by his fathers, and now become an offerer of incense at the shrine of Baal.

In the midst of his corruptness—behold him silent and abashed before the man of God, whose words like arrows pierced his guilty soul,—"As the Lord God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word."

How must that traitorous heart been agitated, as the fearful prophecy again and again sounded in his ears, and as oft reiterated by a smitten conscience. But Elijah—there he stands, fearlessly confronting iniquity, though clothed in royalty,—holiness in his heart, and the boldness of truth upon his lips. We may well look upon him as the chosen of God, sanctified for an especial work and purpose, and how faithfully do we see that work and purpose accomplished in his varied life—emphatically that of faith. Jehovah is his guide and shield, his instructor and deliverer. His patient wanderings, repeated conflicts, prayers, sacrifices, firm and unflinching faith, again and again attract the especial benediction and favor of Heaven. He shrinks from no position which the Lord calls upon him to occupy, whether it be to prophecy before kings, or trustingly to wait for his daily food beside the simple brook; it is the same with him. His is the obedience of faith. May his spirit rest on us.

He listens, and the command is,—"Get thee hence and hide thyself by the brook Chereth, that is before Jordan;" and straightway he does according to the word of the Lord, who promised to feed him there. At morning's dawn and evening's shade, the faithful messengers of the air descend to give him bread and flesh: "and he drank of the brook," and was content.

But soon this fount of life was dried, and faith awaits the word from above, which now directs him to the city of Sarepta. There we find him subsisting for one full year, in company with a poor widow and her son, upon an "handful of meal" and "a little oil in the cruse." There, all-conquering faith in prayer revived the widow's son, and also restores to the widow's heart new confidence in Israel's God, the mighty One of Jacob.

Again we view him at Mt. Carmel with the gathered hosts of Israel, together with the prophets of Baal, four hundred and fifty in number, besides the four hundred prophets of the groves. And these the prophet challenges to prove theirs the true God by calling down fire from heaven upon their sacrifices. But evening came, and to the prayers and beseechings of a day, devoted to calling upon their god, no answer came, no voice, no fire for the idolatrous worshippers and priests. And while the keen satire of Elijah was yet rankling in their hearts, the Lord God of Abraham, Isaac and Israel, made himself known; "and the fire consumed the sacrifice, the wood, the stones, the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench." Thus having proved the Lord his God, he ascends the mountain top and prays. "Rain for the people," is his plaint, and though seven times tried, unyielding faith clings to the promise, and behold! the cloud appears, which bursts in showers upon the grateful earth.

Again, hunted for his life, we find him, fainting beneath the juniper tree, fed by angels. Then, with the Lord upon the mount—afterwards at the cave, listening, while shrouded with his mantle, to the "still small voice," which said to him—"What dost thou here, Elijah?"

From hence the Lord sends him to Elisha, who from his ploughing in the field, hastes to unite himself with the man of faith, and henceforth becomes the partner of his pilgrimage and faith.

Once more we find him withstanding Ahab, whose hands were reddened with his neighbor's blood; who had sold himself to work wickedness in the sight of God, progressing with rapid strides in the way of death. But in the presence of the Tishbite, the king trembles—becomes penitent, and God's mercy averts the impending evil.

Up to the time when the Lord would take Elijah into his presence, he maintains the same unmoved, unflinching purpose to fulfil the requirements of his God. His heart knows no other wish but obedience to heaven; no other will but that of Him who answers by fire; no other dependence but that which clings to the never-forgetting goodness which followed him in all his necessities and vicissitudes. Unswerving faith was the basis of his power with God; and which at last, ensured a sublime transit from earth to heaven—from wanderings to rest—from the presence of enemies to the communion of angels and God—from a lonely wilderness of parched streams and weeds of death, to the Eden of love—the fountain of life—the fullness of joy before the throne. He ascends in the "chariot of Israel;" and as the firey vision recedes from the gaze of the sorrowing Elisha, behold the mantle of the prophet rests upon him and a double portion of his spirit, also.

Elijah finished his mission, and God accepted him.

Death on his brow no sombre signe tset
To count with many in the earth entombed;
But from his power triumphant, chainless
Sped from earth, to more salubrious clime]
The Lord's swift chariots of rolling fire,
And horsemen, heralded from ranks above
Upbear him in the whirlwind's path, e'en to
The portals of the city fair where God
Resides, and angels chant his praise for aye

Boston, Aug. 1856.

For the Crisis.

Let the Church Pray!"—Martyn Luther.

BY SR. HIGGINS.

The subject of prayer is one that I approach with awe! It is like the golden sceptre in the hand of the King of kings. It is the power that moves the mind, that moves the universe.

Not merely a few of the best specimens of human kind should pray, "but all men.

Not on some extra occasions, but "always." We are not merely permitted to pray, but "ought always to pray."

Prayer is addressed to the Deity through the Mediator; and consists of confession, intercession and thanksgiving.

Confession is becoming, because of our fallen state and the infinite disparity between us, as fallen mortals, and the "only immortal"—the ever blessed and holy God. This is a very important part of prayer, the omission of which incurs the the danger of "rushing like the unthinking horse into the battle." Confession of sin, also, if condemnation rests on the soul, of errors, or "tresspasses" growing out of errors of judgment, and also our entire renunciation of our own righteousness, trusting alone in the righteousness of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

Pray with humble thanksgiving for the new and living way of access to God through the veil of Jesus' flesh, and for the exceeding great and precious promises made over to us through the gospel, by which we may escape the corruptions that are in the world, and be partakers of the divine nature; with thanksgiving for past benefits, the remembrance and rehearsal of which, has a tendency to inspire confidence for the future. But above all, let prayer be made with a real desire arising from a knowledge of our wants. Let prayer be offered with simplicity. Use not vain words—a multiplicity of words—ask for those things that you expect to receive: i. e., ask in faith. Some people pray for everything, expect nothing, and consequently get nothing. Let prayer be offered understandingly; understanding not only our wants, but also the promises we should plead before the Lord—the conditions of the promises. This point cannot be too carefully examined. There are blessings that I need—that I desire. God has promised them on certain conditions. Do I comply with the conditions? If I do, I have not to use many words to induce God to comply with his promise. He is always ready to do his needy people good when they place themselves in an attitude where it would be consistent for him to bless. When understanding prayer is offered, and the conditions of the promises complied with, it would be sin not to believe. Hence, this class of promises (individual promises) runs thus:

"If we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us, and if we know that he heareth us, whatsoever we ask we know we have the petitions we desired of him." "When ye pray, believe ye receive the things ye ask for, and ye shall have them."

There are some things that are not the subjects of direct promise. Such was the case when Elijah prayed; he had no explicit promise, therefore he prayed seven times. So of the elect who cry day and night; "though he bear long . . . . he will avenge them speedily." So of Daniel, he prayed for national blessings, and his prayer was heard, but the answer was deferred. I mention these cases that we may be able to discriminate between personal and national blessings. For the want of this discrimination, much prayer is lost, and time wasted with vain repetition like the heathen, who think they shall be heard for their much speaking. When we come to God for blessings he has promised, we must bring those promises along with us; "put me in remembrance"—and having assurred ourselves that we comply with the conditions, it is not only our privilege, but duty to believe. Much is lost for the want of an active appropriating FAITH.

We ought always to pray—"with all prayer." Private, social and public. Always have the spirit of prayer, so that we may know what that meaneth—"pray without ceasing."

I come to the application. "Let the church pray," said Martyn Luther, when the German Princes asked him if they should appeal to arms to protect the little church from the thunders of the pope and the combined force of all the catholic powers led on by the most potent sovereign of modern Europe—Charles V. "Let the church pray. "Is not my Lord Jesus Christ more powerful than his holiness the pope, or his majesty the Emperor?" The church did pray. God was their refuge in this their time of greatest need. God heard their prayer. Their faith was tried to the last extremity. Charles marched into Germany with the Spanish army, and united with the Catholic German Princes, making a powerful force sufficient to swallow up the infant church; with the avowed purpose of executing the Pope's bulls against Luther and his adherents. Luther's keen eye saw the distant cloud; he heard the muttering thunder; he saw the horizon overcast with dark, ominous clouds—still, unmoved as the rock, he sought no other refuge than the name of the Lord.

"Let the church pray." They did, and God heard and answered their prayer. Charles and the Pope had a quarrel. Irritated and incensed against the pope, he turned his arms against his holiness, marched into Rome, and took the city; unable or unwilling to restrain the fury of his soldiers for three days and nights. Rome was at the mercy of the merciless soldiers of his most Catholic majesty! The Pope was a prisoner in his own castle, and the city sacked and burned by the members of his own communion. Never was there a more memorable answer to prayer.

Another instance. When Arnold had concluded to deliver West Point into the hands of the English, several British ships were ordered to drop down so as to be ready for service. Some of the soldiers expecting an action, united in asking God to turn away that battle. God heard and answered prayer! Andre was taken as a spy, and the entire plan frustrated. Who in reading that history, would imagine those great events turned on the prayers of a few poor soldiers!!

Brethren and sisters, we purpose fighting a grand battle with the armies of the North, East and West; intend uniting on the old battle-ground in North Wilbraham. We want victory; we have had some victories there, and I am sorry to say, some defeats, in consequence of some soldiers being unarmed. Now I pray you put on the whole armor of light, and stand valiantly at your post, having the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God; praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all the saints. And do not forget to pray for the preachers, that utterance may be given them, that they may open their mouths boldly, to make known the mystery of the gospel.

Take your unconverted friends and backslidden Brn. and Srs. with you; go with your armor on,—go praying—go expecting God to bless. Keep praying, remembering that victory will be achieved not by might or power, but by the Spirit of the Lord. Not by great instrumentalities, but by the weak things of this world, confounding the mighty, that none should glory in man; "but he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord."

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. Edwin Burnham.

DEAR BRETHREN AND FRIENDS:—We have reason to comfort ourselves, and take courage. Things, among those who wait, in many places, look more interesting and promising. I have recently had several applications for baptism by those who have lately come into the faith. Our brethren, in most places, are rising above the reaction of the disappointment of time, and fixing themselves again on the Word, firmly. Many who have been contentious for minor points, are "seeking meekness," that they "may be hid in the day of the Lord's anger." We can do nothing else but go forward. To go back is perdition, to turn aside is foolishness, to go forward is LIFE ETERNAL! I have made up my mind to desperation—I preach this blessed doctrine of the Second Advent, and its kindred truths, or I preach nothing! I believe this, or I believe nothing! Amen! Seal it, my Father, in heaven! God is with us. Amen! EDWIN BURNHAM.

A noble person needs but a plain garment to set it off; a beautiful picture but a simple frame; a great thought is best dressed in simple language. But all these need a spirit of understanding to be appreciated.

Advise not what is the most pleasant but the most useful.

Obituary.

Died in West Poland, Me., June 13, '56, Sister Joanna, wife of Capt. Robert Snell, aged 90 years and 1 month.

Sister Snell was a native of Massachusetts, and moved with her husband, while quite young, into the forests of Hebron, Me, where she found Jesus to be precious to her soul. Since then, she has lived a godly life, and after a year's extreme suffering, she quietly fell asleep in Jesus. She leaves a large family of sons and daughters and numerous friends and relatives to mourn her loss; but they need not sorrow as others which have no hope, for, when the trumpet sounds, she will come forth in the likeness of Jesus. L. L. HOWARD.

Domestic Summary.

Arrival of the Ariel from California.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.

The steamer Ariel arrived at this port about 11 o'clock to-night.

All was quiet on the Isthmus.

The U. S. frigate Independence, for which fears were entertained, had arrived at Valparaiso.

Crops are everywhere abundant

The town of Placerville has had 168 buildings burned. Loss $600,000.

The village of Georgetown, Placer county, has also been burned. Loss $100,000.

A large number of buildings have been burnt at Marysville. Loss $160,000.

The town of Fair Play, El Dorado county, likewise has been burnt. Loss $70,000.

Numerous shooting affrays in the interior have been recorded.

The Vigilance Committee continues its sway, but nothing of moment had transpired during the fortnight.

FROM KANSAS.—APPREHENDED COLLISION BETWEEN GEN. LANE AND THE MISSOURIANS.—(Correspondence of the N. Y. Times) CHICAGO, Aug. 7. I have late and reliable intelligence from Kansas to the effect that:

Richardson, Major General of the Militia under the bogus Legislature, has gone to the Northern frontier with 300 or 400 Missourians and Southerners, to prevent the entrance of free soil men.

Gen. Lane is on the Iowa frontier; his plans are not known.

Parties have gone from the vicinity of Lawrence and Topeka to watch Richardson, and aid Lane, in case of conflict: but most of the Free Sate men in the Territory are required to stay at home to guard against the threatened depredations of the guerilla bands in the Southern part.

It is now currently reported throughout the territory that Gen. Smith will not attempt to prevent the entry of Lane: neither will he interfere to prevent a fight with the Ruffians. If a conflict ensues, he will proclaim martial law, and allow the parties to fight it out.

DECLINE OF MOHAMMEDANISM.—An agent of the American Bible Society in Turkey says that in a recent tour in the Levant, he everywhere found an increased interest in the Bible and the christian religion among the Moslems, who are becoming indifferent and sceptical with regard to their faith. They are not so strict in performing their prayers and pilgrimages, as in observing their fasts and festivals, and their mosques are more neglected, very few heeding the call to prayer even in Egypt, where formerly they were the most bigoted and fanatical. All the mosques in Cairo are falling into decay.

There is a tradition, that when the great mosque of Omer, founded by the conqueror of the city, begins to decline, the doom of Islamism is sealed. Its walls are already crumbling. Since the publication of the Sultan's last firman, intelligent Mussulmen feel that they are free to do as they please in regard to their religion, and many purchase the Scriptures and read them with great interest. They are losing their prejudice, and respect Protestants, in contrast with the adherents of a corrupt christianity in the oriental churches. One of them recently remarked that if Mohammedans ever change their religion, they will not become christians who worship idols, and pictures, but Protestants who worship God in spirit and in truth.

ANTICIPATED COLLISION BETWEEN THE FREE STATE EMIGRANTS AND MISSOURIANS.—The Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune, says:

Mr. Coates, counsel of Gov. Robinson, has just arrived here from Kansas, and reports that a collision between the advancing emigrants, through Iowa, and the Missourians, is probable. He confirms the previous reports that the Missourians are assembling in large numbers at Iowa Point, near the line of Kansas and Nebraska, under command of Gen. Richardson, of Wakerusa war notoriety. This attempt to drive off free emigrants is done with the concurrence of Gov. Shannon, who had not then heard of his removal. Companies of the free State settlers from Topeka, Lawrence, the Beecher settlement, and other free State places, have gone to aid the emigrants in reaching the territory.

TERRIBLE STORM AT NEW ORLEANS.—AN ISLAND INUNDATED—130 LIVES REPORTED LOST. NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 16—A terrible storm occurred in this vicinity on Sunday which lasted all day, and also all day on Monday. Its effects, however, were most disastrous at Last Island, a great summer resort, and which our accounts represented to have been entirely inundated.

Every building on the island is said to have been swept away, and no less than 137 lives are reported lost.

Foreign News.

QUEBEC, Aug. 10.

The screw steamship Anglo-Saxon, from Liverpool, Wednesday, July 30, arrived at this port at an early hour this morning.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The British Parliament was prorogued on the 29th ult. until the 7th of October next.

SPAIN.

Our advices from Spain continue meagre and unreliable, the telegraph and public roads being in the hands of the government, whose announcements say that on the 24th ult., the Royal troops commenced to bombard the city of Saragossa, whereupon the insurgents within demanded five days' cessation of hostilities, which was granted.

The information conveyed to the London press, however, states that although the city of Madrid is quiet, the whole of the important province of Arragon continues in successful revolt.

ITALY.

From Italy we have a statement by telegraph of a revolt in the Duchy of Massacarra. We are, however, without any reliable particulars.

The Austrian officials state that the movement was insignificant, and that it was promptly suppressed.

Three millions ball-cartridges are ordered by telegraph to be sent from Cologne to Italy.

Arrival of the Arago.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.

Steamer Arago, from Havre, July 30, arrived here this forenoon, sailing the same day as the Anglo-Saxon.

CHINA.

Advices from China state that the revolution was progressing; 65 rebels were beheaded in one day.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

Preparations are making for the laying down of a submarine cable between Genoa and the coast of Africa.

It is said that the French army of observation on the Spanish frontier is, in consequence of orders received from the Emperor, to be increased to 25,000 men. It is also positively stated that the concentration of troops in the neighborhood of Bayonne is with the intention of intervening in Spain.

OUR FOREIGN RELATIONS.

The usually well informed Washington correspondent of the New York Journal of Commerce, says that the statement of the London Times in regard to the arrangement between Mr. Dallas and Lord Clarendon respecting Central American affairs, is not without foundation, and makes the following disclosures, which, if true, are important:

"But in connection with this adjustment, we have highly important intelligence as to the policy and position of England, in regard to the United States and Spain and France.

England is about to come into collision with France upon the subject of the ambitious designs of the latter power upon Spain. There is reason to believe that Napoleon III. has revived the pretensions of the first Napoleon to the crown of Spain, and that he now directs his entire policy towards that object.

He has seconded his intentions by acts. He has been and is engaged in concentrating a vast military force upon the frontiers of Spain; and, with what intrigue, through the Queen Mother Christina, and a demonstration of force, may bring about a state of things in Spain, favorable to his ambitious views.

If he conquer Spain, he will seek possession of Cuba, which the United States is pledged to resist. England has, therefore, as I am advised, recommended to the government of Spain, the cession of Cuba to the United States, for such a consideration as will recruit the exhausted finances of the Spanish government, and enable it to resist the designs of France.

That Spain cannot long retain possession of Cuba, is apparent; and the British government, looking to a rupture with France on the Spanish question, is desirous both to strengthen Spain and conciliate the United States, by bringing about a cession of the Island to the United States.

When this matter shall assume a more definite form, and the Central American question shall be settled, it is thought probable that Lord Howden, the present minister to Spain, but now in London, on leave of absence, will be sent to this government as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, to complete such arrangements as will bring about a firm alliance between England and the United States against the designs of Napoleon III."

Arrival of the Canada.

HALIFAX, Aug. 11.

The royal mail steamship Canada, from Liverpool, about 10 A. M., on Saturday, the 2d inst., arrived here at 4.30 this P. M.

SPAIN.

Accounts continue uncertain, but indications are that the Royal cause has triumphed [illegible] that the entire country has submitted, and that Saragossa unsupported, will be immediately reduced.

AUSTRIA.

Letters say that the relations between Austria and Russia are becoming friendly.

ITALY.

A letter from Parma, in the Opinione of Turin, of the 25th, states that the Austrians have made preparations for crossing the Po at four different points, at or near Viadana Solarelo and Casalmaggiore.

The Indian mail brings accounts of an earthquake in Moluccas, March 2, causing a loss of 2000 lives.

.CAMPMEETINGS.

Campmeeting at Cheshire, Mass.

The Lord permitting, there will be a Campmeeting at Chesire, Mass., one half mile from the depot, to commence Sept. 15, and continue over the following Sabbath.

We invite all the lovers of Jesus, and those who wish to become his followers, to come in the name of the Lord with their tents to the feast of tabernacles; for we expect the good Lord will meet with his people and forgive sinners.

Board and horse keeping on reasonable terms, with a free table for God's poor. Those coming by railroad, will find teams in readiness to convey them to the camp-ground on the arrival of the trains.

Brethren invited. M. Batchelor, L. Boutell, H. Pratt, J. Turner, and all who can come.

Yours in hope,
ALONZO CUMMINGS, HIRAM BENTON,
For the Brethren.

Cheshire, Aug. 9, '56.

Campmeeting at Litchfield Station, Conn

The Lord willing, we have decided to have one more camp-meeting before the Lord comes, to be held at Litchfield station, Ct., commencing Wednesday, the 10th of September, to continue one week.

Elders Grant, Matthewson, E. Burnham, H. Munger, A. Decker, and others are expected to attend.

Come, Brethren and Sisters, Preachers, all, far and near, bring your tents, let us worship God once more together beneath the shady grove.

For particulars. see next week.
For the Brethren,
G. W. DENNEY.

Bro. York and myself propose, if the Lord will to hold the following conferences, each to continue over the Sabbath.

The first to commence Friday eve, Aug. 15,
The second, Friday eve, Aug. 22, at Brunswick, Me.
The third, Friday eve, Aug. 29th, at Bowdoinham, Me.

L. D. HOWARD.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

If nothing prevents, I will preach as follows:

At Freeport Flying Point, Sunday, August 24.

At Freeport Methodist Chapel, Sunday Sept. 7. R. R. YORK.

Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at
Portsmouth 5th Sunday in Aug.
Kennebunkport 1st Sunday in Sept.
Boston 2nd Sunday in Sept

BRO. GRANT:—As some of my appointments now published interfere with others, will you please do me the favor to drop the list now being published and in their stead publish the following:

Providence permitting, I will preach as follows:
Athol, Mass., Sunday Aug. 24.
Salem, Mass. Sunday, Aug. 31.
Lawrence Mass. Sunday Sept. 7.
Portsmouth N. H., Sunday Sept 14.
S. W. BISHOP.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Lawrence Sunday Aug. 17.
Portsmouth N. H. Sunday Aug. 31.
Lowell, Sunday, Sept. 7.
Lynn Dye-house Sunday Sept. 14.
J. HEMENWAY.

Providence permitting, I will be with the brethren in Westfield, Thursday eve. Sept. 4.
Chester Factories, Friday Sept. 5.
Cheshire, Saturday Sept. 6.
North Adams, Sunday 7.
Savoy Tannery, Monday evening 8.
West Hawley, Tuesday 9.
Charlemont, Wednesday 10.
Conway, Thursday 11.
Greenfield, Friday 12.
Vernon, Vt., Sunday 14. H. PRATT.

Providence permitting, Bro. J. Couch will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., the first and third Sundays in August.

Appointments for Worcester.
Bro. H Pratt, Aug. 24.
Bro. Brewer. Aug. 31.
S AYRES.

Providence permitting I will preach at Canterbury town-house the third Sabbath in Aug.
West Boscowen, the 4th Sab. in Aug.
Waterloo (Warner) the 5th Sabbath in Aug. T. M. PREBLE.

The meetings in Lowell are at the old stand, "Kirk street Chapel" as follows:
Wednesday evenings, prayer and conference meetings. Friday evenings, class meetings. Preaching every Lord's day.
Bro. J. Couch, Aug. 24.
M. W. CORLISS.

Providence permitting, Bro. D. E. Moulton will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., the last Sunday in Sept. S. W. BISHOP.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

SPIRITUAL MANIFESTATIONS A SATANIC DELUSION AND A SIGN OF THE TIMES, By WILLIAM RAMSEY, Pastor of the Cedar St, Presbyterian church, Philadelphia, EDITED with a preface, by H. L. HASTINGS.

This is undoubtedly the best work extant on this question upon which so much paper and ink has been wasted.

It is a 12mo. volume, neatly bound in cloth gilt, and will be sent by mail post paid on receipt of the price, fifty cents. Copies in paper covers will be sent by mail, post paid, for 38 cents, or three copies for one dollar. Price bound, $37 per 100, paper, $25.

Immediate orders are solicited with the cash. Direct to H. L. Hastings.
Peacedale, R. I.

Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called the 'Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

Pauline Theology,	15 cts. single,	$10 per 100
The Old Paths,	18 " "	12 " "
State of the Dead, by Milton,	5 " "	3 " "
Intermediate State, by Grew,	5 " "	3 " "
Future Punishment, by Grew,	2 " "	1 " "
The Church not in Darkness,	5 " "	3 " "
The Three Worlds,	5 " "	" 3 "
The Last Days,	5 " "	" 3 "
Scripture Tract,	3 " "	1,50 "
"	"	2 series, 75 cts.

Signs of the Times, 75 cts.

A Treatise on the 24th and 25th chapters of Matthew, by I. C. Wellcome. Price 33 cts. postage 6 cts.

Voice of the Church, by D. T. Taylor Price $1 single, $9 per dozen. Postag 17. cents.

Dr. Decker's pamphlet on the 2300 Days. Price, singly 10 cts.; per dozen, 50 cts.

Works of John Cumming of London:
Benedictions of the Blessed Life, 75 cts.
The Church before the Flood, 75 cts.
Lectures on the Apocalypse, 1 series, 75 cts.

TRACTS.

I have several new ones. Three by Dr. Cumming.
1. "Noah—his age and ours."
2. "The Desire of all nations."
3. "It is done." Price 5 cts. each. $3 per 100.

GLAD TIDINGS:
or
BIBLE PROOF

That WOE and SIN are to END in the Universe, by a LITERAL DESTRUCTION of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment.

All Texts on FUTURE PUNISHMENT collected and arranged.

By JACOB BLAIN,
Baptist Minister, of Buffalo, New York.

"And there shall be no more death, sorrow, crying, nor pain."—Rev. 21: 4.

"And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, * * * heard I saying, blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, forever and ever."—Rev. 5: 13.

"The last enemy shall be DESTROYED."—1 Cor. 15: 26.

Published by the author, No. 19 North Division Street, Buffalo, N. Y., and for sale at the Crisis Office, Boston, Mass. Price 10 cts. single.

NEW BOOKS.

We have just received two new and interesting works. One from Bro. J. Lenfest, entitled "The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion," and "The New Birth."

Price for single copy 12 cts; per hundred, $8; to the poor free.

They can be had at this office, or of Bro. Lenfest at Machiasport, Me.

Another from William Shepherd, Elizabeth City, N. Y., entitled, "The Saints' Inheritance."

Bro. Shepherd will furnish this work of 50 pages at the following low rates, which he says is below cost, as he wishes the truth to be spreading:

Four copies	$0.25
Nine	0.50
Eighteen	1.00
Fifty	2.50
One hundred	5.00

And in addition, he will prepay the postage.

"WELLCOME'S TREATISE ON MATT., 24TH AND 25TH CHAPTERS.—Permit me to say a word in favor of this work, and that is, in brief, to express my conviction that it is the best work on Matt. 24th and 25th I have ever seen. It is truthful, stirring, perspicuous, adapted to convince, and not lengthy. I hope our brethren will circulate it widely."

"D. T. TAYLOR."

Dec. 11th, 1855.

For sale by J. M. Fairchild & Co., New York city, 109 Nassau St.; P. B. Morgan, Moline, Ill.; and by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I. Price 33cts. Postage, 6 cts.

BRO. GRANT:—Permit me to inform the friends in the West, that I have received a quantity of books and tracts, and can fill orders at short notice. I will give a list of the works I have received.

BOOKS.—Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ, by D. T. Taylor, Price	$1.00
Dobney on Future Punishment,	.75
Pauline Theology,	.75
Church Debts, by Wm. Ramsey, D.D.,	.75
Treaties on Matt 24th and 25th Chaps., by I. C. Welcome,	.33
The world as it was, is, and will be, by Mrs. A. C. Judson,	.38
Bible vs. Tradition, paper covers,	.60
Unity of Man, by Anthropos,	.15
Age of Gospel Light, by Z. Campbell,	.12
Spiritualism, a Satanic Delusion and a sign of the times by Wm. Ram-[illegible]

TRACTS.—Voice of warning from the four winds—Church not in darkness—Three Worlds—Last days—New Heaven and Earth—Milton on the State of the Dead—Tracts by Dr. J. Cumming—Noah, His and our age, No. 1.—The desire of all nations, No. 2.—It is done, No. 3. The above tracts are $3. per hundred, 5 cts single.

Also, Tracts entitled—Vindication—Landmarks—True source of Life—Key of truth—Night cometh, and others.

Also, Scripture Searchers, No. 1, 2. 3.

Send orders with cash, to Walter Pratt, Moline, Illinois.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

Amelia Crabtree—We receive any amount in postage stamps.

Cash Receipts.

J C Day, F Bates, Jr., D Veazy, C Fleming, E H Case, Savilla Case, A A Lawrence, A M Crabtree, J Stockwell, Caroline J Brown, C Perry, C F Dixon, Miss Kate Dixon, B P Braley, Dorothy H Caverley, S K Stewart, A Prescott, Levi Houghton, E Stowe, J P Darling, J Capin, Julia W Gilman, B G Bancroft $1 each.

A Flavel $5; Mary A Ecclestone $2.

FOR THE OLD DEBT OF THE CRISIS.—
J Stockwell $1.

Whole amount of the Debt,	$200,00
Amount paid in on the Old Debt.	$176.10
Amount still due	23.90

FOR THE DEBT OF THE ADVENT WATCHMAN.—

J Stockwell	$1.00
Amount of debt	$785.00
Amount paid in on debt	72.25
Amount still due	$712.75

Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 1.

THE best cathartic ever used. It purges without pain, and never acts like the common purgative pills. It is exceedingly valuable in almost every type of disease.

RESTORATIVE BITTERS, No. 2.

This is an alterative; just the medicine that is needed to counteract and remove the Spring and other complaints to which so many persons are unhappily subject.

Spikenard and Dandelion Syrup.

This is most active in expelling from the system humors and chronic impurities of the blood. It is not only medicinal but nutritious also; it purifies and nourishes the blood at the same time. In connection with the No. 1, it has cured very many cases that have been regarded as incurable.

COUGH SYRUP.

For Coughs, Bronchitis Asthma, Whooping Cough and Consumptive habits It will be found to serve an excellent purpose in all cases where a Cough Mixture is of use.

The above Medicines may be obtained of the proprietor, corner of Moody and Austin Streets, Lowell, Mass., and of Geo. T. Adams, 187 Hanover St., Boston, Mass.

☞ We have thus far avoided publishing any advertisements in the Crisis; but as Dr. Pierce's medicine is well known to be an excellent remedy in many complaints, and as I have proved to my entire satisfaction the good qualities of one of the articles, it may perhaps subserve the cause of humanity to present this advertisement to the public. [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

Addressed to Bro. J. Merriam.

BY T. H. CUDWORTH.

Dear brother, would it joy impart
  To know Christ's children dear,
Still sympathise and bear a part
  Of thy sad sufferings here?

Though sunder'd far, their chainless minds
  Oft with their brother's soar
To God, while the same spirit binds
  Their hearts with yours, in prayer.

And would it soothe thy throbbing pain,
  To know the souls you've served,
Are pressing on, the crown to gain,
  For darker conflicts nerved?

That grateful hearts are blessing God
  For light, and love, and peace,
That you have nourished with the Word,
  In this dark wilderness?

And when we roam the promised land,
  Amid the bowers of bliss;
Shall we forget the little band
  We've suffered with, in this?

No; mem'ry will not lose its power,
  When earthly sorrows cease,
When passed shall be earth's dreary hour—
  Exchanged for rest and peace.

Charlemont, Mass.

For the Crisis.

"A little While."

BY F. V. B.

Methinks, I hear my Savior say,
A little while, I go away;
Go, to prepare a place for thee,
That where I am, there thou mayst be.

Though thou mayst grieve my absent stay,
And longing wait the dawn of day;
The world will mock and laugh at thee,—
But where I am there thou shalt be.

A little while thou'lt hear me call—
Come home, my people, one and all;
I have for you prepared a home,
That where I am there ye shall come.

Then in thy presence we shall stand;
For we have followed thy command:
And we rejoice to hear from thee,
"Lo! where I am, there ye shall be."

Painesville, O., Aug. 6, '56.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Evils of the Tongue.

BY W. H. M'ILVEEN.

"Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth."

I. Blasphemy, or profane swearing.
II. Falsehood, or lying.
III. Scolding.
IV. Tattling, and Backbiting.

We shall commence with Profane Swearing.

1. What is it? Speaking irreverently of God and sacred things. Jesting with the word of God, and using the names of God, Lord or Christ, unless with great seriousness and awe, is a violation of the 3d commandment.

2. Its criminality. It is a contempt of God and his laws. "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain;" "Swear not at all."

3. Its degradation. Does not swearing and cursing lower an individual greatly in public estimation, and in his own also? Can a swearer think well of himself? Does he not look mean, and feel mean? What! take the name of the Almighty thoughtlessly and blasphemously, and look, feel, and act like a man? It is impossible.

4. There is no excuse for it. No sin has less temptation.

5. It is irrational. What greater proofs of ignorance than to use words without meaning? Does the swearer understand definitely the import of the words damn and damnation?

6. The habit once formed is almost indelible. Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the Leopard his spots?" "Canst thou make one hair white or black?" God's grace is sufficient. But the man given to profanity, swears unconsciously, scarcely knows when he swears, nearly every sentence is accompanied with a horrid oath. Reprove him for swearing, and he will swear that he did not swear.

7. Its vulgarity. Will a real gentleman swear? Chesterfield, with all his infidel sentiments, abhorred swearing. A man destitute of the fear of God, with the least spark of true courtesy, will never be caught with an oath upon his lips; it is shameful.

8. Swearing is useless: what is more so? What is gained by it? Does it make a man rich, respectable, or happy? Do we believe an assertion more readily when accompanied with a vile oath? The man who swears seems to doubt his own veracity, and well he may; and who in his senses would not suspect him? The adage is—"The man who lies, will swear;" though there are profane swearers who would not steal, yet we are sure that it is not the fear of God that prohibits them. Instead of gain to the swearer, all is loss. Reputation is lost; character, veracity, and the esteem of good men; he is despised in heart, even by his fellow-swearers. And is he not abhorred of God himself? Yes, swearer, little as you may think, while your mouth is filled with oaths, you are heaping up "wrath against the day of wrath," which is soon to come. A vile use of the tongue. Truly, this little member is full of deadly poison.

"Because of swearing the land mourneth I will be a swift witness against false swearers."—BIBLE.

TO THE CHRISTIAN.

"Above all things, my Brethren, swear not."—James 5 : 12.

Christian professor, do you rebuke swearing? Do you hold converse with a man, and suffer him meanwhile to breathe out oaths or blasphemies in your very face, unrebuked? You neglect this duty at your peril. God says—"Thou shalt in anywise rebuke thy neighbor and not suffer sin upon him." The swearer himself will thank you for the timely reproof. Let Christians live holy, and rebuke this sin always in a right spirit, and soon our Lord will come and put a final stop to all evil.

II. FALSEHOOD OR LYING.

Let profanity, lying, tattling, backbiting, scolding and fretting, cease, and what is there left! Pandora's box would be closed.

The Bible, in speaking of falsehood, says—"Thou shalt not raise a false report." Ex. 23 : 1. "Keep thee far from a false matter, and the innocent and righteous slay thou not, for I will not justify the wicked." "And let none of you imagine evil in your hearts against his neighbor, and love no false oath." "And ye shall not swear by my name falsely; neither ther shalt thou profane the name of thy God—I am the Lord." "He that speaketh truth sheweth forth righteousness, but a false witness deceit." "A faithful witness will not lie, but a false witness will utter lies." "A false witness shall not be unpunished, and he that speaketh lies shall not escape." "A false witness shall perish." Besides these scripture proofs, it is in violation of the ninth commandment, which says—"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." A lying tongue is a deceitful tongue. The word of God in speaking of lying and tale bearing, says—"Thou shalt not go up and down as a tale-bearer." A tale-bearer revealeth secrets. "The words of a tale-bearer are as wounds." "Where there is no tale-bearer, strife ceaseth." A lying tongue as I have said before, is a deceitful tongue, whose words are "smoother than oil," yet they are drawn swords. "Ye shall not steal, neither deal falsely, neither lie one to another." "He that worketh deceit shall not dwell within my house; he that telleth lies shall not tarry in my sight." "The lip of truth shall be established for ever, but a lying tongue is but for a moment." "Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord, but they that deal truly, are his delight." "A false witness shall not be unpunished, and he that LIETH shall perish." "Lie not one to another." "All liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone."

Again, there is the sly, whispering tongue, and the babbling, tattling tongue; each of which separate very friends. "The words of a tale-bearer are as wounds." He wounds others thereby, and himself also, for the "mouth" of such a "fool is his destruction."

There are fiery tongues. "The tongue is a fire." Such is the tongue of the passionate person whose mouth, foaming with rage, casteth abroad words which are as "fire-brands, arrows and death." Such also, is the tongue of the slanderer, which being "set on fire of hell," puts whole neighborhoods and communities in a flame, and "setteth on fire the course of nature."

III. SCOLDING.

This is another disease of the tongue. We have Christ set for an example in this case. We are told in 1 Pet. 2: 23, that when they reviled at Christ, "he reviled not again." Did Christ ever scold at persons when they reviled at him? No, never; but he always gave them a plain, true, and civil answer. He never reviled at them even when he hung on the cross; when they mocked at him, spit on him, and smote him with a reed; but he said—"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." O that all would put on Christ, and follow in his footsteps, in all holy and God-like conversation; and if we do this and live right, we shall always feel right. "He that is slow to wrath, is of great understanding, but he that is hasty of spirit, exalteth folly." "A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger." God help us to live holy.

IV. TATTLING AND BACKBITING.

This is another fatal disease of the tongue. A true Christian is not troubled with it, for if we have got the love of Christ shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, and if we put on Christ as Paul tells us, and be Christ-like, we shall not tattle, or backbite our neighbors.—"Surely, the serpent will not bite without enchantment, and a babbler is no better." "O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called." "But shun profane and vain babblings, for they will increase unto more ungodliness." I might write as much again on this subject of the evils of the tongue, but I wait another opportunity. We see how very important it is, that we bridle our tongues, seeing they are so full of mischief, so full of evil, and deadly poison. Let us speak, and speak as we ought. "A word spoken in due season, how good is it."

The only remedy for these evils, resulting from the unbridled tongue, is,—first, to correct the heart, and keep that with all diligence. The foolishness of the lips is first uttered in the heart. "For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." Next, carefully bridle the tongue. Keep the bit upon it at all times, remembering, that for every idle word we speak, we must give an account thereof in the day of judgment. Take heed—think twice before you speak. "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." "Lord, search our hearts and try our ways," and enable us to do thy will every moment; that we may abide the day of thy coming, and stand when thou appearest.

O may our life with Christ be hid,
  Long as we tarry here;
That when He, who's our life shall come,
  We may with him appear.

New York, July, 4, '56.

For the Crisis.

Sayings of Christ.

BY C. W. PERKINS.

The times on which we have fallen, are peculiar indeed, and perilous; peculiar, especially in developing character. Many, both ministers and people, who have proclaimed the coming of the Lord with great apparent zeal, have proved themselves by their works, false to their professed faith. Truly, the harvest is ripening, and as it comes to maturity, the wheat and tares or wise and foolish will be developed. The last state of the church is the luke-warm and self-righteous, as will be seen by Rev. 3: 15, 16, 17. How strikingly are these features manifested. Where was ever seen so much self-righteousness as is exhibited among many professed christians at the present time? Some are crying, (as in Moses' day) the "congregation are all holy," and "always have been," calling their neighbors as witnesses, to their good deeds, of what they have done, and are doing; when, if their eyes were anointed, possibly they might see that like back-slidden Israel, they were offering the blind and lame, and reserving the best for themselves. Surely, God is not pleased with such sacrifice as this. But amid all the hypocrisy, contention and distraction by which we are surrounded, let us firmly adhere to the counsel given to this last state of the church: "buy gold," (durable riches) "white raiment;" (robe of righteousness) "eye salve," (the "commandments of the Lord are pure, enlightening the eyes." Ps. 19: 8.)

I praise God that some are beginning to feel the importance of heeding this counsel, and are striving to keep all the commandments of the Lord, and they are exceeding broad. Ps. 119: 96. Now then it will be seen who are wise virgins:—"Whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock;" "but every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, &c." What sayings, think you? Probably particular reference is had to the sayings contained in the sermon, at the close of which, we find the passages just quoted. But all will be ready to acknowledge that the rest of Christ's sayings, are equally binding. And if we keep all the sayings contained in the sermon on the Mount, we can in no wise neglect any of his blessed words.

Dear Brethren and Sisters, let us come, into this gospel mirror, and examine ourselves; and see if we are wise or foolish.

Cannot we tell? I think we can. Bless the Lord! Are we poor in spirit? Not thinking we are rich, and have need of nothing? Do we mourn? Can we like Jeremiah, cry, "Oh that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people?" If we do thus mourn, we shall be comforted. Are we weak? Do we hunger and thirst after righteousness? Are we merciful? then we shall obtain mercy. Are we pure in heart? We are not, unless we are doing all the sayings of Jesus. If we "offend in one point, we are guilty of all." Jas. 2 : 10.

"Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God." A peacemaker will not backbite with his tongue, nor do evil to his neighbor, nor take up a reproach against his neighbor. Ps. 15. He will sow no discord among brethren, but keep his tongue from evil, his lips from speaking guile—depart from evil, do good, seek peace and pursue it. Ps. 34 : 13, 14. If such are persecuted for righteousness' sake, and have all manner of evil spoken against them falsely, for Christ's sake, they will rejoice, and be exceeding glad.

I now pass over many points in this sermon, that might be noticed with profit, and speak of some that are apparently neglected. "Again, ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths; But I say unto you, swear not at all; neither by heaven; for it is God's throne; nor by the earth; for it is his footstool; neither by Jerusalem; for it is the city of the great King. Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black." To my mind it is evident, that here judicial swearing alone is referred to. I believe all, or nearly all agree that forswearing is simply to swear falsely. Now then, under the law it was allowable for them to swear to the truth, and perform unto the Lord their oaths; but not to forswear, or falsely swear.

But under the new covenant, it is Swear NOT AT ALL. How astonishing that any should try to pervert so plain a command. If the great Head of the Church meant what he said, (and if he did not, who can teach us?) for His sake, receive and obey. His word on this point is sufficient for me and many others, but for fear there will still be some who will call this profane swearing, let us have the apostle James testimony.

"Above all things, my brethren, swear not, neither by heaven neither by earth, neither by any other oath." Do you dare read this in any other light, save it means what it says? I do not, neither will I be shrinking at this commandment, for it is not grievous.

But, says an objector, deprive us of oath-taking, and we cannot legally transact many kinds of business; true, but there are many kinds of business that we, as Christians ought not to engage in. Then let us cheerfully submit to all requirements of divine authority, and leave the result in the hands of Him who doeth all things well. If we suffer with Christ, we shall also reign with him.

Again, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth." Will this saying of Jesus admit of any qualification? If not, we must take it in the most literal sense; and I incline to the belief, that we must take it as it reads; for 'tis written, "where your treasure is there will your heart be also." May God help us to have our treasure in Heaven, and then our heart will be there also.

In closing these remarks, let me say, I can freely extend the hand of fellowship, to every one that heareth these sayings of Jesus and doeth them; regardless of name, or sect. The grand criterion is, "by their fruits ye shall know them."

Meredith Centre, N. H., June, '56.

For the Crisis.

"And whatsoever is Right that shall ye Receive."

BY H. PRATT.

How soothing the promise—how bountifully bestowed. The Master has ever seen fit to encourage his servants with the assurance of his intention to do right in their case. Were this promise from frail, short-sighted, selfish man, it might fall far short of justice; but there are men, thank God, who will do right, who will not take advantage of an indefinite contract. Those who get the assurance of such men are perfectly at ease, and labor on cheerfully, knowing that "right" will be given.

And shall we distrust the promise of Him who was bruised for our transgressions, and died for our redemption? O no, exclaims the professor, His promise is sure—His word never fails. Truth, but why this complaining? Well, I have worn myself out in the cause—broken down in middle life, and yet do not receive half as much as I ought, scarely enough to defray my traveling expenses. And yet the promise has not failed?

Similitude. I make a bargain with neighbor B. to work for him in haying, and he agrees to do what is right in the matter. I confide in his promise. Wages are $1.50 per day; but the day of settlement comes, and I only get 50 cts per day, and go mourning, murmurring and complaining; there, says I, I have worked hard through this hot weather, all worn out, and have got only this small sum of 50 cts, not half enough to support my family, and I think it too bad. And you still think, neighbor B., an honest man? Yes. And whatever he promises, he will perform? Yes. And he promised to give you what was right? Yes, BUT—But enough I should think for consistency and common sense. But, sheer nonsense. And yet men act and talk in this same manner professedly in the service of God.

How much more consistent to set a price on your preaching, become a hireling, and then if God does not pay you but 50 cts, you can be sure of the dollar more from your congregation.

I do think, that we, as a people, ought to act understandingly in this matter. If God has called us into his service as servants, he will take care about the pay, and we may just as well charge God with defrauding us as to charge it upon his children. For he that toucheth them, "toucheth the apple of his eye."

If we engage in his service, we get "whatsoever is right," or his promise fails, and there is no religion or consistency in charging the deficit to somebody else.

1. In his service we are commanded to forsake all, with the promise of receiving an hundred fold in THIS time, houses and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come LIFE EVERLASTING. Now I will give glory to God that this promise is sure, and the things promised are in this life as well as in the world to come.

Houses and lands—enough, thank the Lord. Brethren and Sisters—every where, glory to God. Mothers—God bless the hundred that have done everything for my comfort. Children—Bro. Grant, go into the mountains and see, hear them singing, and instead of the one hundred promised, you would almost feel that you had got into the company of the "One hundred and forty-four thousand." But this will do well enough for our own wants; but there is our family, our rents, our wood, and all these things to pay for, and clothing for ourselves and children What, a hundred brothers and sisters, and none to inquire after or see to your welfare? A hundred mothers, and none to see that the children and grandchildren are cared for. Mothers! And no stockings for the grand children? Away with such stuff.

2. To give, and it shall be given unto us. But, say you, I have nothing to give. So said Peter to the impotent man, so far as silver and gold was concerned, but he had something in the name of Jesus that was a great deal better for the ankle bones of the poor cripple. But I have given—And what? Well, I have got back only part of it. And does this meet the promise? Let us see. "Give and it shall be given unto you" (half as much back. If we should credit the testimony we too often hear, we should think this was the way the promise was fulfilled. and yet profess implicit confidence in the promise) good measure, (not as men measure oats and dried apples) pressed down and SHAKEN TOGETHER, (not stricken off quickly to flirt it out an inch below the rim, but) RUNNING OVER, shall MEN give into your bosom. For with the same measure, ye mete it shall be measured to you again." Now then where is the failure, if in giving we only get in part remunerated? Does that fulfil the promise? I answer, No. The failure is apparent, and it is just as inconsistent to preach about the unfailing word of God to others, and assure them at the same time that it is only partially fulfilled to ourselves, as to affirm that a pitcher is filled in answer to prayer, when their infirmity is apparent to all.

But you ask, then. Do you think God's word fails? I answer, NO.

Neither is it fulfilled at fifty per cent discount. With what measure we mete it is measured to us again. I deal with principle, not men in this matter; and if that satisfies a South Carolinian, it ought to, Adventists. God wants I should speak plainly, and I can't afford a voyage to Tarshish in hay-time, to get rid of preaching the word he bids me.

Now, if God has called us into his vineyard with the assurance that "whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive," let us be faithful in his cause, and if we are faithful to do the work he bids us, instead of seeking our honor, pleasure or enjoyment, we may exclaim with the twelve that started without purse or scrip, when asked if they lacked anything—"NOTHING." Glory to God, there is a fullness in the fulfillment of the promises of God, and I do pray thrt we may not dishonor him, and his word by saying or thinking that we may not dishonor him, and his word, by saying or thinking that we have not received what we ought, or disbelieving that with what measure (the same, big or small) we mete, it shall be measnred to us again, or that we do not according to his promise, receive whatsoever is right. More anon.

Wales, July 20, '56.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. Irene Perkins.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—My heart has often been gladdened by hearing of the spiritual well-being of the saints scattered abroad; and my long silence has in nowise been induced by indifference or want of sympathy toward my fellow travelers to the Holy Land. For by the grace of God, I do love his dear children with a pure heart fervently. Not with the outward affection which is dependent on circumstances, called forth by personal favors or similar tastes and sentiments; but with the "inward affection" which springs spontaneously from the love of God shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost, and flows out towards all the humble followers of the Lamb. It is no barrier to this love, though the outward man be "weak and contemptible," "without form or comeliness," if the inward man reflect the holy image of Jesus. And a religion that does not "change us into the same image—create us anew in Christ Jesus—renew us in the image of him who created us" will avail us nothing in the burning day. Brilliant talents, a correct theory, active zeal in the church, with a quiet spirit, when there is nothing to ruffle it, will not obtain us the favor of God, if the heart is not right. It is not enough that the streams are pure in a calm, the fountain also must be pure, or when a storm arises, the streams will become turbid. Nothing short of holiness of heart can prepare us to meet our God. And the Son of man hath not only power on earth to forgive sins, but to cleanse from all unrighteousness, to eradicate the root of bitterness, and restore us to the pure image in which man was made. O may we all avail ourselves of the inestimable privilege bought with Jesus' blood, and seek to be sanctified wholly, and made "all glorious within." Let us not devote our time and minds to the canvassing of minor points, and leave unsettled the important questions—Am I holy? Am I all that it is my privilege to be, and all the Lord requires I should be? Am I doing all for the cause of God, that it is for his glory I should do?

Finally, am I strictly a Bible christian a vessel unto honor, sanctified and meet for the Master's use, and growing up in him in all things, which is the head, even Christ?

The word of God is our only true criterion by which to test ourselves; and by unceasing prayer, we may obtain understanding of even its minute requirements and so be enabled to live by every word of God.

O my dear brethren and sisters, let us not be satisfied short of being filled with all the fullness of God; then shall we be able to rejoice evermore, and in everything give thanks instead of being weighed down by our trials, and almost impatient at the tarrying of the vision.

"Grace, mercy and peace be with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity," is the prayer of your sister in Christ.

IRENE PERKINS.

South Woodstock, Vt. July 22, '56.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 107, HANOVER STREET BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1856. WHOLE NO. 125. VOL. IV. NO. 1.

The World's Crisis, IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	2[illegible].00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

"Stand Fast."

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

"Will ye also go away?" Such was the question our Lord proposed to his chosen disciples, when, upon a certain occasion, the multitude of voluntary disciples, who had for a short time followed him, suddenly forsook him, in consequence of being offended at the message of truth which he delivered. Well did one of "the twelve" instantly reply, "Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life." When asked to retire from our distinctive position, of waiting for "the Lord from heaven," or when questioned as to our steadfastness in this position, is it not well that we reply in a similar manner—where, and "to whom shall we go?" But many who have been with us are not in a condition thus to speak. Hundreds, and thousands have already gone "away." But where have they gone? To the vanities and follies of the world; to political strife and preferment; to farms and merchandise, for wealth; to formality and sectarianism; to "spiritualism" and confusion; to blank infidelity; to stupidity and moral blindness; to spiritual death and continual condemnation; to serve self, the world, and the devil, and be utterly reprobated. O simple ones! O foolish souls! to sink to hell almost in sight of the eternal kingdom of glory! O wretched ones, to sell everlasting joys for a meagre mess of deadly pottage! What shame will seize upon their souls at length!

Several different classes of persons have been with us from the beginning, and have left us at certain points of time, for reasons which I shall proceed to name, while one class still continues.

CLASS 1. Those who love excitement. Such persons are only happy and contented in the midst of whirlwinds, siroccos, hurricanes, lightnings, thunders, floods, fires, earthquakes, and jarring confusion. They seek their beloved elements wherever they can find them existing, or an opportunity to create them, when, and wherever they can be created. They remained with us while they could ride "on tumult's wheels," with ruin in their wake, and left us only when they had reduced the most of the excitable "stock."

CLASS 2. Those who are moved by sympathy, alone. Their fathers, mothers, wives, husbands, children, brothers, sisters, neighbors, friends, ministers, and fellow church members, came among us, and so they came: those at length left, and so they left. Simple children!

CLASS 3. Those who love novelty. These are they who want to be in with us, or in the vicinity of something new. No matter what it is, if it is only new! It may be political, moral, social, religious, irreligious, common, uncommon, dignified, undignified, real, imaginary, spiritual, physical, from heaven, earth, or hell—no matter—"is it new?" that is all. I am quite inclined to think, that, in their moments of reckless desiring, they would be glad to have the Lord Himself 'descend from heaven in flaming fire," for the sake of having something new take place. They remained with us only while the Advent Doctrine appeared new. Poor dreamers!

CLASS 4. Those who are ever moved by fear alone. They are always apparently religious in a moment of peril or visible danger; and, perhaps, never really so at any time. The ravages of disease in their neighborhood, a violent thunderstorm, or some other threatening occurrence, will drive them to praying; and the passing away of the cause of alarm will stop them. When the argument "looked so true," in relation to the immediate coming of the Lord, they sought, through fear, association among us, as a kind of refuge; but when "the times all passed," they were happy elsewhere. Mistaken souls!

CLASS 5. Those who desire notoriety. Such persons must be known in the world. No matter how, but they must be known! They are perfectly miserable in obscurity. Well, there was a time when the Advent Doctrine was comparatively popular in our country: when to be an Advent preacher, especially, was to be known by a large number of people, of all classes: and then, we had a plenty of Advent preachers! It was an easy matter to be an Advent preacher then, too,—only to study Bro. Miller's lectures, and mix up a few notions of their own, and they were all ready for the pulpit—being "wiser, in their own eyes, than seven men who can render a reason!"

CLASS 6. Those who love gain. It is well known, that many of the Advent people are very liberal: and at some points of time, in their history, have been much more so than they now are. At these times, such persons could confidently calculate on a golden harvest, by coming among us. The "loaves and fishes" charmed for a while, but at length the "miracle" ceased, and these persons were gone.—Amen!

CLASS 7. Shall I expose poor fallen human nature, and say, those who were too lazy to work? who live by loafing, and sponging? We have been cursed with a multitude of such. But I pity human nature—the subject is too sickening—I cease.

CLASS 8. Thank heaven! Some came into the faith of the immediate coming of Christ, because the Word of God plainly teaches it; and because they love him with all their hearts, and mean to serve him at all events. These still continue. To such I say, in the language of inspiration, stand fast! God is with us! God helps us! God will help us! "Stand fast" and see the end of this matter. "Stand fast!" Stand fast!"

Newburyport, Mass.

For the Crisis.

The 2300 Days.

BY H. J. SWEETLAND.

As the Crisis is a free medium through which we may communicate our thoughts and feelings in the spirit of love, I thought to pen a few lines relative to the 2300 days of Dan. 8: 14.

The first question that arises in my mind is,—do they begin with the "seventy weeks?" I do not write, thinking that I am capable of teaching any one, but an exchange of thought may sometimes be profitable. I have formerly supposed they (these two periods) were connected, but have changed my mind of late. One objection to my mind of their connection is, that the treading down of the "Daily Sacrifice," (one thing) and the "Transgression of Desolation" (another thing) covers the whole 2300 day-period. Now it is a settled point that the "seventy weeks" commence with the "going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem." The sanctuary and the host are trodden down during the 2300 day-period, while the "seventy weeks" commence with restoring. I understand the "sanctuary" to be Jerusalem, or Palestine including Jerusalem, and the "host" is God's people. Now I am not able to harmonize the idea of treading down under foot, and restoring or building up the same thing at the same time; for certainly, if these periods commence together, forty-nine years of the "seventy weeks" are occupied in building up, and at the same time, it is being trodden down. I do not understand that there was any "daily sacrifice" in existence at the commencement of the "seventy weeks," but after the city and temple was built, the Daily Sacrifice commenced, this being the thirty-second year of Artaxerxes. One great objection to their commencing together, is, that they must have ended last Nisan at the farthest; and if they bring the Lord we should have seen him. But the question now is, what do we understand by the sealing up of the vision, if the "seventy weeks" are not connected with the 2300 day-vision? My view is this. In the first place, I think that we have assumed that the phrase "seal up" means "make sure;" such may be the sense of seal, but by what logic is seal up, to be thus construed? That this is not the sense of the phrase, is evident from Daniel and other portions of scripture. In Dan. 12: 9, it is said, "The words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end. Does not that signify that they are hidden?

Again, the Apostle John was told Rev. 10: 4, to "seal up those things which the seven thunders uttered, and write them not;" that is, they were hidden, not to be understood. The prophets had prophesied or seen in vision, a "blindness" that was to come upon the Jews as Daniel's "people," taking place at their rejection of Messiah, and continuing through the following age. Daniel's people would look for their triumphant Messiah at the close of the sixty-nine weeks, but they would be disappointed and reject the "Son of God." The consequence of this rejection of Christ, would be to seal up or hide from their minds the clearest vision and prophecy, so that they would lose the understanding of them, and their minds become darkened. When Daniel's people had rejected the Messiah, at that time they were nationally "blinded;" the "vision and prophecy" to them as a nation, was "sealed up" or hidden. Our Lord himself announces their doom in these words:—Matt. 23: 38, 39. "Behold your house is left unto you desolate; for I say unto you, ye shall NOT SEE ME henceforth till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Also recorded by Luke, 19: 41, 42. "And when he was come near, he beheld the city and wept over it, saying, If thou hadst known even thou at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace. But now they are HID from THINE EYES." Paul thus proclaims the same truth. Rom. 11: 7, 8, 25. "What then? Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for but the election hath obtained it and the rest were blinded, (according as it is written. God having given them the spirit of slumber, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear) unto this day. For I would not, brethren that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest you should be wise in your own conceits, that blindness IN PART is happened to Israel until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in." Thus we see the vision and prophecy is "sealed up"—is not understood by "thy people," and they are "blinded." When did this happen? At the very time Daniel was told it would, at the closing of the "seventy weeks." Although their prophets plainly foretell two advents of Messiah, they do not see it; it is all sealed up to them; and in that very fact we have another demonstration that Messiah did come according to prophecy and was "cut off" for our sins, and Jesus is that Messiah. From the time the "seventy weeks" closed, the prophecies of Messiah have been to them as a nation sealed up, and they grope in darkness. It appears that Daniel expected his people to be delivered a long time, (he not having a full understanding himself of the prophecy) before the time arrived which was marked out through the prophecies by the Lord, but before that time arrived, they must be subject to Gentile powers, scattered among all nations and grope in darkness.

Springfield, Ms., Aug. 2, '56.

Choice Selections.

For the Crisis.

Simeon Green:

—OR,—

"The Man who Killed his Neighbors."

Copied by permission from the Union Sunday School Library. A. C.

"Reuben Black was a torment in the neighborhood where he resided. The very sight of him produced effects which may be likened to those which are said to follow a Hindoo magical tune, called Rang, which is supposed to bring on clouds, storms and earthquakes.

His wife had a sharp and uncomfortable look. His boys seemed to be in perpetual fear. The cows became startled as soon as he opened the barn-yard gates. The dog dropped his tail between his legs and eyed him askance, as if to see what humor he was in. The cat looked wild, and had been known to rush straight up the chimney when he moved toward her!

The description of a certain stage-horse was well suited to Reuben's nag:—"His hide resembled an old hair trunk. Continual whipping and kicking had made him so insensible, that no amount of blows could quicken his pace, no cheering could change the dejected drooping of his head; all his natural language said, as plain as a horse could say it, that he was a most unhappy beast."

Even the trees on Reuben's premises had a neglected and desolate appearance. His fields were red with sorrel, or overrun with weeds. Everything about him seemed hard and dry like his own countenance. Every day he cursed the town and neighbors because the people poisoned his dogs, stoned his hens, and shot his cats.

Continual lawsuits involved him in so much trouble and expense, that he had neither time nor money to spend on the improvement of his farm.

Against Joe Smith, a poor laborer in the neighborhood, he had brought three suits in succession. Joe said he had returned a spade he had borrowed, and Reuben swore he had not. He sued Joe and recovered damages, for which he ordered the officer to seize his pig. Joe in his wrath, called him an old swindler, and a curse to the neighborhood.

These remarks were soon repeated to Reuben.

He brought an action for slander, and recovered very small damages. Provoked at the laugh this occasioned, he watched for Joe to pass by, and set his dog upon him crying out furiously—"Call me an old swindler again, will you?"

An evil spirit is more contagious than the plague. Joe went home and scolded his wife, boxed little Joe's ears, and kicked the cat; and not one of them knew what it was all for. A fortnight after, Reuben's dog was found dead from poison. Whereupon he brought another action against Joe Smith, and not being able to prove him guilty of the charge of dog-killing, he took his revenge by poisoning a pet lamb belonging to Mrs. Smith. Thus, feelings of ill will were followed by misery and loss. Joe's temper grew more and more vindictive, and the love of talking over his troubles at the grogshop, increased upon him. Poor Mrs. Smith cried, and said it was all owing to Reuben Black, for a better hearted man never lived than her Joe, when she first married him.

Such was the state of things when Simeon Green purchased the farm adjoining Reuben's. This farm had been much neglected, and had caught thistles and other weeds from the neighboring fields. But Simeon was a diligent man, and one who commanded well his own temper, for he had learned of Him who is "meek and lowly in heart." He had been taught by the Holy Spirit the evil of his own heart, and had been led to an humble but sure trust in Christ for pardon and salvation. And, having this hope in Him, he sought by the aid of the Holy Spirit to purify himself even as God is pure, and to walk worthy of the vocation wherewith he was called with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering, forbearing—in love. Eph. 4: 1,2.

His steady perseverance and industry soon changed the aspect of things on the farm. River mud, autumn leaves and old bones, were all put in use to assist in producing fertility. The trees, hitherto overrun with moss and insects, soon looked clean and vigorous. Fields of grain waved where weeds had only grown before. Roses covered half the house with their abundant clusters. Even the rough rock which formed the door-step was edged with golden moss. The sleek horse, feeding in clover, tossed his mane and neighed when his master came near, as much as to say—"The world is all the pleasanter for having you in it, Simeon Green!"

The old cow, fondling her calf under the green walnut tree walked up to him with a serious, friendly face, asking for a slice of beet-root, which he was wont to give. Chanticleer strutting about with his troop of plump hens and their downy little chickens, took no trouble to keep out of his way but flapped his glossy wings and crowed a welcome in his very face.

When Simeon turned his steps homeward, the boys threw their caps and ran shouting—"Father's coming!" and little Mary went tottering up to him with a flower ready to place in his button-hole. His wife was a woman of few words, but she sometimes said to her neighbors with a quiet kind of satisfaction,—"Everybody loves my husband that knows him: they cannot help it." Simeon Green's acquaintance knew that he was never engaged in a lawsuit in his life, but they predicted that he would find it impossible to avoid it now.

They told him his next door neighbor was determined to quarrel with people whether they would or not; that he was like John Liliburn, of whom it was happily said:—

"If the world were emptied of every person but himself, Liliburn would still quarrel with John, and John with Liliburn."

"Is that his character?" said Simeon. "If he exercises it upon me, I will soon kill him."

In every neighborhood there are individuals who like to foment disputes, not from any definite intention of malice or mischief, but merely because it makes a little ripple of excitement in the dull stream of life.

Such people were not slow in repeating Simeon Green's remark about his wrangling neighbor. "Kill me, will he?" exclaimed Reuben. He said no more; but his tightly compressed mouth had such a significant expression that his dog shrunk from him in alarm. That very night, Reuben turned his horse into the highway in hopes he would commit some depredation on neighbor Green's premises. But Joe Smith seeing the animal at large let down the bars of Reuben's own corn-field, and the poor beast walked in and feasted as he had not done for many a year. It would have been a great satisfaction to Reuben if he could have brought a suit against his horse; but as it was, he was obliged to content himself with beating him. His next exploit was to shoot Mary Green's handsome rooster, because he stood on the stone wall and crowed in the ignorant joy of his heart a few inches beyond the frontier line that bounded the contiguous farms. Simeon said he was sorry for the poor bird, and sorry because his wife and children liked the pretty creature; but otherwise it was no great matter. He had been intending to build a poultry-yard with a good high fence, that his hens might not annoy his neighbors; and now he was admonished to make haste and do it.

He would build them a snug warm house to roost in. They should have plenty of gravel and oats, and crow and cackle to their heart's content; there they could enjoy themselves and be out of harm's way.

But Reuben had a degree of ingenuity and perseverance which might have produced great results for mankind, had those qualities been devoted to some more noble purpose than provoking quarrels.

A pear tree in his garden very improperly stretched an arm a little over Simeon Green's premises. It happened that the overhanging bough bore more abundant fruit and glowed with a richer hue than the other boughs. One day, little George Green, as he went whistling along, picked up a pear that had fallen into his father's garden. The instant he touched it he felt something on the back of his neck like the sting of a wasp. It was Reuben Black's whip, followed by such a storm of angry words, that the poor child rushed into the house in an agony of terror.

But this experiment failed also. The boy was soothed by his mother, and told not to go near the pear tree again; and there the matter ended.

This imperturable good nature vexed Reuben more than all the tricks and taunts he met from others. Evil efforts he could understand and repay with compound interest, but he did not know what to make of this perpetual forbearance. It seemed to him there must be something contemptuous in it. He disliked Simeon more than all the rest of the people put together, because he made him feel so uncomfortably in the wrong, and did not afford him the slightest pretext for complaint. It was annoying to see everything in his neighbor's domains looking so happy and presenting such a bright contrast to the forlornness of his own.

When their wagons passed each other on the road, it seemed as if Simeon's horse tossed his head higher, and flung out his mane as if he knew he was going by Reuben Black's old nag. He often said he supposed Green covered his house with roses and honeysuckles on purpose to shame his bare walls. But he did not care—not he! He was not going to be fool enough to rot his boards with such stuff.

But no one resented his disparaging remarks, or sought to provoke him in any way. The rose smiled, the horse neighed, and the calf capered: but none of them had the least idea that they were scorned by Reuben Black. Even the dog had no malice in his heart, though he did one night chase home his geese, and bark at them through the bars. Reuben told his master the next day, and said he would bring an action against him if he did not keep that dog at home. Simeon answered very quietly that he would try to take better care of him. For several days a strict watch was kept in hopes Towzer would worry the geese again; but they paced home undisturbed, and not a solitary bow-wow furnished excuse for a lawsuit. The new neighbors not only declined quarrelling, but they occasionally made positive advances toward a friendly relation. Simeon's wife sent Mrs. Black a large basket full of very fine plums. Pleased with the unexpected attention, she cordially replied,—"Tell your mother it was very kind of her." Reuben, who sat smoking in the chimney corner, listened to this message for once without any impatience, except whiffing the smoke through his pipe a little faster and fiercer than usual. But when the boy was gone out of the door and the friendly words were repeated, he exclaimed:

"Don't make a fool of yourself, Peg. They want to give us a hint to send a basket of our pears—that's the upshot of the business. You may send them a basket when they are ripe; for I scorn to be under obligation, especially to your smooth tongued folks."

Poor Peggy, whose heart had been for the moment refreshed by a little act of kindness, admitted distrust into her bosom, and all the pleasure she had felt on receiving her neighbor's present vanished.

Not long after this advance toward good neighborhood, some laborers employed by Simeon Green, passing over a tract of marshy ground with a heavy team, stuck fast in a bog occasioned by long continued rain. The poor oxen were unable to extricate themselves, and Simeon ventured to ask assistance from his [illegible]

who was working at a distance. Reuben replied gruffly:

"Iv'e got enough to do to attend to my own business."

The civil request that he might be allowed to use his oxen and chains for a few minutes, being answered in this surly tone, Simeon silently walked off in search of a more obliging neighbor.

The men who had been left waiting with the patient and suffering oxen, scolded about Reuben's ill-nature when Simeon came back to them, and said they hoped Reuben would get stuck in the same bog himself. Their employer rejoined:

"If he should, we will do our duty and help him out."

"There is such a thing as being too good-natured," said they. "If Reuben Black takes the notion that people are afraid of him, it makes him trample on them worse than ever."

"O, wait awhile," replied Green, smiling—"I will kill him before long. Wait and see if I do not kill him."

It chanced soon after, that Reuben's team did stick fast in the same bog as the workmen had wished. Simeon noticed it from a neighboring field, and gave directions that the oxen and chains should be immediately conveyed to his assistance. The men laughed, shook their heads, and talked about the old hornet. They, however, cheerfully proceeded to do as their employer requested.

"You are in a bad situation, neighbor," said Simeon, as he came alongside the team;—"but my men are coming with two yoke of oxen, and I think we shall soon manage to help you out."

"You may take your oxen back again," replied Reuben, quickly; "I want none of your help."

In a friendly tone Simeon answered, "I cannot consent to that, for evening is coming on, and you have very little time to lose. It is a bad job at any time, but it will be still worse in the dark."

"Light or dark, I do not ask your help," replied Reuben, emphatically. "I would not help you out of the bog the other day, when you asked me."

"The trouble I had in relieving my poor oxen, teaches me to feel for others in the same situation. Do not let us waste words about it, neighbor. It is impossible for me to go home and leave you here in the bog, and night coming on."

The team was soon drawn out, and Simeon and his men went away without waiting for thanks. When Reuben went home that night, he was unusually thoughtful. After smoking awhile in deep contemplation, he gently knocked the ashes from his pipe, and said with a sigh:

"Peg, Simeon Green has killed me!"

"What do you mean?" said his wife, dropping her knitting with a look of surprise.

"You know, when he first came into this neighborhood, he said he would kill me," replied Reuben, "and he has done it. The other day he asked me to help his team out of the bog, and I told him I had enough to do to attend to my own business. To-day, my team stuck fast in the same bog, and he came with two yoke of oxen to draw it out. I felt ashamed to have him lend me a hand. So I told him I wanted none of his help; but he answered just as pleasant as if nothing contrary had happened, that night was coming on, and he was not willing to leave me in the mud."

"He is a pleasant-spoken man," said Mrs. Black, "and always has a kind word to say to the boys. His wife seems to be a nice, neighborly body, too."

Reuben made no answer; but after meditating a while, he remarked:

"Peg, you know that big melon down at the bottom of the garden? you may as well carry it over there in the morning."

His wife said she would, without asking him to explain where "over there" was.

[Concluded next week.]

For the Crisis.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS of like precious faith in Jesus Christ, I desire to write you for your profit and comfort. I I do feel thankful for what I have received through the Crisis from you. God is faithful who has promised us eternal life in Jesus, and an inheritance in his kingdom. Be faithful, and you shall receive a crown of life. Have that simple confidence in God that little children have in their parents. Ask, and ye shall receive whatsoever ye have need of. Thanks to our heavenly Father that he has inclined us to receive a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus. I have not had the privilege of meeting with those who have their lamps trimmed and burning for a long time, and seldom do [illegible]. I love them and love to hear from them. I do think I have a heart that loves my neighbor as myself. Oh! how happy the family of Christ will be in his kingdom where they will love each other as themselves. Often times when I read the Bible, light shines into my mind, I rejoice in it, and would like to communicate to you, but my health is such I can write but little. If we are faithful we shall soon exchange these mortal bodies for immortal ones.

BETSEY C. BANCROFT.

The World's Crisis.

BOTON, SEPTEMBER 3, 1856.

Wilbraham Campmeeting.

It is presumed that those who were not present, are anxious to learn the result of the Campmeeting just closed at North Wilbraham.

Well, I think I can safely say it was the best I ever attended.

Everybody seemed to enjoy the meeting on account of the Christian spirit manifested.

There were present those who represent almost every variety of sentiment, but the best of all was, we found it possible, through the blessing of the Lord, to love those who love him, if they did not happen to look through the same colored glasses as we were in the habit of using, or have their garments cut just like our own. We came to the happy conclusion that Christianity did not consist in opinion but in obeying the Lord.

We remembered that our Saviour said he that doeth "the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother and sister and mother."

Most, if not all, seemed fully convinced that we have had a plenty of false, unscriptural and sectarian shibboleths, and that it is high time that we acknowledge no leader but Jesus, no creed but the Bible, no name but Christian, no test but character.

We have not time or room to give a full report of the meeting, but will mention a few items.

Our meeting was located in a pleasant grove upon a hill some hundred feet above the Chickopee river, flowing at its base.

We might as well undertake to paint the hues of the diamond as to describe some of the scenes during our stay on the encampment; all we can say is, they were heavenly—glorious.

Br. Langarl from Cincinnati preached the first sermon on the ground, before our arrival. He has been obliged to withdraw from the M. E. Church, where he has labored successfully for many years, because of their opposition to the premillenial advent, and the great truth that our only hope of a future existence is in the literal resurrection of the dead, or by translation at the coming of the Lord. We commend him to the churches as a faithful laborer in the vineyard of the Lord.

We arrived on the camp ground Tuesday P. M. Soon the rain commenced and continued until Thursday night; but we felt conscious that the storm was a great benefit to the meeting, as it kept the people in their tents worshiping the Lord, which resulted in great good.

Br. J. Marsh of Rochester, preached in the New Bedford tent Wednesday P. M., from John 17: 1—12, showing that one cause of disunion among professed Christians is the mystical interpretation of the Scriptures, and that the literal view would tend greatly to promote a union.

In the evening we had a very interesting prayer meeting.

Thursday A. M. and P. M., Br. Decker spoke from Rev. 12th, 13th, and 17th chaps., presenting evidences to show that we are very near the great day of the Lord when the dead are to be raised.

Thursday evening, Br. A. Ross preached from Matt. 20: 16.

The spirit of God rested upon us. We closed the meeting after listening to remarks from Brn. J. B. Cook and Burnham. The meeting Thursday evening I think was the best I ever enjoyed. We thought it very much like the scene upon the Mount of transfiguration. We could truly say "it is good for us to be here."

That night will be long remembered by those present.

It was not a scene of fanaticism, but of glory.

We felt that Jesus was smiling upon us and filling us with his spirit. Every child of God rejoiced in the blessed hope, while sinners at the tent door stood weeping. Our joy was unspeakable.

Friday A. M., Br. J. Howell, from Ill., preached from 1 John 1: 5—7. He showed plainly that the only ground of Christian fellowship is Christian character, —that Christian character will be the test at the judgment.

Friday P. M. Br. E. Burnham spoke from Rom. 14: 1—19, showing the importance of Christian union, and the principles by which it should be regulated.

Friday evening Br. Mathewson preached from Jas. 2: 17, clearly proving that faith and works go together, and that our works are a test of our faith.

Saturday A. M. Br. J. B. Cook from Rochester preached on the 11th of Daniel, showing its connection with the Revelation of St. John. It appeared clear from his remarks, that we are very near the setting up of the everlasting kingdom.

Sat. P. M. Br. H. L. Hastings spoke from Isa. 41: 21—24, showing the great difference between the truth of the Lord and Satan's lies, and that christianity rests upon the most firm foundation; while the delusions of the devil, including modern spiritualism, can only succeed when kept from the light of God's word.

Saturday evening Br. Decker spoke on the 2300 days of Dan. 8: 14 endeavoring to show that soon our pilgrimage will end.

On the morning of the First day we went to the water and baptized a willing soul in the likeness of Christ's death.

The hearty shout demonstrated that the Comforter was present to cheer the obedient one.

We left the river-side and sung and shouted on our way to the camp-ground, and when about half way there we met a brother who had come some twelve miles that morning to be buried with Christ in baptism. We returned, and entered again the liquid grave, while saints rejoiced around. It was the husband of her that was Sr. Hancock, who was expelled from a Church for believing the truth. Her defense was published in a tract some time since.

Songs of joyful praise echoed far as the happy pair met again in fond embrace at the brink of the passing stream.

It was a happy morn.

About 8 o'clock we assembled at the preacher's stand for a "love feast," and truly it was all the name implies.

In less than an hour we learn that more than one hundred testified for Jesus. It was considered the best love feast we have ever enjoyed. Praise the Lord for such joyful, and heavenly communion with saints.

We almost forgot that we were in this cold and wicked world.

At 10 o'clock Br. H. L. Hastings preached from Dan. 12: 4.

He showed beyond all controversy that the above Scripture is now fulfilling,—giving some very strong arguments for the truth of the Bible, showing the infidel that when he attacked the word of the Lord, he was "like a hog trying to root down the rock Gibralter."

We felt that the evidence proving we are in "the time of the end," is overwhelming.

In the afternoon we listened to an interesting discourse from Br. E. Burnham. Text, Heb. 6: 11. Subject—the power of hope.

Saints rejoiced as their attention was called to the "blessed hope" so soon to be realized.

A very large congregation was present that observed most excellent order.

In the evening, remarks were made by Brn. Grant, Matthias, Pease, R. V. Lyon and H. L. Hastings.

Thus closed this feast of tabernacles.—The best of order prevailed from the beginning to the close of the meeting. It was remarked by one of the citizens of the town that such a meeting was an honor to any place.

A spirit of Christian union prevailed from the first to the last day of the encampment. People came from three to fourteen hundred miles to be present at this meeting, and they could not refrain from frequently saying—"I am well paid for coming."

With the rest I would say—praise the Lord for the "Independent campmeeting at Wilbraham."

May the spirit of that meeting spread and prevail until every child of the Lord feels the same heavenly oneness, that we enjoyed in the tented grove.

Amen and amen.

Old Debt.

We are happy to say that the "old debt" of the Crisis has expired. Thank the Lord.

Debt of the Advent Watchman.

Contributions for the debt of the Advent Watchman, which is still upwards of $700, can be forwarded to Eld. J. Turner, Hartford, Ct., to whom the money is due; or to this office, and have the amount credited in the Crisis.

New Book.

We can now fill orders for "The Life of Hiram Munger, written by himself, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and rivivals." Price, 50 cts. Postage if prepaid, 8 cts.

This book will be read with great interest both by saint and sinner. Let none be without a copy.

ED.

Br. Shepherd's work.

We would call attention to the work by Br. Wm. Shepherd, entitled—"The Saint's Inheritance."

It is a good article to give to those who have not heard on this important and interesting subject.

See book notice in another column.

ED.

New Subscribers.

With a little effort on the part of our readers to get new subscribers, we think our list may be much increased. If you like the paper, and think it calculated to do good, then we trust you will try to extend its circulation, that others may be benefited.

We expect a hearty co-operation on the part of our dear Brethren and Sisters in the Lord; and again repeat, we wish you to feel that the Crisis is your paper. We have no object in publishing it, but to glorify God by comforting and strengthening his children.

Time is short, and let us do all we can to scatter light and truth, that Jesus may say to us at last,—"Well done."

Proposition.

For every five new subscribers, we will send them a copy of "Spiritualism a Satanic delusion and Sign of the Times." By Wm. Ramsey. Published by H. L. Hastings.

This we consider the best work on the subject ever issued. We will send the bound volume free of postage.

[ED., for the Committee.

For the Crisis

The Experiment Triumphant.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

Brethren and Sisters scattered abroad, we have tried the experiment of an Independent Camp-meeting, and it has most gloriously triumphed! Of all the meetings for love, union and peace, that I ever attended, the Wilbraham meeting jus closed, was the most blessed. The rain which fell in torrents for the first day or two, did us no harm at all; but only we were driven into our tents to pray and worship, and the rain of grace fell more plenteously within than the natural rain without. O glory to God! What meetings! No fanaticism, but mighty displays of the power of God and truth. Let our friends no longer tell us that we cannot have a peaceable and good meeting unless we are humanly organized, and are all of one sentiment, and all submit to the "one man power;" we have gloriously given this declaration the LIE! We were of many different sentiments, and we spake them freely—we let the meeting ORGANIZE itself—we were all leaders and all servants, and we were all at peace, and "all were glad" too!

I never was more impressed with the truth, that God's people need but "one leader," and that one JESUS, than at thi meeting.

This having "many" leaders and "masters" is what does the mischief! There were from 20 to 30 ministers on the ground, who held several interesting conferences together, and sought "the mind of Christ" as to the best course we should pursue, in our public work, for "the Master." We all agreed in the following conclusions:

1.

We will not have any Master but Christ.

2.

We will have no Creed but the Bible.

3.

We will have no human church organizations, "iron bedsteads," &c.

4.

We will submit to "Gospel Order," as written in the New Testament,—such as having pastors, deacons, &c., as God shall prepare our way—and thus "behave" ourselves properly, as the church of God; avoiding that which distracts, and striving for "the things which make for peace." Amen!

5.

We will labor diligently, in all right ways, to save men, and edify the church of God.

6.

We will call things in the church by the right names. Deacons, deacons, and not committees, or something else. Ministers, ministers, and not lecturers, &c. And we will call Churches, churches, and not bands.

7.

We will "LOVE ONE ANOTHER" in spite of different sentiments, and treat each other's sentiments with respect, and thus be brethren. We will be good children. Amen, and Amen!

We then presented this matter to the "whole Camp," and all the people said, Amen, and praised the Lord;" and then he poured upon us his blessing again.

[The matter was not presented in separate parts, as I have written it, but in one mass, and I have written it thus that you may the more plainly see what we have done in the name of the Lord.]

I close by saying a brighter day is dawning on our history! We have learned to "love each other" by suffering.

Come, dear brethren, help us do the work of God. Help us, when things are in a state of distraction to set them in "gospel order," and not human order; and when they are in "order," to keep them so. Let us all be kind and good.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. Munger.

I agreed to tell my brethren as soon as possible, how the finances of the campmeeting turned out. I am not left in debt this year, thank God. I have finished settling up to-day, making 13 days of continued care and perplexity which is something of a tax, without any debt left on me as last year. I would say to the Preaching Brethren that you need not send anything for your board, as you talked. The table and the $15. I received for the rent of the cooky stand paid for the 34 free boarders, and some five dollars over. This is accounted for in three ways; first, everything was brought and used with prudence. 2nd. We had good luck with our crockery. 3d. Our brethren, and especially our sisters, took hold and helped us at the victualing tent in time of need, and saved our hiring; many thanks to them from the whole camp, especially to those that had such a hard and perplexing time, as is always the case, with those that do the cooking.

While writing, I feel like one out of prison. I have tried to serve the church 13 days while they served God. I did not expect enjoyment at the meeting, but I did expect it I cast my bread upon the waters, to find it in a few days, and I have not been disappointed, for to day, after settling up the last bill, I found five dollars left, which took all fears away of coming out minus. I was then at liberty to reflect upon and talk about our meeting and hear others tell how much good was done at the meeting. Just then came along a wave of glory with a loaf of bread upon it, and I knew it was for me, and took it and thanked God even in the public depot: and since that, I have felt to rejoice in the blessed, deep hope of the kingdom of God.

I wish to say to our brethren, there is good news from every quarter. This meeting has told aloud for God I have seen people from four or five towns,—all speak of the good meeting we had, although they were not identified with us. The spirit of God was on the ground, and did not leave when the meeting broke up. It was felt after all the tents were down and gone, for persons that had no religion expressed a sorrow that the meeting was over, and God's people gone. At 1 o'clock when I left the ground, I looked back and saw sadness pictured on those that were pricked in their heart. O how I then longed for the camp of the saints that will not break up. I am now fully satisfied that the rain was for our best good, and just the right week to give a chance for the two other meetings, and share in the blessings of the strong foundation laid at this meeting for future operations of peace among ourselves, which I expect will last with many until the Kingdom comes.

Yours, HIRAM MUNGER.

Chickopee Falls, Aug. 28, '56.

AN QUOTATION.

A modest, sensible, and well-bred man
Would not insult me, and no other can.

For the Crisis.

Conversation between an Orthodox and an Adventist.

BY B. MATHEWSON.

ORTHODOX. Good morning, friend Adventist. I have been hoping for the favor of an interview ever since I listened to a sermon from Mr. —, one of your advent ministers.

ADVENTIST. Ah, indeed! I can assure you of a reciprocity of feeling, for I conclude our conversation will turn on the scriptures, and this is my delight.

O. I know the unerring Word declares that "All scripture given by the inspiration of God is profitable," and certainly conversation calculated to elicit light on the sacred page must be mutually beneficial. But this is not the particular point I wished to broach to you this morning.

A. It may be some point of religious experience.

O. No, friend. If you will allow me to "use great plainness of speech," without parable or inuendo, I would inquire, why is it that your Advent ministers preach so much on Doctrine? For one, I believe that practical preaching has a more salutary effect.

A. Why, friend O., you do not intend to convey the idea that doctrine has no practical bearing! I do not believe that the doctrine inculcated in the Bible is without effect on the religious conduct and character of those who receive it. I came to this conclusion from the comparison Jesus Christ used in connexion with other scriptures, and my own experience.

O. Perhaps doctrine does have a kind of latent influence, but it appears to me that plain subjects on faith and repentance would be productive of more good.

A. The word faith simply signifies belief That is, to believe what is declared by another without ocular demonstration. I suppose, therefore, the subject you deem paramount is a belief in a Supreme Being, and that the Old and New Testaments are His Word, and the law he has given the world to be governed by, and by which they will be judged at the last day.

O. Just so.

A. And as to the term repentance, I conclude we agree that it signifies a feeling of sorrow,—regret for past wrongs in thought, word or deed.

O. Perfectly.

A. Well, friend O., I agree with you that these two principles form the first strata of the basis of Christianity. They are the first to be set before an unbelieving world. But really the family of God, babes in Christ, could not receive sufficient nourishment from these to grow up to the perfect stature of a man in Christ Jesus. You will recollect that it takes ALL the Scripture given by inspiration of God to furnish the man of God thoroughly. 2 Tim. 3: 16, 17. Now friend O., it is a fact much to be deprecated, that in most of the nominal churches the people are not taught what the apostle recognizes as the very first principles of the doctrine of Christ.

O. And what are they?

A. In Heb. 6: 1, you will find the six primary principles of the doctrine of Christ.

1. Faith toward God.
2. Repentance.
3. Baptism.
4. Laying on of hands.
5. Resurrection of the dead.
6. Eternal judgment; or that judgment which is eternal in its consequences. But you will see at once that these elements of doctrine were received as the commencement of the christian faith. They are the A. B. C., so to speak, to be received when the world is renounced, and the individual chooses to serve under the blood-stained banner of Immanuel. But you seem to think the first two will suffice for stock for the preacher to work upon without giving himself farther trouble in bringing out the rest. But the servant of God should not only establish the babe in Christ in these six primary principles of doctrine, but should continue to unfold and elucidate ALL the doctrine contained in the Sacred Oracles! How does a man know whether he has faith in ALL the doctrine of scripture, unless it is duly set before him?

O. I recollect that Paul teaches us that faith cometh by hearing the Word of God. Rom. 10: 17.

A. Yes, they should hear ere [illegible] receive, for I find many professing [illegible] ieve in the Scriptures, but yet are [illegible] ant as to what they do and do not [illegible]. For instance, they speak as though immortal soul—spirit land—the death that never dies, were phrases plentifully interspersed who was working at a distance. Reuben replied gruffly:

"Iv'e got enough to do to attend to my own business."

The civil request that he might be allowed to use his oxen and chains for a few minutes, being answered in this surly tone, Simeon silently walked off in search of a more obliging neighbor.

The men who had been left waiting with the patient and suffering oxen, scolded about Reuben's ill-nature when Simeon came back to them, and said they hoped Reuben would get stuck in the same bog himself. Their employer rejoined:

"If he should, we will do our duty and help him out."

"There is such a thing as being too good-natured," said they. "If Reuben Black takes the notion that people are afraid of him, it makes him trample on them worse than ever."

"O, wait awhile," replied Green, smiling—"I will kill him before long. Wait and see if I do not kill him."

It chanced soon after, that Reuben's team did stick fast in the same bog as the workmen had wished. Simeon noticed it from a neighboring field, and gave directions that the oxen and chains should be immediately conveyed to his assistance. The men laughed, shook their heads, and talked about the old hornet. They, however, cheerfully proceeded to do as their employer requested.

"You are in a bad situation, neighbor," said Simeon, as he came alongside the team; "but my men are coming with two yoke of oxen, and I think we shall soon manage to help you out."

"You may take your oxen back again," replied Reuben, quickly; "I want none of your help."

In a friendly tone Simeon answered, "I cannot consent to that, for evening is coming on, and you have very little time to lose. It is a bad job at any time, but it will be still worse in the dark."

"Light or dark, I do not ask your help," replied Reuben, emphatically. "I would not help you out of the bog the other day, when you asked me."

"The trouble I had in relieving my poor oxen, teaches me to feel for others in the same situation. Do not let us waste words about it, neighbor. It is impossible for me to go home and leave you here in the bog, and night coming on."

The team was soon drawn out, and Simeon and his men went away without waiting for thanks. When Reuben went home that night, he was unusually thoughtful. After smoking awhile in deep contemplation, he gently knocked the ashes from his pipe, and said with a sigh:

"Peg, Simeon Green has killed me!"

"What do you mean?" said his wife, dropping her knitting with a look of surprise.

"You know, when he first came into this neighborhood, he said he would kill me," replied Reuben, "and he has done it. The other day he asked me to help his team out of the bog, and I told him I had enough to do to attend to my own business. To-day, my team stuck fast in the same bog, and he came with two yoke of oxen to draw it out. I felt ashamed to have him lend me a hand. So I told him I wanted none of his help; but he answered just as pleasant as if nothing contrary had happened, that night was coming on, and he was not willing to leave me in the mud."

"He is a pleasant-spoken man," said Mrs. Black, "and always has a kind word to say to the boys. His wife seems to be a nice, neighborly body, too."

Reuben made no answer; but after meditating a while, he remarked:

"Peg, you know that big melon down at the bottom of the garden? you may as well carry it over there in the morning."

His wife said she would, without asking him to explain where "over there" was.

[Concluded next week.]

For the Crisis.

Dear Brethren and Sisters of like precious faith in Jesus Christ, I desire to write you for your profit and comfort. I I do feel thankful for what I have received through the Crisis from you. God is faithful who has promised us eternal life in Jesus, and an inheritance in his kingdom. Be faithful, and you shall receive a crown of life. Have that simple confidence in God that little children have in their parents. Ask, and ye shall receive whatsoever ye have need of. Thanks to our heavenly Father that he has inclined us to receive a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus. I have not had the privilege of meeting with those who have their lamps trimmed and burning for a long time, and seldom see one. I love them and love to hear from them. I do think I have a heart that loves my neighbor as myself. Oh! how happy the family of Christ will be in his kingdom where they will love each other as themselves. Often times when I read the Bible, light shines into my mind, I rejoice in it, and would like to communicate to you, but my health is such I can write but little. If we are faithful we shall soon exchange these mortal bodies for immortal ones.

Betsey C. Bancroft.

The World's Crisis.

BOTON, SEPTEMBER 3, 1856.

Wilbraham Campmeeting.

It is presumed that those who were not present, are anxious to learn the result of the Campmeeting just closed at North Wilbraham.

Well, I think I can safely say it was the best I ever attended.

Everybody seemed to enjoy the meeting on account of the Christian spirit manifested.

There were present those who represent almost every variety of sentiment, but the best of all was, we found it possible, through the blessing of the Lord, to love those who love him, if they did not happen to look through the same colored glasses as we were in the habit of using, or have their garments cut just like our own. We came to the happy conclusion that Christianity did not consist in opinion but in obeying the Lord.

We remembered that our Saviour said he that doeth "the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother and sister and mother."

Most, if not all, seemed fully convinced that we have had a plenty of false, unscriptural and sectarian shibboleths, and that it is high time that we acknowledge no leader but Jesus, no creed but the Bible, no name but Christian, no test but character.

We have not time or room to give a full report of the meeting, but will mention a few items.

Our meeting was located in a pleasant grove upon a hill some hundred feet above the Chickopee river, flowing at its base.

We might as well undertake to paint the hues of the diamond as to describe some of the scenes during our stay on the encampment; all we can say is, they were heavenly—glorious.

Br. Langarl from Cincinnati preached the first sermon on the ground, before our arrival. He has been obliged to withdraw from the M. E. Church, where he has labored successfully for many years, because of their opposition to the premillenial advent, and the great truth that our only hope of a future existence is in the literal resurrection of the dead, or by translation at the coming of the Lord. We commend him to the churches as a faithful laborer in the vineyard of the Lord.

We arrived on the camp ground Tuesday P. M. Soon the rain commenced and continued until Thursday night; but we felt conscious that the storm was a great benefit to the meeting, as it kept the people in their tents worshiping the Lord, which resulted in great good.

Br. J. Marsh of Rochester, preached in the New Bedford tent Wednesday P. M., from John 17: 1—12, showing that one cause of disunion among professed Christians is the mystical interpretation of the Scriptures, and that the literal view would tend greatly to promote a union.

In the evening we had a very interesting prayer meeting.

Thursday A. M. and P. M., Br. Decker spoke from Rev. 12th, 13th, and 17th chaps., presenting evidences to show that we are very near the great day of the Lord when the dead are to be raised.

Thursday evening, Br. A. Ross preached from Matt. 20: 16.

The spirit of God rested upon us. We closed the meeting after listening to remarks from Brn. J. B. Cook and Burnham. The meeting Thursday evening I think was the best I ever enjoyed. We thought it very much like the scene upon the Mount of transfiguration. We could truly say "it is good for us to be here."

That night will be long remembered by those present.

It was not a scene of fanaticism, but of glory.

We felt that Jesus was smiling upon us and filling us with his spirit. Every child of God rejoiced in the blessed hope, while sinners at the tent door stood weeping. Our joy was unspeakable.

Friday A. M., Br. J. Howell, from Ill., preached from 1 John 1: 5—7. He showed plainly that the only ground of Christian fellowship is Christian character, —that Christian character will be the test at the judgment.

Friday P. M. Br. E. Burnham spoke from Rom. 14: 1—19, showing the importance of Christian union, and the principles by which it should be regulated.

Friday evening Br. Mathewson preached from Jas. 2: 17, clearly proving that faith and works go together, and that our works are a test of our faith.

Saturday A. M. Br. J. B. Cook from Rochester preached on the 11th of Daniel, showing its connection with the Revelation of St. John. It appeared clear from his remarks, that we are very near the setting up of the everlasting kingdom.

Sat. P. M. Br. H. L. Hastings spoke from Isa. 41: 21—24, showing the great difference between the truth of the Lord and Satan's lies, and that christianity rests upon the most firm foundation; while the delusions of the devil, including modern spiritualism, can only succeed when kept from the light of God's word.

Saturday evening Br. Decker spoke on the 2300 days of Dan. 8: 14 endeavoring to show that soon our pilgrimage will end.

On the morning of the First day we went to the water and baptized a willing soul in the likeness of Christ's death.

The hearty shout demonstrated that the Comforter was present to cheer the obedient one.

We left the river-side and sung and shouted on our way to the camp-ground, and when about half way there we met a brother who had come some twelve miles that morning to be buried with Christ in baptism. We returned, and entered again the liquid grave, while saints rejoiced around. It was the husband of her that was Sr. Hancock, who was expelled from a Church for believing the truth. Her defense was published in a tract some time since.

Songs of joyful praise echoed far as the happy pair met again in fond embrace at the brink of the passing stream.

It was a happy morn.

About 8 o'clock we assembled at the preacher's stand for a "love feast," and truly it was all the name implies.

In less than an hour we learn that more than one hundred testified for Jesus. It was considered the best love feast we have ever enjoyed. Praise the Lord for such joyful, and heavenly communion with saints.

We almost forgot that we were in this cold and wicked world.

At 10 o'clock Br. H. L. Hastings preached from Dan. 12: 4.

He showed beyond all controversy that the above Scripture is now fulfilling,—giving some very strong arguments for the truth of the Bible, showing the infidel that when he attacked the word of the Lord, he was "like a hog trying to root down the rock Gibralter."

We felt that the evidence proving we are in "the time of the end," is overwhelming.

In the afternoon we listened to an interesting discourse from Br. E. Burnham. Text, Heb. 6: 11. Subject—the power of hope.

Saints rejoiced as their attention was called to the "blessed hope" so soon to be realized.

A very large congregation was present that observed most excellent order.

In the evening, remarks were made by Brn. Grant, Matthias, Pease, R. V. Lyon and H. L. Hastings.

Thus closed this feast of tabernacles.—The best of order prevailed from the beginning to the close of the meeting. It was remarked by one of the citizens of the town that such a meeting was an honor to any place.

A spirit of Christian union prevailed from the first to the last day of the encampment. People came from three to fourteen hundred miles to be present at this meeting, and they could not refrain from frequently saying—"I am well paid for coming."

With the rest I would say—praise the Lord for the "Independent campmeeting at Wilbraham."

May the spirit of that meeting spread and prevail until every child of the Lord feels the same heavenly oneness, that we enjoyed in the tented grove.

Amen and amen.

Old Debt.

We are happy to say that the "old debt" of the Crisis has expired. Thank the Lord.

Debt of the Advent Watchman.

Contributions for the debt of the Advent Watchman, which is still upwards of $700, can be forwarded to Eld. J. Turner, Hartford, Ct., to whom the money is due; or to this office, and have the amount credited in the Crisis.

New Book.

We can now fill orders for "The Life of Hiram Munger, written by himself, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and rivivals." Price, 50 cts. Postage if prepaid, 8 cts.

This book will be read with great interest both by saint and sinner. Let none be without a copy. Ed.

Br. Shepherd's work.

We would call attention to the work by Br. Wm. Shepherd, entitled—"The Saint's Inheritance."

It is a good article to give to those who have not heard on this important and interesting subject.

See book notice in another column. Ed.

New Subscribers.

With a little effort on the part of our readers to get new subscribers, we think our list may be much increased. If you like the paper, and think it calculated to do good, then we trust you will try to extend its circulation, that others may be benefited.

We expect a hearty co-operation on the part of our dear Brethren and Sisters in the Lord; and again repeat, we wish you to feel that the Crisis is your paper. We have no object in publishing it, but to glorify God by comforting and strengthening his children.

Time is short, and let us do all we can to scatter light and truth, that Jesus may say to us at last,—"Well done."

Proposition.

For every five new subscribers, we will send them a copy of "Spiritualism a Satanic delusion and Sign of the Times." By Wm. Ramsey. Published by H. L. Hastings.

This we consider the best work on the subject ever issued. We will send the bound volume free of postage.

[Ed., for the Committee.

For the Crisis

The Experiment Triumphant.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

Brethren and Sisters scattered abroad, we have tried the experiment of an Independent Camp-meeting, and it has most gloriously triumphed! Of all the meetings for love, union and peace, that I ever attended, the Wilbraham meeting jus closed, was the most blessed. The rain which fell in torrents for the first day or two, did us no harm at all; but only we were driven into our tents to pray and worship, and the rain of grace fell more plenteously within than the natural rain without. O glory to God! What meetings! No fanaticism, but mighty displays of the power of God and truth. Let our friends no longer tell us that we cannot have a peaceable and good meeting unless we are humanly organized, and are all of one sentiment, and all submit to the "one man power;" we have gloriously given this declaration the LIE! We were of many different sentiments, and we spake them freely—we let the meeting ORGANIZE itself—we were all leaders and all servants, and we were all at peace, and "all were glad" too!

I never was more impressed with the truth, that God's people need but "one leader," and that one JESUS, than at thi meeting.

This having "many" leaders and "masters" is what does the mischief! There were from 20 to 30 ministers on the ground, who held several interesting conferences together, and sought "the mind of Christ" as to the best course we should pursue, in our public work, for "the Master." We all agreed in the following conclusions:

1.

We will not have any Master but Christ.

2.

We will have no Creed but the Bible.

3.

We will have no human church organizations, "iron bedsteads," &c.

4.

We will submit to "Gospel Order," as written in the New Testament,—such as having pastors, deacons, &c., as God shall prepare our way—and thus "behave" ourselves properly, as the church of God! avoiding that which distracts, and striving for "the things which make for peace." Amen!

5.

We will labor diligently, in all right ways, to save men, and edify the church of God.

6.

We will call things in the church by the right names. Deacons, deacons, and not committees, or something else. Ministers, ministers, and not lecturers, &c. And we will call Churches, churches, and not bands.

7.

We will "LOVE ONE ANOTHER" in spite of different sentiments, and treat each other's sentiments with respect, and thus be brethren. We will be good children. Amen, and Amen!

We then presented this matter to the "whole Camp," and all the people said, Amen, and praised the Lord;" and then he poured upon us his blessing again.

[The matter was not presented in separate parts, as I have written it, but in one mass, and I have written it thus that you may the more plainly see what we have done in the name of the Lord.]

I close by saying a brighter day is dawning on our history! We have learned to "love each other" by suffering.

Come, dear brethren, help us do the work of God. Help us, when things are in a state of distraction to set them in "gospel order," and not human order; and when they are in "order," to keep them so. Let us all be kind and good.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. Munger.

I agreed to tell my brethren as soon as possible, how the finances of the campmeeting turned out. I am not left in debt this year, thank God. I have finished settling up to-day, making 13 days of continued care and perplexity which is something of a tax, without any debt left on me as last year. I would say to the Preaching Brethren that you need not send anything for your board, as you talked. The table and the $15. I received for the rent of the cooky stand paid for the 34 free boarders, and some five dollars over. This is accounted for in three ways; first, everything was brought and used with prudence. 2nd. We had good luck with our crockery. 3d. Our brethren, and especially our sisters, took hold and helped us at the victualing tent in time of need, and saved our hiring; many thanks to them from the whole camp, especially to those that had such a hard and perplexing time, as is always the case, with those that do the cooking.

While writing, I feel like one out of prison. I have tried to serve the church 13 days while they served God. I did not expect enjoyment at the meeting, but I did expect it I cast my bread upon the waters, to find it in a few days, and I have not been disappointed, for to-day, after settling up the last bill, I found five dollars left, which took all fears away of coming out minus. I was then at liberty to reflect upon and talk about our meeting and hear others tell how much good was done at the meeting. Just then came along a wave of glory with a loaf of bread upon it, and I knew it was for me, and took it and thanked God ever in the public depot: and since that, I have felt to rejoice in the blessed, deep hope of the kingdom of God.

I wish to say to our brethren, there is good news from every quarter. This meeting has told aloud for God. I have seen people from four or five towns,—all speak of the good meeting we had, although they were not identified with us. The spirit of God was on the ground, and did not leave when the meeting broke up. It was felt after all the tents were down and gone, for persons that had no religion expressed a sorrow that the meeting was over, and God's people gone. At 1 o'clock when I left the ground, I looked back and saw sadness pictured on those that were pricked in their heart. O how I then longed for the camp of the saints that will not break up. I am now fully satisfied that the rain was for our best good, and just the right week to give a chance for the two other meetings, and share in the blessings of the strong foundation laid at this meeting for future operations of peace among ourselves, which I expect will last with many until the Kingdom comes.

Yours, Hiram Munger.

Chickopee Falls, Aug. 28, '56.

Apt Quotation.

A modest, sensible, and well-bred man Would not insult me, and no other can.

For the Crisis.

Conversation between an Orthodox and an Adventist.

BY B. MATHEWSON.

Orthodox. Good morning, friend Adventist. I have been hoping for the favor of an interview ever since I listened to a sermon from Mr. —, one of your advent ministers.

Adventist. Ah, indeed! I can assure you of a reciprocity of feeling, for I conclude our conversation will turn on the scriptures, and this is my delight.

O. I know the unerring Word declares that "All scripture given by the inspiration of God is profitable," and certainly conversation calculated to elicit light on the sacred page must be mutually beneficial. But this is not the particular point I wished to broach to you this morning.

A. It may be some point of religious experience.

O. No, friend. If you will allow me to "use great plainness of speech," without parable or innuendo, I would inquire, why is it that your Advent ministers preach so much on Doctrine? For one, I believe that practical preaching has a more salutary effect.

A. Why, friend O., you do not intend to convey the idea that doctrine has no practical bearing! I do not believe that the doctrine inculcated in the Bible is without effect on the religious conduct and character of those who receive it. I came to this conclusion from the comparison Jesus Christ used in connexion with other scriptures, and my own experience.

O. Perhaps doctrine does have a kind of latent influence, but it appears to me that plain subjects on faith and repentance would be productive of more good.

A. The word faith simply signifies belief. That is, to believe what is declared by another without ocular demonstration. I suppose, therefore, the subject you deem paramount is a belief in a Supreme Being, and that the Old and New Testaments are His Word, and the law be has given the world to be governed by, and by which they will be judged at the last day.

O. Just so.

A. And as to the term repentance, I conclude we agree that it signifies a feeling of sorrow,—regret for past wrongs in thought, word or deed.

O. Perfectly.

A. Well, friend O., I agree with you that these two principles form the first strata of the basis of Christianity. They are the first to be set before an unbelieving world. But really the family of God, babes in Christ, could not receive sufficient nourishment from these to grow up to the perfect stature of a man in Christ Jesus. You will recollect that it takes ALL the Scripture given by inspiration of God to furnish the man of God thoroughly. 2 Tim. 3: 16, 17. Now friend O., it is a fact much to be deprecated, that in most of the nominal churches the people are not taught what the apostle recognizes as the very first principles of the doctrine of Christ.

O. And what are they?

A. In Heb. 6: 1, you will find the six primary principles of the doctrine of Christ.

1. Faith toward God.
2. Repentance.
3. Baptism.
4. Laying on of hands.
5. Resurrection of the dead.
6. Eternal judgment; or that judgment which is eternal in its consequences. But you will see at once that these elements of doctrine were received as the commencement of the christian faith. They are the A. B. C., so to speak, to be received when the world is renounced, and the individual chooses to serve under the blood-stained banner of Immanuel. But you seem to think the first two will suffice for stock for the preacher to work upon without giving himself farther trouble in bringing out the rest. But the servant of God should not only establish the babe in Christ in these six primary principles of doctrine, but should continue to unfold and elucidate ALL the doctrine contained in the Sacred Oracles! How does a man know whether he has faith in ALL the doctrine of scripture, unless it is duly set before him?

O. I recollect that Paul teaches us that faith cometh by hearing the Word of God. Rom. 10: 17.

A. Yes, they should hear ere they receive, for I find many professing to believe in the Scriptures, but yet are ignorant as to what they do and do not believe. For instance, they speak as though immortal soul—spirit land—the death that never dies, were phrases plentifully interspersed throughout the Sacred Volume; whereas nothing like them occurs therein. And then again, others who bear the name of Infidel, when made to understand what the Bible does teach, most heartily embraced its truths in the love of them. I am personally acquainted with a number who rejected the Bible, because they supposed it taught that a part of man was immortal, which dogma they had demonstrated as false by anatomical and physiological research. But when the Bible doctrine of immortality only through Christ was presented with all its golden links, the chain looked so consistent and perfect from Gen. to Rev., they could but admire, and admiring, embraced; and as their spiritual vision became clearer, it appeared truly "like apples of gold in pictures of silver!"

[O. Marvels greatly!]

A. Be not surprised, my friend, because such beauty and excellency were discovered in this doctrine! You know the Prophet Isaiah speaks of One whose very feet were beautiful, because he brought good tidings of salvation! Now this doctrine brought the hope of eternal life to these poor souls who had inadvertently wandered in the mazes of infidelity; and by this they were induced to meekly bow and take the yoke of Christ, having the witness of the spirit they were adopted into the family of God.

O. Well, I do not know but this may be so, and that spiritual utility may accrue from preaching doctrine.

A. I know this to be true of all Bible doctrine. And why some professing christians should assume the license of trying to make it appear a virtue to disdain any desire to hear an elucidation of the DOCTRINE of God's Word, is a mystery I am quite unable to solve; unless they have received or listened to those having a pernicious influence, which is the case with all antiscriptural doctrine.

O. I do not think the mass of professing christians opposed to listening to the preaching of doctrine, they themselves believe, providing it be done up in a workman-like manner.

A. This is the point no doubt with many. It is the listening to doctrine diametrically opposed to their prepossessions that makes them feel uncomfortable. For instance, they have been taught from the nursery that at death (if good) they would soar away on bright seraphic pinions to experience untold accessions of joy in the immediate presence of God and the Lamb; and when they hear this favorite hobby flatly contradicted by such passages of scripture as—"The dead know not any thing,"—"He returneth to his earth in that very day his thoughts perish;" and hear Christ saying to his disciples,—"Whither I go, ye cannot come," and a hundred others as plainly against this popish theory, they are disturbed, and would rather hear something that would not expose those glaring absurdities.

O. I see you are very tenacious for your peculiar doctrine, and indeed there is a plausibility about it.

A. It appears to me there is a sensibleness in it, that will commend it to every reasonable man's conscience, who will think and examine for himself.

O. In the forepart of our conversation, you spake of concluding from a comparison drawn by the Savior, that the doctrine we embrace influences and regulates our conduct, and forms our religious character.

A. Yes, I think I can fully substantiate this point by the unerring Word, if you will have patience to listen a little longer. To tell you the truth, this is what I intended to have done much earlier in our conversation, but have been deterred by the introduction of other matter. You will recollect that our Saviour uses leaven as a comparison for doctrine. He told his disciples to "Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees:" not comprehending his comparison, they thought He spake relative to bread—but He immediately corrected the matter, so that "Then understood they how that he bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees."

Christ chose a fit comparison with which to illustrate, and we have only to understand the NATURE of leaven to know how Christ regarded the effect of doctrine on the human heart. The most prominent thing to be observed in the nature of leaven is its gradually transforming influence! It is well known by those who have had any experience in culinary matters that a small quantity of perfect leaven, with proper attention, has power to transform almost any quantity of farinaceous matter into its own nature. But the temperature of the atmosphere greatly facilitates or retards the transmuting process. We may use the most perfect leaven, but a frigid or scorching atmosphere will perfectly annihilate its power! So, the unadulterated doctrine of Christ, when introduced into an ice-bound heart, or to one withered by the scorching rays of fanaticism, becomes equally powerless, not because it was void of virtue, but because there was no susceptibility to receive that virtue. Every wife, that "looketh well to the ways of her household," knows also that the greatest care should be used relative to the quality of leaven ere it be added to any farinaceous matter, else, if sour or otherwise imperfect, it will assuredly impart the same imperfections. Thus great care should be taken what kind of doctrine we inculcate; if anti-scriptural, rest assured the deleterious influence will be exhibited in the conduct and character of its recipients. I think it safe to judge whether a doctrine be of God by the influence it exerts. I assure you my friend, that a little of the pure doctrine of the scriptures, contains sufficient power to transform poor, obdurate human nature, into the likeness of the Son of God, as the Apostle affirms—"A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump." That doctrine is the leaven, I have shown you by Jesus Christ's own words; and that He never used a more full and perfect comparison, I think all will concede that understand the nature of leaven, and the effect of good or evil doctrine on the human heart.

O. This gives an importance to doctrine I had not before conceived, I confess.

A. If it should influence you to duly estimate the doctrine of God's Word, I shall rejoice. But as we have been somewhat lengthy, perhaps we had better conclude our conversation for the present, and if it be your mind, engage in it again at some future period.

O. I think it may be renewed with mutual benefit.

New Hartford, Ct. July '56.

Mistake.

By some accident this column of Sr. Mussey's letter was omitted on the fourth page. It should be inserted in the second column, in the tenth line, from the top, after the words—"he took bread."

blessed it, and brake, and gave to them. "And their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and he vanished out of their sight." They then exclaim from the fullness of their souls,—"did not our hearts burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the Scriptures?" How rejoiced were they to know it was true their Lord had indeed risen from the dead. They return to their Brethren, and while they rehearse the matter over, how he was seen and known of them in breaking of bread, "Jesus himself stood in the midst of them, and said unto them, Peace be unto you!"

Brn. remember it is peace where Jesus is. When he last met with them before his ascension, they exclaim, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the Kingdom to Israel?" How great was their desire to have the kingdom restored! "Not now," says the Lord, "it is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power; but ye shall receive power after the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." He then ascended up into heaven, "a cloud received him out of their sight." Angels came and told them he would come back again as he went away, and they returned to Jerusalem, there to wait for the promise. They had been comforted and refreshed with the presence of their Lord again, and he had told them he would come again, and the kingdom should be restored; and although they knew not the exact time, yet they rested on the promise believing it would be fulfilled. While in their disappointed condition, Peter exclaims: "I go a fishing." Others cry out, "We also go with thee." They were so disappointed in not realizing what they anticipated, they concluded to return to their old occupation, and they entered into their ship, and that night they caught nothing. In the morning Jesus stood upon the shore and hails them saying,—"Children, have you any meat?" "They answered him, No."

"Then said Jesus, 'cast thy net upon the right side of the ship;'" they immediately obey, and now they were "not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes." As soon as Peter discovered who it was they had obeyed, he immediately girt his fisher's coat about him and cast himself into the sea, so earnest was he to meet his Lord again; but the other disciples came in their ship. As soon as they were all come to land with their fish, Jesus prepared them a delicious meal, and bade them come and dine. Was ever a meal eaten on earth more sweet than one prepared by Jesus himself? yet Peter could exclaim "I love thee better than these;" well, says the Lord, "feed my sheep." He must leave his fishing and go to preaching again; and he went, preaching the resurrection of Christ, and from the fullness of his soul, exclaims,—"blessed be the God and father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled and that fadeth not away." Here, Peter had a view of the kingdom promised. It will come after all our disappointment, the kingdom will be restored to Israel. I see the inheritance by faith, God is keeping it in store for them that love him.

Beloved Brn. and Srs., while meditating upon this subject, I could but contrast it with our own disappointed state. We have been looking for the restoration of the kingdom to Israel, we thought the time had come when our long absent Lord would return to restore all things, set up his kingdom, redeem his people, and give them the kingdom; but, as were the disciples, we have been dissatisfied, our times have all passed and we know not when the time is. And now what is our hope? It has been deferred and the heart is sick. Will our Desire ever come? Yes, oh yes, and when the Desire cometh it is a tree of life. Has there ever been a people, since the apostles' days whose expectations have been raised so high as ours? No, never. We have even come to a day when we expected to be translated as were Enoch and Elijah, but the day past and no Savior to redeem us; disappointment and trial came in its stead; and how lonely we have felt at times while we have walked together like the disciples, rehearsing the matter of our expectations and disappointment. In the past, we thought we were near home, but now we know not how long; yet in the calm stillness of the night, just before the dawn of day, we can hear a sound from the Watchman—"the morning cometh,"—but it soon dies away, and we grow drowsy

CAMPMEETINGS.

Campmeeting at Licthfield Station, Conn.

The Lord willing there will be a Campmeeting near Litchfield depot on the Naugatuck railroad, about 13 miles from Winsted, to commence on Wednesday the 10th of Sept., and continue one week or more. The design of this meeting is that the pilgrims may meet and greet each other, and unite their faith and prayers together, that the things that remain and are ready to die may be abundantly stregthened. The brethren in this place are poor, but are willing to make such sacrifices as they can to make every thing pleasant and comfortable. There will be no regular boarding tent on the ground, for we think our brethren and sisters can better glorify God in the prayer circle, than in being cumbered about much serving. There will be a way provided for those who cannot bring food with them.

Good pasture for horses, grain, &c.

We would say that it would be well for our brethren to bring tents and bedding for themselves, and not be dependent; and those that cannot, will be provided for. Come Brethren and Sisters, come to Litchfield once more. Come with your eye single, and your hearts uplifted to God that the blessing of heaven may rest upon us. Brn. Grant, Mathewson, Burnham, H. Munger, A. Decker, and others are expected to attend.

N. B. Buy your tickets for Litchfield. The cars run both ways past the ground twice a day. A. M. TYRRELL.

The Lord willing, we will endeavor to be present at the above mentioned meeting. We hope to see a general gathering of the children of the Lord at this feast of tabernacles. Do not fail to be present.

M. GRANT.
E. BURNHAM.

Campmeeting at Cheshire, Mass.

The Lord permitting, there will be a Campmeeting at Chesire, Mass., one half mile from the depot, to commence Sept. 15, and continue over the following Sabbath.

We invite all the lovers of Jesus, and those who wish to become his followers, to come in the name of the Lord with their tents to the feast of tabernacles; for we expect the good Lord will meet with his people and forgive sinners.

Board and horse keeping on reasonable terms, with a free table for God's poor. Those coming by railroad, will find teams in readiness to convey them to the camp-ground on the arrival of the trains.

Brethren invited. M. Batchelor, L. Boutell, H. Pratt, J. Turner, and all who can come.

Yours in hope,
ALONZO CUMMINGS, HIRAM BENTON,
For the Brethren.
Cheshire, Aug. 9, '56.

Tent Meeting at Moline, Ill.

Providence permitting, a Tent meeting will commence in Moline, Ill., Saturday eve., Sept. 6, and continue a number of days.

Eld. Himes and others are expected to preach the word. Brethren in this region are cordially invited to attend.

For the church, P. B. MORGAN.

Br. Grant will you give the following notice a place in your paper and much oblige, many lovers of truth. As ever, yours,

J. FRENCH.

Campmeeting at Westford, Mass.

The lovers of truth and believers in all the commandments of the New Covenant, will make preparations and meet for a Campmeeting, in Harmony Grove, at Westford, Mass., on the Stony Brook Railroad, eight miles from Lowell. This is one of the pleasantest and most convenient Groves to be found anywhere.

Brethren from the North will stop at North Chelmsford, and take the Stony Brook Rail Road for Westford. The Meeting will commence on Wednesday, September 10th, and hold over Sunday.

The object of the meeting is to unfurl the banner of truth. It is not designed merely for a tent meeting, but a regular Campmeeting; the brethren therefore should come prepared to lodge on the gound, as far as practicable, with tents, bedding, and provisions.—Those who cannot provide for themselves, nor lodge on the ground conveniently, will be provided for.

Let all, far off or near, with or without means, come; and let those who have means help those who have none, and thus bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the Law of Christ, which is the ROYAL LAW—"Love thy neighbor as thyself."

Arrangements have been made for taking care of Horses.

Brethren are requested to be on the ground as early as possible Wednesday Morning, to put up the tents.

Rrethren D. E. Moulton, J. Hemenway, I. Dammon, J. Billings, A. W. Sibley, S. Bragg, Br. Perkins, and all others interested in this good cause, are invited to attend.

J. Cummings, J. G. Smith, J. Spinney, J. W. Britton, Geo. W. Brown.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Canada East.

Eld. E. Burnham having responded to the request made by the Brethren in Barnston, Hatley, Melbourne and Danville, will spend the last two Sabbaths in Sept. in Hatley and Barnston, as the brethren there may arrange.

Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 1st and 2d, at Melbourne.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Danville.

The brethren at Hatley will receive him from the Portland train on Saturday, Sept. 20, at the Compton station. J. PORTER.

Discussion on Spiritualism.

By desire of many brethren, Eld. Joseph Turner of Hartford, Ct., has consented to hold a Discussion with the Spiritualists at the Free Chapel, corner of Lowell and Causeway Streets, Boston, on Monday evening, Sept. 8th, to commence at 7 1-2 o'clock.

Subject—What is the Cause of the Phenomena of Modern Spiritualism.

Providence permitting, I will preach at West Falmouth, Sept. 7th.
Richmond, Reed Meeting House, 14.
Otisfield, 21.
Casco, 28.
JESSE PARTRIDGE.

Providence permitting I will preach as follows:—
Peacedale, R. I., Sunday, Sept. 7.
Lafayette, Sept. 9.
Arnold's Bridge, 10.
Will reach Apponaug in morning train—wish conveyance from Bro. Wait's.
River Point, 11.
Providence, 12.
Fairhaven, Sunday, 21.
Any intimation of necessary change, thankfully received.
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Charlemont, Mass., the first Sunday in Sept.
North Adams, the second.
C. GOODRICH.

The Lord willing, S. B. Munn will hold a protracted meeting at Fances Corner, North Dartmouth, Mass., commencing Friday evening, Sept. 19, and continuing over the Sabbath.

A general invitation is extended to all the brethren and sisters in the vicinity.
R. COTTLE.

The Lord willing, I will preach in the following places;—
Jawbuck, Ct., Sunday, Sept. 7.
Northfield, Mass., Thursday eve, Sept. 11
Vernon, Vt., Friday eve, Sept. 12, at, or near, Bro. R. Allen's.
West Brattleboro, Vt., Sunday, Sept. 14.
Houghtonville, Vt., Sunday, Sept. 21.
O. D. GIBSON.

I will preach at Portsmouth, N. H., (if the Lord will) the first and third Sabbath in Sept., and at Portland, Me., the second Sabbath in Sept. J. COUCH.

If the Lord will, I will preach at the following places:—
Lowell, Mass., Lord's Day, Sept. 14.
Lawrence, Mass., Wednesday eve, Sept. 17.
Salem, Mass., Lord's Day, Sept. 21.
WM. M. INGRAHAM.

Bro. D. E. Moulton will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 12.

Bro. J. Hemenway will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 26.
S. W. BISHOP.

Bro. D. E. Moulton will preach in Great Falls, Sunday Oct. 5. S. W. B.

The Lord permitting, I will preach as follows:
Pinebrook, Ind., Sept. 5.
Union Mills, Sept. 6, and over Sunday.
Kingsbury, 8th, and 9th.
Bro. Cousins vicinity, Sept. 10th and 11th; will Bro. Cousins meet me at Laporte, Ind.
Rolling Prarie, 13th, and over Sunday.
In the vicinity of Crane's Grove, Adeline, Paynes Point, East and West Plumb River, until Oct. 1.
Cranes' Grove, Sept. 21.
Further notices, next week.
L. H. CHASE.

If nothing prevents, I will preach as follows:
At Freeport Methodist Chapel, Sunday Sept. 7. R. R. YORK.

Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at
Portsmouth 5th Sunday in Aug.
Kennebunkport 1st Sunday in Sept.
Boston 2nd Sunday in Sept.

BRO. GRANT:—As some of my appointments now published interfere with others, will you please do me the favor to drop the list now being published and in their stead publish the following:

Providence permitting, I will preach as follows:
Lawrence Mass. Sunday Sept. 7.
Portsmouth N. H., Sunday Sept. 14.
S. W. BISHOP.

Lowell, Sunday, Sept. 7.
Lynn Dye-house Sunday Sept. 14.
J. HEMENWAY.

Providence permitting, I will be with the brethren in Westfield, Thursday eve. Sept. 4.
Chester Factories, Friday Sept. 5.
Cheshire, Saturday Sept. 6.
North Adams, Sunday 7.
Savoy Tannery, Monday evening 8.
West Hawley, Tuesday 9.
Charlemont, Wednesday 10.
Conway, Thursday 11.
Greenfield, Friday 12.
Vernon, Vt., Sunday 14. H. PRATT.

Providence permitting, Bro. D. E. Moulton will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., the last Sunday in Sept. S. W. BISHOP.

I will preach at
Lynn Dye Factory Village, Sunday, Sept. 7 the Lord will. L. BOUTELL.

Bro. Higgins preaches in Salem, Sept. 7. T. HARDY, Jun.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

The following works are published and sold by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.—They are also for sale at the Office of the "World's Crisis," 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.; and by W. Pratt, Moline, Ill.; P. A. Smith, 4 Frank street, Rochester, N. Y.; A. F. Porter, 20 Erie street, Philadelphia, Pa.; S. S. Brewer, 54 Wilson street, Providence, R. I.:—

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 38 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By I. C. Welcome. 38 cents; postage 6 cents.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions of the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 16 cents per volume.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—by D. T. Taylor. Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—by John Cumming. State of the Dead, by Milton. Intermediate State, by Grew. Each 24 pages. Price 5 cents single; $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the Coast of Man—Ancient Landmarks—Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—price 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred.—Future Punishment—The Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

Dr. Decker's pamphlet on the 2300 Days. Price, singly 10 cts.; per dozen, 50 cts.

GLAD TIDINGS:

OR

BIBLE PROOF

That WOE and SIN are to END in the Universe, by a LITTERAL DESTRUCTION of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment.

All Texts on FUTURE PUNISHMENT collected and arranged.

By JACOB BLAIN,

Baptist Minister, of Buffalo, New York.

"And there shall be no more death, sorrow, crying, nor pain."—Rev. 21: 4.

"And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, * * * * heard I saying, blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, forever and ever."—Rev. 5: 13.

"The last enemy shall be DESTROYED."—1 Cor. 15: 26.

Published by the author, No. 19 North Division Street, Buffalo, N. Y., and for sale at the Crisis Office, Boston, Mass. Price 10 cts. single.

NEW BOOKS.

We have just received two new and interesting works. One from Bro. J. Lenfest, entitled "The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion," and "The New Birth."

Price for single copy 12 cts.; per hundred, $8; to the poor free.

They can be had at this office, or of Bro. Lenfest at Machiasport, Me.

Another from William Shepherd, Elizabeth City, N. J., entitled, "The Saints' Inheritance."

Bro. Shepherd will furnish this work of 50 pages at the following low rates, which he says is below cost, as he wishes the truth to be spreading:

Four copies	$0.25
Nine	0.50
Eighteen	1.00
Fifty	2.50
One hundred	5.00

And in addition, he will prepay the postage.

Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called the 'Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50: per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise, it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

G H Rich, M Chandler, M M Pitkin, M Morehouse, A Perkins, E Pierce, L Bosley, H Simons, C Troxel, W Burbec, Mr. Nudd, J B Howes, P J King, Anna Hazen, J Miliken, C Cottle, H. Cross, D. Chase, M Broga, A Smith, Mr. Parker, L Haskel, C Wakeman, J M Howard, B Jennings, J H Sleeper, R Lyman, G W Wiggin, W R Howe, R Hinman, E G Wood, L. W. Houghton, A P Hyde, G B Lawrence, A Doloff, S Martin, D Wilson, O F Cain, S Plummer, A S Conant, W Chapin, S Atkinson, H Holmes, J Burt, A Gifford, L R Elder, J West, R Andrus, J Clough, H Wilson, R Allen, T W Titus, A Woodward, M A Perkins, H E Wright, T Finn, J Finn, R Taylor, E Hall, H M Wiggin, H Slater, C Ackley, J Spaulding, W Stark, H Pratt, G Wheeler, J F Mayall, U M Smith, A Burnett, E P Fellows, L T Wood, S Stone, E Harrington, A Pegg, M M Flint, T Foote, S B Pratt, W Parker, J Armstrong, W Jackson, C McGowen, A Andrews, D Carr, J M Caffee, J Cooper, J Moody, S K Fenton, T S Axe, F W Hutchins, A Youngman, J Bayley, W Harriman, S Woolsey, A subscriber at Union Mills, E Piper, S K Eddy, E Garland, A Pinney, L Mills, L Bristol, J Coggswell, P A Strong, T P Bristol, A J Maglue, M Garrison, D Thayer, L Morin, N McCullock, Jr., W F Harding, M R Potter, F W Henry, R Pendleton, J H Rusher, E J Kingsbury, E Ayers, M C Kershaw, R Avery, A Hitchcock, S Woodruff, R Neale, N L Robie, G W Annis, J Whitman, H Stevens, R C Jackman, A Hunt, B Fifield, L Taylor, J M Andrew, W S Moulton, F Converse, J C Barton, S Tucker, D W Spear, J Kimball, R S Currier, J B Mooney, S Blaisdell, L Osborne, M J White, W Tuttle, J B Whittemore, J Gay, A subscriber at St Albans, M E Davis, T Glover, N D Wright, R O White, F Rice, W Reed, W Parker, A Rice, H Goodale, M Crane, G Wood, D D Chaffee, R Severy, S Cooper, P Howard, A Cudworth, E Reed, J B Potter, R Taylor, E S Walker, L L Fenn, D Grant, J B Morgan, B E Boynton, A Newell, J C Denison, C Alden, P Howard, H E Twing, T Wilkins, E A Cook, E Heath, B Swain, E Barret, J. J. Johnson, C Richardson, A Richardson, $1 each.

P Hubbard, B T Weaver, E Stevens, S O Welch, Jonas Merriam, R F Cram, R H Woltz, C Crawford, W Nichols, A M S Bennett, L Allen, J Naramore, L J Beach, E A Eggleston, S Rogers, $2 each.

T G Newman, Mrs S Jennings, J Woodward, J Boutwell, M Bourhuit, J Newton, C Stark, R Thompson, J Canterbury, C H Smith, D C Hart, J H Hall, E Buckland, E Burrows, 50 cents each.

N Rathbun, J Curtis, Mrs J Sloan, $1.50 each.

S Bliss $3: D Kinsman, $4; C S Barnes, $5; S F Otis, $4.50; J P Sanders, $5; N Hanson, $4.

W Kider, W Elmore, 25 cents each.

FOR THE POOR—M Broga M Garrison, J P Sanders, F Converse, $1 each. C H Smith, 50 cents.

For books—J T Ongley $5.

FOR THE OLD DEBT OF CRISIS.

D. Kinsman, $4; J Spaulding, 1$; J S Brooks, $1; A friend, $3; Mrs J F Mayall, $1; Brn. at Union Mills and Kingsbury, Ind. $3; W Harriman, 48 cts.; M Garrison, $1; J. Gray, 25 cts.; A Brother, 50 cts.; An old debtor, 3.; J Kimball, $1; V N Cudworth, $1; A Ross, 1$; C Swift, $1; M Grant, $1.67

Whole amount of Debt, [illegible]
Amount paid on Debt, [illegible]

FOR THE DEBT OF THE ADVENT WATCHMAN.
J Spaulding, jr., [illegible]

A subscriber at Union Mills, Ind., and also one at St. Albans, Me., omit to sign their names to letters, sent containing money. We cannot of course credit it to them on our books, till they send their names.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

The Camp-Meeting.

BY MARIA.

We gathered there from North and South,
From East and the "far West,"
To spend within the tented grove,
The hours in social rest.

From lone retreats the pilgrim's came
To grasp a brother's hand,
And be refreshed in converse sweet,
As with the house-hold band.

'Twas sweet to hear those voices blend
In mingled praise and prayer,
To hear the words each spake, to cheer
The other onward, there.

But came the parting—hands were clasped,
Lips pressed th' unspoken word—
The sad farewell—when next to meet—
Known only to our Lord.

Perchance, not till the angel-bands
The scattered flock call home—
To that one blessed fold, from whence
We never more shall roam.

We'll gather there, all there, from North,
From South, from East and West,
And sit us down 'mid Eden bowers,
Through that long Sabbath rest.

Worcester, Mass., Aug. 26, '56.

From the S. S. Advocate.

The Number Seven.

Seven is a number most complete:
Seven years composed the jubilee;
Seven days compose the Christian week;
Seven attributes, the Deity.

Seven lamps branched from the golden bowl;
Seven burners shone from every one;
Seven eyes appeared on Joshua's stone,
Seven eyes at Zerubbabel's plumb.

Seven priests old Jericho compassed,
Seven trumpets of ram's horns to sound;
Seven days poured forth the threatening blast,
Seven brought the walls all to the ground.

Seven churches ancient Asia graced,
Seven candlesticks therein were placed;
Seven seals confined the mystic book,
Seven were by Judah's lion broke.

Seven horns were seen upon the Lamb;
Seven were the heads the dragon bore;
Seven angels flew at God's command,
Seven vials of his wrath to pour.

Seven times with oil the ancient priest
Sprinkled before the throne of God;
Seven times his finger, type of Christ,
Sprinkled the mercy-seat with blood.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis

Letter from Sr. Abigail Mussey.

BR. GRANT:—While looking over our present position as Adventists, I thought of the words of those loved disciples while traveling to Emmaus. "We trusted it had been he which should have redeemed Israel." Luke 24: 21

No doubt their expectations had been raised very high while they followed their Lord and received instruction from his lips; they believed it was he that should redeem Israel, and thought he had then come to accomplish the work. But, behold! instead of the redemption of Israel, Israel's King is taken by those wicked, unbelieving Jews, and slain. Joseph begs his body and deposits it in his own new tomb, where never man was laid; the sepulchre is closed, and a large stone rolled against the door, for his enemies remembered this "deceiver" said, he should rise again the third day, and for fear his disciples would come by night and take him away he must be kept close. Feeble Man thought to arrest Jesus Christ!

Brn. beloved, behold your crucified Savior dead, wrapped in a winding sheet, sleeping in the silent tomb; see pale death stamped upon his brow; see the print of the nails in his hands; see where his feet were fastened to the wood; behold his side, where they pierced him with the spear, see, O see the purple gore streaming from his wounded side! O, he died for you and me. Glory to his precious name he will arise, so says his word. And while the word of God is being fulfilled, and the Son of man lay three days and three nights in the heart of the earth, those two disciples went to Emmaus, and no doubt were talking the matter over—for they had heard he had risen that day—when Jesus himself drew near and went with them, but their eyes were holden that they should not know him. "And he said unto them, what manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?" They tell him of their sorrow, how Jesus of Nazareth had come, a prophet, mighty in deed and word before God and all the people, how the chief priests and rulers had delivered him to be condemned to the death of the cross. We thought he was going to redeem Israel, now but we are disappointed, and mistaken, we have heard that he is alive, and we are astonished, we hardly know what these things mean.

This appears to be the purport of their conversation. Jesus then "beginning at Moses," "expounded unto them all the prophets, and the scriptures, concerning himself." And they were so delighted with his teachings they invited him to tarry with them over night. And "as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and again, and sleep imperceptibly steals over us. Again, in the distance on yonder hill or in the valley we hear a sound—"the morning cometh—" we start up again, the sound has melody in it; again we are wide awake, longing for rest, sighing for home, and Jesus whispers in our ears,—"what I say unto you I say unto all, watch;" "lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping." O, then he is coming after all our disappointments? Yes! Glory to God, he is coming to give life to the dead and joy to the mourner. Precious Savior, we love thee still, and thy promise is sweet—"I will come again." In the days of '43 and '44, a lively company were on the watch in expectation of the redemption of Israel. Erom every quarter the sound was heard from the Watchmen;—"the Morning cometh." The lovers of Jesus would echo back the sound—"the morning cometh and also the night." "Amen, even so come Lord Jesus," was the hearty response from hill and vale. But the sound seemingly died away, and many have fallen; some have given up the blessed hope and returned from whence they came: others are sleeping in Jesus, peace to their slumbers till Jesus awakes them; and some like Peter have returned to their old occupation thinking the Lord may not come for many years, forgetting his words "behold I come as a thief, blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments. Another cry has been made, (whether of God or man, many honest souls believed it and went forth like flaming heralds and proclaimed it) but the sound has in a measure died away and disappointment is our lot; but is the Lord changed? Hear him "I am the Lord, I change not."

And now I would ask if some of our Brn. have not gone a fishing; it appears to me I have seen something that answers the description. I would say to such, don't you hear the sheep bleating, and the lambs crying? Listen carefully and see if you cannot hear Jesus saying "feed my sheep"—feed my lambs." Do you say, I have bought me a farm and I must till; I have bought me oxen, I must prove them; I have married me a wife and therefore I cannot come? Hear Jesus—"lovest thou me more than these?" Do you answer, yes? then feed my sheep and lambs scattered upon the mountains, hungry, and crying for food. "Blessed is that servant whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing."

I rejoice to know that God has Watchmen upon the walls of Zion that will not hold their peace day nor night until Jerusalem is made a praise in the earth. The Lord bless them in their work of love, and comfort his people in all their tribulations. "Grudge not one against another, brethren, for behold, the Judge standeth before the door."

Your Sr. patiently waiting, yet earnestly desiring to see the Lord.

ABIGAIL MUSSEY.

Fisherville, N. H., July 10, '56.

N. B.—Will not some of the Watchmen come to Fisherville? We are hungry, indeed, for the sincere milk of the word. We have a prayer meeting Wednesday and Sunday evenings.

"We are little, 'tis true, and our numbers are few,
And the sons of old Anak are tall,
But while we see a track, we will never give back
But go on at the risk of our all."

A. M.

For the Crisis.

Letter from O. Blanchard.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS. IN CHRIST:—The Lord fill your souls with the fullness of the "blessing of the gospel of Christ," is my earnest prayer. O praise the Lord. I rejoice in my Savior for what he has done for me. Praise his holy name. I feel that I am coming up on to higher and holier ground. If I ever loved my Savior, it is to-day; and if I ever loved the children of God, and the truth contained in the Bible, it is now. I need not use the if—I know I love them all. Glory to God. Brn. and Srs, it is the blessed privilege; yea, more; it is the duty of us all so to live, that we can be filled with the spirit of God, and if we keep full of the love of Jesus, we shall praise the Lord; we cannot help it,—"out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh;" but if we praise our God, we shall make the enemy mad.

When the Lord blesses, we should render thanks to his name by praising him; and I believe the reason why many do not get greater blessings, is, because they do not praise God enough for what they do receive. The fear of man keeps many from being entirely free.

I do feel like urging upon the minds of my Brn. and Srs., the importance of being wholly given up to God. We had better let the cause of Christ alone, than have a "form of godliness," and be destitute of the "power." I want a religion that will save me, or I do not want any. The Savior says—"not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father, which is in heaven." The will of God concerning us, is contained in the scriptures of truth. We can turn to the sacred pages, and there read the character of those who will enter into eternal life; and we have the promise of the spirit of truth; which will lead into all truth.

I am thankful to God for the light that has shone on my pathway, for a few years past, and if I keep in the pathway of the just, my light will grow brighter until "the perfect day."

Dear Brn. and Srs., I want to ask you,—do you feel like coming up to your privileges?

I am happy to say that the Lord is with us in this place, and is blessing us more than usual. There are a few of us here who mean to live out the principles of the gospel of Christ. We experience many trials, but they are among the "all things" that "work for" our "good." I pray the Lord to let us have just what we need. In closing, I pray that we all may have that religion which will cleanse us from all sin, that religion which will bear us up in all circumstances of life; that religion which will make us honest, and love one another; that will give peace, union and strength; the religion that will enable us to overcome the world, the flesh and the devil; that religion which will draw out our hearts for the conversion of friends and enemies; and finally, that religion which will give us an assurance day by day, that when Jesus comes, we shall be saved in the everlasting kingdom of God.

O. BLANCHARD.

North Adams, June, '55.

From Bro. P. B. Morgan.

BROTHER GRANT:—Dear Sir: I should like, were it possible, to say a word for your encouragement; for I very much feel the work you are engaged in, is the work of God. I am of the entire and settled belief that God has been in the great advent move;—a work, the effects of which have been felt throughout the civilized world. Consequently I believe that every Christian effort calculated to further this work, is likewise the subject of God's especial favor.

The Crisis with its free and independent spirit,—its wholesome, well-arranged, and timely messages of truth, have seemed to me one of the most efficient means within our ranks to help sustain and build up our precious cause. Indeed I wish to say that I esteem the Crisis as a most invaluable aid to the Advent cause of America; and while it continues to occupy its present honorable position, I pledge you my sympathies. By honorable, I mean its independent, bold, and able vindication of truth, and its freedom from the bitter controversial and party dogmas that have so disgraced other periodicals of our country. And this, I can assure you, is the prevailing sentiment of our brethren in Illinois and Iowa. Among the entire list of Messenger subscribers I sent you, I have known of only two or three who do not choose to continue taking the Crisis. As an example, a worthy and intelligent brother in the eastern part of the State, to whom the Crisis was sent in lieu of the Messenger, wrote me recently:—"We still get the Crisis; I love that paper—would not part with it for the price twice told."

The cause in the great West, I am happy to say is, with few exceptions, in no measure declining. A few regions are suffering for want of proper watch-care; and in some other places partizan and dogmatic men have sown seeds of discord; but the contrary is more generally the fact. Doors are opening, and calls are coming from almost every direction for help. Brethren Pratt and Chandler have been pretty largely occupied as evangelists, and are the only brethren who travel largely in this region. For a season past I have been in a measure confined as pastor of the Church in this place; but hope to get out and meet a few of the pressing calls soon.

My faith in the soon-coming of our long-absent Lord, was never stronger than now. I believe God is doing his last work for a guilty world. It is the wo k of Elias—of restoration and separation in the Church. It is like the building of the ark before the flood—"the making ready a people prepared for the Lord." "Nevertheless when the Son of Man cometh shall he find faith on the earth? This suggestion of our Lord's, occupies my thoughts day and night. Now is the time when there is but little faith in the land,—and those that have it, are as but "one of a city, and two of a family;"—and now is the time when the Son of man may be expected. O, God! make and keep us ready is my prayer.

I have been much grieved to see the complaints of some of our Eastern evangelists; but am only confirmed in a long-settled belief that we need a radical change in our tactics, or manner of labor. I think we have been quite too superficial in our labors. It has seemed to me that in many instances our evangelists have come, staid for a limited time, and then gone again; and that with the appearance of little regard as to what had been or might be accomplished by their labors.—While, instead of this, we ought never to strike a blow without expecting to see some, usually, immediate results.

When we preach to sinners that they should repent, we ought also to impress upon them the fact that now is the time for them to repent—because they have no promise of to-morrow. And so also in all our labors, we ought never to rest satisfied short of seeing the awakening and sanctifying power of God attend our labors, and something real accomplished as the result;—whether it require three days or three weeks. Let us never raze our fortress or abandon our post, without first seeing the enemy routed. But instead of this, the trumpets have been sounded, but no walls have fallen; and the enemy has laughed to scorn our flourish of trumpets, and felt himself more invincible than before. The truth is, the appointment of the trumpeters was right, and the marching around the walls was all in God's order, but it was necessary that they go around seven days, without observing which all the other arrangements were futile. The facts are, while Jesus continues at the right hand of the Father, we know God is in earnest to save sinners; and we are authorized to expect success to attend our labors,—without which we should not rest. If we do not see sinners awakened and the Church revived under our labors, we know there is a wrong somewhere; very likely in the preacher; perhaps he lacks faith, or may be holiness; or perhaps that practical, common sense wisdom necessary to qualify him for the evangelist's work.

"He that winneth souls is wise," saith the Scriptures.

But I am writing a longer letter than I purposed. I would prefer as a usual thing to see short letters in the Crisis, and know they should be short to secure a perusal by the mass of readers. Will try to improve my next.

I remain yours, looking for our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.

P. B. MORGAN.

Moline, Ill., Aug. 14, '56.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. F. Matthews.

BRO. GRANT:—I love the blessed Jesus, who says—"Take my yoke upon you;" "for my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." I feel thankful to Almighty God for his holy spirit, and that I may live under its gracious influence, for, "if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." How then can any affirm that its influences have ceased? But must our faith rest on the authority of men? No. Let us search the scriptures, which teach that the work of the spirit on the heart is absolutely necessary to true godliness. It is for the sanctifying power of the Holy Spirit I plead. The apostles and first christians received by the Spirit, light, faith and love to Christ in their hearts. They purified their souls in obeying the truth, and through the spirit, abounded in hope. Through the same, they mortified the deeds of the body, and cried—"Abba, Father." The spirit was the earnest of their heavenly inheritance; and all their holy tempers, affections, and actions are called fruits of the spirit. And are not all these things as necessary to us as they were to them? Corrupt nature is just the same now as then, and needs the same power to change it. Grace is also just the same now as it was then, and it is derived from the same source. "O praise the Lord for he is good, for his mercy endureth forever." And as an evidence of having obtained mercy from God, O Lord help me to show mercy to men. "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." Amen and amen.

Your Bro., F. MATTHEWS.

Charlestown, Mass., July 31, '56.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. S. C. Moses.

"Meat in due season"

BR. GRANT:—I could not help thinking of the promise in connection with this scripture, as we were listening to the quiet yet strong and conclusive reasoning of our Bro. Decker, at Newark, yesterday—who is evidently one of the few who are searching for "present truth" as for hidden treasures—and lifting up the voice for understanding. Success to such is secured by the promise of the Almighty.

Although it is a time when the youth "faint and are weary," and the young man utterly fails—several of which indicative and impressive manifestations were witnessed among our friends at Newark, yet the light upon the path of the just never shone with a clearer, purer ray, than it does at this very hour.

But many of the brethren seem worn and weary, and need refreshing; perhaps the following timely and admonitory verses published by the New York Sun, some five or six weeks since, may prove as beneficial and refreshing to some weary one, as to ourselves. They were entitled:

"Behold! the Bridegroom Cometh!"

"Behold! the Bridegroom is returning,
Rise, trim your lamps, and have them burning—
The final hour is nigh.
Watch! 'twill approach with stealthy creeping,
Watch! lest it come and find you sleeping,
Watch! lest it leave you wailing, weeping,
Forever doomed to die!

When ye shall hear the trumpet's warning,
Lo! 'tis the Resurrection morning,
Then they shall live who died.
They who his palmy pathway crowded,
Who praised His glory while 'twas shrouded,
Shall then behold His face unclouded,
Shall see Him glorified!

Ye then shall hear a loud lamenting,
The woe of men; too late repenting—
These shall be left to mourn.
The power that rent in twain the temple,
Shall cause the solid earth to tremble,
But lo! the Lord will then assemble
His ransomed and first-born.

Hail! day of triumph, long appointed,
Hail! day that brings the Great Anointed,
Ye little flock, rejoice!
Ye shall look forward without fearing,
Redemption dawns at His appearing,
Lift up your heads, the hour is nearing,
Elect, lift up your voice!"

That we may all "meet again in the morning," is certainly the practical desire and sincere prayer of your Brother in spirit.

S. C. MOSES.

New York, June, '56.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. E. M. Clark.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—How important it is that we, amid the perils of these last days, should adhere to the "sure word of prophecy," as to a light that shineth in a dark place. Truly "iniquity abounds, and the love of many waxes cold." It is lamentable to see how many evil influences there are around, designed by Satan and his hosts, no doubt, to draw away the minds of the people from the truth. Our blessed Master, foreseeing these things, when He was on earth, admonished us to be on our guard. Said He—"watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." "And what I say unto you I say unto all, watch." O blessed Savior, help us to watch and pray, for without thee we can do nothing. O God, protect thy people now, is my prayer. It appears to me that darkness is about to cover the earth, and gross darkness the people; "But the Lord will be the hope of His people, and the strength of the children of Israel." Let us put our trust in Him, renew our warfare against the powers of darkness, "Fight the good fight of faith," that we may lay hold of eternal life. If we are built upon the foundation the Prophets and apostles were, Jesus Christ Himself, being the chief corner stone; let the winds blow, our house will stand, for it is founded upon a rock. Yea, let that storm which is fast gathering, burst upon an unbelieving world, and the earth be deluged with fire; as Noah with his family, safely sheltered in the ark, arose above the waters that deluged the earth, so we at Jesus' call, can rise triumphant amid "the wreck of matter, and the crash of worlds." None but those whose names are written in Heaven, can stand this fiery ordeal. O who for a moment can bear the thought of being left behind to perish, when Jesus has died that we might live? "Dust thou art and unto dust thou shalt return," came from the lips of the Almigty because of transgression and sin; and those who will not comply with the terms of the gospel, will receive the "wages of sin" at the judgment which "is death"—eternal death without the possibility of a resurrection. O let me avoid such a fearful doom. Let us be ready to meet the King of glory when He comes with his angels to gather His children home. Sinner fly to the arms of outstretched mercy, while mercy lingers, and that fountain is accessible which Jesus has opened to cleanse us from all sin! I praise, and adore the goodness and mercy of God, for the way of life and salvation through Jesus Christ.

Br. William Mitchell, from Kennebunkport, labors with us part of the time, on the sabbath; we trust his labors will not be in vain; the people are attentive to hear the truth; some appear to be serious. The little church is still holding on to the promises of God, struggling to be over comers through the blood of the Lamb and the word of their testimony, unitedly, praying—"Thy Kingdom come, thy will be done, on earth as it is done in heaven.' Nothing short of the personal, literal, actual, coming of the Son of God in the clouds of Heaven, can satisfy us. Our hope extends beyond the vail; we have had a glimpse of the joys that await the faithful—the good tidings God has prepared for those who love him; of Paradise restored; and by His help, we are resolved to endure hardness as good soldiers of the cross of Christ.

"And now, little children," said the beloved disciples, "abide in Him, that, when He shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before Him, at His coming." Yes, abide in Him, for said He: "I am the vine, ye are the branches;" "He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; for without me ye can do nothing."

"Fly lingering moments, fly, O, fly,
Dear Saviour, quickly come,
We long to see thee as thou art,
And reach that blissful home."

ELIZABETH M. CLARK.

Hollis, Me., July 14, '56.

WALKING WITH GOD.—How blessed are all who walk with God! Their spiritual enjoyments, to carnal minds unknown, vastly transcend the highest delights of mere sense. Religion also sweetens all their earthly good, and gives it a peculiar relish. Health, food, rest, retirement, friends, and whatever else, are enjoyed the best by those who use them all with a single eye to the glory of God: and even afflictions lose much of their keen edge, and are often welcomed as gracious and salutary dispensations, where God is truly enjoyed. In this world, the pious are not left without many expressions of God's favor and love; but in regard to the world to come, it hath entered into no human mind to conceive how vastly more blessed they shall be, and that forever and ever. None serve God for nought; for "in the keeping of his commandments there is great reward.' "Blessed is every one that feareth the Lord, and that delighteth greatly in his commandments." Such are blessed with the sensible favor, support, guidance, and protection of the Most High, and with a satisfying hope and earnest of glory everlasting. Our happiness rises in proportion to our devotedness to God. Without religion we cannot but be unhappy; and the not being so earnest and faithful as we should be, after having known the salvation of God, deprives us of much enjoyment, and exposes us to a miserable and ruinous fall. "Watch and pray!"

HELPING THE PREACHER.—Dr. Beecher once said to an old lady who had expressed her wonder to him that she was permitted to live, as she could not do any more good, "You are doing a great deal of good; you help me to preach every Sunday. In the first place," said he, "you are always in your seat on the Sabbath, and that helps me; in the second place, you are always wide awake, and you look right up into my face, and that helps me; and in the third place, I very often see the tears running down your face, and that helps me very much."

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 181, HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1856. WHOLE NO. 126. VOL. IV. NO. 2.

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE

Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months - - - -	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months - - - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months -	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months -	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis

Meddling with Politics.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

Why do any of our brethren wish to be paddling in the dirty pools, and meddling with the stinking waters of the political world? Is it not enough that we have "another king, one Jesus?" What is there of the political world, en masse, any how? First it was "gold," then "silver," then "brass," then "iron," and now "iron and clay"—literally mud and iron. Dan. 2. Is it so very desirable to be playing in the mud? Our kingdom, the Lord's kingdom, is not of this world," if it were so we might fight, and vote, and canvass, and intrigue, and do other things, which the world does with more propriety than now. We are called out from these things entirely and eternally. The whole political mass, at length, is to be "carried away like the chaff of the summer's threshing floor."

So it is only "chaff" after all! We may beat and thresh, and turn over, and change end, for end, and tare apart, and put together, and arrange, and re-arrange, and after all, it is only chaff! O, brother,

"Leave your chaff,
And spend your pains,
In gathering up
The golden grains."

But you tell me, it is your "christian duty to be interested in politics." What makes it so? If you can show that your Lord and Master was a political character, then you have a foundation for such a declaration. But when, where, how was he such? Did he ever vote? Who for? Herod? Pilate? Who? Well, what an idea! the Son of God at a political caucus! No sir, never. The apostles at a political caucus! When? Did not the Master set a perfect example? Can we, shall we dare attempt an improvement on it?

But you say, "we ought as Christians to seek the good of community." That is true. What is the good of community? What course do politicians take? I will tell you. They lie slanderously for one man, and flatteringly for another. They lie by the wholesale, in open day-light, long and loud, and earnestly, to support their party candidate. They get angry—yes, real mad, and berate each other, and almost fight, and set men against each other, and strive for the highest and fattest places in political trust, and act ridiculously, all for the good of community; yes, and you, with your eyes wide open, professing to be under the direction of the meek spirit of Jesus, roll up your sleeves, and rush in among them, vociferating, "let me have a part with you;" and when called to Christian order, gravely apologize for such shameful conduct by saying, "it is for the good of community!" Wonderful good, such a course will do! You ask, "should we not help put the best men in office?" Who are they? One does not get drunk, but he swears and lies abominably. Another does not hold slaves, but he gambles and is licentious, and devilish. Another does none of these things, but he is a rotten aristocrat. Which is the best of the chaff. Find a meek, devoted christian, who loves the praise of God, and not that of men, who cares only for the glory of God, and the present and eternal welfare of mankind, who wishes to hold office, and whom God appoints to office, and then—we will talk. Not, that I say all political men are bad men by any means, but who are the good?

Let facts, and only facts, decide; and let not party interest decide; and the political world will have assumed a happier condition. As it now is, "the whole head is sick, and the whole heart is faint;" and happy is he who stands only for God and truth. You say, "render unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's." Yes, but do not render the things of God unto Cæsar! Two things only are due from us to Cæsar.

1. Consistent obedience.
2 Tribute.

Nothing else is commanded. You ask, "ought there not to be a national government supported? Yes, there will be. Cæsars will have one. God will permit it. Let the world do its own business, and let us do that of our Master.

For the Crisis.

The Sabbath.

BY JUSTIN MARTYR,

In his dialouge with Trypho the Jew.

Says Dr. Jortin,—"About A. D. 150, flourished Justin, the first Christian author after those who are called Apostolical; a virtuous, pious, honest man. The love of truth was his predominant passion, to which he sacrificed all worldly considerations, and for which he laid down his life with great resolution; and therefore, whosoever loves truth, should love him and his memory."

"This new law (christianity) teaches you to observe a perpetual Sabbath; and you (Jews) when you have spent one day in idleness, think you have discharged the duties of religion, not well considering to what end this command was given you. . . If any one amongst you is guilty of perjury or theft, let him forbear to commit such sins: if any one is guilty of adultery, let him repent, and THEN he hath kept the TRUE and DELIGHTFUL SABBATH unto God: if any one hath impure hands, let him wash and he is clean." Sect. XII.

"For we really should observe that circumcision which is in the flesh, and the Sabbath, and all the feasts, if we had not known the reason why they were imposed upon YOU, namely, upon the account of your iniquities, and the hardness of your hearts. For if we patiently endure all those dreadful torments, which man and evil spirits take delight to inflict upon us . . . . why should we not observe those precepts, Trypho, which would do us no hurt,—I mean the circumcision of the flesh, the Sabbath, and the feasts."Sect. XVIII.

"For if circumcision was necessary, as you suppose, God would not have formed Adam uncircumcised: nor would he have had respect to the offering of Abel, which he offered while he was yet uncircumcised. Lot, when uncircumcised, escaped. . . . . Noah went . . . into the ark uncircumcised. Melchisedeck . . . was uncircumcised. . . . For YOU ONLY was this circumcision necessary. . . For all those righteous persons before mentioned, pleased God, though they did not observe the Sabbath, and after them Abraham and all his posterity till Moses, under whom your people were found to be very unjust, ungrateful, and disobedient to God; . . . wherefore God, in order to suit the temper and disposition of this people, and to prevent them from falling into idolatry, commanded them to offer sacrifices unto him: . . . He also commanded you to observe the Sabbaths, that you might preserve the knowledge of God among you." Ezek. 20; 12, 20, Sect. XX.

"And that it was because of your iniquities, and the iniquities of your fathers, that God enjoined upon you to observe the SABBATH, and imposed upon you several other ordinances for a sign:—these words of his, spoken by Ezekiel, do abundantly prove. 'I am the Lord your God: walk in my statutes, and keep my judgments, and be not mingled with the Egyptians in their customs; and hallow my Sabbaths; and it shall be a sign between me and you that you may know that I am the Lord your God.'" Sect. XXI.

"You see that the heavens are not idle, nor do they observe the Sabbath. Continue as ye were born. For if before Abraham there was no need of circumcision; nor of the Sabbaths, nor feasts, nor offerings, before Moses; so now, in like manner, there is no need of them." Section XXIII.

"Moreover, I say, I can prove that God has by these means, discovered to us, that the eighth day contains some greater mystery in it than the seventh. But that I may not seem to wander from the point, observe what I say:—the blood of circumcision is abolished; we trust in the blood of Salvation." Sect. XXIV.

"For is it probable, think you, that God could design that your high priests should commit sin in offering the oblations on the Sabbath day, (Num. 28: 9, 10,) or that those that did circumcise on the Sabbath day, should commit sin, when he expressly commanded that every male infant should be circumcised on the eighth day, though it should happen to be on the Sabbath? Why did he not order this ceremony on male infants to be performed the day before, or the day after the Sabbath, if he know it to be a wicked thing to do it on the Sabbath day? or why did he not teach those men before Moses and Abraham, to whom he gave this testimony that they were righteous and pleased him, though they were not circumcised, nor kept the Sabbaths, to observe these things?" Sect. XXVII.

"Don't be angry with us, nor reproach us for being uncircumcised, because God made us so; nor esteem it an heinous crime because we drink hot water on YOUR SABBATHS; seeing God governs the world on that day, just as he does on all others; and your high-priests, as on all other days, so also on this, are commanded to WORK in offering sacrifices; and so many righteous men, which never observed ANY of the legal institutions, obtained the approbation of God." Sect. XXIX.

From the above we learn,—

1. That christians who were born before the death of the last of the Apostles, did not consider the Jewish Sabbath binding on Christians.

2. They roundly assert that no Sabbaths were kept by any before the time of Moses.

3. Trypho, a Jew, could not deny the fact.

4. They regarded Sabbaths and circumcision as standing on the same footing.

5. They regarded Sabbaths, feasts and ordinances instituted by Moses as being done away.

6. It is a well established fact that early christians did meet for divine worship on the first day of the week, but they did not consider that as a Sabbath.

THE SABBATH.

The following facts may assist some minds in arriving at the truth with regard to the Sabbath question.

1. God instituted a Sabbath at the creation.

2. We have no record that he ever commanded any one to keep it holy or to observe it as a day of rest till the time of Moses.

3. There is no account of any one keeping a Sabbath before the time of Moses.

4. There is no account of any person being condemned or censured for neglecting the Sabbath, till after the time of Moses.

5. The first account of any man resting on the seventh day is Exod. 16: 30.

6. On the fifteenth day of the month, Israel marched, by God's direction, (Exod. 13: 21, Num. 9: 18,) from Elim to Sin. There they murmured and God sent them quails. The next day God sent them manna. This was the sixteenth; it continued to fall for six days in succession, when it ceased, and on the twenty-second day of the month they kept the first Sabbath that we have an account of the observance of by men.

7. But if the twenty-second was Sabbath, then the preceding fifteenth was, also. But on this day, the last seventh day, preceding the institution of the Sabbath, all Israel, with trumpets and banners, were marching, carrying baggage and driving cattle, and were led on a long march, by the cloudy pillar, at God's command, from Elim to Sin. Would God have directed all Israel to break his Sabbath of rest, if the command was given from creation?

8. God gave the Sabbath to Moses, in connection with other moral precepts which had previously been enjoined and observed.

9. Though nearly all nations have preserved a tradition that the seventh day is sacred, yet the commandment to keep it holy as a day of rest, was never given to any nation but the Jews.

10. There is no account that any other nation in ancient times ever observed the seventh day as a day of sacred rest.

11. Among all the reproofs and maledictions of the prophets upon the surrounding nations for their various sins, they never rebuked them for neglecting to observe the Sabbath, while they often reproved the Jews for that sin.

12. When Christ was upon earth he never commanded any one to keep a sabbath, though he usually kept it himself, in fulfillment of the law under which he was born.

13. Jesus frequently broke the Sabbath by healing the sick. He defended his disciples when they plucked corn on the Sabbath day, by reference to the Jews' own works of necessity and mercy, showing that it is lawful to do good on the Sabbath day. (And it is unlawful to do evil on any day.)

14. Jesus taught that "The Sabbath was made for the man, (ho anthropos) and not the man for the Sabbath."

15. Therefore, as shoes are made for the foot and not the foot for the shoes, shoes may be changed and altered to conform to the wishes of the walker, or the necessities of the wearer: So, as the Sabbath was made for the man, and not the man for the Sabbath, the Son of man is Lord even of the Sabbath day, and can break it when he pleases, and allow his disciples to do the same when hunger prompts.

16. The unrighteous Jews said of Christ—"this man is not of God because he keepeth not the Sabbath day."

17. The law which said—"Thou shalt not covet" is dead, and binding upon christians no longer; that they, like the wife whose husband is dead, may be "married to another." Rom. 7: 1—7.

18. But the law which said "thou shalt not covet" is the ten commandments, and therefore those who regard them as binding, are in danger of becoming like the woman having two husbands.

19. The ministration of condemnation which was written and engraven upon stones, (which must be the ten commandments) is "done away." 2 Cor. 3: 7—11.

20. Nine of the ten commandments, are re-enacted by Christ and his apostles, while the Sabbath commandment, alone was omitted. Could this have been by mistake?

21. The Apostles preached on the Sabbath day, just as Sabbath keepers now do on the first day, because they could get people out to hear in the Jewish synagogue that day.

22. The Apostles forbade us to allow any one to judge us concerning the Sabbaths or holy days, or feasts, or meats, or drink.

23. The Lord knew that it would be impossible for men in all parts of the world to keep the Sabbath as he commanded the Jews. For it was to be kept from sunset to sunset, but in Polar regions this would require nearly a whole year, as, for months the sun does not appear at all.

24. If two persons, one keeping Saturday and the other Sunday, should start and sail, the one East and the other West, till they both met on the opposite side of the globe, they would, if each sailed in the right direction and kept an accurate account, find themselves both keeping the same day, though one would call it the seventh and the other the first day of the week. So, sending them round the world would unite them.

25. If two persons keeping the seventh day, should sail round the globe in opposite directions till they met each other, they would find themselves both keeping the seventh day, but each keeping a different day. Which would be the one commanded?

26. There are two islands I believe, near each other in the Pacific ocean, where the missionaries having sailed different ways, one east and the other west, are keeping different days of the week, while both are endeavoring to keep the first day. Which is right? Suppose they should both be converted to Sabbath keeping, and each change, which would be right then?

27. As man requires a day for rest and worship as much now as ever, it is right and lawful to appropriate a seventh of the time for that purpose, and it is exceedingly proper that we do so upon the seventh, first, or some other day of the week.

28. As our laws enjoin the observance of the Lord's day or the the Sabbath, therefore all christians being bound to be subject to the powers that be, in all things not forbidden of God, they are bound to pay regard to that day, for their own good, and in obedience to the civil magistrate.

The above propositions are respectfully submitted to those who may read them, by one who loves truth, and does not love controversy,—who would rather that men should keep the seventh day than that they should dispute or wrangle about it, and who believes that charity is "the end of the commandment," and that it is greater than faith or hope either. And he prays that grace, mercy, peace, harmony, unity, and charity, may abound more and more, until the appearing of Him who is the arm of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." IRENÆUS.

Choice Selections.

For the Crisis.

Simeon Green:

—OR,—

"The Man who Killed his Neighbors."

Copied by permission from the Union Sunday School Library. A. C.

CONCLUDED.

But when the morning came, Reuben walked backward and forward, and round and round, with that sort of aimless activity often manifested by fowls and fashionable idlers, who feel restless, and do not know what to run after. At length, the cause of his uncertain movements was explained.

"I may as well carry the melon myself, and thank him for his oxen. In my flurry down there in the marsh, I forgot to say I was obliged to him."

He marched off toward the garden, and his wife stood at the door, with one hand on her hip, and the other shading from her eyes the sun, to see if he would carry the melon into Simeon Green's house. It was the most remarkable incident that had happened since her marriage. She could hardly believe her own eyes. He walked quickly, as if afraid he should not be able to carry the unusual impulse into action, if he stopped to reconsider the question.

When he found himself in Mr. Green's house, he felt extremely awkward, and hastened to say:

"Mrs. Green, here is a melon my wife sent to you, and we think it is a ripe one."

Without manifesting any surprise at such unexpected courtesy, the friendly woman thanked him and invited him to sit down. But he stood playing with the latch of the door, and without raising his eyes, said:

"Maybe, Mr. Green is not in this morning?"

"He is at the pump, and will be in directly, she replied; and before her words were spoken, the honest man walked in, with a face as fresh and bright as a June morning. He stepped right up to Reuben, shook his hand cordially, and said:

"I am glad to see you, neighbor. Take a chair—take a chair."

"Thank you, I cannot stop," replied Reuben.

He pushed his hat on one side, rubbed his head, looked out of the window, and then said, suddenly, as if by a desperate effort;

"The fact is, Mr. Green, I did not behave right about the oxen."

"Never mind—never mind," replied Mr. Green. "Perhaps I shall get into the bog again one of these rainy days. If I do, I shall know whom to call upon."

"Why, you see," said Reuben, still very much confused and avoiding Simeon's mild clear eye—"you see, the neighbors here are very ugly. If I had always lived by such neighbors as you are, I should not be just as I am."

"Ah, well we must try to be to others, what we want them to be to us," rejoined Simeon. "You know the good book says so. I have learned by experience that if we speak kind words, we hear kind echoes. If we try to make others happy, it fills them with a wish to make us happy.

"Perhaps you and I can bring the neighbors round in time to this way of thinking and acting. Who knows? Let us try, Mr. Black, let us try. And come and look at my orchard, I want to show you a tree which I have grafted with very choice apples. If you like, I will procure you some cuttings from the same stock."

They went into the orchard together, and a friendly chat soon put Reuben at his ease. When he returned home, he made no remarks about his visit, for he could not, as yet, summon sufficient greatness of soul to tell his wife that he had confessed himself in the wrong.

A gun stood behind the kitchen door in readiness to shoot Mr. Green's dog for having barked at his horse. He now fired the contents into the air, and put the gun away into the barn. From that day forth he never sought for any pretext to quarrel with the dog or his master. A short time after, Joe Smith, to his utter astonishment, saw him pat Towzer on the head, and heard him say, "Good fellow!"

Simeon Green was too magnanimous to repeat to any one that his quarrelsome neighbor had confessed himself to blame. He merely smiled as he said to his wife, "I thought we should kill him after a while."

Joe Smith did not believe in such doctrines. When he heard of the adventure in the marsh, he said:

"Simeon Green is a fool. When he first came here, he talked very big about killing folks, if they did not mind their P's and Q's. But he does not appear to have as much spirit as a worm; for a worm will turn when it is trod upon."

Poor Joe had grown more intemperate and more quarrelsome, till at last nobody would employ him. About a year after the memorable incident of the water-melon, some one stole several valuable hides from Mr. Green. He did not mention the circumstance to any one but his wife; and they both had reason for suspecting that Joe was the thief. The next week, the following anonymous advertisement appeared in the newspaper of the county:

"NOTICE."

"Whoever stole a lot of hides on Friday night, the 5th of the present month, is hereby informed that the owner has a sincere wish to be his friend. If poverty tempted him to this false step, the owner will keep the whole transaction a secret, and will gladly put him in the way of obtaining money by means most likely to bring him peace of mind."

This singular advertisement, of course excited a good deal of remark. There was much debate whether or not the thief would avail himself of the friendly offer. Some said he would be a "green horn" if he did; for it was manifestly a trap to catch him. But he who had committed the dishonorable deed, alone knew whence that benevolent offer came, and he knew that Simeon Green was not a man to set traps for his fellow creatures.

A few nights afterward, a timid knock was heard at Simeon's door, just as the family were retiring to rest. When the

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

[illegible] BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1856. WHOLE NO. 126. VOL. IV. NO. [illegible]

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis

Meddling with Politics.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

Why do any of our brethren wish to be paddling in the dirty pools, and meddling with the stinking waters of the political world? Is it not enough that we have "another king, one Jesus?" What is there of the political world, en masse, any how? First it was "gold," then "silver," then "brass," then "iron," and now "iron and clay"—literally mud and iron. Dan. 2. Is it so very desirable to be playing in the mud? Our kingdom, the Lord's kingdom, is not of this world," if it were so we might fight, and vote, and canvass, and intrigue, and do other things, which the world does with more propriety than now. We are called out from these things entirely and eternally. The whole political mass, at length, is to be "carried away like the chaff of the summer's threshing floor."

So it is only "chaff" after all! We may beat and thresh, and turn over, and change end, for end, and tare apart, and put together, and arrange, and re-arrange, and after all, it is only chaff! O, brother,

"Leave your chaff,
And spend your pains,
In gathering up
The golden grains."

But you tell me, it is your "christian duty to be interested in politics." What makes it so? If you can show that your Lord and Master was a political character, then you have a foundation for such a declaration. But when, where, how was he such? Did he ever vote? Who for? Herod? Pilate? Who? Well, what an idea! the Son of God at a political caucus! No sir, never. The apostles at a political caucus! When? Did not the Master set a perfect example? Can we, shall we dare attempt an improvement on it?

But you say, "we ought as Christians to seek the good of community." That is true. What is the good of community? What course do politicians take? I will tell you. They lie slanderously for one man, and flatteringly for another. They lie by the wholesale, in open daylight, long and loud, and earnestly, to support their party candidate. They get angry—yes, real mad, and berate each other, and almost fight, and set men against each other, and strive for the highest and fattest places in political trust, and act ridiculously, all for the good of community; yes, and you, with your eyes wide open, professing to be under the direction of the meek spirit of Jesus, roll up your sleeves, and rush in among them, vociferating, "let me have a part with you;" and when called to Christian order, gravely apologize for such shameful conduct by saying, "it is for the good of community!" Wonderful good, such a course will do! You ask, "should we not help put the best men in office?" Who are they? One does not get drunk, but he swears and lies abominably. Another does not hold slaves, but he gambles and is licentious, and dev[illegible]. Another does none of these things, but he is a rotten aristocrat. Which is the best of the chaff. Find a meek, devoted christian, who loves the praise of God, and not that of men, who cares only for the glory of God, and the present and eternal welfare of mankind, who wishes to hold office, and whom God appoints to office, and then—we will talk. Not, that I say all political men are bad men by any means, but who are the good?

Let facts, and only facts, decide; and let not party interest decide; and the political world will have assumed a happier condition. As it now is, "the whole head is sick, and the whole heart is faint;" and happy is he who stands only for God and truth. You say, "render unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's." Yes, but do not render the things of God unto Cæsar! Two things only are due from us to Cæsar.

1. Consistent obedience.
2. Tribute.

Nothing else is commanded. You ask, "ought there not to be a national government supported? Yes, there will be. Cæsars will have one. God will permit it. Let the world do its own business, and let us do that of our Master.

For the Crisis.

The Sabbath.

BY JUSTIN MARTYR,

In his dialouge with Trypho the Jew.

Says Dr. Jortin,—"About A. D. 150, flourished Justin, the first Christian author after those who are called Apostolical; a virtuous, pious, honest man. The love of truth was his predominant passion, to which he sacrificed all worldly considerations, and for which he laid down his life with great resolution; and therefore, whosoever loves truth, should love him and his memory."

"This new law (christianity) teaches you to observe a perpetual Sabbath; and you (Jews) when you have spent one day in idleness, think you have discharged the duties of religion, not well considering to what end this command was given you. . . If any one amongst you is guilty of perjury or theft, let him forbear to commit such sins: if any one is guilty of adultery, let him repent, and THEN he hath kept the TRUE and DELIGHTFUL SABBATH unto God: if any one hath impure hands, let him wash and he is clean." Sect. XII.

"For we really should observe that circumcision which is in the flesh, and the Sabbath, and all the feasts, if we had not known the reason why they were imposed upon YOU, namely, upon the account of your iniquities, and the hardness of your hearts. For if we patiently endure all those dreadful torments, which man and evil spirits take delight to inflict upon us . . . . why should we not observe those precepts, Trypho, which would do us no hurt,—I mean the circumcision of the flesh, the Sabbath, and the feasts." Sect. XVIII.

"For if circumcision was necessary, as you suppose, God would not have formed Adam uncircumcised: nor would he have had respect to the offering of Abel, which he offered while he was yet uncircumcised. Lot, when uncircumcised, escaped. . . . . Noah went . . . into the ark uncircumcised. Melchisedeck . . . was uncircumcised. . . . . For YOU ONLY was this circumcision necessary. . . . For all those righteous persons before mentioned, pleased God, though they did not observe the Sabbath, and after them Abraham and all his posterity till Moses, under whom your people were found to be very unjust, ungrateful, and disobedient to God; . . . wherefore God, in order to suit the temper and disposition of this people, and to prevent them from falling into idolatry, commanded them to offer sacrifices unto him: . . . He also commanded you to observe the Sabbaths, that you might preserve the knowledge of God among you." Ezek. 20; 12, 20, Sect. XX.

"And that it was because of your iniquities, and the iniquities of your fathers, that God enjoined upon you to observe the SABBATH, and imposed upon you several other ordinances for a sign:—these words of his, spoken by Ezekiel, do abundantly prove. 'I am the Lord your God: walk in my statutes, and keep my judgments, and be not mingled with the Egyptians in their customs; and hallow my Sabbaths; and it shall be a sign between me and you that you may know that I am the Lord your God.'" Sect. XXI.

"You see that the heavens are not idle, nor do they observe the Sabbath. Continue as ye were born. For if before Abraham there was no need of circumcision; nor of the Sabbaths, nor feasts, nor offerings, before Moses; so now, in like manner, there is no need of them." Section XXIII.

"Moreover, I say, I can prove that God has by these means, discovered to us, that the eighth day contains some greater mystery in it than the seventh. But that I may not seem to wander from the point, observe what I say:—the blood of circumcision is abolished; we trust in the blood of Salvation." Sect. XXIV.

"For is it probable, think you, that God could design that your high priests should commit sin in offering the oblations on the Sabbath day, (Num. 28: 9, 10,) or that those that did circumcise on the Sabbath day, should commit sin, when he expressly commanded that every male infant should be circumcised on the eighth day though it should happen to be on the Sabbath? Why did he not order this ceremony on male infants to be performed the day before, or the day after the Sabbath, if he knew it to be a wicked thing to do it on the Sabbath day? or why did he not teach those men before Moses and Abraham, to whom he gave this testimony that they were righteous and pleased him, though they were not circumcised, nor kept the Sabbaths, to observe these things?" Sect. XXVII.

"Don't be angry with us, nor reproach us for being uncircumcised, because God made us so; nor esteem it an heinous crime because we drink hot water on YOUR SABBATHS; seeing God governs the world on that day, just as he does on all others; and your high-priests, as on all other days, so also on this, are commanded to WORK in offering sacrifices; and so many righteous men, which never observed ANY of the legal institutions, obtained the approbation of God." Sect. XXIX.

From the above we learn,—

1. That christians who were born before the death of the last of the Apostles, did not consider the Jewish Sabbath binding on Christians.

2. They roundly assert that no Sabbaths were kept by any before the time of Moses.

3. Trypho, a Jew, could not deny the fact.

4. They regarded Sabbaths and circumcision as standing on the same footing.

5. They regarded Sabbaths, feasts and ordinances instituted by Moses as being done away.

6. It is a well established fact that early christians did meet for divine worship on the first day of the week, but they did not consider that as a Sabbath.

THE SABBATH.

The following facts may assist some minds in arriving at the truth with regard to the Sabbath question.

1. God instituted a Sabbath at the creation.

2. We have no record that he ever commanded any one to keep it holy or to observe it as a day of rest till the time of Moses.

3. There is no account of any one keeping a Sabbath before the time of Moses.

4. There is no account of any person being condemned or censured for neglecting the Sabbath, till after the time of Moses.

5. The first account of any man resting on the seventh day is Exod. 16: 30.

6. On the fifteenth day of the month, Israel marched, by God's direction, (Exod. 13: 21, Num. 9: 18,) from Elim to Sin. There they murmured and God sent them quails. The next day God sent them manna. This was the sixteenth; it continued to fall for six days in succession, when it ceased, and on the twenty-second day of the month they kept the first Sabbath that we have an account of the observance of by men.

7. But if the twenty-second was Sabbath, then the preceding fifteenth was, also. But on this day, the last seventh day, preceding the institution of the Sabbath, all Israel, with trumpets and banners, were marching, carrying baggage and driving cattle, and were led on a long march, by the cloudy pillar, at God's command, from Elim to Sin. Would God have directed all Israel to break his Sabbath of rest, if the command was given from creation?

8. God gave the Sabbath to Moses, in connection with other moral precepts which had previously been enjoined and observed.

9. Though nearly all nations have preserved a tradition that the seventh day is sacred, yet the commandment to keep it holy as a day of rest, was never given to any nation but the Jews.

10. There is no account that any other nation in ancient times ever observed the seventh day as a day of sacred rest.

11. Among all the reproofs and maledictions of the prophets upon the surrounding nations for their various sins, they never rebuked them for neglecting to observe the Sabbath, while they often reproved the Jews for that sin.

12. When Christ was upon earth he never commanded any one to keep a sabbath, though he usually kept it himself, in fulfillment of the law under which he was born.

13. Jesus frequently broke the Sabbath by healing the sick. He defended his disciples when they plucked corn on the Sabbath day, by reference to the Jews' own works of necessity and mercy, showing that it is lawful to do good on the Sabbath day. (And it is unlawful to do evil on any day.)

14. Jesus taught that "The Sabbath was made for the man, (ho anthropos) and not the man for the Sabbath."

15. Therefore, as shoes are made for the foot and not the foot for the shoes, shoes may be changed and altered to conform to the wishes of the walker, or the necessities of the wearer: So, as the Sabbath was made for the man, and not the man for the Sabbath, the Son of man is Lord even of the Sabbath day, and can break it when he pleases, and allow his disciples to do the same when hunger prompts.

16. The unrighteous Jews said of Christ—"this man is not of God because he keepeth not the Sabbath day."

17. The law which said—"Thou shalt not covet" is dead, and binding upon christians no longer; that they, like the wife whose husband is dead, may be "married to another." Rom. 7: 1—7.

18. But the law which said "thou shalt not covet" is the ten commandments, and therefore those who regard them as binding, are in danger of becoming like the woman having two husbands.

19. The ministration of condemnation which was written and engraven upon stones, (which must be the ten commandments) is "done away." 2 Cor. 3: 7—11.

20. Nine of the ten commandments, are re-enacted by Christ and his apostles, while the Sabbath commandment, alone was omitted. Could this have been by mistake?

21. The Apostles preached on the Sabbath day, just as Sabbath keepers now do on the first day, because they could get people out to hear in the Jewish synagogue that day.

22. The Apostles forbade us to allow any one to judge us concerning the Sabbaths or holy days, or feasts, or meats, or drink.

23. The Lord knew that it would be impossible for men in all parts of the world to keep the Sabbath as he commanded the Jews. For it was to be kept from sunset to sunset; but in Polar regions this would require nearly a whole year, as, for months the sun does not appear at all.

24. If two persons, one keeping Saturday and the other Sunday, should start and sail, the one East and the other West, till they both met on the opposite side of the globe, they would, if each sailed in the right direction and kept an accurate account, find themselves both keeping the same day, though one would call it the seventh and the other the first day of the week. So, sending them round the world would unite them.

25. If two persons keeping the seventh day, should sail round the globe in opposite directions till they met each other, they would find themselves both keeping the seventh day, but each keeping a different day. Which would be the one commanded?

26. There are two islands I believe, near each other in the Pacific ocean, where the missionaries, having sailed different ways, one east and the other west, are keeping different days of the week, while both are endeavoring to keep the first day. Which is right? Suppose they should both be converted to Sabbath keeping, and each change, which would be right then?

27. As man requires a day for rest and worship as much now as ever, it is right and lawful to appropriate a seventh of the time for that purpose, and it is exceedingly proper that we do so upon the seventh, first, or some other day of the week.

28. As our laws enjoin the observance of the Lord's day or the the Sabbath, therefore all christians being bound to be subject to the powers that be, in all things not forbidden of God, they are bound to pay regard to that day, for their own good, and in obedience to the civil magistrate.

The above propositions are respectfully submitted to those who may read them, by one who loves truth, and does not love controversy,—who would rather that men should keep the seventh day than that they should dispute or wrangle about it, and who believes that charity is "the end of the commandment," and that it is greater than faith or hope either. And he prays that grace, mercy, peace, harmony, unity, and charity, may abound more and more, until the appearing of Him who is the arm of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." IRENÆUS.

Choice Selections.

For the Crisis.

Simeon Green:

—OR,—

"The Man who Killed his Neighbors."

Copied by permission from the Union Sunday School Library. A. C.

CONCLUDED.

But when the morning came, Reuben walked backward and forward, and round and round, with that sort of aimless activity often manifested by fowls and fashionable idlers, who feel restless, and do not know what to run after. At length, the cause of his uncertain movements was explained.

"I may as well carry the melon myself, and thank him for his oxen. In my flurry down there in the marsh, I forgot to say I was obliged to him."

He marched off toward the garden, and his wife stood at the door, with one hand on her hip, and the other shading from her eyes the sun, to see if he would carry the melon into Simeon Green's house. It was the most remarkable incident that had happened since her marriage. She could hardly believe her own eyes. He walked quickly, as if afraid he should not be able to carry the unusual impulse into action, if he stopped to reconsider the question.

When he found himself in Mr. Green's house, he felt extremely awkward, and hastened to say:

"Mrs. Green, here is a melon my wife sent to you, and we think it is a ripe one."

Without manifesting any surprise at such unexpected courtesy, the friendly woman thanked him and invited him to sit down. But he stood playing with the latch of the door, and without raising his eyes, said:

"Maybe, Mr. Green is not in this morning?"

"He is at the pump, and will be in directly, she replied; and before her words were spoken, the honest man walked in, with a face as fresh and bright as a June morning. He stepped right up to Reuben, shook his hand cordially, and said:

"I am glad to see you, neighbor. Take a chair—take a chair."

"Thank you, I cannot stay," replied Reuben.

He pushed his hat on one side, rubbed his head, looked out of the window, and then said, suddenly, as if by a desperate effort:

"The fact is, Mr. Green, I did not behave right about the oxen."

"Never mind—never mind," replied Mr. Green. "Perhaps I shall get into the bog again one of these rainy days. If I do, I shall know whom to call upon."

"Why, you see," said Reuben, still very much confused and avoiding Simeon's mild clear eye—"you see, the neighbors here are very ugly. If I had always lived by such neighbors as you are, I should not be just as I am."

"Ah, well we must try to be to others, what we want them to be to us," rejoined Simeon. "You know the good book says so. I have learned by experience that if we speak kind words, we hear kind echoes. If we try to make others happy, it fills them with a wish to make us happy.

"Perhaps you and I can bring the neighbors round in time to this way of thinking and acting. Who knows? Let us try, Mr. Black, let us try. And come and look at my orchard, I want to show you a tree which I have grafted with very choice apples. If you like, I will procure you some cuttings from the same stock."

They went into the orchard together, and a friendly chat soon put Reuben at his ease. When he returned home, he made no remarks about his visit, for he could not, as yet, summon sufficient greatness of soul to tell his wife that he had confessed himself in the wrong.

A gun stood behind the kitchen door in readiness to shoot Mr. Green's dog for having barked at his horse. He now fired the contents into the air, and put the gun away into the barn. From that day forth he never sought for any pretext to quarrel with the dog or his master. A short time after, Joe Smith, to his utter astonishment, saw him pat Towser on the head, and heard him say, "Good fellow!"

Simeon Green was too magnanimous to repeat to any one that his quarrelsome neighbor had confessed himself to blame. He merely smiled as he said to his wife, "I thought we should kill him after a while."

Joe Smith did not believe in such doctrines. When he heard of the adventure in the marsh, he said:

"Simeon Green is a fool. When he first came here, he talked very big about killing folks, if they did not mind their P's and Q's. But he does not appear to have as much spirit as a worm; for a worm will turn when it is trod upon."

Poor Joe had grown more intemperate and more quarrelsome, till at last nobody would employ him. About a year after the memorable incident of the water-melon, some one stole several valuable hides from Mr. Green. He did not mention the circumstance to any one but his wife; and they both had reason for suspecting that Joe was the thief. The next week, the following anonymous advertisement appeared in the newspaper of the county:

"NOTICE."

"Whoever stole a lot of hides on Friday night, the 5th of the present month, is hereby informed that the owner has a sincere wish to be his friend. If poverty tempted him to this false step, the owner will keep the whole transaction a secret, and will gladly put him in the way of obtaining money by means more likely to bring him peace of mind."

This singular advertisement, of course excited a good deal of remark. There was much debate whether or not the thief would avail himself of the friendly offer. Some said he would be a "green horn" if he did; for it was manifestly a trap to catch him. But he who had committed the dishonorable deed, alone knew whence that benevolent offer came, and he knew that Simeon Green was not a man to set traps for his fellow creatures.

A few nights afterward, a [illegible] was heard at Simeon's door, [illegible] family were [illegible] to [illegible]. W[illegible] door was opened, Joe Smith was seen on the steps, with a load of hides on his shoulders. Without raising his eyes, he said, in a low, humble tone:

"I have brought them back, Mr. Green; where shall I put them?"

"Wait a moment till I can light a lantern, and I will go to the barn with you," he replied. "Then you will come in, and tell me how it happened; we will see what can be done for you."

Mrs. Green knew that Joe often went hungry, and had become accustomed to the stimulus of gin. She therefore hastened to make hot coffee, and brought from the closet same cold meat pie. When they returned from the barn, she said:

"I thought you might feel better for a little warm supper, neighbor Smith."

Joe turned his back toward her, and did not speak. He leaned his head against the chimney, and after a moment's silence, he said in a choked voice:

"It was the first time I ever stole any thing, and I have felt very bad about it. I do not know how it is. I did not think, once, I should ever come to be what I am. But I took to quarrelling, and then to drinking. Since I begun to go down hill, everybody gives me a kick. You are the first man that has offered me a helping hand. My wife is feeble, and my children starving. You have sent them many a meal. God bless you! and yet I stole the hides from you, meaning to sell them the first chance I could get. But I tell you, Mr. Green, it is the first time I ever deserved the name of thief."

"Let it be the last, my friend," said Simeon, pressing his hand kindly. "The secret shall remain between ourselves. You are young, and can make up lost time. Come now, give me a promsse that you will not drink one drop of intoxicating liquor for a year, and I will employ you to-morrow, at good wages. Mary will see to your family early in the morning, and perhaps, we may find some employment for them also. The little boy can at least pick up stones. But eat a bit now, and drink some hot coffee. It will keep you from wanting to drink anything stronger to-night. You will find it hard to abstain at first, Joseph; but keep up a brave heart, for the sake of your wife and children, and it will soon become easy. When you feel the need of coffee, tell my wife, and she will always give you."

Joe tried to eat and drink, but the food seemed to choke him. He was nervous and excited. After an ineffectual effort to compose himself, he laid his head on the table and wept like a child.

After a while Simeon persuaded him to bathe his head in cold water, and he ate and drank with a good appetite.

When he went away, the kind-hearted man said:

"Try to do well, Joseph, and you shall always find a friend in me."

The poor fellow pressed his hand, and replied:

"I understand now, how it is you kill bad neighbors?"

He entered into Mr. Green's service the next day, and remained in it many years, an honest and faithful man."

This beautiful narrative is full of instruction. We cannot fail to observe and admire the tact displayed by Simeon Green in accomplishing his object, and in subduing the churlish and malignant spirit of Reuben Black. His weapon was kindness, which is the most powerful in the world. He employed kind actions rather than kind words.

Reuben was not a man to be talked much with. He would not bear this; he must be dealt with; and even his savage heart was susceptible to the power of love. How mighty is love! But then, in subduing such a heart as this, we must be judicious, choosing the best time and manner. We must be uniform, not kind at one time, and harsh at another, but always alike and always kind. And then we must be persevering. We must not expect to be successful at once. Many efforts may appear to be quite in vain, but we must still persevere. Simeon Green was often defeated, but he was sure that by patient continuance he should conquer at last—and he did. And if we would succeed, let us add prayer to labor, and beg the help of God's spirit to aid our endeavors, to give us control over our own tempers, and to soften the heart we wish to subdue.

We see in this narrative a striking exemplification of that true practical christianity, which, both by the example and words of its Divine Author, and by the precepts of his holy apostles, teaches us to love our enemies; to bless them that curse us; to do good to them that hate us, and to pray for them that despitefully use us. Matt. 5: 44. These are the words of Christ, and how exactly did he act up to them himself, when he prayed for his murderers, and died for his enemies! To the same effect is the language of St. Paul—"If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." Rom. 12: 20, 21. To return evil for evil is beastlike; to return evil for good is fiendlike; to return good for good is manlike; but to return good for evil is Godlike. This is true practical Christianity—the fulfilling of both law and gospel.

How much the forgiveness of injuries and this victory over our own temper and our neighbors also, tend to happiness. Sin is misery. Malice is torment to the soul that indulges it; and though it is said "revenge is sweet," it is the sweetness of honey accompanied with a sting. A quarrelsome temper inflicts its own punishment; while, on the other hand, a forbearing and forgiving one, is a perpetual feast. Reuben was never happy; his bad temper involved him in constant troubles with his neighbors, while Simeon was ever happy. His conscience told him he did right, and he had the unutterable delight of seeing his most ill-natured neighbor at length subdued.

What a happy world we should live in, if all people acted upon the principles and plan of Simeon Green, that is, if all people lived under the influence of the Bible. What a cruel and wicked spirit is that of infidelity, which would rob us of the scriptures and abandon us to our own corrupt passions, to worry and tease one another! The influence of the Christian religion, if it were universally and powerfully felt, would put a stop to the wars of nations, to the divisions and alienations of families, and to the quarrels of neighbors. Infidelity takes away the great peacemaker, and leaves us to the fury of our own bad passions.

We see what encouragement we have to pursue the conquests of love. Kindness could never have a more unpromising subject than Reuben Black. He seemed abandoned to his evil temper, even by those who could bear with ordinary churls. It required, it is admitted, unusual patience and forbearance to subdue such a ferocious and snarling creature. But Simeon, conscious of the power of persevering and untiring kindness, and of his own unruffled spirit, smilingly said:—"I shall kill him,"—and he did. Now let us try.

Perhaps we have neighbors as bad, or almost as bad as Reuben Black; and we may be able in this way to kill them too. But if we should not, our kindness will return into our own bosoms, and if we cannot make our neighbors better, we shall at any rate improve ourselves.

Can we read such a narrative and admire the patience and kindness of man, and not think of the infinitely greater loving kindness of God?

"Scarcely for a righteous (that is a just) man will one die; yet peradventure for a good (benevolent) man some would even dare to die. But God commendeth his love toward us in that, while we were yet sinners. Christ died for us," Rom. 5: 7, 8. What were all the offences of this quarrelsome man against the neighbor who so generously forgave him and returned good for evil, compared with a thousandth part of our sins against God? And yet God freely forgives all the offences of those who truly repent and believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. This conduct of Simeon Green is, in its measure, just God's way toward us. He follows us with kindness to subdue us with mercy. "I drew them," said he, when speaking of the Israelites, "with cords of a man, with bands of love." Hos. 11: 4.

Since this temper of forgiveness, and this disposition to overcome evil with good is required of us all, and required in absolute perfection, how impossible is it for any one of us to be justified in the sight of God by the works of the law! Now this temper to overcome evil with good is required, for this is the love which is the fulfilling of the law. Have we kept it perfectly? Are we constantly keeping it! Alas! alas! in how many thousand instances have we broken it, and, indulging a spirit of revenge, have returned evil for evil! Must we not say then—"If thou, Lord, shouldst mark iniquities, O Lord, who shall stand? But there is forgiveness with thee that thou mayst be feared. Ps. 130: 3, 4. Yes, by faith in Jesus, we can obtain that righteousness which makes the sinner just, and secures a crown of life in the restored Paradise of God. Quit, then, quit all dependence upon your own righteousness, and look by faith to Him who "is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." Rom. 10: 4. "In Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision; but faith which worketh by love." Gal. 5: 6. "Now abideth faith, hope, charity, (love) these three; but the greatest of these is charity." 1 Cor. 13: 13. Try, dear brethren, to be so possessed with it, that the needy can discern apples of gold, in your pictures of sympathy. And the prayers of your brother shall continue to be—unite thy people Lord in the bonds of peace and love, till the great head of the church shall rule their joint estate.

ALBIN CHANDLER.

N. Y. Central College, July, 5, '56.

P. S. Cross & Crown please copy.

The World's Crisis.

BOTON, SEPTEMBER 10, 1856.

Questions.

A sister has sent us several questions, which we will gladly answer as fast as we shall find time.—ED.

No. 1.

"There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one." 1 John, 5: 7.

QUESTION.

"Does the one God comprise three distinct intelligences?"

ANSWER.

In the first place there is the best of evidence that only a part of the passage quoted, is genuine. Perhaps this may not be said of any other portion of the Bible.

The 7th and 8th verses now read—"For there are three that bear record [in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one. And there are three that bear witness in earth,] the Spirit and the water, and the blood: and these three agree in one."

We believe they should read—"For there are three that bear record, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood; and these three agree in one."

It will be noticed we have omitted what is included in brackets.

We now proceed to give some reasons for this omissson.

1. Says Dr. Clark;—the omitted part "is wanting in every manuscript of this epistle written before the invention of printing, ONE excepted, the Codex Montfortii, in Trinity College, Dublin; the others which omit this verse amount to one hundred and twelve."

2. "It is wanting in both the Syriac all the Arabic, Æthiopic, the Coptic; Sahidic, Armenian, Slavonian, &c., in a word, in all the ancient versions but the Vulgate, and even of this version many of the most ancient and correct MSS., have it not. It is wanting, also, in all the ancient Greek Fathers; and in most even of the Latin.".

3. All can see there is no want of connexion when the words in brackets are omitted; and, as Dr. Clark says, "the sense is complete and perfect without them; and, indeed, much more so, than with them."

4. The words in brackets are omitted omitted in the new translation by the Am. Bible Union.

From the foregoing, we see that there is scarcely any evidence in favor of retaining the words as genuine, that are included in brackets.

In the second place, if it could be shown that the words in question were genuine, even then we can see no reason for supposing that in the "one God are comprised hree distinct intelligences."

It involves an absurdity, to say that three are one, numerically.

The passage, if genuine, does not declare that three distinct intelligences are one GOD.

The Savior says—"I and my Father are one."

In John 17: 22, the Savior prays that his followers may be one, even AS he and the Father are one.

QUESTION.

Can three christians become one, numerically? Who ever supposed such an absurdity.

In what sense then are we one, if we are followers of Christ?

ANSWER.

As he (the Son) and the Father are one. How are they one?

Certainly not numerically, for the Savior declares in John 14: 28,—"my Father is greater than I."

Again—"John 8: 17, 18. "It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true. I am one that bear witness of myself, and the Father that sent me beareth witness of me." Here he shows the Pharisees, that although they are willing to admit as true what two MEN say, they will not admit the same rule when applied to GOD and his SON; this shows that the Savior did not understand that he and his Father constituted only one being. We believe he was well informed on the subject.

We think the point is clear, that our Savior teaches the plain truth that the many in the church of Christ should be one in their principles, motives of action, and love for each other, as are the Father and Son.

Hence we can see no cause for concluding that the one God comprises three distinct intelligences, even should the whole of verses 7 and 8 be received as genuine, much less, when we find the strongest reasons for considering the words in brackets as an interpolation.

We now conclude from the Scriptures, that the Father is one (not three) distinct intelligence, and his Son another, and that the Son is not the Father, neither is the Father the Son.

If we turn again to 1 John, 5: 5—8, we find that the three witnesses are "the Spirit, and the water, and the blood,"—not Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; and that "these three agree in one; that is, they all bear the same testimony. The water, and blood, and the Spirit agree in testifying that Jesus is the SON of God, and that he died for us, "that he might bring us to God."

☞ We are sorry to say that we cannot supply new subscribers with No. 1. of Vol. 4, for we have none left.

For the Crisis

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom."—PROV.

BY F. MATTHEWS.

The question often asked by sinners, when they would turn from their evil ways, is, "What must I do to be saved?" "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." This question was asked by the jailer at Philippi. This question bespeaks fear, it is the language of terror and consternation. Whenever we are alarmed at the approach of some dreadful evil, it is natural to cry—What shall I do? And have not sinners much to fear? Is it not a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God? O consider who he is that we have provoked by our sins. It is the great, the Almighty God, who made the world by his word and can crush it in a moment. It is the Lord, who hath "his way in the whirlwind, and in the storm, and the clouds are the dust of his feet." "The mountains quake at him, and the hills melt, and the earth is burned at his presence."

And now, dear friend, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest." It is recorded of Philip, king of Macedon, that he ordered one of his pages to come every morning to his chamber door, and cry aloud—"Philip, remember thou art mortal." Happy are those who can say, "whether we live, we live unto the Lord; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's." And then we shall have no sinful fear when the Lord comes; when the earth shall be trembling, the stars falling, the trumpet sounding, the dead rising, and the elements melting with fervent heat. Then shall the prayers of the saints be turned to praise, and all the ransomed of the Lord shall unite in full chorus, saying, "Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever and ever." Amen and Amen.

Charlestown, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Look to Jesus.

BY H. P. SIKES.

Fellow pilgrim, are you weary of this rough road, which we have to travel to the kingdom? Do trials multiply so that it almost seems as though you never should gain the victory? Do you at times well nigh sink down in despair, the devil telling you, that you might as well give up first as last? Are you sometimes tempted to think, "my afflictions, and trials are greater than I can bear?" Are you sometimes strongly tempted to indulge hard, and murmuring thoughts towards the Lord, that his coming is so long delayed?

O, think of Jesus—his tender love,—his voluntary sufferings for you,—his anxious care lest you should have to bear the shadow of a shade more of trial than is absolutely necessary for your good. Does he require you to suffer a tithe of that amount for him, and his cause, which he so freely suffered for you? See the dear Lamb of God, sweating great drops as it were of blood in the garden—bearing your sins up Calvary, and dying in agony, and shame; and all this for you—yes, for you.

Now, how much are you willing to suffer for him? Can you suffer too much for such a Savior? "No, indeed!" methinks I hear you exclaim, "the more I may bear for such a Redeemer, the greater joy it is to me." Here, shame is glory; reproach is honor; sorrow is joy: suffering is rejoicing; tears turn to laughter; and all who suffer with Jesus, bearing the cross after him with delight, will at length reign with him in glory.

But fallen, selfish man, yes, even we, my brethren and sisters, are so contracted, selfish, and un-Christ-like—have so little pure, disinterested, genuine love, in our hearts, that I fear we are slow to appreciate such wonderful goodness, benevolence, and loveliness as beams forth with transcendent luster from the Savior's character. Alas! what an almost infinite distance there is naturally between the character of Jesus, and our own! No wonder, that we realize so little—have so faint an idea of such immense, unbounded benevolence!—

Who would spend his whole life in doing good to his malignant, mortal enemies, and then give up that life, being put to the most cruel and shameful death by those same enemies, and persecutors, and all this in order to do them good? O. never did the degenerate race of Adam furnish an instance that would begin to compare with this! Thanks be to God, that we have such an example—such a glorious character, held up for our imitation, as that of Jesus. Brethren, let us try, as far as in us lies, to follow this blessed example; and in some little degree be like our heavenly Pattern.

O, Who would not trust such a tender-hearted, loving, and at the same time all-powerful Redeemer? Think you, dear brother, that he can possibly permit one of his confiding ones to receive any harm whatsoever? No, never! Though clouds dark as Egypt may hang o'er our heads, and everything seem to combine against us, yet he stands as it were beside the furnace which we are in, watching the gold while it is being purified.

H. P. SIKES.

Brattleborough (P. O.) Vt. Aug. 13, '56.

For the Crisis.

"This Age of Progress."

BY JULIA A. FERRIS.

Yes, this is a progressive age. But in what respects are we improving? Have we improved physically? Of course not. The continuance of sin with its consequent disease for six thousand years, could not be expected to effect much improvement in the physical organization of man, which at the first was perfect. Are we mentally improving? This question is already answered, since we all know that disease produces effeminacy of mind as well as of body; but since there are many who still quote the adage, "Every generation grows weaker and wiser," we will look at some points of comparison betwixt the ancients and moderns. Some of us feel a pride in our conversational gifts; but let us go back to the land of Uz, and listen to the conversation of those five personal friends of Job. How all modern "feasts of reason" sink into insignificance. Could there be five men now convened from any, or all parts of the earth, capable of sustaining a conversation like that recorded in the book of Job, how far would I not go to hear them?

But such a thing cannot be done. Five such men are not now upon the earth. We have not improved in conversation since the days of Job. Ah, no.

Are we progressing in literature? Just compare modern poetry with that of Isaiah—modern hymns, with the sweet melody, the lofty aspirations, the devotion-breathing hallelujahs of the Psalms of David—modern argumentative writings with the epistles of Paul—modern exhortations with those of James and John. "But those writers were inspired by the holy spirit." Ah well, then we are not progressing spiritually. Look at the writings of A. J. Davis, and others who now profess to be inspired.

We will now look aside from the religious, to other departments of literature, and what do we find? A "racy," "spicy," agreeable style of writing, entertaining to-day, almost valuless to-morrow; these are chief characteristics of our most popular literature; but for deep, scholastic lore, and sound, philosophical wisdom, we must go to the ancients.

Are we progressing morally? First read the statistics of crime, and judge for yourselves. Like as a stone, in starting from the brow of a mountain, is at first slow in its downward progress, but gathering new impetus from every evolution, its velocity is accelerated, till whirling, rushing downward with an impetuous bound, and a quash, it is buried in a pool at the base; so this world, starting from the high hill of Eden eminence, has continued its down-hill retrograde progression, gathering an increasing impetus from every rolling century, as it now nears the base of the six thousand years, its speed is being accelerated with amazing velocity, till soon with an impetuous bound and a quash, all that is unholy will be buried in eternal oblivion.

Glory be to God. Let time continue its flight since, fast as our moments roll on they bring us but nearer and nearer to the dawning of that glorious day, when we can clasp the hand of Job, and sitting down with him and his friends, in the green groves of paradise, engage in high and holy converse; free from the mistakes, and bitterness which characterized that in the land of Uz. The day when, arm in arm with Isaiah, we can walk the "highway of holiness," in the full enjoyment of all those heavenly beatitudes which his hallowed pen, long ago, so sublimely foreshadowed. The day, when, convened with the great congregation, and each provided with white robes and harps of our own, our feet shall stand on Mount Zion, where David dwelt—not with David for our chorister, but as leader in those heavenly symphonies shall stand the "root and the offspring of David—the bright and morning star;" and accompanying harps swept by holy fingers, with the seraphic voices of the great multitude which no man can number, shall send up strains sweeter, holier, more devotional by far, than ever ascended from Judea's hills, when the six hundred singers, and four hundred players upon instruments sent up their anthems to God, a dim shadow of good things to come. O all ye servants of the Lord, bless ye the Lord, praise and exalt him above all forever.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. J. Stockwell.

BRO. GRANT:—Permit me to say a few words more to the dear saints through the Crisis. I would still say, be strong, O be of good courage. Never was my faith stronger in God's word than at present. Glory to God! I feel strong in faith.

Brethren and Srs., I do love the Savior and his appearing. I have been a pilgrim and stranger more than thirty years, and never in all my life have I enjoyed so much faith in God's word, as I have for the year past.

It is written—"the righteous also shall hold on his way, and he that hath clean hands shall be stronger and stronger. Yes, Glory to God, I can say Amen. Although oft disappointed, cast off, and hated by kinsfolks and friends, none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself While my Savior is so nigh I can say with Elisha—I will not leave thee, nor forsake thee." I feel sometimes with the Psalmist—"by thee I have run through a troop, and by my God have I leaped over a wall. Truly, "the Lord God is a sun and shield, and "no good thing will he withhold from them who walk uprightly."

The Lord bless you my dear brethren and sisters; especially Bro. Grant and all the watchmen, with light, life, and finally, full salvation.

May the good Lord grant that I with you may have an abundant entrance administered unto us into the kingdom when he comes.

Yours, looking for King Jesus,

JOHN STOCKWELL.

June 22, '56.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. P. Manning.

BRO. GRANT:—I praise the Lord for his goodness to me in these last days, in keeping me from giving up my faith in the coming of the Lord to raise the dead, change the living, destroy the wicked, cleanse the sanctuary, and give the kingdom to the saints, under the whole heaven. O how blessed it is to read the good word of the Lord on these points of doctrine. Jesus says—"When ye see all these things know that it is near, even at the doors." The signs are in the past, so we may know something about it. How glad I am that I ever believed that Jesus is coming. I am striving for the kingdom.

It rejoices my heart to hear from some of my dear brethren in the ministry, whom I have not heard from for sometime; and that they are holding on to the faith of the gospel of Jesus Christ. O how little gospel there is preached at the present day.

Brethren, one and all, let us keep awake, lest that day come upon us unawares. O if we lose the kingdom, all is forever lost; but if we hold on to the word of the Lord, and keep the good spirit, we shall be saved in the kingdom forever. Bless the name of the Lord forever, for his goodness to the children of men. Can it be possible, that the poor saints will find an eternal home with Jesus and all the good of all ages? If we are faithful, it will be so. How pure and spotless are those that sleep in Jesus; and we must be as pure as those that God will bring with him, or we shall never enter the kingdom of God. Brethren, let us claim the promise—"He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved."

Again, "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted. Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth. Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God. Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven" Matt. 5: 4, 5, 8, 10. With those blessed promises, let us take courage, and go on in the service of the Lord, for "yet a little while, and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry."

Brethren, pray for me, that my faith fail not.

Your Bro., expecting immortality at the coming of Jesus Christ.

BENJAMIN P. MANNING.

Goffstown, N. H., Aug. 2, '56.

Letter from E. Whitney.

BRO. GRANT:—It is with heartfelt thanks to God that I inform you and the saints scattered abroad, by the request of the church in Springfield, Mass., of the happy union which has been effected there. I commenced a series of meetings on Monday evening, according to the appointment given on the camp-ground. The good spirit of the Lord went with us, and continued with us through the meetings. I endeavored in my weakness to raise the gospel standard, and unfurl its banner to the breeze, and the soldiers of the cross were soon seen rallying to enlist anew in the King's service.

The meetings grew more and more interesting until their close. Backsliders came forward, confessed their wanderings, were made happy in the love of God, and went on their way rejoicing. The wrongs, the hard feelings, the contentions about doctrine, they agreed to lay aside forever, and instead of contending about words to no profit, they resolved to assist each other to get ready for the coming Judgment. Saturday evening was set apart for church business, when the church came together with one heart and one mind. We were not under the necessity of urging the brethren and sisters to unite themselves in gospel order, for each seemed to feel the importance of adopting some course which would better promote the peace and prosperity of the church. A few of the brethren being necessarily absent, it was thought best that the selection of officers should be deferred until the close of the afternoon service the following day. Sunday morning dawned upon us in all its beauty; not a cloud to darken the heavens. It did seem as though God was approbating our course with his smiles. This day was a day of thanksgiving to the church in Springfield. Truly it was a feast of fat things, a day of rejoicing. We had a full house, and peace and joy reigned within. After the close of the afternoon service, we had a heavenly season in partaking of the Lord's Supper. About sixty brethren and sisters all loving each other, consecrated themselves anew to God. The church then proceeded to elect a Pastor and Deacons; which they did by setting apart Bro. R. E. Ladd, Pastor; Bro. Otis and Leman, Deacons. O! how different is the state of this church now from what it has been. Instead of contentions, divisions and hard feelings; now peace, joy and love reigns.

May the Lord help others who are now in a distracted state, to do likewise is my prayer.

E. WHITNEY.

A person who undertakes to raise himself by scandalizing others, might as well sit down on a wheelbarrow and try to wheel himself.—Golden Rule.

LONG PRAYERS.—Some men never know when to stop. If they commence a speech or a prayer, it is all the same—your patience is all wearied out. On all occasions they are the same dull, lengthy sermonizers and speechmakers.—Golden Rule.

The Church poor, should be supported by the Church, never suffer them to go up on the pauper list. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren," says Christ, "ye have done it unto me." "Ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good."—Golden Rule.

HOW TO KNOW A FOOL.—A fool, says the Arab, may be known by six things: anger without cause, speech without profit, change without motive, inquiry without object, putting trust in a stranger, and not knowing his friends from his foes.

Most sins begin in the eyes. By them, commonly, Satan creeps to the heart.—That man can never be in safety that hath not covenanted with his eyes.—Golden Rule.

Obituary.

Died in this City on the 6 inst., Robert Lewis, of consumption, in the 24th year of his age. He was a native of Marioneth, N. Wales. About four years ago, in this city, he heard the glorious doctrine of Christ's coming to establish his everlasting kingdom under the whole heaven, and raise his sleeping saints to incorruptibility, and his living ones to immortality. These truths made a powerful impression upon his mind. He felt the necessity of being made meet for an inheritance with the saints in light, believed on the Lord Jesus, and was baptized. He was a young man of excellent moral character before he heard the truth; but morals, good in themselves, cannot save; Jesus alone is the Savior and Lifegiver; and he exemplified during the last four years, the power of his grace. The hope of the gospel sustained him in his great affliction to the very last. Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

His funeral was attended by a numerous congregation of respectable, and sympathizing friends. The discourse on the occasion was founded on 1 Cor. 15: 20, by F. M. Williams.

Buffalo, Aug. 20, '56.

Domestic Summary.

Two weeks Later from California.

New Orleans, Aug 26.

Steamer Daniel Webster has arrived at the Balize. She brings San Francisco dates of the 5th and Aspinwall of the 20th August.

Business dull at San Francisco.

The Vigilance Committee was in full force.

They had made many additional arrests, and executed two persons since the departure of the last steamer.

New Orleans, Aug. 27.

Steamer Granada, from Aspinwall, brings California dates of 5th.

Several attempts had been made to fire the cities of Sacramento and San Francisco.

The Vigilance Committee had hung Joseph Hetherington, Dr. Sandell, and the murderer Brace.

Judge Terry was still a prisoner.

Hopkins had recovered.

Serious disturbances had taken place in different parts of the State between Americans and foreigners.

Dates from Nicaragua are to the 7th.

Matters look squally for Walker.

IMPORTANT FROM NICARAGUA.—The steamship Cahawba, which arrived at New York on Saturday afternoon, from San Juan, Aug. 20, brings interesting news from Nicaragua—General Walker has issued a decree declaring all the ports of Central America on the waters of the Pacific and Atlantic oceans, with the exception of the inter-oceanic transit route via San Juan del Norte and San Juan del Sur, in a state of blockade.

St. Louis, Sept. 5.

Advices from Kansas state that a battle was fought on the morning of the 30th, at Ossawatomie, between 300 pro-slavery troops under Capt. Reed, and about the same number of Free Soilers under Capt. Brown.—The battle lasted an hour, when the Free Soilers were routed, with the loss of 20 killed and several wounded. Brown and his son are both reported killed. Five pro-slavery men were wounded. All the provisions and ammunition were carried away from Ossawatomie, and the town burnt.

Gov. Geary arrived here to-day, and proceeds immediately to Kansas.

The murder of Mr. Hopps causes great excitement here.

The volunteers who went to Leavenworth to-day will investigate the circumstances of the murder; and if it is found out that he was scalped alive as reported, then the murderers will be brought to justice at any risk.

Gen. Lane has entire command of the free State forces.

St. Louis, Sept. 5.

Private advices from Kansas state that on Tuesday last every free State man was driven from Leavenworth at the point of the bayonet, and all their property destroyed or confiscated.

Mr. Phillips, the correspondent of the New York Tribune, and his brother were killed—The house of the former and the store of the latter were burned. It is said Mr. Phillips fired from his house and killed two pro-slavery men. Forty sufferers arrived here to-day, entirely destitute.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.

Advices from Kansas via Nebraska city report the Iowa road entirely closed by armed bands of Missourians, under command of Gen. Richardson, who was stationed near the boundary line of Kansas and Nebraska.

St. Louis, Aug. 18.

A Westport "Border Ruffian" extra of the 13th, says:—

"On Monday night, a party of 200 free-soilers attacked the town of Franklin, Kansas territory, which contained at the time only 20 pro-slavery men. A fight ensued, lasting four hours, during which six free-soilers and four pro-slavery men were killed. The free-soilers afterward robbed the Post-office and set fire to it, and then retreated, carrying off the cannon belonging to the town. The next day 100 U. S. troops occupied the town.

Another report says there were seventeen freesoilers killed and wounded.

A party of 300 of Col. Lane's men had entered Topeka.

St. Louis, Aug. 27.

Advices from border counties state that 2,500 men will enter Kansas by the 22d.

Four hundred of Lane's men are stationed on the North side of Kansas river for the purpose of intercepting troops going to the relief of Lecompton.

500 men are under arms at Lexington.

Gen. Smith has gone with a large body of troops.

General Richardson, with a large body of territorial militia, has gone to the northwestern part of the territory to cut off Lane's retreat.

The mail carrier from Lecompton reports Col Titus at Lawrence, suffering from wounds received in the late attack on his house, and he is not expected to live.

Shocking excesses have been committed on the free State settlers near Leavenworth.

Gov. Price, of Missouri, who had been in the disturbed districts, has hurried home, in anticipation of despatches from the President, authorizing him to order out the militia, in in which event he will take the field in person.

Gen. Smith declines interference with the Missourians, so long as they confine their operations to Lane's forces.

LATE AND IMPORTANT FROM ST. DOMINGO.—A letter by the schooner Marietta Smith, Capt. Chase, from Port au Platt on the 3d inst., says:—

A few days ago a Dominican man-of-war schooner arrived from St. Domingo city, the capital of the Dominican Republic, and her officers reported the city in a state of revolution, in consequence of a treaty with Old Spain. The 7th article of the treaty favors all Spanish descendants and allows them to become Spanish citizens, and they being the most numerous, wish to become so in fact, and hoist the Spanish flag again. Citizens, soldiers, and all, are rushing to the Spanish consuls to get registered and become such. The day the schooner left the city. 5000 or more had registered their names and many more would sign. This has caused a great movement in the city. All the tribunals had been closed, business was suspended, and the President and his cabinet wished to resign. The Spanish Consul is doing all he can to prevent the American treaty being ratified, opposing he American Consul by all his moves. The foreigners and the liberal party are looking anxiously for a vessel from the States, to protect their interests. The editor of one of the city papers had shot down in the streets in broad daylight, a Spaniard. A political dispute was the cause. The editor escaped, but a reward of $5000 has been offered for his apprehension by the Spanish consul."

FROM KANSAS.—St. Louis, Sept. 1. We have advices from Kanzas to the 17th ultimo. The acting Governor, (Shannon) was at Lecompton, and on the 26th issued a proclamation declaring the territory in a state of insurrection, and calling on all law-abiding citizens to aid and assist the legal authorities to preserve the peace and protect the persons and property of citizens. Gen. Lane is understood to have three parties stationed at different points in Iowa, for the purpose of receiving supplies or making his escape in case he is compelled to flee.

Foreign News.

SPAIN.

The steamship Africa arrived at New York Wednesday eve., from Liverpool, Aug. 9. The entire suppression of the rebellion in Spain is confirmed.

The most important item by this arrival refers to a difficulty between the Western powers and Russia. The latter seems inclined to evade the fulfillment of some stipulations of the peace treaty in regard to the newly established boundaries of her territory. The occupation by the Russians of the Isle of Serpents, in the Black sea, is the principal subject of dispute, although the non-delivery of Kars is also considered to demand explanation. In consequence of these misundertandings, the whole of the English fleet remaining in the East, has been ordered to concentrate in the Black Sea, to superintend the execution of the 20th article of the treaty. A Russian minister on his way to Constantinople, is charged to effect an adjustment of these matters.

THE FRENCH IN ROME.

A letter from Turin says:—I met yesterday with an Italian gentleman just from Rome. He told me that French troops are detested there. I expressed astonishment. He said it was impossible for troops to be in better discipline, or conduct themselves better. Then why are they detested? His answer was, "They support the police; and they act as the guards to keep in prison innocent men, dying in the dungeons of the Pope, the representative of our Savior.

The Times Paris correspondent gives some curious details of the ramifications of the secret society called the Marianne, which appears to be constituted through the greater part of France. Its objects are the overthrow of the Bonaparte government, the proclamation of a democratic and social republic, and the triumph of the working classes. The assassination of the Emperor has been and still is authorised, and may even be enjoined.

DESTRUCTIVE VOLCANIC ERUPTION.

The volcanic eruption which visited the Great Sangar, one of the Spice islands of the Indian Ocean, on the 2d of March, was one of unusual terror and destructiveness in that region of volcanoes. It commenced early in the evening with a sudden and altogether indescribable crashing noise, which, indicating to Sangirese an eruption of the volcano, filled them with consternation. Simultaneous with this the glowing lava streamed downwards with it whatever it encountered in its destructive course, and causing the sea to boil wherever they came in contact.

This frightful picture of destruction, the horror of which was increased by the shrieks of men and beasts, the roaring of the tempest and the crashing of thousands of trees torn up and carried away, was followed about an hour later by peals of thunder which shook the ground, and deafened the ear. A black column of stone and ashes then shot up from the mountain to an immense height, and fell, illumined by the glare of the lava, like a shower of fire on the surrounding country below, producing a darkness, that only now and then momentarily broken by the flashes of lightning, was so intense that people could not discern their objects close at hand, and which completed their confusion and despair. Large stones were hurled through the air, crushing whatever they fell upon. Houses and crops which had not been destroyed by fire sank and disappeared beneath the ashes and stones, and the hill streams, stopped by these barriers, formed lakes, which breaking over their banks soon proved a new source of destruction. This lasted some hours. About midnight the raging elements sank to rest; but on the following day about noon, they again resumed their work of destruction with renewed violence. In the meantime, the fall of ashes continued without intermission, and was so thick on this day that the rays of the sun could not penetrate through it, and an appalling darkness prevailed.

A number of other districts and places have been some wholly destroyed, others greatly injured by the fire. The loss of life has been great. It is estimated at 2,800 men, women, and children. The greater number met their death in gardens. They fled in all directions, but were overtaken and swallowed up by the fatal fire stream. Some tried to save themselves in the trees, but were either carried away with them or killed by the scorching heat. Many died through sheer despair and agony.

Arrival of the Persia.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.

The steamship Persia arrived at 8 o'clock this A. M.

The news is wholly unimportant.

The Turkish government is said to be concocting a general treaty of commerce, to be offered to all nations, its leading principle being to circumscribe for the advantage of native produce the concessions hitherto made to foreign trade.

The Russians were forcibly retaking from the Circassians the forts they abandoned during the war. They had captured Amapa, the Circassians retreating without assistance.

Preparations for the coronation of the Czar on the 7th of September continued on a scale of great magnitude. It is to throw into the shade every former proceeding of a similar kind in Russia or elsewhere.

The Emperor was to make his solemn entry into Moscow on the 29th of August.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

The Czar has decorated the Emperor Napoleon with the Collar and order of St. Andrew.

An agent of Kossuth, who had been some months in prison, was hanged at Pesth on the 28th ult.

CAMPMEETINGS.

Campmeeting at Cheshire, Mass.

The Lord permitting, there will be a Campmeeting at Cheire, Mass., one half mile from the depot, to commence Sept. 15, and continue over the following Sabbath.

We invite all the lovers of Jesus, and those who wish to become his followers, to come in the name of the Lord with their tents to the feast of tabernacles; for we expect the good Lord will meet with his people and forgive sinners.

Board and horse keeping on reasonable terms, with a free table for God's poor. Those coming by railroad, will find teams in readiness to convey them to the camp-ground on the arrival of the trains.

Brethren invited. M. Batchelor, L. Boutell, H. Pratt, J. Turner, and all who can come.

Yours in hope,

ALONZO CUMMINGS, HIRAM BENTON,
For the Brethren.

Cheshire, Aug. 9, '56.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Canada East.

Eld. E. Burnham having responded to the request made by the Brethren in Barnston, Hatley, Melbourne and Danville, will spend the last two Sabbaths in Sept. in Hatley and Barnston, as the brethren there may arrange.

Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 1st and 2d, at Melbourne.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Danville.

The brethren at Hatley will receive him from the Portland train on Saturday, Sept. 20, at the Compton station. J. PORTER.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Richmond, Reed Meeting House, 14.
Otisfield, 21.
Casco, 28.

JESSE PARTRIDGE.

Providence permitting I will preach as follows:—
Arnold's Bridge, 10.
Will reach Apponaug in morning train—wish conveyance from Bro. Wait's.
River Point, 11.
Providence, 12.
Fairhaven, Sunday, 21.
Any intimation of necessary change, thankfully received.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

The Lord willing, S. B. Munn will hold a protracted meeting at Fances Corner, North Dartmouth, Mass, commencing Friday evening, Sept. 19, and continuing over the Sabbath.

A general invitation is extended to all the brethren and sisters in the vicinity.

R. COTTLE.

BR. GRANT:—Please say in the Crisis, that I will be at New Bedford (Mass.) the last two two Sabbaths in Sept. F. H. BERICK.

P. S.—My P. O. Address from Sept. 20 to 27 will be New Bedford, after that I will receive letters at Boston, care of George T. Adams, No. 167 Hanover St. F. H. B.

Providence permitting, Br. A. M. Higgins will preach in Boston, Lord's Day, Sept. 14.

The Lord permitting, I will preach as follows:—
Rolling Prairie, Sept. 13, and over Sunday.
In the vicinity of Crane's Grove, Adaline, Payne's Point, East and West Plumb River, until Oct. 1.
Crane's Grove, Sept. 21.
Ripley, Brown Co. Ill., Oct. 5, 6, and 7.
Cooperstown, Ill., Oct. 8 and 9.
Mt. Sterling 10 and 11.
Ripley, 12.
Camp Point 13 and 14.
Detroit, 15 and 16.
Pleasant Vale, 17 and over Sunday.
Bozra, 20 and 21.
Detroit 23.
Ripley 25, and over Sunday.
Freeport, 31 and over Sunday Nov. 2 Bro. Leister, of Buchanan, wil lmeet me there and accompany me to Dubuque, Iowa.

I will visit other places in Ill., if desired, if brethren will address me at Freeport and give the necessary direction. If brethren think it not best for me to visit them as proposed, will they please inform me by letter, directed to South Bend, or Laporte, Ind., or Freeport, Ill., as we do not wish to impose ourself by preaching on communities where it is not desired. L. H. CHASE.

Providence permitting, I will preach as follows:
Concord, N. H., Sunday, Sept. 21.
Woodstock, Vt., [Densmore Hill] Sunday, Sept 28.
Rawsonville, Vt., Sunday, Oct. 5.
North Adams, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 12.
Springfield, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 26.
Worcester, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 2.
Lowell, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 9.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Orangeport, N. Y., Monday eve., Sept. 22.
Buffalo, Tuesday, eve., 23.
Girard, Pa., near Bro. L. D. Allens, Wednesday eve., 24.
Edenboro', Thursday eve., 25.
Blooming Valley, Friday, and Saturday evenings, 26 and 27, over Sunday.
Fredonia, N. Y., Tuesday eve. 30.
If the Brethren there desire it, please inform me in time at Waterloo, N. Y., or at Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.

JOHN T. ONGLEY.

The Lord willing, I will preach in the following places;—
Northfield, Mass., Thursday eve, Sept. 11
Vernon, Vt., Friday eve, Sept. 12, at, or near, Bro. R. Allen's.
West Brattleboro, Vt., Sunday, Sept 14.
Houghtonville, Vt., Sunday, Sept. 21.

O. D. GIBSON.

I will preach at Portsmouth, N. H., (if the Lord will) the first and third Sabbath in Sept., and at Portland, Me., the second Sabbath in Sept. J. COUCH.

If the Lord will, I will preach at the following places:—
Lowell, Mass., Lord's Day, Sept. 14.
Lawrence, Mass., Wednesday eve, Sept. 17.
Salem, Mass., Lord's Day, Sept. 21.

WM. M. INGRAHAM.

Bro. D. E. Moulton will preach in Portsmouth, N. H, Sunday, Oct. 12.

Bro. J. Hemenway will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 26.

S. W. BISHOP.

Bro. D. E. Moulton will preach in Great Falls. Sund Oct 5 S. W. B.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

The following works are published and sold by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.—They are also for sale at the Office of the "World's Crisis," 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.; and by W. Pratt, Moline, Ill.; P. A. Smith, 4 Frank street, Rochester, N. Y.; A. F. Porter, 20 Erie street, Philadelphia, Pa.; S. S. Brewer, 54 Wilson street, Providence, R. I.:—

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 38 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By L. C. Welcome. 38 cents; postage 6 cents.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions of the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 16 cents per volume.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 12 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—by D. T. Taylor. Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—by John Cumming. State of the Dead, by Milton. Intermediate State, by Grew. Each 24 pages. Price 5 cents single; $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the Coast of Man—Ancient Landmarks—Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—price 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred.—Future Punishment—The Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

GLAD TIDINGS:

OR

BIBLE PROOF

That WOE and SIN are to END in the Universe, by a LITTERAL DESTRUCTION of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment.

All Texts on FUTURE PUNISHMENT collected and arranged.

By JACOB BLAIN,

Baptist Minister, of Buffalo, New York.

"And there shall be no more death, sorrow, crying, nor pain."—Rev. 21: 4.

"And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, * * * herrd I saying, blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, forever and ever."—Rev. 5: 13.

"The last enemy shall be DESTROYED."—1 Cor. 15: 26.

Published by the author, No. 19 North Division Street, Buffalo, N. Y., and for sale at the Crisis Office, Boston, Mass. Price 10 cts. single.

NEW BOOKS.

We have just received two new and interesting works. One from Bro. J. Lenfest, entitled "The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion," and "The New Birth."

Price for single copy 12 cts.; per hundred, $8; to the poor free.

They can be had at this office, or of Bro. Lenfest at Machiasport, Me.

Another from William Shepherd, Elizabeth City, N. J., entitled, "The Saints' Inheritance."

Bro. Shepherd will furnish this work of 50 pages at the following low rates, which he says is below cost, as he wishes the truth to be spreading:

Four copies	$0.25
Nine	0.50
Eighteen	1.00
Fifty	2.50
One hundred	5.00

And in addition, he will prepay the postage.

Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called the 'Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

"WELLCOME'S TREATISE ON MATT., 24TH AND 25TH CHAPTERS.—Permit me to say a word in favor of this work, and that is, in brief, to express my conviction that it is the best work on Matt. 24th and 25th I have ever seen. It is truthful, stirring, perspicuous, adapted to convince, and not lengthy. I hope our brethren will circulate it widely."

"D. T. TAYLOR."

Dr. Decker's pamphlet on the 2300 Days. Price, singly 10 cts.; per dozen, 50 cts.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or books, will find it credited in the Crisis, on the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise, it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

A W Low, F Clark, J Armstrong, E A Harrington, E G Scott, W J Lambert, J M Andrews, J Woodruff, R Robbins, J H Rugg, L Storrs, C Haskins, H Burriday, M Burrell, A Hotchkiss, W Lyman, E B Bishop, E Ritson, A Caswell, A Jenney, P Parlow, H Tripp, N Brown, L Rawson, M Garland, S Starr, C Buckley, F S Blake, J C Pettingill, T Tewksbury, C Willoughby, F Philbrick, Ira Merril, L A Felton, R Morton, S H Waldron, B P Hildreth, R Wilkinson, S F Hubbard, M Shannon, H Way, M L Curtis, A Hill, Joel Merriam, H Pratt, J Proctor, N H Brooks, J G Bennett, E Jackson, A Waterman, J Converse, J W Marden, Laura R Gilman, G Gould, M M Markham, G H Waterhouse, C B Burnham, L T Waters, D N Kidder, L B Moore, C A Eaton, A Coons, J Wilson, C Perry, $1 each.

H D Warner, G F Fowler, E Phelps, E Dunham, $2 each.

J Rofe, Smith & Miller, J Stevens, A D Street, E Vanalstine, H Finn, C B Turner, M Peters, L Monk, W Morrell, C Doane, J C Munson, H A Lord, J Ainsworth, J B Brown, C Danford, B B Elliot, 50 cts each.

E H Dennett, $21; Capt. E Mitchel $12; Levi Tuttle 25 cents.

FOR THE POOR.—H Gifford, $1; H A Lord, 50 cts; G Gould $1.

FOR BOOKS.—John Gierlow, $1; L W Houghton 38 cts.; J B Fish $1; Dr. M Davis 38 cts; W Harriman $1.52; C Stark 50 cts; S H Creesy; A W Sibly, $1.75; N Hanson, jr., $1.

C Swift should have been credited two dollars for "old debt" in our last number, instead of one.

Bro. Nudd—You have paid to Whole No. 124.

Novels are to the mind what intoxicating drinks are to the body. The wise, the good, and the great, will scorn to stoop to their degrading influence.—Golden Rule.

Administer justice to all, for a day of judgment is at hand.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

The Eternal Rest.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

How sweet to contemplate the glory celestial,
When Eden shall bloom in its beauty again;
When earth, sea, and heaven, and all things terrestrial
Immortally perfect, shall ever remain.

The lonely, and weary, and mourning, and sighing,
Who pilgrim-like wander, and anxiously roam
On dark gloomy mountains—through dreary waste regions,
With songs everlasting, then come to their home.

Hail, bright day eternal! Hail, rest everlasting!
How grateful thy boding is now to my soul!
I long to unite with the songsters seraphic,
The numbers divine, and triumphant to roll.

Hail, scenes unbeclouded with sin and temptation,
And prospects afflicting, and sound of alarm!
All numbered in glory, the years of oppression
Have each rolled away, with their evil and harm.

The millions redeemed, in glorious light shining,
Now mingle with angels, and walk through the land,
By fountains, and rivers, and groves all ambrosial—
A country prepared by Immanuel's hand!

Written for the Cross and Crown.

The Cross and Crown.

I'll bear the cross—my Savior I would be
Thy meek disciple—Thy life's blood for me,
A full, a free, all purifying fount,
Thou pouredst forth upon the hallowed mount;
And now for Thee all things as loss I count.
I'll bear the Cross.

I'll bear the cross, though grief and pain be mine.
All human woe my Lord on earth was thine,
O'er thorny ways Thy rugged pathway led
To Calvary, through Gethsemane's dark shade,
Close in thy bleeding footsteps I would tread
And bear the Cross.

I'll bear the Cross—though life itself I yield;
The Cross my standard on life's battlefield,
Nor will I shrink the sacred badge to wear,
Nor shun earth's scoffs and hate with coward fear
Its bitterest scorn my Savior thou didst bear,
I'll bear the Cross.

I'll bear the Cross—not in my might but thine;
Foes gather near—O give me strength divine;
And when I go with slow and faltering pace,
And half forget the goal that ends the race,
When "flesh is weak" then give the needed grace
To bear the Cross.

I seek a Crown—the glorious Crown of Life;
The victor's meed, who conquers in earth's strife,
I want that priceless, blood-bought diadem,
That soon the saint's immortal brows shall gem,
I'll suffer now, but give me Lord with them
That radiant Crown.

I want that Crown—when life's poor joys are done,
Its splendor vain and pomp and pride are gone,
When monarch's thrones are crumbled into dust,
Be mine the recompense of all the just;
Then Savior, King! before thy throne I trust
To wear the Crown!

MARIA.

Peace Dale, R. I., June 15th '55.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Spirit.

NO. III.

BY J. B. COOK.

"Jesus returned in the power of the spirit into Galilee. . . . . He went into the synagogue . . . . to read. . . . . The spirit of the Lord is upon me; because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor," etc. Luke 4: 14—18.

"The spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because he hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek," etc. Isa. 61: 1.

There shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse; and a Branch shall grow out of his roots; and the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding; the spirit of counsel and might; the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord; and shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord." Isa. 11: 1—3.

These texts presentthe Bible doctrine of the spirit, in the strongest light. Other Scriptures set forth the "one spirit," with the "one faith" which belongs to the whole "body of Chiistian members in particular." "The saints . . . . and household of God . . . . are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone, ... in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit." Eph. 2: 16—22, 1 Cor. 12: 27.

These, and all parallel Scriptures, embrace the whole church on to the last trump; by consequence, all, who are not "builded" into Christ by this one Holy Spirit, are still out of, and not "in Christ." I speak not of those who may misconceive this subject; but of the text. The believer is "builded" into this "habitation of God" by means of, and "through the spirit." This is the plain Bible teaching. But of all the statements made in the Holy Scriptures on this subject, none are more precise and impressive—none more intelligible or illustrative, than those in the three texts quoted as the basis of this article.

Note 1. The Messiah's mightiest career of wonders is here set forth.

2. The Spirit given to Him constitutes the grand quilification for its performance.

3. If we have set before us a course as wise and well adjusted to our sphere, our capacities and destiny as He had, shall we not need the like foregoing baptism, or Divine bestowment?

4. As He who was divinely "begotten" received this effusion, impartation, or bestowment, to endow Him for the sphere assigned Him; how much more shall each of those "begotten only by the word of truth" need it!

5. "For both He that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified, are all of ONE; for which cause He is not ashamed to call them brethren." Heb. 2: 11.

6. Surely this oneness is not attained but by being "builded"—in—' through the spirit." It is not natural, nor the result of reasoning to any of our fallen race.

In conclusion, we should notice that "there are many spirits gone out." The false implies the true. If others yield to the false, let us pray for and yield to "the Holy Spirit." The promise of it, is to them who ask. Luke 11: 13 The promise still stands good.

The abuse of no doctrine has been so great as this: but the abuse is no good argument against its use in its Bible form.

Our spiritual death,—my own spiritual want, is no argument against the doctrine of God. We had better confess our weakness, barrenness, and unbelief, that the one only "spirit of wisdom," love and power," may rest on us. It is essential even "to preach the Gospel to the poor."

"The Gospel" being "the power of God to salvation,"—"The word" being "the incorruptible seed," by which men are "begotten again,"—God's word being the spirit's "sword." I understand that the sphere of the Divine Spirit's operation is only commensurate with the Gospel and its ministry. Since "the Gospel" has been given it operates in and by it. Its sphere and style of working puts honor on the Gospel, and makes the agency of the church ministry who employ its heavenly institutions effectual.

For the Crisis.

Doing Right.

BY JAMES MORRISON.

DEAR BRN:—I have something serious, and very important to say to you. Will you listen to me and not be offended?

The church of God is commanded to be of one mind. Therefore it is needful to know the truth, and all the truth, and nothing but the truth. And as the law of the Lord is perfect, the command is neither to add to, nor take from. The Catholic cry in religious matters is, money, money. Says one, "God commands you to sacrifice your all unto him, or at length, you will be 'weighed in the balance and found wanting." But what saith the scriptures? "Charge them that are rich in this world, . . that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate." 1 Tim. 6: 17, 18.

When?

Upon the first day of the week. 1 Cor. 16: 2.

To whom?

To the poor saints. Rom. 12: 13.

Who are the poor saints?

Acts 6: 1, and 1 Tim. 5: 9. "Let not a widow be taken into the number under threescore years old;" v. 16. "If any man or woman that believeth, have widows, let them relieve them, and let not the church be charged; that it may relieve them that are widows indeed." v. 17. "Let the elders that rule well, be counted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in the word and doctrine."

"But," says one, "the gospel must be preached. Yes. "Preach the word, be instant in season, out of season." "And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified. I have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel. Yea, ye yourselves know, that these hands ministered unto my necessities, (tentmaking, see chap. 18: 3,) and to them that were with me. I have showed you all things, how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, "it is more blessed to give than to receive." Acts. 20: 32—35.

"But," says another—"The Lord hath ordained that they which preach the gospel, should live of the gospel." Yes. As Christ was the sent of the Father, so the apostles were the sent of Christ. John 17: 18. They were Christ's ambassadors, and watchmen that saw eye to eye. Isa. 52: 7, 8. Rom. 10: 14, 15,—that preached the gospel, but were forbidden to provide either gold, silver, or brass in their purses; neither scrip for their journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves, for the workman is worthy of his meat. Matt. 10: 9. "And in the same house remain, eating and drinking such things as they give, for the laborer is worthy of his hire." 2 Thess. 3: 7. "For yourselves know how ye ought to follow us, for we behaved not ourselves disorderly among you. Neither did we eat any man's bread for nought, but wrought with labor and travel night and day, that we might not be chargeable to any of you. Not because we have not power (as the ambassadors of Christ) but to make ourselves an example unto you to follow us. For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat."

O Lord, send laborers into the harvest. Laborers? Yes, laborers, not venders of foreign goods, or wares of Babylon. Not idlers, nor men with itching ears; but men of virtue and of truth. Faithful ministers, reprovers of wrong, pleaders for right, haters of evil, rebukers of oppression and sin, are very few indeed. Dear Brn., the Lord speaketh to us as well as to those of old. "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the spirit saith to the churches." The apostle John saith, respecting himself and his fellow apostles,—"We are of God, he that knoweth God heareth us: he that is not of God, heareth not us, hereby know we the spirit of truth and the spirit of error."

I remain your Bro. in affliction, waiting in daily expectation for the coming King.

JAMES MORRISON.

New Glasgow, July, '56.

Report.

The committee on business beg leave to present the following report:—

In considering the condition of the churches among us as a people; your committee find a want of union in the various sections of our work. We are convinced that the cause requires more faithful, efficient and practical preaching, and that in new places, as in some of the old fields, very much work is demanded.

We are also admonished that the churches are unable, or unwilling to supply means to extend the efforts we might put forth in binding up weak churches; or establishing new ones require farther, that the subject of sabbath schools is very much neglected by our people. Finally, we are impressed that a great necessity for practical and experimental religion, exist among us as a people.

We recommend, therefore,—

1. That the churches "put on charity which is the bond of perfectness"—that they "bear one another's burdens—and so fulfill the law of Christ"—that they will with Christian kindness, allow each other the enjoyment of Christian liberty of opinion, and expression; and cultivate that charity which is greater than faith or hope.

2. That the preachers dwell more fully on the great and glorious practical truths of the gospel, for the edification of the churches, and the awakening of sinners; not neglecting doctrine which is necessary to our identity as a people.

3. We recommended that the ministers of the word strive to drink more deeply into that one spirit, which gives power in the dispensation of the truth, and energy in every department of christian labor.

4. We recommend that all engage, to the extent of their power, in energetic, laborious, and liberal endeavors for the promotion of those truths so dear to the well instructed christian's heart, and the scriptural conformity to the divine will which alone can secure our salvation.

5. We recommend that in the spread of truth—in the instruction of our children, the performance of every christian duty, we recollect that our time is short, and that we "work while the day lasts, for the night cometh wherein no man can work."

Finally, we commend the churches to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build us up, and to give us an inheritance among them that are sanctified.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

W. S. CAMPBELL,
S. G. MATHEWSON,
H. L. HASTINGS.

TRUTH.—In conversation, truth does not require you to utter all your thoughts; yet it forbids you to speak in opposition to them.

Administer justice to all, for a day of judgment is at hand.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. Merriam.

[Although the following letter was a private one received at the Camp-ground, I trust Bro. Merriam will forgive me for sending it to his brethren.—ED.]

BRO. GRANT:—I have been longing for some time to write you, but circumstances in Providence have prevented. I wish to say a few words in reference to my health, and the earnest desire I have for the prayers of God's faithful children. Doubtless many will be assembled on the encampment who have faith in God and in the truthfulness of his promises and answer to prayer and I thought it might not be amiss present my case to the dear brethren and sisters.

I did not fully realize the danger I was incurring previous to leaving the office, but thousands and millions of gold would not tempt me to hazard the same again. As my services were then given to the humble flock I trust I may rely on their cordial sympathy and prayers.

For about six weeks I have been boarding at Boscowen for the benefit of green fields and foliage of the forest which are not so injurious for the eye to look upon as the streets and buildings of a city.

My eyes have become less painful and sensitive to the light—but still in a critical state. My nervous system has been so much prostrated by sufferings in times past, that I have nearly lost all power of patient endurance, and the seat of the disease being in the optic nerve and that nerve so intimately connected with the brain, the tendency is to fill the mind with gloom and terror and distraction.

I endeavor to hold on to God, but fee great need of the prayers of the church I might add much more, but the above may suffice my unworthy self.

I will only add that my desire is to be enabled to adorn the doctrine of my Savior, if need be, in privation and distress, and if the will of God be such, to be restored to a condition of usefulness to the chruch

How delighted I would be to meet the beloved brethren and sisters on the campground, did health permit.

I hope great blessings will be poured out upon all, that God may be glorified, and your souls greatly blessed by his presence and power. Give my love to them all.

In Christian love, yours, &c.,

J. MERRIAM.

West Boscawen, Aug. 19, '56.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. M. Batchelor.

BR. GRANT:—I wish the Crisis to live; and in order to have it live, it must contain food for the fold of God: and if it has food for the church, some must write for it. I thought this morning I would write a few thoughts for publication in the Crisis if there is nothing better to take its place. My starting point is Luke 21: 34. "And take heed to yourselves," &c. The Savior knew the dangers of the last times and spake accordingly. This language is addressed to the church living in this day of peril. 2 Tim. 3: 1. The causes for taking heed are many, for our danger arises from various sources.

1. The general declension in the religious world. It is a day of splendid meeting-houses, inside and out, but that piety that leads to self-denial, is scarcely known. Ministers talk and write of prosperity, but it is a prosperity that pleases worldly men, but does not make the hearts of those that hold converse with God rejoice, nor lead ungodly men to fall down and say God is in you of a truth. This declension is found in the Advent ranks as well as in the popular churches, and is the cause of the disunion, party strife, and pecuniary embarrassments in maintaining the cause of truth. The great truth that made us a separate people, is lost sight of. As we view this state of things, we shall sink into despondency and lose our confidence and courage. This is what the Savior pointed at when he said, "the love of many wax cold, but he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved." Matt. 24: 12, 13. Be of good cheer, this is a sign of the end.

2. There is great danger of scepticism while there are so many contending sentiments brought up, and so many love to make every new thing a hobby to the exclusion of every thing else.

3. The cares of life are increasing. As pride and novelty cost a great deal of money and labor, if we follow them the mind will be surfeited with its cares, and thus lose all relish for divine things. Prayer-meetings will be forsaken for want of time, and mind, the closet will be forsaken too. It costs so much to live, we cannot afford any thing for the cause of truth, when in fact it costs not so much for simple living, but to satisfy our self-created wants and extravagances. Take heed to yourselves, lest Christ be thrust out of the affections.

4. The spirit of fight and disunion is abroad in the world, and we shall get in to it before we are aware, unless we watch. We shall find causes enough to call forth our resentment if we allow it. Self defence will be plead. Men never acted so much like Satan as now,—such underhanded trickery and jesuitism that it stirs up the old man if he is not crucified.

5. Take heed, or covetousness will creep in, in this day of riches, before we are aware. The world in all its departments is grasping for more. It is so in nations the world over, and it is like a distemper to the human family. But few are satisfied. We must emigrate. Thus we see Adventists stretching their desires to the far West, to clear new land, &c.; yet they say the Lord is soon coming. Take heed to yourselves. But why? That day is at hand, and will soon be upon us! Watch! If we are not in the position pointed out in the text, we shall be caught in the snare; "for as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth." But if we watch, we shall escape. How shall we escape? One shall be taken, the other left. The Lord shall be the hope of his people in that day.

But you shall stand accepted before the son of man. Then let the world deride or pity, I will glory in his name. I hope, praying Brn. and Srs. will attend the camp meeting at Cheshire, Mass., Sept. 15. Praying help is needed. Some were disappointed in not attending the Wilbraham meeting on account of the rain. I hope the loss will be made up by attending this. Much good might be done there with the right kind of help, and the blessing of God. We had a good time there last September. It is 10 miles from Pitsfield, on the rail road to North Adams. Peace be with all that love our Lord Jesus Christ.

Pownal, Vt., Aug. '56.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. Harris.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS. IN CHRIST:—I cannot see many of you, and hold sweet communion face to face, but am comforted to hear from some of you, through the Crisis. To me, all things of this world are wearing a gloomy aspect. I have now been confined to my bed nearly eight years. Have thought many times how could I have endured without an interest in Christ—but I hope one day to be delivered from sickness and sorrow, and from life's flowing fountain drink everlasting love.

Let us watch, and be sober, gird on the whole armer, and fight the good fight, for the end of all things is at hand. Blessed are those servants whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching. But O, my heart aches to see so many in the broad road to destruction. O Brn. and Srs., you who are living in gospel light, be faithful a few days longer. Don't give o'er. Let us be more careful now than ever before. There seems now to be more danger when nearing the shore. My daily prayer is, that we who profess to be looking for our Lord, may not only profess, but be assured that we belong to God—that we are Jesus' friends, and will be owned as such when he comes. God must and will have such as are worthy to have part in the first resurrection tested in all points. Pure and holy we must be in order to reflect his lovely image. May God keep us from a slumbering spirit. I believe he will, if we take him at his word, for he has promised—"As our day is, so shall our strength be." Who would not be willing to suffer here a little while for the sake of obtaining that blessed inheritance. Let us go forward, and so run that we may obtain.

Your sister in Christ, earnestly desiring eternal life.

N. C. HARRIS.

Bakerville, Ct., Aug., '56.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. W. Sheldon.

BRO. GRANT:—I am still in quest of eternal life in the world to come, where we shall greet the saints of every age and clime. None but the truly holy will be there. An artificial substitute, or an external garb of righteousness, will not entitle us to the perpetual felicity of that paradisean realm. Perfection in every department of Christian theology, is no enough to give us a passport into the future home of the saints. Christ-like purity, or Godliness, must characterize all who ultimately enter the haven of immortal repose. The many FORMAL worshipers will still "seek," while only a devout "few" will fervently "strive" or "agonize" to enter into the coming kingdom of Messiah. In a word—to be a real "heir" to the promised kingdom, we must be only pilgrims in this world, not having our affections entangled with its affairs. This world is not the pilgrim's home—but the world to come. I am striving to proclaim the truths of the gospel, in this new territory, to the best of my ability under existing circumstances. Truth is making an impression on the minds of professors and non-professors. I find far less bigotry here than in the East. Worldly-mindedness, is the greatest obstacle to the spread of truth in this region. A few of "like precious faith" reside near here. We intend to be Christians, not only in NAME but also in FAITH and CHARACTER.

Love to all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity.

Yours, in the gospel faith and hope,

W. SHELDON.

Vermillion, Dakota Co., M. T.

P. S.—My permanent P. O. address is, Vermillion, Dakota Co., Minnesota.

Friends wishing to know my place of residence will find me near Big Poplar Grove, three quarters of a mile from Vermillion post-office; eighteen miles west of Hastings, and twenty-five south-west of St. Paul city.

W. S.

Obituary.

"AN ENEMY HATH DONE THIS!"

BRO. GRANT:—I write this to apprise you that the cruel enemy, Death, has done his last work with our Bro. Benjamin F. Bickford of Lynn, Dye-Factory Village. He has fallen asleep hopefully and peacefully in Jesus, to sleep till the trump of God shall awake the dead to life. Bro. Bickford has been a great sufferer under a long and protracted illness, and not till the last days of his mortal life, did he give up the idea that he should live till Jesus comes. Surely in his case, could be seen the fulfillment of this text—"in dying thou shalt die;" for he had been two years or more in being whittled away by disease, till at length death triumphed and the grave enclosed its victim in its cold embrace. But thank the Lord, our Bro. had a good hope through grace, and he knew "the keys of death and hell" (the grave) were in the hands of him that was dead and is alive, and that he would open, and no man could shut. Thus with such a hope that the dead would live again, Bro. Bickford could submit with christian submission to the penalty.

He has left a companion and six children, a mother, brothers and sister beside others to mourn his loss. May they all remember his words of comfort and entreaty, and make sure of the same blessed hope, and get the same heavenly home in the kingdom of God.

Sunday, Aug. 17, by appointment, I was at Lynn, and preached in the chapel. At the third meeting, our Bro. was brought to the meeting-house, where he had so long been a faithful lover and worshiper of him who is so soon to come as the salvation of his people. Here relatives, friends and neighbors came to sympathize and drop the falling tear with the bereaved and afflicted family.

On this occasion I endeavored to enforce the truthful doctrine that reward and future eternal life, depended entirely upon the resurrection from the dead, or a coming to life again. That the dead were in their graves, and would eternally remain there, unless they could be brought to life, which must be at the sounding of the last trump. Thus I assured the weeping ones in the language of Bible, as sure as "Jesus died and rose again, even SO them that sleep in Jesus, would God bring with him." That the same "IT" that goes down into the grave will come up out of the grave, and the same "IT," will be a spiritual body and a living one too.

The house was full, and it was a weeping time. The word did seem to have free course, comforting the faithful; and I could but hope that good would be done in the name of the Lord.

O that men would hearken to the admonitions, calls, and entreaties of the gospel voice and flee the coming wrath by laying hold of life.

L. BOUTELL.

Lynn Dye-Factory Village, Aug. '56.

Died in Granby, Mass., Aug. 16, 1856, Fanny Eliza, infant daughter of Harvey and Mary L. Pratt, aged one month and 2 days.

Her sufferings were very severe, but they are now over forever. She sleeps in Jesus, awaiting the morn of the resurrection, when she, with our other dear little one whom we buried three years ago, will arise to a glorious immortality. Our eyes shall then behold them again blooming in immortal beauty and vigor, no more to die. O may we be prepared to meet them on the new earth, where death's cold and icy hands will never be laid upon our darling infants and snatch them from our loving embrace. O how agonizing it is to our hearts to be obliged to lay away in the cold and silent grave our precious offspring; but soon we hope to see them shining in the kingdom of God.

Sweet babe, thy name shall ever dwell
In hearts that best thy love can tell;
Thy loss we mourn and deeply feel
The wound which none but God can heal

H. PRATT.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE. | PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | NUMBER 1[illegible], HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. | BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1856. | WHOLE NO. 127. VOL. IV. NO. [illegible]

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brs., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Stream of Life.

BY HENRY W. DANN.

Life is a stream, man is the marriner. On its broad bosom sail the young and gay. Its rapid course bears men onward to the resting place and charnel house of the dead. O how rapid the tide that bears men onward to the goal.

This mighty stream rises into view in time, and terminates beyond the region of the tomb.

To the young, its surface looks calm and delightful and not a "ripple on the wave" is to be seen.

The mighty rocks and dangerous shoals that underneath its surface lie, are not discernible to the eye of anticipating youth.

The young are filled with hopes of future bliss, and nought, save the enchanted of fairy legends, can equal the imaginary scenes of joy; for the future in the eye of aspiring youth is radiant with brilliancy.

But as youth advances to manhood, it beholds the stream of life not as an enchanted river, but as a dangerous stream, on whose bosom sails the frail bark of humanity.

O how much wisdom is needed to pilot us right, over the rough and turbulent sea of life.

But have we ever surveyed this mighty stream? Have we noted its dangers? Are we acquainted with its intricate windings?

Along the stream of life are dangerous rocks, in ranges, at times intersecting each other, and at times running parallel; commencing at various points, they continue more or less regular to the entire length of the course. In this stream there are two channels; the one broad, the other quite narrow. Along the broad channel are found the dangerous rocks and fearful shoals that make its navigation extremely perilous. Indeed, throughout its whole extent, there appears to be a strong current that grows almost irresistible as you approach the terminus of the stream. You can sail in the broad channel, even if you should not pull the oar; you will not fail of being borne along the stream, for you are certain of this, though you sleep on the way.

But although you have the current in your favor and pass along in apparent safety, yet it will cause you much anxiety and injury, and will finally result in the loss of your life.

You are a mariner on the stream of life, and you prefer the broad channel. But hold! your frail bark has struck a rock. Hark! do you not hear her keel as it rubs and grinds upon the low ledge that underneath lies? Perhaps your frail bark may [illegible] [illegible] remember this; that such craft "do not live out half their days."

But as your bark passes along the stream, what a sad picture does she present! Her timbers are all shattered, her helm is unshipped, her canvass is "clean gone forever," her seams are all gaping, and she is entirely unseaworthy; and yet she is about to venture on the billows of vast eternity!

The current sweeps her on with irresitible force and she enters the wide waste of waters. But, O God! what a fearful sight! for the man that once was pure and good, and exalted almost to angelic perfection, is now an injured, a hopeless, an eternal wreck.

"On what a slender thread
Hang everlasting things;
The eternal state of all the dead
Upon life's feeble strings."

Of what value then is eternal life? How skillful ought the pilot to be, who guides the frail bark of humanity.

Once there sailed upon the deep, a vessel which contained the germ of the world. Had she been wrecked, the earth would have been without a man to till the ground, or an inhabitant upon its extended surface. All of beast, and bird, and man, contained within its narrow compass, would have gone down forever, and there would have reigned a blank "chaos of nature" as at the dawn of creation's morn.

But she outlived the storm, and rode on the wave of the mighty deluge, exhibiting herself before God, as a monument to the wicked dead who slept beneath the awful flood.

Her cargo was as valuable as is the race of man, and the creation that surrounds him.

To attempt a calculation of its worth would be useless. But when we look upon the generations that have descended from the ARK, and the numbered multitudes that travel the air, and fill the sea, and the countless hosts that roam over the earth, and especially when we gaze upon man with his wonderful inventions, his striking achievements, his unceasing employment of the elements of nature to accomplish his astonishing and wonderful designs, we can get a faint idea of the vessel's contents, and of its immense value.

But my friend, your frail bark was as richly freighted as was this.

Upon the stream of life you launched as you commenced existence, and you are passing rapidly along its winding course to the resting-place of the dead.

Then as you value your soul, be careful, for you must finally sail in the peaceful region of eternal light, or else be driven amid the fearful whirlpools, angry billows, and pitiless storms, under the black flag of the Destroyer. Perhaps the world will offer you its emoluments, its riches, and its pleasures; but what are these when compared with immortality and eternal life?

Take to yourself the highest honor that can be conferred among mortals, add to this all the riches of earth combined, possess these for as many years as you can compute, and then if thou barter them for thy life, thou wilt be an eternal loser.—Heed not the promises of the world, for they are faithless. The world declares in your hearing, that her honors will never fade, that her wealth will never change, that her pleasures will never cease to satisty. But remember these fascinations only tend to our ruin. In an hour of want you will find that "riches take wings and fly away," and that earthly pleasures are oft times mixed with the "wormwood and the gall."

But there is another consideration which makes your cargo of immense value. It was redeemed by the precious blood of Christ.

And how far beyond all calculation must that be worth for which the Son of God has died. When there was no eye to pity, nor arm to save, Jesus came to your relief.

You can get some faint idea of the worth of your freight over the stream of life, if you will but turn a moment to the scenes of Calvary. At the dying groans of your Redeemer, nature, sympathizing, [illegible] convulsing the earth, rending the rocks, and opening the graves.

But hark! another and more glorious sound strikes upon the ear. Listen! it is the voice of the Son of God, crying "it is finished," as he yields up the ghost for your redemption.

O how sublime and glorious was the life of your Redeemer on earth.

Then look to Jesus. Learn the art of navigation from the "Great head of the church" alone.

Carefully study the Bible which is the chart to guide you on the stream of life, pointing out rocks to be shunned and the course to be persued. Stick to the chart,—Save your cargo, and gain everlasting life.

But while the broad channel to death is literally crowded, there is another and a narrower course that leadeth unto life, with here and there a mariner. Those who choose this narrow course, make constant headway, and though many gales may be experienced, and trials encountered, they will outride them all, and soon, having passed the stream of life, with a steady helm, firm breeze, and sails well set, they will enter into the bay of immortality and eternal life.

There were two men who once sailed on the stream of life. The one chose the broad, the other the narrow way.

Newport sailed for a while in apparent safety, but ahead were those dreadful rocks and dangerous shoals that we have already pointed out; but as the course was broad, he heeded not its dangers, until suddenly finding himself amid the dashing breakers he cried out in horror,—"O the unsufferable pangs of death and damnation."

Paul, the great apostle of the gentiles, sailed on the stream of life, also; but he chose the narrow course, and as he passed the dashing breakers in the distance, and beheld the rushing of the mighty waters of the great deep, he exclaimed in holy triumph,—"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day." How different the end! How vast the contrast between the broad and the narrow way!

The man who sails on the narrow channel feels his responsiblity—the other is careless. The former, understanding his proper course, will finally enter into the smooth sea of unending life; while the other will be injured by the rocky ledges scattered along his course, and when he reaches the broad ocean before him, he will be unable to stem the swift current that sets into destruction's dreadful gulf, and in its dark waves and amid its pitiless storms he will sink to rise no more.

Then dear friend, bear away from this dark and fearful channel, flee from the wrath to come, that the stream of life may not end in destruction, but endless life.

West Troy, Sept. 4, '56.

For the Crisis.

We Dwell in the Enemy's Land.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

This world is a vast howling wilderness. The thorns are pricking, and the briars and brambles are tearing on every side, continually. It is a cursed place—cursed by God himself, for sin.

It is the general race-course of devils wicked men and women, and evil principles. All that God, and Christ, and angels, and good men have ever done to make it even tolerable, seems almost wholly lost in the floods of sin and death, which wicked and malevolent spirits have rolled over it. The saying, that "world is good enough, but the people in it only are bad," is an unreasonable and foolish expression. Malformation, perilous phenomena, horrid developments, and purlieus of destruction, are connected with the physical creation itself. Against the good I do not speak. I praise God for that. But the evil overmatches the good. The Almighty declares it to be so. It will never be otherwise, in this order of things. God has designed that sin, since it exists, shall fully develop itself in this world, to the uttermost, till the very end. This state of things cannot be the saints' abode. It must first be baptized with consuming fire. The earth, on which we live and move, is saturated with human blood and gore; and planted and sown with human bones and ashes. It is a mammoth graveyard. Every footstep, almost, makes it ring hollow with tomb excavations. It is the public circuit, where death openly rides the "pale horse," "and hell" follows "with him."

It is the general battle-ground of good and evil.

Who would wish an everlasting stay here, as it now is? What can be done to make it desirable to the wise and good? Do you say make wise laws, and establish good governments? The best of laws exist already, made by the Son of God, and men are continually trying to see how much they can break and despise them. The best of Governments exists now. God Almighty offers to govern, and men and women treat the offer with contempt.—Men institute laws, set up men to govern, and constitute powers, and then turn round and trample the whole under foot! Modern nations cry out against the cruelty and blood-thirstiness of ancient times, while they themselves continue to forge and create implements and engines of death, to destroy human life by the wholesale, and scatter the muscles, bones, and blood of their fellow-beings abroad, like the handful of the seed-sower! Men of modern times complain of times of old, that they were times of ignorance, superstition, and suffering; and propose to smoothe the road of existence, and clear the channel of national and social life; but on, on flows the still turbid stream bearing on its repulsive surface misery, cruelty, hatred, war, oppression, selfishness, hypocrisy, cursing, and death. And all this after six thousand years' effort! And if government could be right, and laws could be just and equal here, that does not remove the burden of the curse that rests on the physical creation. The heavens would still be the theatre of whirlwinds, hurricanes, tempests, tornadoes, lightnings, thunders, elements. The earth would still be the "place of graves," and scenes of anguish and suffering. Groans of misery, and cries of pain would still greet our ears at every corner; and objects of pallid and haggard wretchedness meet our eyes in every street and lane of the city. The seeds of misery are sown in our nature. Being good does not hinder these from germinating, and springing up, and bearing their legitimate fruit in perfection, so far as pain and death are concerned. True, if we have grace we bear these things better, but the evil still remains. If God should stamp this physical system statu quo, as it now is, he would only daguerreotype eternal misery!

No, it must not be. The whole fabric must be rent asunder, and scattered in flaming chaos; and then, perfectly purified, be brought forth a world more bright and glorious, according to his promise.—So let it be. Hasten, God of love, to thy mighty work, and glorify thine own eternal self!

For the Crisis.

Can it be?

BY A TRAVELER.

Can it be that, in boundless wisdom, God has formed this world for nought? Can it be, that this wonderfully made and constituted creature called man, was created merely for the purpose of advancing this sphere one step up the ladder from chaos, to perfection?

Can it be, that there is no responsibility resting upon man for the use he makes of the time, and means, which he is permitted to enjoy in this life?

Can it be that Jesus has laid such a broad and uncompromising plan, or scheme, for the ultimate salvation of all mankind that not one of the whole human family, with all his rebellious will in exercise, and assisted by his Satanic majesty, the Devil, and his numerous host, can make his escape from his all-searching and saving power? [illegible]

Can it be that the heart of man is so deceitful above all things, that it will flatter him into the belief that his great and only treasure is in the Kingdom of God; and yet uphold him in grasping with eagerness the vanities of this vain inconstant world?

Can it be that that person is thoroughly imbued with principles of the doctrine of Christ and the spirit of the Gospel, that can feast upon fiction and the various romances of the day; while those things which are able to make us wise unto salvation are passed by with coldness and indifference?

Can it be, that he, who last year was all interested in spreading light and truth, and this year is penurious, narrow, and exacting, has grown in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ?

Can it be, that the person, who once under the influence of the spirit of Jesus joyfully laid aside all adorning of person with gold, and other useless ornaments, can now put them on again and feel the approval of the same spirit?

Can it be that the Master would call any one unto the work of the ministry, and discharge him again almost as soon?

For the Crisis.

The Two Witnesses.

BY L. P. JUDSON.

I believe there is a mistake in the application of the 11th chap. of Rev. as to the "Two Witnesses."

The generally received opinion is, that they are the Old and New Testament Scriptures; and that the scenes there laid, were in France, and had their fulfilment in Paris, in the French Revolution.

To this view, there appears to me, to be several valid objections. If the portion of Scripture is not perfectly familiar, the reader would do himself and me a favor to turn to it and read it. Please do so.

To lay the scenes therein described, in Paris, is to take more liberties in making the Scriptures "figurative" and "Spiritual" in their meaning than I want the responsibility of.

1. The place is called "The holy City." Paris never was.

2. It is the place where the Temple of God was, and the altar and the Court.—These were never at Paris.

3. The Gentiles were to tread the city under foot, forty-and-two months. They have always had the city of Paris under foot.

4. The witnesses must be figurative: being the Scriptures, and not persons.

5. The wonders they do, must be figurative. Killing their enemies,—shutting heaven, etc.

6. Their being killed must also be figurative. Also their dead bodies lying in the streets, etc.

7. Their coming to life again. What can this "figure represent?" Where was there any less life and power in the scriptures at one time, more than at another?

8. Their being taken up to heaven, must also be a figure.

9. The crucifying of our Lord, must be made another figure.

Any one who will read that portion carefully, cannot fail to see, that, in order to have it refer to Paris, the above, and other things in it must be made figurative. This is a liberty our people, on reflection, will neither take nor allow.

The question recurs, then, what does it mean? If we cannot find an exposition that will answer without taking such liberties as the above, we will answer that we do not know. It is better not to have an opinion concerning the meaning of Scripture, than to have an erroneous one. But, in this case, we are not thus left in the dark. There is an exposition, that, to my mind, is easy, natural, and in harmony with the phraseology of this passage. Let us look at it.

A witness, is one who testifies to what he does know and to what he has seen.—We can none of us testify to the death and resurrection of Christ, because we did not see it and do not know it. We believe it, we can testify to that faith in it. To the fact, others testified, and we believe their testimony. The circumstances corroborate their testimony, so as to make the evidence overwhelming. We may have faith without a doubt. But to this faith, is all that our testimony can reach.

If, then, these witnesses are two persons, they must be persons that were alive at the time of the death and resurrection of our Lord, and that did see those solemn and interesting scenes enacted.

But here we are met with the enquiry, Does not the Word say that these witnesses are the two olive trees, and in another place, that these olive trees are the word of the Lord? I answer, no to the last proposition.

Turn to Zech. 4th chapter, and see what it says. Please read it through. Now you do not get the explanation of the two olive trees in the 6th verse. You get simply what the word of the Lord was "unto Zerrubbabel, saying,—not by might nor by power, but by my spirit saith the Lord.' I might just as well say that the candlestick, or the bowl, or any other thing there mentioned, is the word of the Lord, as to say the olive trees were.

Now let us turn back to Rev. 11th and see what we are taught. Apply the common-sense rule—that God is saying what he means, and means what he says; unless He shall give us authority to think otherwise.

Let the "Holy City" mean Jerusalem. Let the "Temple of God," "altar" and "court," mean those at Jerusalem. Let the "Gentiles," mean that people. Let the witnesses, mean two persons. The thousand two hundred and three score days, be literally understood. They make just three and a half years. Let the fire proceeding out of their mouth and thus killing their enemies, be so. It would be a very easy matter for God to change the relations of the gases as they should breathe on their enemies and cause them thus to ignite. Let the preventing of rain, turning the waters to blood, and smiting the earth with plagues, be as we read they will be. Moses and Elijah did these things in their day. Let their death, be a literal death. Their not being put into graves, be truly so. Their resurrection, a real one, their ascension to heaven, as real as our Lord's. Then, the scenes that follow, what we find described.

If we understand this scripture thus, then its fulfillmant must be in the future. Most certainly, for we have nothing in the history of the past, answering to what is here described.

If these scenes are yet in the future, two important points remain to be examined.

1. When do these witnesses give their testimony?

2. Who are they?

In answering the first of these enquiries, it will be necessary to refer to Rev. 13th and 17th to learn some scenes that are yet to transpire.

In the first ten verses of the thirteenth chapter, we have a description of a beast that, no doubt, is correctly understood to represent Papal Rome. From the eleventh verse to the close we have the rise of another beast out of the earth, and the prominent features in his history. The first exercise of his power, seems to be mild. He has two horns like a lamb.—When his authority is strengthened so that he dare utter his voice he speaks as a dragon. This gives us a view of his deceptive and innate character. But he acquires power, and is equal to the first beast before him. He then performs wonders—deceives the people, and finally creates an "image to the beast."

Now, mark! There are three powers. The first beast, which has not yet been slain; the image-beast which derives its existence, life, and authority from a third power, which is independent of and the directing agency concerning both. This subtle and controling power commands everything to worship the image-beast. He authorizes a bloody persecution against all those that refuse. This persecution is carried so far, that even common business transactions cannot be [illegible] by those that will not [illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE. | PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. | BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1856. | WHOLE NO. 127. VOL. IV. NO. 3.

The World's Crisis, IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Bru., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Stream of Life.

BY HENRY W. LANN.

Life is a stream, man is the marriner. On its broad bosom sail the young and gay. Its rapid course bears men onward to the resting place and charnel house of the dead. O how rapid the tide that bears men onward to the goal.

This mighty stream rises into view in time, and terminates beyond the region of the tomb.

To the young, its surface looks calm and delightful and not a "ripple on the wave" is to be seen.

The mighty rocks and dangerous shoals that underneath its surface lie, are not discernible to the eye of anticipating youth.

The young are filled with hopes of future bliss, and nought, save the enchanted of fairy legends, can equal the imaginary scenes of joy; for the future in the eye of aspiring youth is radiant with brilliancy.

But as youth advances to manhood, it beholds the stream of life not as an enchanted river, but as a dangerous stream, on whose bosom sails the frail bark of humanity.

O how much wisdom is needed to pilot us right, over the rough and turbulent sea of life.

But have we ever surveyed this mighty stream? Have we noted its dangers? Are we acquainted with its intricate windings?

Along the stream of life are dangerous rocks, in ranges, at times intersecting each other, and at times running parallel; commencing at various points, they continue more or less regular to the entire length of the course. In this stream there are two channels; the one broad, the other quite narrow. Along the broad channel are found the dangerous rocks and fearful shoals that make its navigation extremely perilous. Indeed, throughout its whole extent, there appears to be a strong current that grows almost irresistible as you approach the terminus of the stream. You can sail in the broad channel, even if you should not pull the oar; you will not fail of being borne along the stream, for you are certain of this though you sleep on the way.

But although you have the current in your favor and pass along in apparent safety, yet it will cause you much anxiety and injury, and will finally result in the loss of your life.

You are a mariner on the stream of life, and you prefer the broad channel. But hold! your frail bark has struck a rock. Hark! do you not hear her keel as it rubs and grinds upon the low ledge that underneath you lies? Perhaps your frail bark may hold out for a time, but remember this; that such craft "do not live out half their days."

But as your bark passes along the stream, what a sad picture does she present! Her timbers are all shattered, her helm is unshipped, her canvass is "clean gone forever," her seams are all gaping, and she is entirely unseaworthy; and yet she is about to venture on the billows of vast eternity!

The current sweeps her on with irresitible force and she enters the wide waste of waters. But, O God! what a fearful sight! for the man that once was pure and good, and exalted almost to angelic perfection, is now an injured, a hopeless, an eternal wreck.

"On what a slender thread
Hang everlasting things;
The eternal state of all the dead
Upon life's feeble strings."

Of what value then is eternal life? How skillful ought the pilot to be, who guides the frail bark of humanity.

Once there sailed upon the deep, a vessel which contained the germ of the world. Had she been wrecked, the earth would have been without a man to till the ground, or an inhabitant upon its extended surface. All of beast, and bird, and man, contained within its narrow compass, would have gone down forever, and there would have reigned a blank "chaos of nature' as at the dawn of creation's morn.

But she outlived the storm, and rode on the wave of the mighty deluge, exhibiting herself before God, as a monument to the wicked dead who slept beneath the awful flood.

Her cargo was as valuable as is the race of man, and the creation that surrounds him.

To attempt a calculation of its worth would be useless. But when we look upon the generations that have descended from the ARK, and the numbered multitudes that travel the air, and fill the sea, and the countless hosts that roam over the earth, and especially when we gaze upon man with his wonderful inventions, his striking achievements, his unceasing employment of the elements of nature to accomplish his astonishing and wonderful designs, we can get a faint idea of the vessel's contents, and of its immense value.

But my friend, your frail bark was as richly freighted as was this.

Upon the stream of life you launched as you commenced existence, and you are passing rapidly along its winding course to the resting-place of the dead.

Then as you value your soul, be careful, for you must finally sail in the peaceful region of eternal light, or else be driven amid the fearful whirlpools, angry billows, and pitiless storms, under the black flag of the Destroyer. Perhaps the world will offer you its emoluments, its riches, and its pleasures; but what are these when compared with immortality and eternal life?

Take to yourself the highest honor that can be conferred among mortals, add to this all the riches of earth combined, possess these for as many years as you can compute, and then if thou barter them for thy life, thou wilt be an eternal loser.—Heed not the promises of the world, for they are faithless. The world declares in your hearing, that her honors will never fade, that her wealth will never change, that her pleasures will never cease to satisty. But remember these fascinations only tend to our ruin. In an hour of want you will find that "riches take wings and fly away," and that earthly pleasures are oft times mixed with the "wormwood and the gall."

But there is another consideration which makes your cargo of immense value. It was redeemed by the precious blood of Christ.

And how far beyond all calculation must that be worth for which the Son of God has died. When there was no eye to pity, nor arm to save, Jesus came to your relief.

You can get some faint idea of the worth of your freight over the stream of life, if you will but turn a moment to the scenes of Calvary. At the dying groan of your Redeemer, nature sympathized, convulsing the earth, rending the rocks, and opening the graves.

But hark! another and more glorious sound strikes upon the ear. Listen! it is the voice of the Son of God, crying "it is finished," as he yields up the ghost for your redemption.

O how sublime and glorious was the life of your Redeemer on earth.

Then look to Jesus. Learn the art of navigation from the "Great head of the church" alone.

Carefully study the Bible which is the chart to guide you on the stream of life, pointing out rocks to be shunned and the course to be persued. Stick to the chart, —Save your cargo, and gain everlasting life.

But while the broad channel to death is literally crowded, there is another and a narrower course that leadeth unto life, with here and there a mariner. Those who choose this narrow course, make constant headway, and though many gales may be experienced, and trials encountered, they will outride them all, and soon, having passed the stream of life, with a steady helm, firm breeze, and sails well set, they will enter into the bay of immortality and eternal life.

There were two men who once sailed on the stream of life. The one chose the broad, the other the narrow way.

Newport sailed for a while in apparent safety, but ahead were those dreadful rocks and dangerous shoals that we have already pointed out; but as the course was broad, he heeded not its dangers, until suddenly finding himself amid the dashing breakers he cried out in horror,—"O the unsufferable pangs of death and damnation."

Paul, the great apostle of the gentiles, sailed on the stream of life, also; but he chose the narrow course, and as he passed the dashing breakers in the distance, and beheld the rushing of the mighty waters of the great deep, he exclaimed in holy triumph,—"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day." How different the end! How vast the contrast between the broad and the narrow way!

The man who sails on the narrow channel feels his responsiblity—the other is careless. The former, understanding his proper course, will finally enter into the smooth sea of unending life; while the other will be injured by the rocky ledges scattered along his course, and when he reaches the broad ocean before him, he will be unable to stem the swift current that sets into destruction's dreadful gulf, and in its dark waves and amid its pitiless storms he will sink to rise no more.

Then dear friend, bear away from this dark and fearful channel, flee from the wrath to come, that the stream of life may not end in destruction, but endless life.

West Troy, Sept. 4, '56.

For the Crisis.

We Dwell in the Enemy's Land.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

This world is a vast howling wilderness. The thorns are pricking, and the briars and brambles are tearing on every side, continually. It is a cursed place—cursed by God himself, for sin.

It is the general race-course of devils wicked men and women, and evil principles. All that God, and Christ, and angels, and good men have ever done to make it even tolerable, seems almost wholly lost in the floods of sin and death, which wicked and malevolent spirits have rolled over it. The saying, that "world is good enough, but the people in it only are bad," is an unreasonable and foolish expression. Malformation, perilous phenomena, horrid developments, and purlieus of destruction, are connected with the physical creation itself. Against the good I do not speak. I praise God for that. But the evil overmatches the good. The Almighty declares it to be so. It will never be otherwise, in this order of things. God has designed that sin, since it exists, shall fully develop itself in this world, to the uttermost, till the very end. This state of things cannot be the saints' abode. It must first be baptized with consuming fire. The earth, on which we live and move, is saturated with human blood and gore; and planted and sown with human bones and ashes. It is a mammoth graveyard. Every footstep, almost, makes it ring hollow with tomb excavations. It is the public circuit, where death openly rides the "pale horse," "and hell" follows "with him."

It is the general battle-ground of good and evil.

Who would wish an everlasting stay here, as it now is? What can be done to make it desirable to the wise and good? Do you say make wise laws, and establish good governments? The best of laws exist already, made by the Son of God, and men are continually trying to see how much they can break and despise them. The best of Governments exists now. God Almighty offers to govern, and men and women treat the offer with contempt—Men institute laws, set up men to govern, and constitute powers, and then turn round and trample the whole under foot! Modern nations cry out against the cruelty and blood-thirstiness of ancient times, while they themselves continue to forge and create implements and engines of death, to destroy human life by the wholesale, and scatter the muscles, bones, and blood of their fellow-beings abroad, like the handful of the seed-sower! Men of modern times complain of times of old, that they were times of ignorance, superstition, and suffering; and propose to smoothe the road of existence, and clear the channel of national and social life; but on, on flows the still turbid stream bearing on its repulsive surface misery, cruelty, hatred, war, oppression, selfishness, hypocrisy, cursing, and death. And all this after six thousand years' effort! And if government could be right, and laws could be just and equal here, that does not remove the burden of the curse that rests on the physical creation. The heavens would still be the theatre of whirlwinds, hurricanes, tempests, tornadoes, lightnings, thunders, elements. The earth would still be the "place of graves," and scenes of anguish and suffering. Groans of misery, and cries of pain would still greet our ears at every corner; and objects of pallid and haggard wretchedness meet our eyes in every street and lane of the city. The seeds of misery are sown in our nature. Being good does not hinder these from germinating, and springing up, and bearing their legitimate fruit in perfection, so far as pain and death are concerned. True, if we have grace we bear these things better, but the evil still remains. If God should stamp this physical system statu quo, as it now is, he would only daguerreotype eternal misery!

No, it must not be. The whole fabric must be rent asunder, and scattered in flaming chaos; and then, perfectly purified, be brought forth a world more bright and glorious, according to his promise.—So let it be. Hasten, God of love, to thy mighty work, and glorify thine own eternal self!

For the Crisis.

Can it be?

BY A TRAVELER.

Can it be that, in boundless wisdom, God has formed this world for nought? Can it be, that this wonderfully made and constituted creature called man, was created merely for the purpose of advancing this sphere one step up the ladder from chaos, to perfection?

Can it be, that there is no responsibility resting upon man for the use he makes of the time, and means, which he is permitted to enjoy in this life?

Can it be that Jesus has laid such a broad and uncompromising plan, or scheme, for the ultimate salvation of all mankind that not one of the whole human family, with all his rebellious will in exercise, and assisted by his Satanic majesty, the Devil, and his numerous host, can make his escape from his all-searching and saving power?

Can it be that the heart of man is so deceitful above all things, that it will flatter him into the belief that his great and only treasure is in the Kingdom of God; and yet uphold him in grasping with eagerness the vanities of this vain inconstant world?

Can it be that that person is thoroughly imbued with principles of the doctrine of Christ and the spirit of the Gospel, that can feast upon fiction and the various romances of the day; while those things which are able to make us wise unto salvation are passed by with coldness and indifference?

Can it be, that he, who last year was all interested in spreading light and truth, and this year is penurious, narrow, and exacting, has grown in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ?

Can it be, that the person, who once under the influence of the spirit of Jesus joyfully laid aside all adorning of person with gold, and other useless ornaments, can now put them on again and feel the approval of the same spirit?

Can it be that the Master would call any one unto the work of the ministry, and discharge him again almost as soon?

For the Crisis.

The Two Witnesses.

BY L. P. JUDSON.

I believe there is a mistake in the application of the 11th chap. of Rev. as to the "Two Witnesses."

The generally received opinion is, that they are the Old and New Testament Scriptures; and that the scenes there laid, were in France, and had their fulfilment in Paris, in the French Revolution.

To this view, there appears to me, to be several valid objections. If the portion of Scripture is not perfectly familiar, the reader would do himself and me a favor to turn to it and read it. Please do so.

To lay the scenes therein described, in Paris, is to take more liberties in making the Scriptures "figurative" and "Spiritual" in their meaning than I want the responsibility of.

1. The place is called "The holy City." Paris never was.

2. It is the place where the Temple of God was, and the altar and the Court.—These were never at Paris.

3. The Gentiles were to tread the city under foot, forty-and-two months. They have always had the city of Paris under foot.

4. The witnesses must be figurative; being the Scriptures, and not persons.

5. The wonders they do, must be figurative. Killing their enemies,—shutting heaven, etc.

6. Their being killed must also be figurative. Also their dead bodies lying in the streets, etc.

7. Their coming to life again. What can this "figure represent?" Where was there any less life and power in the scriptures at one time, more than at another?

8. Their being taken up to heaven, must also be a figure.

9. The crucifying of our Lord, must be made another figure.

Any one who will read that portion carefully, cannot fail to see, that, in order to have it refer to Paris, the above, and other things in it must be made figurative. This is a liberty our people, on reflection, will neither take nor allow.

The question recurs, then, what does it mean? If we cannot find an exposition that will answer without taking such liberties as the above, we will answer that we do not know. It is better not to have an opinion concerning the meaning of Scripture, than to have an erroneous one. But, in this case, we are not thus left in the dark. There is an exposition, that, to my mind, is easy, natural, and in harmony with the phraseology of this passage. Let us look at it.

A witness, is one who testifies to what he does know and to what he has seen.—We can none of us testify to the death and resurrection of Christ, because we did not see it and do not know it. We believe it, we can testify to that faith in it. To the fact, others testified, and we believe their testimony. The circumstances corroborate their testimony, so as to make the evidence overwhelming. We may have faith without a doubt. But to this faith, is all that our testimony can reach.

If, then these witnesses are two persons, they must be persons that were alive at the time of the death and resurrection of our Lord, and that did see those solemn and interesting scenes enacted.

But here we are met with the enquiry, Does not the Word say that these witnesses are the two olive trees, and in another place, that these olive trees are the word of the Lord? I answer, no to the last proposition.

Turn to Zech. 4th chapter, and see what it says. Please read it through. Now you do not get the explanation of the two olive trees in the 6th verse. You get simply what the word of the Lord was "unto Zerrubbabel, saying,—not by might nor by power, but by my spirit saith the Lord.' I might just as well say that the candlestick, or the bowl, or any other thing there mentioned, is the word of the Lord, as to say the olive trees were.

Now let us turn back to Rev. 11th and see what we are taught. Apply the common-sense rule—that God is saying what he means, and means what he says; unless He shall give us authority to think otherwise.

Let the "Holy City" mean Jerusalem. Let the "Temple of God," —"altar" and 'court," mean those at Jerusalem. Let the "Gentiles," mean that people. Let the witnesses, mean two persons. The thousand two hundred and three score days, be literally understood. They make just three and a half years. Let the fire proceeding out of their mouth and thus killing their enemies, be so. It would be a very easy matter for God to change the relations of the gases as they should breathe on their enemies and cause them thus to ignite. Let the preventing of rain, turning the waters to blood, and smiting the earth with plagues, be as we read they will be. Moses and Elijah did these things in their day. Let their death, be a literal death. Their not being put into graves, be truly so. Their resurrection, a real one, their ascension to heaven, as real as our Lord's. Then, the scenes that follow, what we find described.

If we understand this scripture thus, then its fulfillmant must be in the future. Most certainly, for we have nothing in the history of the past, answering to what is here described.

If these scenes are yet in the future, two important points remain to be examined.

1. When do these witnesses give their testimony?

2. Who are they?

In answering the first of these enquiries, it will be necessary to refer to Rev. 13th and 17th to learn some scenes that are yet to transpire.

In the first ten verses of the thirteenth chapter, we have a description of a beast that, no doubt, is correctly understood to represent Papal Rome. From the eleventh verse to the close we have the rise of another beast out of the earth, and the prominent features in his history. The first exercise of his power, seems to be mild. He has two horns like a lamb.—When his authority is strengthened so that he dare utter his voice he speaks as a dragon. This gives us a view of his deceptive and innate character. But he acquires power, and is equal to the first beast before him. He then performs wonders—deceives the people, and finally creates an "image to the beast."

Now, mark! There are three powers. The first beast, which has not yet been slain; the image-beast which derives its existence, life, and authority from a third power, which is independent of and the directing agency concerning both. This subtle and controling power commands everything to worship the image-beast. He authorizes a bloody persecution against all those that refuse. This persecution is carried so far, that even common commercial transactions cannot be performed, except by those that will recognize the authority of this image-beast. This recognition is by receiving "a mark" in their foreheads or in their hands. All others are to be put to death. Palestine was within the scope of prophetic vision, so that that land must be included. Here, then, will be an opportunity for two witnesses to testify who cannot be killed.

That these scenes are yet in the future is evident to my mind, from the fact that we have nothing in the past answering to the work of this two-horned beast, and the image-beast.

Secondly, to have their "mark" is fatal. God never has placed the life of any man on doing a particular act, without giving him the means of knowing what that act was. The most honest christian in the world, cannot now be satisfied and positive what that "mark" is; though many have guessed. There is a work to be done in the present or future, in which a Power is to exist, that shall direct the Roman power—and also create another system equal to it for a time, and yet control it. Also during this time there is to be a persecution, which for severity has not been surpassed nor even equaled. It will be very bloody, but short, and terminate in the establishment of the everlasting kingdom.

Should it be deemed important to bring out the prominent features of this prophecy hereafter, we shall do so if the Lord will, and consider several chapters in their connection. We now refer to the 17th chapter only to identify the power that persecutes at Jerusalem and elsewhere. In the fore part, we have a power that sustains the harlot, and this power, vs. 8 ascends out of the bottomless pit and goes into perdition. He is the eighth and of the seven. The French power is probably indicated, with the Napoleon dynasty at its head. The alliance of Louis Napoleon, with the King of the Sardinian states, who is at variance with the Pope, shows the strength of his attachment to the Roman church, when his interest shall require him to serve it. And his having already seized upon the holy places in Palestine, and having planted the red flag of the French there, shows his intention as to authority there. Another fact. It shows that if he is to be an acting power in these scenes, the time is at hand.

From the whole, we may learn several things.

1. The Power that kills the witnesses, is the Power that ascends out of the abyss. 11 : 7.

2. The Power that ascends out of the abyss, is the Power that sustains the Papal power just previous to the judgment.—17 : 3,8.

3. The Power that kills the witnesses, is the power that authorized and supported the persecution.

4. The Power that authorized the persecution, is the two-horned beast power.—Therefore,

5. The two-horned beast power, the scarlet-colored beast power, and the power that causes the persecution and kills the witnesses, are one and the same. And the probability is, that it is the French power, with the Napoleon dynasty at its head.

Our answer to our first enquiry is, then, that the scenes of persecution, testifying and killing the witnesses etc., will occur when the two-horned beast shall have succeeded to sufficient authority to make it safe for him to develop his dragon nature, create the image to the beast, and give it power to persecute.

The second enquiry remains to be answered. Who are the witnesses?

They are said to be "the two olive trees." In Zech. 4 : 14, the angel says the two olive trees spoken of then, mean the two sons of Oil, or anointed ones. They are called "the two candle-sticks, standing before the god of the earth."

They are called the Lord's witnesses — Our Lord was speaking. They must be persons that can testify to facts concerning our Lord. If they are to testify to the sufferings, death, resurrection, ascension, glory, and right of our Savior to reign; they must be persons that have seen and do know these things.

They are called prophets. Let us enquire what prophets, if any, have witnessed these scenes.

Moses and Elijah were, perhaps, the greatest prophets in Israel. Two in whom the people would have as much confidence, could they appear again, as any others.—They would probably do the most good. Moses died, and Elijah was taken up alive by the power of God. But Moses was brought to life again, and the devil had a contention with Michael about his body.—Perhaps because he was brought again to life. And Moses and Elias did appear in the Mount and conversed with the Lord. True, it is called a "vision;" but a vision is a sight. It may be a reality seen, or only a representation. Either would be a vision. See Luke 24: 23.

Matthew says, 17 : 3, "And behold there appeared unto them, Moses and Elias talking with him." Mark says, 9: 4, "And there appeared unto them Elias with Moses: and they were talking with Jesus."—Luke says 9 : 30, "And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias; who appeared in glory and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem."

Now I do not know that the Scriptures can be more definite in teaching us that Moses and Elias, two of the greatest prophets of Israel, were there alive and conversant with those things that Christ was to do and suffer.

Who can say that the "two men" Luke mentions, or the "two angels" that John speaks of as at the sepulchre of our Lord on the morning of his resurrection, were not those same prophets who appeared in glory and talked with Jesus in the Mount about these very scenes?

Also when he ascended to his seat in the heavens, after he had disappeared from the sight of the disciples, "two men stood by them, in white apparel," and preached to them the Second Advent. Now who were these men, but the very ones God was preparing to be witnesses of his Son at the terrible time in the future, of which we have been reading?

In Malachi, the Lord promised to send Elijah the Prophet, to the people of Israel, before that great and terrible day of the Lord should come. The Lord allowed the Jews to consider John as the Elijah, if they were determined to have it in their day—but he defines the sense in which this was fulfilled in John, that he came in "the spirit and power of Elijah." John was the type, Elijah himself, we believe, is to appear in the future.

We are now prepared to look for the literal fulfillments of the interesting prophecy of the 11th of Rev.

Moses and Elijah will appear at this time of persecution. Moses made alive,—as Lazarus, the widow's son, and others were,—not immortal, for then Christ would not have been the "first fruits of them that slept, etc.

They shut heaven and prevent rain for three and a half years, as Elijah did.—They turn waters to blood as Moses did, and smite the earth with other plagues. All that undertake to arrest them or hurt them are killed by the fire proceeding out of their mouths.

These facts are published the world over, and all people wonder at these events. At the close of three and a half years, the beast-power that ascended out of the abyss, makes a special war against them and kills them. The fact of their death is heralded by every means, in every direction. Multitudes in the immediate vicinity flock to see them. They do not allow them to be buried. Their bodies remain in the streets where they were killed. But after three days and a half, and while the people are still thronging and crowding to see them, the spirit of life from God enters into them, and they stand upon their feet. This causes a general and great consternation. Fear takes hold of every beholder. A voice speaks to them from heaven, calling them up. They ascend.—Their enemies behold them. A cloud receives them out of their sight. The news has scarce time to be sent through the city, ere an earthquake occurs. The tenth part of the city falls; seven thousand men are slain by it. Others, affrighted, give glory to God: acknowledge his power, and that these were his prophets. Then the Lord descends with all his saints, who had been previously raised and taken up to meet him in the air. The terrible scenes of the commencement of the judgment, occur; the throne is established; and the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ.

Reader, may you and the writer, have part with the Lord in that blessed kingdom.

L. P. Judson.

Victor, July 27, 1856.

Similes.

As snow is of itself cold, yet warms and refreshes the earth, so afflictions, though in themselves grievous, keep the soul of the Christian warm and make it fruitful.

The casting down of our spirits in true humility is but like throwing a ball on the ground, which makes it rebound the higher towards heaven.

As worldly joy ends in sorrow, so godly sorrow ends in joy.

As it sometimes rains when the sun shines, so there may be joy in a saint's heart when there are tears in his eyes.

Confession of sin should come like water from a spring that runs freely, and not like water from a still, that is forced by the fire of affliction.

As the way to stop bleeding is by opening a vein, so the way to stop unreasonable sorrow is to turn it against sin.

Sin is like a bee, with honey in its mouth, but a sting in its tail.

Many a man shifts his sins as men do their clothes; they put off one to put on another. This is but waiting upon the devil in a new livery.

The sins of a good man are like weeds in a garden, which may hinder the growth of fruits and flowers, but (not permitted to get ahead) cannot kill them.

The pleasure of sin is like a draught of sweet poison.

As Noah's dove could find no rest for the sole of her foot, so the spirit of God can find no residence in the heart that is deluged in sin.

Our conscience is a fire within us, our sins are the fuel; therefore, instead of warming, it will scorch us, unless the heat be removed, or the heat of it be allayed by penitential tears.

The World's Crisis.

BOTON, SEPTEMBER 17, 1856.

Question

No. 2.

"So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." Gen 1 : 27.

Ques.—"Was man made so like God as to consist of three distinct substances?

Ans.—We have found nothing in the Bible to show that God consists of three distinct SUBSTANCES, and until this can be shown to be the fact, it follows that the image or likeness in man to his Creator does not consist in any such resemblance.

Question No. 3.

"And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Thess 5 : 23.

Ques.—"Does it require spirit and soul and body to constitute a man?"

Ans.—We answer yes, if we take the Bible meaning of the words.

The word here rendered "spirit" is pneuma, and is used in the New Testament 386 times, and the corresponding Hebrew word (ruakh) is found in the O. T. 403 times, and they are defined to mean,—spirit, wind, air, breath; also, temper, disposition, affection, feelings, inclinations, qualities of mind; and applied to both man and beast.

The word translated soul, in the text, psukee and is found 105 times in the N T., and is rendered life and lives 40 times.

Nephesh, the corresponding Hebrew word is found in the O. T. 828 times; and these words are applied indiscriminately to man and beast.

When Paul prays that our "whole spirit, and soul, and body be preserved blameless," we understand him to mean, that he would have our "temper," "disposition;" "affections," "feelings," "inclinations,"—in short, our whole being consecrated to the Lord.

Question No. 4.

"For the word of God is quick and powerful, and shaper than any two edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunsunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." Heb. 4 : 12.

Ques.—"Can the soul and spirit be divided? and can one know what the other does not, before the separation from the body?"

Ans.—In reply to the first part of this question, we would say—yes.

By soul, we mean the whole being, his life or mind.

By spirit we mean "the breath of life." "As the body without the spirit (pneuma or breath,—margin,) is dead, so faith without works is dead also." Jas. 2 : 26.

In Gen. 2, 7, we read—"The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."

David says in Ps. 104 : 29, "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled, thou takest away their breath, (ruakh) they die, and return to their dust."

The word here rendered breath is the same in the original as the one found in Eccl. 12 : 7, which reads—"Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit (ruakh) return to God who gave it." We found in the account of creation, that the "breath of life," breathed into man's nostrils, caused him to become a living soul, and we find also, that when this breath, or spirit is taken away, MAN DIES.

Now, in answer to the second part of the question, we answer, no. We do not understand that the spirit or breath of life is an intelligent principle, and consequently it does not know anything either before or after its separation from the body, or the man; for we read in Ps. 146 : 4,—"His breath (ruakh) goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish," hence as Solomon says in Eccl. 9 : 5, "the living know that they shall die, but the dead know not ANY thing."

For the Crisis.

Satan—his Relation to Rome and the World.

This being altogether a question of Revelation, we must draw our proof from the Bible. No impression or imagination can avail to justify any opposing conclusion.—To the Scriptures alone we appeal.

1. Rome, (Pagan Rome,) is symbolized by the 4th beast. Dan. 7. It is Rome that is represented by one and the same "beast" till "the Judgment"—a period of near 2000 years. This is Divine testimony. Now to teach that the symbol of Rome, in its changes, is Satan bound 1000 years of this time is, as I see, to oppose "the Word of God." No mere change of opinion, or of form, or of name in Rome, can convert this raging beast into the "old serpent bound." It cannot rage and prevail and yet be "bound 1000 years" of the same time, doing and seeming to do nothing. No, not at all.

2. The Wisdom of God reveals a "Devil—Satan." Mat. 4; John 8 : 44; 14 : 30; 16 : 11. Luke 4 : 2 Eph. 2 : 2. Heb. 2 : 14. Not to accept this, is, of course, to act on our own wisdom in opposition to the Divine.

3. The difficulties involved are no greater than those involved in the most vital truths, to those who have rejected them, and are, of course, unaided and unenlightened by them. The difficulties involved as to the being of a God are absolute and overwhelming to some sceptics.

4. God being made known in Scripture, there are many things abscribed to Him, in which His servants apparently and (as men speak) ONLY the actors. Ps. 105 : 107. Mat 10 : 30. Rom. 11 : 36. John 3 : 20—21. This, I trust is plain to all who believe the Bible.

5. We read of "the Devil, Satan, the God of this world, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience, that goeth about seeking whom he may devour." Now, as the works of good men are wrought in (or by) God, so the wicked act by Satan's working. Eph. 22. "Thus saith the Lord."

6. The infidel will not believe that God DOES do the things that are ascribed to Him in Scriptures. He allows no agent save the one apparent to the eye of sense. This carried out, denies the Bible, as to both God and Devil, so far as I can see.

Some professed Christians adopt this sceptical principle only in its application to the "wicked one." Rev. 2 : 12—20, and 1st John 5 : 18—19. They believe in "the children of God," but not in the "children of the Devil." 1st John 3 : 10,—or not so fully. Yet, the wisdom of God teaches both. Man's wisdom is as valid against both as it is against one.

7. Let us illustrate. We find in Gen 3 : 1—14, only "the serpent," as the tempter; but in John 8 : 44—45, "the Devil" is seen to have been there; nay, the Devil was the liar, "Satan" that "tempted Eve." Yet, some take only one of these texts, and say in their unbelief that "the tempter" was "only a snake!"

Thus, some seem to overlook the Apostle John's fullest testimony as to the existence of "the Devil, Wicked One, God of this world, and Prince of this world."

They apply Rev. 2 : 10 : 12 : 1—17; 20 : 2—10, (which belong to the same period,) only to Rome Pagan. Such say that Pagan Rome cast some into prison. Rev. 2 : 10. But God's angel, through the Apostle, ascribes it to "THE DEVIL." So I believe, and thus I escape the charge of adding to this crowning book of Revelation. To "add to," is to incur the plagues written therein. Rev. 22 : 17—18.

By the light of Holy Scriptures we see that "the whole world lieth in the wicked one." (John 5 : 18, reads "wicked one," and verse 19 has the same word precisely.) Then, this Apostle teaches us that "the whole world, (Roman world of course, Luke 2 : 1. Acts 11 : 28,) lieth (and now hath lain 1800 years) IN THE WICKED ONE."

Those who believe in "the beloved disciple's" inspiration, must see that he taught the whole Church to believe in "Satan, the Old Serpent, (over, and before, and all through Rome, who is) the Dragon, and Devil." The fact is plain.

Our Lord says of the Church, "THERE AM I," yet to unbelief there is no one there, but "the Church;" so, while some see Pagan Rome in Rev. 2 : 10; 12 : 1—17; 20 : 1—10, I see by the foregoing and all-comprehending light of other scriptures, that Pagan Rome did "lie in the wicked one," as a child enfolded in a giant's arms. Rome was his human organization; his "seat" and throne of earthly dominion.—Then, as Christ's name and presence is called over, (or in, or on,) the assembly of his people, Mat. 18 : 20; 28 : 20, so the names of Satan are called over or on, Rome. But as Christ is more than the outward "Church:" so Satan is more than Rome.

John was never understood to say, "the children of God," in contrast with "the children of Rome," (instead of the Devil.) 1st John 3 : 10. He did not say, "the whole world lieth in Pagan Rome." No, indeed. A man might have avoided Roman interference, and yet been exposed to "the wiles of the Devil." Resisting Rome was not—is not—exactly "resisting the Devil." Surely, Christ is no more truly present in his Church, according to promise, than Satan has been all through, and is, in Rome.

When the then hindering form of Roman evil was so "taken out of the way," that Satan was transformed (as if) into an angel of light, (as Christ's vicegerent,) with a more prodigious development of all the characteristics of "the Devil," in the full grown masterpiece of all that formed "the mystery of iniquity," surely he was not "bound."

That notion was invented by the Papists, ("the children of the Devil," 1st John 3 : 10; John 8,) to cover up the enormity of Romanism and mislead mankind: for this was the very time that "Satan was wroth, and made war with the remnant of (the woman's) seed who had the commandments of God and the testimony of Jesus Christ."

Alas for the world, if the Bible view of the binding of Satan turns out to be only a more dreadful display of his Satanic subtlety and wrath.

May the Lord have mercy on us, poor, miserable sinners. Amen.

J. B. Cook.

For the Crisis

Letter from Bro. P. S. W. Deyo.

Bro. Grant:—As I have moved to Iowa, I thought it would be well to write you a few lines. In the language of another, "I did not come here to get rich, or to find paradise," for that I do not expect until Jesus comes. The field is large and ripening, and laborers are few. I feel pressed to go and proclaim the plain, common sense teaching of the Bible, that the poor, and the new settlers may hear the truth and receive the same. While I was stopping in Illinois I went to a place, gave them the word of life, then I told them I had tracts on the same subject, and all that wanted, could come and get them; they went off well. The next time, I offered some for them to buy; not one that took any before came to get any this time. But I hope they will be benefitted by them, if I do have to pay for them. If a man can make money selling the truth, he can do better than I can. Many that won't buy, I want to have the truth, if I have to give it to them, and, perchance, reap my profits in the kingdom. I hope soon to see the time when tracts will be thrown out broadcast, free to all.

Now, this country, while new, ought to have the light of gospel truth, and I have come here with the determination to start to the rack, fodder or no fodder. It will take me some time to get settled, but I hope I shall have the prayers of my brethren while in the West, that the word of the Lord may have an effect. I think we have but a short time to stay here; yea, I strongly believe the Lord is soon to come. Oh, with what watchfulness and prayer we should live, trusting in the Lord. The Lord is the same as of old, and has promised us the gift of the Holy Spirit. Has the Lord's hands shortened? No, never, What he has promised he will fulfill.—"But," says one, "we can't have faith." How do you get faith? We read faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God; then, take God at His word; believe what he has said, and abide in the [illegible], then ask and ye shall receive. One thing I am satisfied about, and that is, that it needs no stronger faith to pray for the sick, and to have the gifts that are necessary for the present condition of the Church, and for the glory of God, than it is to live with faith strong enough to be changed "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," when the Lord comes; and one thing is certain in both cases, our works must correspond with our faith, or we shall fail, and be weighed in the balance, and found wanting.

I must close by saying I hope I shall have the prayers of all God's children.

Any brother in Northern Iowa, wishing tracts or books published by Bro. Hastings, can get them of me at cost, as I deal in them for good, not to make money. All letters should be directed to Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

Your brother in tribulation, waiting for the kingdom at the end of the days.

Peter S. W. Deyo.

Strawberry Pt., Iowa, Aug. 7, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. S. P. Green.

Brn., Srs., and Friends:—How are you getting along? Is the way rough and dreary? Do the winds howl, and the storms rage? Well, then, let us cling closer to the Great Shepherd, he will take care of us, if we follow him "whithersoever he goeth;" "he will lead us by still waters." Let us not go out far from home these dangerous and trying times, for the Prince of the power of darkness has stationed all along the way those that are enemies to the cross of Christ; and their work they well understand. It is to draw all, or any, that may be traveling toward "Canaan," into their ranks. The adversary, and his clan accompanying some of them, are like "ravening wolves in sheep's clothing," at first they appear harmless and docile, and unless we are on the look-out they will charm us, or flatter us that they are our friends, and that they are going right on our way, and tell us to wait a little while and they will bear us company. We, perhaps, feeling weary and discouraged, stop, and begin to commune with ourselves in the following manner:—What harm can there be in just forming acquaintances, and I am poor, and, behold, what inducements they hold out to us. If we turn aside from the narrow way, and our time is taken up in foolish, trifling conversation with men and women, then our light begins to fade, and soon we begin to see that we are in danger, and wish we were in the right way again—in the road that leads to eternal life. Our pretended friends have already forsaken and stripped us, torn us, and inflicted wounds incurable, and unless we go immediately to the Great Physician, and tell him we have not been following his prescriptions, prostrate ourselves before him, confess heartily and sincerely, and forsake all our evil ways, we shall certainly be caught in "the snare" with the worldling. We must go to him child-like, penitent and submissive, and not try to deceive God.

The more we reform, the more we see and feel our dependence on Him who is so kind and good. God will come unto us, help us, give us the riches of his grace for the time of need. Let us praise Him more and more, let us do good unto our fellow mortals, especially unto those that "are of the household of faith." We ought to "weep with those that weep, and rejoice with those that do rejoice,"—"be of the same mind, one toward another."

Be humble, be courteous, be pitiful and kind; ever ready to lend a helping hand to any of the household, and to all men.

O, let us "strive to enter in at the straight gate, for many shall seek to enter in, and shall not be able."

And let us beware of "mockers," for they mimic religion, under the mantle of great sanctity and sincerity, and make themselfes judges, rushing where "angels dare not tread;" and wo to the person who is so unfortunate as to keep any company with them. We are not to take the trouble to say "this one is right, and that one is wrong;" no, we should search our own hearts, and watch over our own selves, and leave judging with the Lord, the Righteous Judge. He will judge the quick and the dead. There is no getting rid of the fact that all of his creatures, from the creation until the seventh trumpet, must stand before the Judge Supreme. O, to what a day are we fast approaching. Yes, the judgment is very near, and how many are ready to meet it? The next question is, Am I prepared to see the Lord in peace? Oh, my soul! how heedless the majority of God's creatures are, rushing on in the down-

of this image-beast. This recognition is by receiving "a mark" in their foreheads or in their hands. All others are to be put to death. Palestine was within the scope of prophetic vision, so that that land must be included. Here, then, will be an opportunity for two witnesses to testify who cannot be killed.

That these scenes are yet in the future is evident to my mind, from the fact that we have nothing in the past answering to the work of this two-horned beast, and the image-beast.

Secondly, to have their "mark" is fatal. God never has placed the life of any man on doing a particular act, without giving him the means of knowing what that act was. The most honest christian in the world, cannot now be satisfied and positive what that "mark" is: though many have guessed. There is a work to be done in the present or future, in which a Power is to exist, that shall direct the Roman power—and also create another system equal to it for a time, and yet control it. Also during this time there is to be a persecution, which for severity has not been surpassed nor even equaled. It will be very bloody, but short, and terminate in the establishment of the everlasting kingdom.

Should it be deemed important to bring out the prominent features of this prophecy hereafter, we shall do so if the Lord will, and consider several chapters in their connection. We now refer to the 17th chapter only to identify the power that persecutes at Jerusalem and elsewhere. In the fore part, we have a power that sustains the harlot, and this power, vs. 8 ascends out of the bottomless pit and goes into perdition. He is the eighth and of the seven. The French power is probably indicated, with the Napoleon dynasty at its head. The alliance of Louis Napoleon, with the King of the Sardinian states, who is at variance with the Pope, shows the strength of his attachment to the Roman church, when his interest shall require him to serve it. And his having already seized upon the holy places in Palestine, and having planted the red flag of the French there, shows his intention as to authority there. Another fact. It shows that if he is to be an acting power in these scenes, the time is at hand.

From the whole, we may learn several things.

1. The Power that kills the witnesses, is the Power that ascends out of the abyss. 11 : 7.

2. The Power that ascends out of the abyss, is the Power that sustains the Papal power just previous to the judgment.—17 : 3,8.

3. The Power that kills the witnesses, is the power that authorized and supported the persecution.

4. The Power that authorized the persecution, is the two-horned beast power.—Therefore,

5. The two-horned beast power, the scarlet-colored beast power, and the power that causes the persecution and kills the witnesses, are one and the same. And the probability is, that it is the French power, with the Napoleon dynasty at its head.

Our answer to our first enquiry is, then, that the scenes of persecution, testifying and killing the witnesses etc., will occur when the two-horned beast shall have succeeded to sufficient authority to make it safe for him to develop his dragon nature, create the image to the beast, and give it power to persecute.

The second enquiry remains to be answered. Who are the witnesses?

They are said to be "the two olive trees." In Zech. 4 : 14, the angel says the two olive trees spoken of then, mean the two sons of Oil, or anointed ones. They are called "the two candle-sticks, standing before the god of the earth."

They are called the Lord's witnesses—Our Lord was speaking. They must be persons that can testify to facts concerning our Lord. If they are to testify to the sufferings, death, resurrection, ascension, glory, and right of our Savior to reign; they must be persons that have seen and do know these things.

They are called prophets. Let us enquire what prophets, if any, have witnessed these scenes.

Moses and Elijah were, perhaps, the greatest prophets in Israel. Two in whom the people would have as much confidence, could they appear again, as any others.—They would probably do the most good. Moses died, and Elijah was taken up alive by the power of God. But Moses was brought to life again, and the devil had a contention with Michael about his body.—Perhaps because he was brought again to life. And Moses and Elias did appear in the Mount and conversed with the Lord. True, it is called a "vision;" but a vision is a sight. It may be a reality seen, or only a representation. Either would be a vision. See Luke 24 : 23.

Matthew says, 17 : 3, "And behold there appeared unto them, Moses and Elias talking with him." Mark says, 9 : 4, "And there appeared unto them Elias with Moses: and they were talking with Jesus."—Luke says 9 : 30, "And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias; who appeared in glory and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem."

Now I do not know that the Scriptures can be more definite in teaching us that Moses and Elias, two of the greatest prophets of Israel, were there alive and conversant with those things that Christ was to do and suffer.

Who can say that the "two men" Luke mentions, or the "two angels" that John speaks of as at the sepulchre of our Lord on the morning of his resurrection, were not those same prophets who appeared in glory and talked with Jesus in the Mount about these very scenes?

Also when he ascended to his seat in the heavens, after he had disappeared from the sight of the disciples, "two men stood by them, in white apparel," and preached to them the Second Advent. Now who were these men, but the very ones God was preparing to be witnesses of his Son at the terrible time in the future, of which we have been reading?

In Malachi, the Lord promised to send Elijah the Prophet, to the people of Israel, before that great and terrible day of the Lord should come. The Lord allowed the Jews to consider John as the Elijah, if they were determined to have it in their day—but he defines the sense in which this was fulfilled in John, that he came in "the spirit and power of Elijah." John was the type, Elijah himself, we believe, is to appear in the future.

We are now prepared to look for the literal fulfillments of the interesting prophecy of the 11th of Rev.

Moses and Elijah will appear at this time of persecution. Moses made alive,—as Lazarus, the widow's son, and others were,—not immortal, for then Christ would not have been the "first fruits of them that slept, etc.

They shut heaven and prevent rain for three and a half years, as Elijah did.—They turn waters to blood as Moses did, and smite the earth with other plagues. All that undertake to arrest them or hurt them are killed by the fire proceeding out of their mouths.

These facts are published the world over, and all people wonder at these events. At the close of three and a half years, the beast-power that ascended out of the abyss, makes a special war against them and kills them. The fact of their death is heralded by every means, in every direction. Multitudes in the immediate vicinity flock to see them. They do not allow them to be buried. Their bodies remain in the streets where they were killed. But after three days and a half, and while the people are still thronging and crowding to see them, the spirit of life from God enters into them, and they stand upon their feet. This causes a general and great consternation. Fear takes hold of every beholder. A voice speaks to them from heaven, calling them up. They ascend.—Their enemies behold them. A cloud receives them out of their sight. The news has scarce time to be sent through the city, ere an earthquake occurs. The tenth part of the city falls; seven thousand men are slain by it. Others, affrighted, give glory to God: acknowledge his power, and that these were his prophets. Then the Lord descends with all his saints, who had been previously raised and taken up to meet him in the air. The terrible scenes of the commencement of the judgment, occur; the throne is established; and the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ.

Reader, may you and the writer, have part with the Lord in that blessed kingdom.

L. P. Judson.

Victor, July 27, 1856.

Similes.

As snow is of itself cold, yet warms and refreshes the earth, so afflictions, though in themselves grievous, keep the soul of the Christian warm and make it fruitful.

The casting down of our spirits in true humility is but like throwing a ball on the ground, which makes it rebound the higher towards heaven.

As worldly joy ends in sorrow, so godly sorrow ends in joy.

As it sometimes rains when the sun shines, so there may be joy in a saint's heart when there are tears in his eyes.

Confession of sin should come like water from a spring that runs freely, and not like water from a still, that is forced by the fire of affliction.

As the way to stop bleeding is by opening a vein, so the way to stop unreasonable sorrow is to turn it against sin.

Sin is like a bee, with honey in its mouth, but a sting in its tail.

Many a man shifts his sins as men do their clothes; they put off one to put on another. This is but waiting upon the devil in a new livery.

The sins of a good man are like weeds in a garden, which may hinder the growth of fruits and flowers, but (not permitted to get ahead) cannot kill them.

The pleasure of sin is like a draught of sweet poison.

As Noah's dove could find no rest for the sole of her foot, so the spirit of God can find no residence in the heart that is deluged in sin.

Our conscience is a fire within us, our sins are the fuel; therefore, instead of warming, it will scorch us, unless the heat be removed, or the heat of it be allayed by penitential tears.

The World's Crisis.

BOTON, SEPTEMBER 17, 1856.

Question

No. 2.

"So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." Gen 1 : 27.

Ques.—"Was man made so like God as to consist of three distinct substances?

Ans.—We have found nothing in the Bible to show that God consists of three distinct SUBSTANCES, and until this can be shown to be the fact, it follows that the image or likeness in man to his Creator does not consist in any such resemblance.

Question No. 3.

"And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." 1 Thess 5 : 23.

Ques.—"Does it require spirit and soul and body to constitute a man?"

Ans.—We answer yes, if we take the Bible meaning of the words.

The word here rendered "spirit" is pneuma, and is used in the New Testament 386 times, and the corresponding Hebrew word (ruakh) is found in the O. T. 403 times, and they are defined to mean,—spirit, wind, air, breath; also, temper, disposition, affection, feelings, inclinations, qualities of mind; and applied to both man and beast.

The word translated soul, in the text, psukee and is found 105 times in the N T., and is rendered life and lives 40 times.

Nephesh, the corresponding Hebrew word is found in the O. T. 828 times; and these words are applied indiscriminately to man and beast.

When Paul prays that our "whole spirit, and soul, and body be preserved blameless," we understand him to mean, that he would have our "temper," "disposition;" "affections," "feelings," "inclinations,"—in short, our whole being consecrated to the Lord.

Question No. 4.

"For the word of God is quick and powerful, and shaper than any two edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunsunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." Heb. 4 : 12.

Ques.—"Can the soul and spirit be divided? and can one know what the other does not, before the separation from the body?"

Ans.—In reply to the first part of this question, we would say—yes.

By soul, we mean the whole being, his life or mind.

By spirit we mean "the breath of life." "As the body without the spirit (pneuma or breath,—margin,) is dead, so faith without works is dead also." Jas. 2 : 26.

In Gen. 2, 7, we read—"The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."

David says in Ps. 104 : 29, "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled, thou takest away their breath, (ruakh) they die, and return to their dust."

The word here rendered breath is the same in the original as the one found in Eccl. 12 : 7, which reads—"Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit (ruakh) return to God who gave it."

We found in the account of creation, that the "breath of life," breathed into man's nostrils, caused him to become a living soul, and we find also, that when this breath, or spirit is taken away, MAN DIES.

Now, in answer to the second part of the question, we answer, no. We do not understand that the spirit or breath of life is an intelligent principle, and consequently it does not know anything either before or after its separation from the body, or the man; for we read in Ps. 146 : 4,—"His breath (ruakh) goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish," hence as Solomon says in Eccl. 9 : 5, "the living know that they shall die, but the dead know not ANY thing."

For the Crisis.

Satan—his Relation to Rome and the World.

This being altogether a question of Revelation, we must draw our proof from the Bible. No impression or imagination can avail to justify any opposing conclusion.—To the Scriptures alone we appeal.

1. Rome, (Pagan Rome,) is symbolized by the 4th beast. Dan. 7. It is Rome that is represented by one and the same "beast" till "the Judgment"—a period of near 2000 years. This is Divine testimony. Now to teach that the symbol of Rome, in its changes, is Satan bound 1000 years of this time is, as I see, to oppose "the Word of God." No mere change of opinion, or of form, or of name in Rome, can convert this raging beast into the "old serpent bound." It cannot rage and prevail and yet be "bound 1000 years" of the same time, doing and seeming to do nothing. No, not at all.

2. The Wisdom of God reveals a "Devil—Satan." Mat. 4; John 8 : 44; 14 : 30; 16 : 11. Luke 4 : 2 Eph. 2 : 2. Heb. 2 : 14. Not to accept this, is, of course, to act on our own wisdom in opposition to the Divine.

3. The difficulties involved are no greater than those involved in the most vital truths, to those who have rejected them, and are, of course, unaided and unenlightened by them. The difficulties involved as to the being of a God are absolute and overwhelming to some sceptics.

4. God being made known in Scripture, there are many things absribed to HIM, in which His servants apparently and (as men speak) ONLY the actors. Ps. 105 : 107. Mat 10 : 30. Rom. 11 : 36. John 3 : 20—21. This, I trust is plain to all who believe the Bible.

5. We read of "the Devil, Satan, the God of this world, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience, that goeth about seeking whom he may devour." Now, as the works of good men are wrought in (or by) God, so the wicked act by Satan's working. Eph. 22. "Thus saith the Lord."

6. The infidel will not believe that GOD DOES do the things that are ascribed to Him in Scriptures. He allows no agent save the one apparent to the eye of sense. This carried out, denies the Bible, as to both God and Devil, so far as I can see.

Some professed Christians adopt this sceptical principle only in its application to the "wicked one." Rev. 2 : 12—20, and 1st John 5 : 18—19. They believe in "the children of God," but not in the "children of the Devil." 1st John 3 : 10,—or not so fully. Yet, the wisdom of God teaches both. Man's wisdom is as valid against both as it is against one.

7. Let us illustrate. We find in Gen 3 : 1—14, only "the serpent," as the tempter; but in John 8 : 44—45, "the Devil" is seen to have been there; nay, the Devil was the liar, "Satan," that "tempted Eve." Yet, some take only one of these texts, and say in their unbelief that "the tempter" was "only a snake!"

Thus, some seem to overlook the Apostle John's fullest testimony as to the existence of "the Devil, Wicked One, God of this world, and Prince of this world."

They apply Rev. 2:10 : 12 : 1—17; 20: 2—10, (which belong to the same period,) only to Rome Pagan. Such say that Pagan Rome cast some into prison. Rev. 2 : 10. But God's angel, through the Apostle, ascribes it to "THE DEVIL." So I believe, and thus I escape the charge of adding to this crowning book of Revelation. To "add to," is to incur the plagues written therein. Rev. 22 : 17—18.

By the light of Holy Scriptures we see that "the whole world lieth in the wicked one." (John 5 : 18, reads "wicked one," and verse 19 has the same word precisely.) Then, this Apostle teaches us that "the whole world, (Roman world, of course, Luke 2 : 1. Acts 11 : 28,) lieth (and now hath lain 1800 years) IN THE WICKED ONE."

Those who believe in "the beloved disciple's" inspiration, must see that he taught the whole Church to believe in "Satan, the Old Serpent, (over, and before, and all through Rome, who is) the Dragon, and Devil." The fact is plain.

Our Lord says of the Church, "THERE AM I," yet to unbelief there is no one there, but "the Church;" so, while some see Pagan Rome in Rev. 2 : 10; 12 : 1—17; 20 : 1—10, I see by the foregoing and all-comprehending light of other scriptures, that Pagan Rome did "lie in the wicked one," as a child enfolded in a giant's arms. Rome was his human organization; his "seat" and throne of earthly dominion.—Then, as Christ's name and presence is called over, (or in, or on,) the assembly of his people, Mat. 18 : 20; 28 : 20, so the names of Satan are called over or on, Rome. But as Christ is more than the outward "Church:" so Satan is more than Rome.

John was never understood to say, "the children of God," in contrast with "the children of Rome," (instead of the Devil.) 1st John 3 : 10. He did not say, "the whole world lieth in Pagan Rome." No, indeed. A man might have avoided Roman interference, and yet been exposed to "the wiles of the Devil." Resisting Rome was not—is not—exactly "resisting the Devil." Surely, Christ is no more truly present in his Church, according to promise, than Satan has been all through, and is, in Rome.

When the then hindering form of Roman evil was so "taken out of the way," that Satan was transformed (as if) into an angel of light, (as Christ's vicegerent,) with a more prodigious development of all the characteristics of "the Devil," in the full grown masterpiece of all that formed "the mystery of iniquity," surely he was not "bound."

That notion was invented by the Papists, ("the children of the Devil," 1st John 3 : 10; John 8,) to cover up the enormity of Romanism and mislead mankind: for this was the very time that "Satan was wroth, and made war with the remnant of (the woman's) seed who had the commandments of God and the testimony of Jesus Christ."

Alas for the world, if the Bible view of the binding of Satan turns out to be only a more dreadful display of his Satanic subtlety and wrath.

May the Lord have mercy on us, poor, miserable sinners. Amen.

J. B. Cook.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. P. S. W. Deyo.

Bro. Grant:—As I have moved to Iowa, I thought it would be well to write you a few lines. In the language of another, "I did not come here to get rich, or to find paradise," for that I do not expect until Jesus comes. The field is large and ripening, and laborers are few. I feel pressed to go and proclaim the plain, common sense teaching of the Bible, that the poor, and the new settlers may hear the truth and receive the same. While I was stopping in Illinois I went to a place, gave them the word of life, then I told them I had tracts on the same subject, and all that wanted, could come and get them; they went off well. The next time, I offered some for them to buy; not one that took any before came to get any this time. But I hope they will be benefitted by them, if I do have to pay for them. If a man can make money selling the truth, he can do better than I can. Many that won't buy, I want to have the truth, if I have to give it to them, and, perchance, reap my profits in the kingdom. I hope soon to see the time when tracts will be thrown out broadcast, free to all.

Now, this country, while new, ought to have the light of gospel truth, and I have come here with the determination to start to the rack, fodder or no fodder. It will take me some time to get settled, but I hope I shall have the prayers of my brethren while in the West, that the word of the Lord may have an effect. I think we have but a short time to stay here; yea, I strongly believe the Lord is soon to come. Oh, with what watchfulness and prayer we should live, trusting in the Lord. The Lord is the same as of old, and has promised us the gift of the Holy Spirit. Has the Lord's hands shortened? No, never. What he has promised he will fulfill.—"But," says one, "we can't have faith." How do you get faith? We read faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God; then, take God at His word; believe what he has said, and abide in the same, then ask and ye shall receive. One thing I am satisfied about, and that is, that it needs no stronger faith to pray for the sick, and to have the gifts that are necessary for the present condition of the Church, and for the glory of God, than it is to live with faith strong enough to be changed "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye," when the Lord comes; and one thing is certain in both cases, our works must correspond with our faith, or we shall fail, and be weighed in the balance, and found wanting.

I must close by saying I hope I shall have the prayers of all God's children.

Any brother in Northern Iowa, wishing tracts or books published by Bro. Hastings, can get them of me at cost, as I deal in them for good, not to make money. All letters should be directed to Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

Your brother in tribulation, waiting for the kingdom at the end of the days.

Peter S. W. Deyo.

Strawberry Pt., Iowa, Aug. 7, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. S. P. Green.

Brn., Srs., and Friends:—How are you getting along? Is the way rough and dreary? Do the winds howl, and the storms rage? Well, then, let us cling closer to the Great Shepherd, he will take care of us, if we follow him "whithersoever he goeth;" "he will lead us by still waters." Let us not go out far from home these dangerous and trying times, for the Prince of the power of darkness has stationed all along the way those that are enemies to the cross of Christ; and their work they well understand. It is to draw all, or any, that may be traveling toward "Canaan," into their ranks. The adversary, and his clan accompanying some of them, are like "ravening wolves in sheep's clothing," at first they appear harmless and docile, and unless we are on the lookout they will charm us, or flatter us that they are our friends, and that they are going right on our way, and tell us to wait a little while and they will bear us company. We, perhaps, feeling weary and discouraged, stop, and begin to commune with ourselves in the following manner:—What harm can there be in just forming acquaintances, and I am poor, and, behold, what inducements they hold out to us. If we turn aside from the narrow way, and our time is taken up in foolish, trifling conversation with men and women, then our light begins to fade, and soon we begin to see that we are in danger, and wish we were in the right way again—in the road that leads to eternal life. Our pretended friends have already forsaken and stripped us, torn us, and inflicted wounds incurable, and unless we go immediately to the GREAT PHYSICIAN, and tell him we have not been following his prescriptions, prostrate ourselves before him, confess heartily and sincerely, and forsake all our evil ways, we shall certainly be caught in "the snare" with the worldling. We must go to him child-like, penitent and submissive, and not try to deceive God.

The more we reform, the more we see and feel our dependence on Him who is so kind and good. God will come unto us, help us, give us the riches of his grace for the time of need. Let us praise Him more and more, let us do good unto our fellow mortals, especially unto those that "are of the household of faith." We ought to "weep with those that weep, and rejoice with those that do rejoice,"—"be of the same mind, one toward another."

Be humble, be courteous, be pitiful and kind; ever ready to lend a helping hand to any of the household, and to all men.

O, let us "strive to enter in at the straight gate, for many shall seek to enter in, and shall not be able."

And let us beware of "mockers," for they mimic religion, under the mantle of great sanctity and sincerity, and make themselfes judges, rushing where "angels dare not tread;" and wo to the person who is so unfortunate as to keep any company with them. We are not to take the trouble to say "this one is right, and that one is wrong;" no, we should search our own hearts, and watch over our own selves, and leave judging with the Lord, the Righteous Judge. He will judge the quick and the dead. There is no getting rid of the fact that all of his creatures, from the creation until the seventh trumpet, must stand before the Judge Supreme. O, to what a day are we fast approaching. Yes, the judgment is very near, and how many are ready to meet it? The next question is, Am I prepared to see the Lord in peace? Oh, my soul! how heedless the majority of God's creatures are, rushing on in the downward road to endless ruin.

Dear brethren and sisters, what do you think? are we not living in the time when we are to "stand still and see the salvation of God?" I am inclined to believe we are; if the journeying of the children of Isreal from Egypt through the wilderness to the promised land, may be considered a figure of the Church in this, the last age of the world. When they came to the Red Sea, they probably were in commotion, and some of them knew not what to do; but Moses commanded them to "stand still," the Lord would "deliver them," &c. They obeyed their leader, and went through on dry land, though their enemies pursued them, expecting every moment their downfall, yet they were preserved and led by an Almighty and Powerful Arm. They were faithful, strong and obedient.

Brothers and sisters, pray for me—a poor lone wanderer in this vale of tears. I certainly have sympathy for any in like circumstances, and for any who are traveling in grief or woe, persecuted and accused,—how falsely,—for Christ's sakh. We must "work while the day lasts," for when the "night cometh," no man can work.

Plymouth, Vt., June 8, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from G. F. Clough.

Bro. Grant:—I feel that I am a seeker of truth; the truth is what will save us in the world to come. Error will not save any one, but we must comply with the requirements of the Lord. Hence, it is important that we should understand what the Lord does require of us, and we can know what his will is, for his commandments have been written plainly and left on record so as to be understood. Bless the Lord for it. Christ, when conversing with his disciples at a certain time, said to them, "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name; he shall teach you all things and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." So, it is very plain, if we have the Spirit of God, it will lead us into the understanding of his word. There will be union among his people, they will have fellowship one with another; they will be of one heart and one mind, as his people have been when they have kept all of the commandments. It is then, when the church has strength that they are the true believers; then, the signs will follow them, as Christ said they should. But, when we look at the Church at present we see that it is not where the Bible declares it will be, when Christ comes. But I believe with my whole soul that God is leading out a people upon his Word; and when the Lord does come he will have a perfect Church, "without spot or wrinkle or any such thing" Not that I am saying "My Lord delayeth his coming," for I believe that the end is "nigh, even at the doors." But when we see plainly a work that must be performed by the Church, according to the Bible, we must first look for the movement of the Church, and when the last items are being fulfilled, then look for the consummation of our hope—even Christ's coming to redeem his waiting ones, giving immortality and redemption from this sorrowful world. But, says one, you are looking for too much? Let us see if we are looking for what the Bible does not teach? In Paul's letter to the Corinthian brethren, he says, "I thank my God always on your behalf, for the grace of God, which is given you by Jesus Christ; that in everything ye are enriched by him, in all utterance, and in all knowledge; even as the testimony of Christ was confirmed in you, so that ye come behind in no gift; waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall also confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ." We all know how the Church was confirmed in the commencement of this dispensation: how that signs and wonders were done by the Church, and Paul has plainly showed that the living Church on the earth when Christ comes will be confirmed in like manner, will have all of the gifts, &c. And Paul has showed why it is to be confirmed in like manner; it is, that the Church "may be blameless in the day of the Lord." So we find that there is a work for the Church to do; we have got something to do to be saved. It is not the hearer that is justified, but the doer. Christ says, "He that heareth my sayings and doeth them, I will liken him to a wise man." May the Lord direct us into all truth, save us from error, help us to be faithful unto the end, and the promise is, we shall be saved in the glorious land of promise.

G. F. Clough.

Upper Gilmanton, N. H.

[illegible] How it looks to see a boy or girl, or any one sit idly, while others are kneeling reverently before the Lord, around the family altar. God says, "every knee shall bow." Parents, how do you train your little ones? For God?—Golden Rule.

Don't borrow unless you are obliged to. It is, generally speaking, vexing to the lender, and, in the end, unprofitable to the borrower. The time usually spent in borrowing would earn enough to buy the articles.—Golden Rule.

Children often, we fear, grow up reprobates, prayerless, Godless, reckless, merely for want of union between husband and wife on the subject of parental discipline!—Golden Rule.

Calumny is like the brands flying from a large fire which will quickly go out if you do not blow them.—Golden Rule.

On the Spot.—Punctual as a clock—the very minute the time comes he is there—no tardiness at all. Noble! Is a minister punctual, strictly, invariably? his influence will be felt. The audience will follow on—"Like priest like people"—Let a minister be slack—all are slack.—Golden Rule.

The French doctors have discovered recently, by various experiments instituted by them, that ice is safer and better to use in surgical operations than chloroform. By the application of pounded ice and common salt to the diseased part, thus causing numbness and insensibility, a surgeon lately succeeded in removing a tumor of considerable size, without any pain, and occasioning very little loss of blood. If ice can thus be successfully substituted in the place of chloroform, in surgical operations, it will be of great value in saving patients from the risks involved in the use of chloroform.

Domestic Summary.

Railroal Accident.—An accident occurred on the Boston and Maine Railroad, near Swetser's crossing, about two miles beyond Reading, on Tuesday, the 11th inst., in which two men, laborers upon the road, were instantly killed, and eight or ten more or less injured, two probably fatally. The accident was caused by the breaking of an axle of the locomotive attached to the half-past six o'clock passenger train from Lawrence. The baggage car, in which were fifteen or twenty laborers on the road, was thrown from the track, capsized and entirely demolished. The first passenger car was thrown completely across both tracks and the forward trucks of the second car were broken, and the car itself more or less damaged.

Another.—As the first outward freight train on the Boston and Worcester Railroad was near West Needham this morning, Wm. W. Grant, a brakeman, who was on the top of one of the cars, struck a bridge, and was thrown on to the ground. His right leg was broken in two places, both bones below the knee being fractured.

Intelligence from Kansas.

New York, Set. 8,—The Glasgow (Missouri) Times, of Sept 2d, gives some additional particulars of the Ossawattamie battle. It says;—We have just received per steamer Wm. Campbell, an extra from the Western Despatch office, dated "Independence, Sunday evening," containing important news from Kansas. The letters below were brought in by Mr Shepherd of Independence, a reliable man. He also reports a battle had been fought in the direction of Fort Scott, in which 13 Southern men were killed. No particulars,

Capt, Reid writes:—I moved with 225 men on the Abolition fort and town of Ossawattamie, the head quarters of Brown, on night before last; marched 40 miles and assaulted the town without dismounting the men, about sunrise on yesterday.

We had a brisk fight for an hour or more, and had five men wounded, one dangerously. Capt. Boyce, Wm. Gorden, and three others. We kiled about thirty of them; among the number, certain, a son of old Brown, and about certain, old Brown himself; destroyed all their ammunition and provision, and the boys would burn the town to the ground. I could not help it.

Mr. James Chils writes:—Gen. Reid, with 250 men, had a fight at Ossawattamie yesterday. We had four men wounded. Capt. Boyce of Lexington had his wrist broken; Frank Gordon, of Clay, was shot in the shoulders; young Jackson, of Howard, was shot in the mouth, badly hurt, Gen. Gordon, of Layfayette, was shot in the thigh; young Parker, of Lafayette, was shot in the leg. The abolitionists made the attack. We killed twenty and burnt the town.

St. Louis, Sept. 9.—Advices from Kansas of 4th, say that Lane, with 150 men, attacked Tecumseh 4th inst. No particulars.

Judge Lecompte had issued orders to the United States Marshal to arrest Lane, and other citizens.

Gen. Smith had commanded Col. Cooke, commanding 14 companies of troops at Fort Riley, to give all necessary assistance in the execution of the writs.

Gov. Geary arrived at Glasgow on Tuesday, where he met Gov. Shannon on his way down.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—One hundred Free State refugees arrived at St. Louis yesterday, entirely destitute. They say that a large number of families had taken refuge at Fort Leavenworth.

It was reported that a large number of Free State women and children were killed at Sturgis Creek on Wednesday, 3d inst.

Chicago, Sept. 12.—Private advices from Kansas City announce that Lane was about to attack Westport, Kansas City, and Independence—also, that the Free State men had surrounded Richardson's forces, north of Lawrence, and cut off his retreat.

Governor Geary had arrived at Leavenworth, had a consultation with Gen. Smith, and would proceed to Lawrence in a few days.

13th.—The St. Louis Democrat of yesterday announces that Gen. Richardson was taken prisoner by the Free State men, north of Lawrence carried before Lane, who restored his arms and sent him back under escort. Great consternation is exhibited at Leavenworth, in consequence of the rumored attack by Lane. Gen. Smith had sent four companies to protect the town. Lane, meanwhile, was still at Lawrence, with no intention of leaving his position.

From California.

New York, Sept. 14.—The mail steamer Geo. Law, from Aspinwall on the evening of 3d inst., arrived at this port at 3 o'clock this afternoon. She connected with the steamer John L. Stephens, which sailed from San Francisco on the afternoon of Aug. 20, with nearly $2,000,000 in treasure, and upwards 500 passengers for Panama.

The Vigilance Committee at San Francisco have signalized themselves, since our previous advices, by the unconditional release of Judge Terry, on the 7th of August, and by a grand parade and review of their whole forces on the 18th.

Although no official notice of the fact was given, yet it appears to have been understood that the functions of the Committee ceased, at least or the present, with the parade of their forces, which numbered between four and five thousand troops.

The newspapers are much occupied with the discussion of political matters.

Rather more than the average number of murders, robberies, and assaults of a less grave character, have taken place during the past fortnight. One of the most desperate cases occurred on the 12th ult., when a party of six highwaymen attacked in open day the Cantonville stage coach, on its way to Marysville. There was about $100,000 in treasure on the stage at the time, and the coach was full of passengers, who gallantly defended themselves and their property. Some 40 shots were interchanged, and the coach was riddled with balls. One passenger, a woman, was shot through the brain, and several others seriously wounded. The robbers were compelled to retreat without the coveted booty.

Judge Terry, after his release at San Francisco, went on board the U. S. sloop-of-war John Adams, for protection, and on the following Saturday proceeded to Sacramento, where his friends and the "law and order" party received him publicly, and congratulated him on his safe delivery from the hands of the Vigilance Committee at San Francisco.

The San Francisco Herald says the Vigilance Committee have not disbanded, and that they would assemble again at the tap of the bell.

The reported fact that the several companies are to retain their arms and keep up their organization, would seem to justify the belief that should any new occasion arise the committee will again show their power.

The Great Comet of 1856.—If the accounts from Limerick are to be credited, the marvellous Comet of 1856, after an absence of just three centuries, has made its predicted reappearance in the south of Ireland. The Observer of Saturday, Aug 2, says:

"A gentleman has just informed us that he saw last night, for the third time, what appears from his description to be the long expected comet of 1856, the reappearance of which this year has been so long foretold. On last Wednesday night, about half past 10 o'clock, his attention was attracted by what appeared to be a fire rising on the top of Keeper mountain, due east of his position. He remarked the object to a gentleman who was with him, but, as the fire rose and cleared the top of the mountain, his friend suggested that it must be a lantern suspended to a kite. It had then the appearance of a globe of fire as large as a good sized orange, with a broad tail of light extending about 18 inches from the body. The two gentlemen watched it for an hour. On Thursday night they saw it again. It rose a few moments later, presenting the same appearances, and was high in the heavens at 11 1-2 o'clock, when they went home. At that hour one of the gentlemen pointed it out to his sister. Last night, the same persons saw it rise about 20 minutes before 11 o'clock, and then it first occurred to one of them (our informant,) that it might be a comet. He ceased to watch it about midnight, but the watchman observed it up to half past 1 o'clock this morning.

Foreign News.

Arrival of the Steamer Cambria.

Halifax, Sept. 12.—The Royal mail steamship Cambria, Capt. Douglas, from Liverpool about 10 A. M., on Saturday, 30th ult., arrived at this port early this afternoon, and sailed again for Boston at 4 P. M., weather clear, wind southwest.

The Cambria has 76 passengers for Boston.

Great Britain.—Tory organs state that the conservative party is likely to arrange its international differences with a view to a grand attempt to overthrow the Palmerston administration.

The Queen and Princess of Oude remain at Southampton, unrecognized by the Queen of England.

The British Royal family have gone to Scotland for the season.

France.—Political news is dull as ever. The Debats says wherever political activity may exist in Europe at present, certainly none exists in France.

The Emperor will make a rather long stay at Barrits.

Auditors of Council of State are to come periodically to Bierritz as they lately did to Plombiers, to bring the Portfolio of current affairs, and submit them to his signature.

Another prosecution of members of a secret society is going on at Dijon.

An anonymous but circumstantial contradiction has been published of Louis Blanc's statements as to the cruelties inflicted on French political prisoners at Cayenne.

The Berlin Arents Zeitung is authorized to contradict all recent statements as to the proposed Orleans manifesto, &c.

Shocks of earthquake were felt throughout Algeria on the 31st. They were slight at Algiers, strong at Constantina and Bona, and violent at Phillippville, where twenty-two successive shocks occurred, and several villages were destroyed, but there was little loss of life.

Spain.—Papers now say that the difficulty between Spain and Mexico is definitely arranged, and the Spanish Envoy to Mexico has taken leave of that Republic, after having settled the basis for an amicable termination of every difficulty.

Another account, dated Madrid, announced thus:

"The Minister to Mexico has been removed from his post."

Madrid journals of the 23d say that the official Gazette is about to publish decrees for the dissolution of the Cortez, regulation of the press, and the establishment of a Council of State, promulgating the Constitution of 1845.

The Clamar Publico and Parliamento state that the condition to which the press is reduced prevents them from making any comment on the decree of the dissolution of the National Guard.

The Diaro expresses approbation of the measure.

The Gazette contains decrees dismissing sixteen civil Governors of civil provinces, and appointing successors elected half from the progressist and half from the moderado parties.

Bravo Mirrillo, Gozales Rowers, and Beltram De Lis, ex-Ministers, are about to return to Spain.

At Barcelona, 187 persons, condemned by court martial, had been embarked to Cuba and other colonies.

The Captain General of Catalonia had decreed dissolution of workmen and masters in the province.

A Madrid letter, from a ministerial source, says.—"The Ministers continue to be pepfectly united amongst themselves, and the Queen places every confidence in them."

The marriage contract between Infanta Amelia and Prince Adalbert of Bavaria, has been signed at the palace.

Prussia.—Grand manœuvres of Prussian troops are going on at St. Goor, on the Rhine. The reported erection of a line of fortresses around Berlin is confirmed, The plan is not a connected chain of forts like Paris, but detached redoubts to cover each other's fire.

We have nothing definite as to the reported expedition against the Kiff pirates, but the English government papers have become suddenly anxious that the matter should be left to settlement by the Emperor of Morocco.

Italy.—Austrian official journals repeat their denial of any increase to the Austrian forces in Italy, but admit that the corps d'Armee therein is already complete to war strength.

A letter addressed to the Milan Gazette affirms positively that Ciceruacchio was drowned in endeavoring to cross the Po, and it defies Garibaldi to prove the assertion that he was shot by Austrians.

The reported disaffection on the part of the Neapolitan army is confirmed, but it seems to arise from a local grievance, certain regiments having been ordered to work on railways.

Turkey.—Constantinople dates are to August 10. Kars was completely evacuated on 4th of August. The fortifications are untouched.

The evacuation of Renie and Ismail are begun.

The papers say the Russians blew up the fortifications at Toultcha.

Two British steamers have visited the Island of Serpents. The Russians have not yet left.

The Sultan has re-established the navigation of the Euphrates from Bagdad to Bassora.

The Porte is now about to adopt measures for the chastisement of the Montenegrins for recent fanatical outrages.

Russia.—The Russians have withdrawn most of their troops from the Crimea. The garrison at Sebastopol is very small, and elsewhere there are but a few Cossacks.

Russia has extended the four days quarantine to all the frontier of Bessarabia on the Moldavia.

St. Petersburg letters continue to revel in descriptions of the glories of the special embassy to the approaching coronation.

Arrival of the Arrabia.

Halifax, Sept. 13.—The Royal mail steam ship Arabia, Judkins, from Liverpool, Thursday, 4th inst., 11.30 A. M., arrived at this port at 4 this morning, 114 passengers.

Great Britain.—The London Star says: "It need not any longer be concealed that the governments of France and England, that is to say, Louis Napoleon and Lord Palmerston, are not on good terms, with respect to Spanish affairs, and communications are understood to have passed between them of anything but a complimentary character. We may as well state, in addition, that an opinion has found its way to the other side of the Atlantic, that England is ready to make every concession, in order to obtain the friendship of the United States, and that this determination has been come to in the event of a possible rupture with France. The improved tone of the London journals is interpreted in this sense, and the New York Herald makes much of the topic.

France.—The health of the Emperor of the French undergoes much discussion. That the Emperor has some malady of a dangerous character may be inferred, but its exact nature is concealed from the public.

Spain.—The Spanish government has not yet published its decree dissolving the Cortes and fixing a new election. The exposition of its policy, to be looked for therein, still remains a subject of discussion.

Italy.—In Italy discontent is spreading in the legations, and alarm is manifested at Naples in consequence of the now ascertained movement of the Muratist party. This party has been circulating a programme or proclamation at Naples with secrecy and activity.

Later from Havana.

New York, Sept. 11.—The Empire City brings Havana dates of the 6th inst.

The Havana papers give detailed reports of the ravages of the late hurricane, which, in certain parts of the island, especially at Lagua la Grande, caused great destruction of property afloat and ashore.

The gale commenced on the 27th, reached its height on the 28th, and moderated on the 29th.

At Lagua six American and one English vessel went ashore. Crops saved. The vessels were a total loss.

The light house at Cardenas was swept away, and there, as at Matanzas and Lagua, much damage was done to the crops.

On the day previous to the arrival of the Empire City, the ship Rubicon, from Boston for New Orleans, put into Havana in distress, having been badly crippled in the hurricane of the 27th and 28th, and it was thought would be condemned.

The yellow fever is reported to be on the decline, and no new cases have occurred since the hurricane.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Maine Annual Advent Conference.

The annual conference of Adventists in Maine will be holden in the Read Meeting-house, Richmond, Thursday, Oct. 2, at 2 o'clock, and continue until Sunday evening. It is hoped that the brethren generally throughout the State will feel a sufficient interest in this meeting to make an effort to attend, especially our preaching brethren. Come, brethren, in the spirit of labor and unity, and let us confer in the love of Christ in relation to the great work to which He has called us; praying for heavenly wisdom. Though there are but few brethren in the neighborhood to sustain this conference, yet they will do all they can, and those from abroad will expect to aid in the expense according to their ability.

Nicholas Smith.
S. K. Partridge.

Canada East.

Eld. E. Burnham having responded to the request made by the Brethren in Barnston, Hatley, Melbourne and Danville, will spend the last two Sabbaths in Sept. in Hatley and Barnston, as the brethren there may arrange.

Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 1st and 2d, at Melbourne.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Danville.

The brethren at Hatley will receive him from the Portland train on Saturday, Sept. 20. at the Compton station. J. Porter.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Otisfield, 21.
Casco, 28.

Jesse Partridge.

Providence permitting I will preach as follows:—
Fairhaven, Sunday, 21.

Any intimation of necessary change, thankfully received.

W. S. Campbell.

The Lord willing, S. B. Munn will hold a protracted meeting at Fances Corner, North Dartmouth, Mass., commencing Friday evening, Sept. 19, and continuing over the Sabbath.

A general invitation is extended to all the brethren and sisters in the vicinity.

R. Cottle.

Br. Grant.—Please say in the Crisis, that I will be at New Bedford (Mass.) the last two two Sabbaths in Sept. F. H. Berick.

P. S.—My P. O. Address from Sept 20 to 27 will be New Bedford, after that I will receive letters at Boston, care of George T. Adams, No. 167 Hanover St. F. H. B.

The Lord permitting, I will preach as follows:—

In the vicinity of Crane's Grove, Adaline, Payne's Point, East and West Plumb River, until Oct. 1.
Crane's Grove, Sept. 21.
Ripley, Brown Co. Ill., Oct. 5, 6, and 7.
Cooperstown, Ill., Oct. 8 and 9.
Mt. Sterling 10 and 11.
Ripley, 12.
Camp Point 13 and 14.
Detroit, 15 and 16.
Pleasant Vale, 17 and over Sunday.
Bozra, 20 and 21.
Detroit 23.
Ripley 25, and over Sunday.
Freeport, 31 and over Sunday Nov. 2 Bro. Leister, of Buchanan, wil lmeet me there and accompany me to Dubuque, Iowa.

I will visit other places in Ill., if desired, if brethren will address me at Freeport and give the necessary direction. If brethren think it not best for me to visit them as proposed, will they please inform me by letter, directed to South Bend, or Laporte, Ind., or Freeport, Ill., as we do not wish to impose ourself by preaching on communities where it is not desired. L. H. Chase.

Providence permitting, I will preach as follows:
Concord, N. H., Sunday, Sept. 21.
Woodstock, Vt., [Densmore Hill] Sunday, Sept 28.
Rawsonville, Vt., Sunday, Oct. 5.
North Adams, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 12.
Springfield, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 19.
Providence, R. I., Sunday, Oct. 26th.
Worcester, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 2.
Lowell, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 9.

S. W. Bishop.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Orangeport, N. Y., Monday eve., Sept. 22.
Buffalo, Tuesday, eve., 23.
Girard, Pa., near Bro. L. D. Allens, Wednesday eve., 24.
Edenboro', Thursday eve., 25.
Blooming Valley, Friday, and Saturday evenings, 26 and 27, over Sunday.
Fredonia, N. Y., Tuesday eve. 30.

If the Brethren there desire it, please inform me in time at Waterloo, N. Y., or at Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.

John T. Ongley.

The Lord willing, I will preach in the following places;—
Houghtonville, Vt., Sunday, Sept. 21.

O. D. Gibson.

I will preach at Portsmouth, N. H., (if the Lord will) the first and third Sabbath in Sept., and at Portland, Me., the second Sabbath in Sept. J. Couch.

If the Lord will, I will preach at the following places:—
Lawrence, Mass., Wednesday eve, Sept. 17.
Salem, Mass., Lord's Day, Sept. 21.

Wm. M. Ingraham.

Bro. D. E. Moulton will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 12.

Bro. J. Hemenway will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 26.

S. W. Bishop.

Bro. D. E. Moulton will preach in Great Falls, Sund Oct. 5. S. W. B.

If Providence permits, I will preach at Flying Point, Sunday, Sep. 21.
Woolwich, " " 28.

R. R. York.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren at Westfield Farms, the 4th Sunday in Sept. H. Pratt.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

The following works are published and sold by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.—They are also for sale at the Office of the "World's Crisis," 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.; and by W. Pratt, Moline, Ill.; P. A. Smith, 4 Frank street, Rochester, N. Y.; A. F. Porter, 20 Erie street, Philadelphia, Pa.; S. S. Brewer, 54 Wilson street, Providence, R. I.:—

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents; postage 16 cts.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By I. C. Welcome. 38 cents; postage 6 cents.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions of the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 16 cents per volume.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—by D. T. Taylor. Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—by John Cumming. State of the Dead, by Milton. Intermediate State, by Grew. Each 24 pages. Price 5 cents single; $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the Coast of Man—Ancient Landmarks—Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—price 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred.——Future Punishment—The Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

GLAD TIDINGS:

OR

BIBLE PROOF

That WOE and SIN are to end in the Universe, by a LITTERAL DESTRUCTION of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment.

All Texts on FUTURE PUNISHMENT collected and arranged.

By JACOB BLAIN,

Baptist Minister, of Buffalo, New York.

"And there shall be no more death, sorrow, crying, nor pain."—Rev. 21: 4.

"And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, * * * heard I saying, blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, forever and ever."—Rev. 5: 13.

"The last enemy shall be destroyed."—1 Cor. 15: 26.

Published by the author, No. 19 North Division Street, Buffalo, N. Y., and for sale at the Crisis Office, Boston, Mass. Price 10 cts. single.

Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called the 'Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

Dr. Decker's pamphlet on the 2300 Days. Price, singly 10 cts.; per dozen, 50 cts.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or books, will find it credited in the Crisis, on the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise, it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

E White, J Moore, O Moore, G Wilson, D O Whipple, W Brown, S Deverans, L Jones, U B Parsons, J Dyer, S Decker, W Howard, J Grover, S P Adams, A Page (by J Butler), S Rogers, Mrs. N J Pribble, J Harmon, A Bush, W Welch, S Ross, T A [illegible], W Colbath, E Sanderson, M Merrill, D F Leavett, S C Stevens, D M Stocking, H Thayer, Mrs. J Steave, Mrs. E Ross, F G Rogers, [illegible] Barton, J P Blaisdell, H Town, J T Langley, S N Langley, C Miller, D Kendall, D Ford, J B Richardson, C Flint, one dollar each.

J B Roberts, S L Rice, A Martin, two dollars each.

A Maxson, Mrs. Belt, A F Covey, M Olson, J Perkins, 50 cents.

M Warner, one dollar seventy-one cents. [illegible] $20.

For the poor.—A. Martin, 50 cents.

For books.—M Warner, 1.25; M Hobart, 3; C Scottle, 1; M Martin 25 cts.

Poetry.

THE THREE VOICES.

What saith the Past to thee? Weep!
Truth is departed,
Beauty hath died like the dream of a sleep,
Love is faint hearted;
Trifles of sense, the profoundly unreal,
Scare from our spirits God's holy ideal;
So, as a funeral-bell, slow and deep,
So tolls the past to thee. Weep!

How speaks the Present Hour? Act!
Walk upward glancing,
So shall thy footsteps in glory be tracked,
Slow, but advancing.
Scorn not the smallest of daily endeavor,
Let the great meaning ennoble it ever,
Droop not o'er efforts expended in vain—
Work as believing that labor is gain.

What doth the Future say? Hope!
Turn thy face sunward,
Look where light fringes the far-rising slope,
Day cometh onward.
Watch! tho' so long be the twilight delaying,
Let the first sunbeam arise on thee praying;
Fear not! for greater is God by thy side,
Than the armies of Satan against thee allied.

ETERNAL LIFE.

Heed not the Tempter's siren voice,
A deep with dangers rife;
Mortal! thou hast a better choice,
Life, life, eternal life.

Oh, shun the world's bewitching snare,
Its fever and its strife;
Mortal! thou hast a nobler share—
Life, life, eternal life.

Seek not for gold, 't is shining dust,
Its love with evil rife;
Mortal! thou hast a nobler trust
Life, life, eternal life.

Like Abrah'm hast thou faith to bear
The sacrificial knife?
Then with the faithful shalt thou share
Life, life, eternal life.

For love of God, canst thou lay down
Thy life 'mid hottest strife?
Then hast thou won a starry crown
Life, life, eternal life.

GIVE THANKS.

"For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."—1 Cor. 4: 17.

Thank the Lord for every sorrow,
Thank him for the keenest smart;
Pleasures, trouble's pathway follow;
Anguish lifts from earth the heart.

The summer's hot, oppressive ray,
Ripens but the luscious fruits.
On the rough briar's thorny spray,
Oft the fairest flower shoots.

The stars most brightly shine on high
In the deepest, darkest night;
'Tis only through a cloudy sky
Bends the rainbow's glorious light.

Take, then, sorrow as a treasure,
Thankfully from God's kind hand;
For th' unfailing cup of pleasure
Waits thee in the better land.

REST FOR THE WEARY.

Has earthly love deceived thee?
Has earthly friendship grieved thee?
Has death's strong hand bereaved thee
Of all most dear below?
A love which never changes,
A friend no time estranges,
A land death's shafts ne'er ranges,
It may be thine to know.

In vain men have asserted,
To cheat the weary-hearted,
That powers by sin perverted
Themselves can calm the breast.
Sin grief's dark root assailing
One hand alone unfailing,
O'er all within prevailing,
Can give the weary rest.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis

An Address

To the Church Looking for the Immediate Coming of our Blessed Lord.

BY A. FLAVELL.

Dearly Beloved: Great as our trials have been, and dark as our way may appear, I have had no doubt of the leadings of Providence in the past movements. It will, however, avail us nothing to have done the will of God in the past, except we continue to do it to the end; and in order to do His will, it is necessary for us to know it.

This leads to the very root of the matter. If we would know the will of the Lord, we must stand in perfect innocence before Him, without a spot on our garments. And not only so, but we require the faith that can claim His guidance in the darkest hour. Some are of opinion, that all we require is to have a good personal experience, and I have no doubt but God will save many holding such views; yet this does not cover all the ground of a Christian that does his Master's will.

God has his great plans and purposes to carry out in the world, through the instrumentality of his Church, and it requires wisdom from above to know when and where to move, and what to do. The Church that thus moves in the order of Providence, will be sure to meet the opposition of the world, the devil, and of a worldly Church. I have never doubted in the darkest hour, but the Church that would stand in all the will of God, would know the time of our Lord's coming, even should it require a special revelation. But I believe that the light on this point is to be obtained through the "sure word of prophecy," that the wise shall understand."

The days connected with this promise are certainly definite; they cover all the waiting time until the Church is blessed with immortality, and Daniel raised from the dead. As this period is dated from the taking away of the daily sacrifice and the setting up of the abomination of desolation, or, as Coverdale renders it, "And from the time forth that the daily offering shall be put down, and the abominable desolation set up," &c. What are we to understand by taking away from or putting down the daily offering? I answer it is taking away from the Church the liberty of conscience to worship God in spirit and in truth. This was done by a union of the Church of Rome with the Eastern empire, or in other words, it is the woman riding on the beast.

Daniel saw four great beasts, which represent four universal empires. In order to understand the divine arrangement of prophetic time, it will be necessary to notice the analogy of events which form the commencement and termination of prophetic periods.

These events are two, and are the acts of those beastly governments towards the professed Church of God: the one is to take away liberty and toleration from the Church, the other is to restore it again.

The first period is 430 years of Egyptian bondage, which terminated with freedom; "on the self-same day" the prophetic period ended.

The second is the "seven times," which commenced with the carrying away of the ten tribes into bondage, and terminates in the liberty of the sons of God at the resurrection.

The third is the seventy year's captivity, which commenced with the carrying away of Judah, and ends with a decree from Cyrus granting them their liberty.

The fourth is the 2300 days, which commence with a decree to restore and build Jerusalem, and ends at the Resurrection; this period is different from all others, for it both begins and ends with with favors to the church.

A short period of suffering is brought to view in Rev. 2: 10. This is under the second of the seven churches—Smyrna. Mark the language: "Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days." The great Roman beast was the devil's agent. In A. D. 303, Diocletian the emperor made a decree that all christians throughout the empire should be put to death. In A. D. 313, Constantine made a decree granting free toleration to all christians throughout the empire, fulfilling the ten years during which the devil cast them into prison.

This is another example of the beginning and end of a prophetic period with decrees; one of bondage and suffering, and the other of toleration.

We now come to the last periods. These, like the others, begin with the church going into bondage. The daily offering is put down, and the saints given into the hands of the little horn. We have supposed the above was done in A. D. 519, but we now think it was only the beginning of a work that remained to be accomplished.

There are two things worthy notice of which prevented the Pope from having the power over the Eastern churches in 519.

1. The Bishops were to sign the articles sent from Rome in the presence of the people. This was not done in 519.

2. The general revolt of the bishops, the clergy, and the people at the demand of the pope, in requiring that the names of those bishops who had died during the separation of the Eastern and Western churches, should be struck out of their sacred records.

This was so humiliating to the Eastern church that they rose en masse against it, and were determined to face the sword rather than submit to such a demand.

The emperor tried to prevail on the pope to waive this matter of the bishops, and caused his nephew to write him to that effect. His letter stated that the people, bishops and clergy had been threatened with exile, yea, with fire and sword, and nothing would compel them; he hoped that His Holiness would connive at this matter, and not leave the work of reconciliation, which he had so much at heart, any longer deferred.

The pope, in reply, tried to persuade the emperor to commence the work of slaughter.

The emperor was disgusted with the pope's obstinacy and sided with the people.

The pope was alarmed and waived the point, and the union was at last effected in A. D. 521.

If the emperor had forced the church to comply with the pope's demands, the 519 argument would have stood on a better foundation; but instead of using force he took part with the Eastern church, and would have abandoned a union with Rome altogether, had not the pope yielded in the matter of dishonoring the memory of the deceased bishops.

I am fully convinced that the Eastern church was not given into the hands of the Pope until this matter was settled. They submitted to all his other unreasonable demands in conforming in all things to the See of Rome. At this point I believe the 1260, 1290 and 1335 years commence. The 1260 measuring a period during which the saints are given into the hands of the pope of Rome, and are deprived of free toleration.

[Concluded next Week.]

APOLOGY.—On account of the derangement in the printing this week, and the great holiday in Boston, when we could have no work done, we have been obliged to omit a part of Br. Flanel's article. We trust he will forgive us, as we have done the best we could. ED.

Disappointment.

☞ We were disappointed in getting paper for this number in due season, consequently the printing was delayed two days.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. Parker Tandy.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been desirous for several weeks past to address a letter to you, in behalf of the "Little Flock." And now, as I was awakened this morning by the Lord's heavy thunder and vivid lightning, which commenced at about quarter before three o'clock, and lasted, peal upon peal, about half an hour; being wide awake, my mind clear, and my soul happy, I feel as though it would be wrong, if not sinful, for me to retire again to rest, and not spend the precious moments in prayer and meditation, and in writing a few lines to the dear brethren and sisters scattered up and down in this wicked world. I very often think of you, dear friends, and think I should be very happy to meet with you, and talk, and sing, and pray together. Well, we cannot very readily do this personally now, but I anticipate the time is not very far distant when we shall all meet, never more to part! Then we shall not spend our time and powers in exhorting, praying, and preaching, as we do now, when we meet in little groups in school-houses and private dwellings, (being shut out from the sanctuaries as we are but we have the strong hope that we shall soon meet in the great and thrice glorious Sanctuary of our divine Redeemer, there to employ all our ransomed powers in singing the triumphant song of redeeming grace and dying love forever and ever. The blessed Savior says, "Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." I believe that "the kingdom of God is at hand." It is in reserve for the little flock. The little flock I understand to be God's "little children," who have been begotten by Him, through His Spirit, and are thus made "heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ, to an inheritance that is incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away." They do not come in possession of their heavenly inheritance at death, as very many vainly suppose; but they are to "be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." Then they are also to be made immortal, like the angels—clothed in a likeness to Christ. The promise is, "We shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." I am tired and sick of this vain world—homesick and sad at the Redeemer's long delay! But, oh! may the good Lord save me from impatience and unbelief. May I, and you, dear brethren and sisters, cling tenaciously to God's revealed truth. "The promises are to us, and to our children, and to as many as the Lord our God shall call." I mean to be "built upon the foundation of Christ and the Apostles, Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone." And if our hope of future and eternal blessedness be thus founded, thrice glorious and happy will be our condition when Jesus comes the second time without sin unto salvation! And I can heartily respond, and say, (with Dr. Watts,)—

"Fly swifter round ye wheels of time,
And bring the welcome day."

And with St. John, on the Isle of Patmos, "Even so, come Lord Jesus, and come quickly." Amen. I believe He that has come will come again. I have not the least shadow of a doubt about it.

"If the vision tarry, wait for it." Now mark. The Lord does not say, "If the vision tarry, give it up." No, no. But He says, "If the vision tarry, wait for it." Why? Because it will surely come, it will not tarry, or fail, but at the end of the 2300 days (or years,) it will speak and not lie. See Heb. 2: 3, and Heb. 10: 35—39. Please read these quotations with care. The passing of the time simply proves to me all human chronology to be wrong—the wisdom of this world a failure. But the word of God does inform us plainly that Christ is to come again, without sin unto the salvation of those that look for him. Heb. 9: 28. The angel Gabriel says to Daniel, (8: 19,) "Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the last end of the indignation: for at the time appointed the end shall be." What was the time appointed? The 2300 days (years) of the 14th verse; for this is the only time mentioned in the vision. Hence, Gabriel declares the indignation, or treading down, or persecution of God's saints shall end in 2300 years. The indignation here spoken of I understand to be the persecution from the wicked, the saint's trials, and their bondage in the grave. When will that end? When Jesus comes and raises them from their dusty beds, and changes them to immortality and bright glory, and wipes away all their tears, and gives them the kingdom, which will be at the end of this age, or at the coming of Christ and the first Resurrection. Now, although all human calculation may fail, yet, God's time will not fail.

Bro. Grant:—I am thankful to God for the weekly visits of the Crisis, which comes richly laden with golden fruit. The Bible, and the World's Crisis we have as substitutes for a living preacher, since Bro. Sheldon went out West, as none of the other preaching Advent brethren seem to care enough about us to come this way, and break to us the bread of life. I have written to several, as the brethren very well know. I find no fault with any one, believing that it is probable their time and energies have been devoted to better effect in other places than they could have been here, where there are so few who are willing to embrace God's precious, soul-saving truth in the love of it. They have heard the truth, and like the man beholding his natural face in a glass, go away forgetting what manner of person they are of. I want that precious souls should receive the truth of God's word: for, I fear that those individuals who wilfully reject and deny God's word, will, at the judgment, be rejected by the Lord. Jesus says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Oh! may God have mercy upon poor souls, and open their blind eyes, and unstop their deaf ears, and cause them to see, hear, understand, and do.

Now, dear brethren and sisters, and perhaps for the last time, "Wait on the Lord; be of good courage, and He shall strengthen thine heart: wait, I say, on the Lord."

Goshen, N. H., Aug. 3, 1856.

Choice Selections.

Preaching the Gospel.

Dr. Sprague tells the following anecdote of an evangelical clergyman of the English Church, named Jones. The story was given him by the Rev. George Burder.

Mr. Jones had a College classmate, who entered the ministry at the same time with himself, but was a mere man of the world, and knew little and cared nothing of the true gospel. This man, conversing one day with Mr. Jones, said to him, half jocosely, half seriously—

"Why is it that you are so popular as a preacher, and so few come to hear me, when everybody knows that at the University I was considered greatly your superior."

"Why," said Mr. Jones, "the reason is that I preach the gospel."

"The gospel!" said the other, "so do I; always every text I preach upon is from Matthew, Mark, Luke or John."

Said Mr. Jones, "You may do that, and yet never preach the gospel."

"Well," said the other, "lend me one of your sermons, and see what effect it will have."

He did lend him one, and he preached it as he had engaged to do, and as he was coming out of the church at the close of the service, he was accosted by a man, who, in listening to the borrowed discourse, had been thrown into a state of anxiety in respect to his salvation.

Says the minister, somewhat confused by the strange result of his preaching—"Wait, wait, say nothing about it till the people have gone out."

After the congregation had retired, the anxious inquirer began further to explain himself when the clergyman interrupted him by saying—

"But what is the matter with you? I see no occasion for making yourself so unhappy?"

"Matter," replied he; "why your preaching has made me feel like a condemned criminal, and I fear there is no mercy for me."

"Well, really" said the minister, "I am very sorry that I have wounded your feelings—I had no intention of doing it; but, since you have got into this uncomfortable state, I advise you to go and see Mr. Jones."

PRACTICAL PREACHING.—Here is a delicious paragraph from Henry Ward Beecher:—

We have no doubt that a rigorous landlord, having sharked it all the week, would be better pleased on Sunday to doze through an able Gospel sermon on Divine mysteries, than to be kept awake by a practical sermon that, among other things, set forth the duties of a Christian landlord. A broker who has gambled on a magnificent scale all the week, does not go to church to have his practical swindling analyzed and measured by the "New Testament spirit." A merchant whose last bale of smuggled goods was safely stored on Saturday night, and his brother merchant, who, on that same day, swore a false invoice through the custom-house—they go to church to hear a sermon on faith, on angels, on the resurrection! They have nothing invested in these subjects; they expect the minister to be bold and orthodox. But if he wants respectable merchants to pay ample pew rents, let him not vulgarize the pulpit by introducing commercial questions.

A rich Christian brother owns largely in a distillery, and is clamorous against letting down the pulpit to the vulgarity of temperance sermons. Another man buys tax titles, and noses about all the week to see who can be slipped out of a neglected lot. A merchant that plies his craft with unscrupulous appliance of every means that win: he too wants "doctrine" on the Sabbath, not these secular questions.

Men wish two departments in life; the secular and the religious. Between them a high wall and opaque is to be built. They wish to do what they please for six long days. Then stepping the other side of the wall, they wish the minister to assuage their fears, to comfort their consciences and furnish them a clear ticket and assurance for heaven. By such a shrewd management, our modern financiers are determined to show that a Christian can serve two masters, both God and mammon, at the same time.

SLEEP.—There is no fact more clearly established in the physiology of man than this, that the brain expands its energies and itself during the hours of wakefulness, and that these are recuperated during sleep; if the recuperation does not equal the expenditures, the brain withers, this is insanity. Thus it is, that in early English history, persons who were condemned to death, by being prevented from sleeping, always died raving maniacs; thus it is also that those who are starved to death become insane; the brain is not nourished and they cannot sleep. The practical inferences are three.

1. Those who think most, who do most brain work, require most sleep.

2. That time "saved" from necessary sleep is infallibly destructive to mind, body, and estate.

3. Give yourself, your children, your servants, give all who are under you the fullest amount of sleep they will take, by compelling them to go to bed at some regular early hour, and to rise in the morning the moment they awake of themselves, and within a fortnight, nature, with almost the regularity of the rising sun, will unloose the bonds of sleep, the moment enough repose has been secured for the wants of the system. This is the only safe and sufficient rule; and as to the question, how much sleep any one requires, each must be a rule for himself: great Nature will never fail to write it to the observer under the regulations just given.—Journal of Health.

For the Children.

"Ye Cannot Know the End from the Beginning."

Never threaten your children. "Old advice," you say, "I have read it before." Yes, and where you have read it once, you have forgotten it ten times. You know that the government which requires threats is not perfect; and that the words, "don't do that again," should be sufficient. Yet again and again, in the vexation of a moment, you have exclaimed, "If you do that again, I'll——." And again and again have you seen the little fist doubled towards a younger brother or sister, and heard the repetition of your own words; and you have said, "What! angry? oh, how naughty!" But excuse me; I didn't mean to be personal. I only intended to tell you this story, illustrative of the fact that when you threaten an act with punishment you cannot know but that very act may be performed under such circumstances as not to deserve punishment; in which case you must either forfeit your word or punish unjustly.

In Eddie's character, faults and virtues were blended in about the usual proportion. Among his pleasant qualities was one to which his mother trusted as a means of overcoming evil propensities, and of counteracting impure influences, viz, a love of natural objects. Each flower, and every insect was a treasure to him. He knew the [illegible] of every bird that sang near his home. He had often been told not to frighten the birds from their nests, lest they should desert them. One day she came in, bringing a nest, in which were four blue eggs. "Oh! mother," he said, "isn't it too bad; Ponto frightened the bird away, and now these pretty little eggs can never be hatched." The eggs were warm, and had evidently not been disturbed. "Carry back the nest," said his mother, "and perhaps the bird will come to it again." It was a long walk in the hot sun, but the errand was done, and Eddie reported that the bird was crying when he got there, but he told her he had brought back the eggs, and she didn't say "peep-peep" much more, so he guessed she would come to them. "Now," said his mother, "don't go to the nest for two weeks." Eddie promised, and went with his sisters to work in their garden, a certain sand-bank, where they persisted in planting corn that wouldn't come up, and beans that died as soon as they were up, and succeeded in making nothing grow but themselves.—Soon the children were missing. When next seen they were coming from a long distance up the street. Right out of the sand-bank, they had been calling on the neighbors. "Provoking," laughs some mamma whose family pride has met with a similar disaster. True, but it was the first offense, and the mother only reproved them. Yet, in her vexation, she added, "Recollect, the first time you go in the street beyond the walnut trees, I shall punish you." Days passed on, and both incidents were forgotten. One afternoon Eddie was seen coming through a long field which ran parallel with the street, and at the farther end of which was the bird's nest. This field was overgrown with wild vines, which rendered the passage through it not only difficult but too slow for Eddie who was bringing pleasant news, and when only a short distance beyond the walnut trees he sprang over the fence and came bounding up the street.

"Oh! mother! mother!" he exclaimed, as with flushed cheeks and sparkling eyes he entered the room where his mother was sitting, "the eggs are broken, and the birds are hatched, and"—

"Where have you been, my son?" inquired his mother.

"Why it's two weeks you know. I waited till after dinner, so it's quite two weeks, and I've been—the countenance changed, the eyelids dropped, for a moment the chest heaved—then, with eyes brimful of tears, and from quivering lips, came the answer—"in the road beyond the walnut trees." Thoughtlessly, innocently he had trangressed the letter, but not the spirit of the law. In the face of punishment he had told the truth. The mother's word was pledged.

"What did she do?"

No matter, reader, she does not care about telling you, save that she learned this lesson, never threaten.—Independent.

BAD COMPANY.—One of the worst habits that a young person of either sex can fall into, is that of keeping bad company. Impure words stain the tablets of a virtuous mind, and the more we hear of them the less nice becomes our sense of the refined and pure. Too much care cannot be taken in the choice of companions. Intimate friendships should not be made without due reflections; and with casual acquaintances, whose conduct and conversation will not benefit us, we should have as little to do as charity and circumstances will admit.—The mind is exceedingly delicate substance, and its purity is soiled by even the slightest contact with vice; and when once the leprous spots are left upon it, no after egress can wash them out—a blemish that remains indelibly fixed upon the soul. An hour spent in bad company may prove a source of regret for years—or worse, the stepping stone to vice and crime. Be careful, then, with whom you associate.

THE OLD WOMAN'S BLESSING.—A gentleman was once passing through a village and happened to see a poor, feeble old woman let her stick fall, and stand a moment in perplexity, not knowing whether she dared to stoop to pick it up, or attempt to reach her home without it. Just by the spot where the accident happened a group of boys were playing at marbles. Some of them took no notice; others rudely marked the poor old woman's distress, but one kind-hearted lad threw down his marbles, ran to her assistance, and helped her into her house. She thanked him and said, "God Almighty's blessing be upon you for your kindness to a poor old woman!" The gentleman saw and heard the whole, and made inquiry after the lad, in whom he felt deeply interested. He found that he was already in the Sunday School, and in all probability, had there learned the Scriptures, that inculcate reverence to the aged. From that time he had him instructed in writing and accounts at an evening school. When old enough, he assisted in apprenticing him, and in course of time had the satisfaction of seeing him a respectable and flourishing tradesman.

STOP THAT BOY.—A cigar in his mouth, a swagger in his walk, impudence in his face, a care-for-nothingness in his manner. Judging from his demeanor he is older than his father, wiser than his teacher, more honored than the Mayor of the town, higher than the President. Stop him, he is going too fast, he don't see himself as others see him; he don't know his speed. Stop him ere tobacco shatters his nerves; ere pride ruins his character; ere the loafer masters the man, ere good ambition, strength gives way to low pursuits and brutish aims. Stop all such boys! They are legion, the shame of their families, the disgrace of their towns, the sad and solemn reproaches of themselves.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1856. WHOLE NO. 128. VOL. IV. NO. 4.

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Sermon.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

"Who hath believed our report." Isa. 53: 1.

This text seems to manifest a measure of discouragement, on the part of the speaker. The messenger of God had just beheld in prophetic vision, the ministers of the gospel, with beautiful feet upon the mountains, bringing "good tidings of good," and publishing "peace" and "salvation." Isa. 52: 7.

While thus contemplating the progress of the gospel among men, his soul became at once impressed with thoughts and perceptions of the final result; and he thus proceeded to declare:

"Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with the voice together shall they sing: for they shall see eye to eye, when the Lord shall bring again Zion." Isa. 52: 8.

He next beheld the subsequent prosperity of the chosen city of the Lord, Jerusalem, and spake of "her" restored "waste places," her comfort, and her redemption; and referred to the final display of Almighty power, in the eyes of all the nations," even to "the ends of the earth." Isa. 52: 9, 10.

He then proceeded to prophesy of the deliverance of the Jews from captivity, and of Messiah, and his mission. Isa. 52: 11-15.

At this point, he seems to have discovered the manner of reception with which the Savior met among his people, and their general unbelief in the doctrine taught by him and his apostles; and, as if speaking for them, in language of discouragement, uttered the words of my text, with other words equally important and expressive. The Evangelist refers to this passage under peculiar circumstances:

"But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him; that the sayings of the prophet Esaias might be fulfilled, which he spake, Lord who hath believed our report? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed." John, 12 37, 38.

I propose, in this discourse, to show,

I.

What is the "report" that is to be believed.

It is the gospel report. It is the report of life and death; of heaven and hell; of salvation and damnation; of time and eternity; of sin and holiness; of God, of Christ, of the Holy Spirit, of angels, of men, of devils; of things past, present, and to come; of all good, and all bad; of the amazing, wonderful, unbounded, infinite, and eternal love of a merciful, benevolent, and condescending Father, to millions of vile, polluted, degenerate, fallen and ungrateful children. It is the report of the fearful, and unequaled sufferings of the adorable Son of God, for our redemption; and of his resurrection from the dead that he might be "Lord both of the living and the dead." It is the report of our stupendous folly, of sinning against a kind and merciful God, thus striving to plunge our souls into eternal perdition in spite of all he is doing to keep us back therefrom. It is the report of God's continued care over us; of what he will do for us in the present tense, and, also in the world to come; of the temptations we must here endure; of the manner of life we must here lead, in all moral virtue and spiritual devotion, that we may "inherit the kingdom;" of our duty to our God, to our fellow beings, and ourselves; of the present blessedness of labor and suffering in the cause of truth and humanity. It is the report of joys to come. Of endless life, granted on the confines of death and corruption, by a glorious resurrection! Of an immortal inheritance with saints in light! Of eternal association with the ever blessed Redeemer, and holy angels, and a freedom of reverential approach to communion with God, which we cannot now enjoy. Then, no sense of sin, or guilt will torment; no fountains of sympathizing sorrow will need to open in the soul for the grief of others; nor will troubles of our own sink down into our spirits; "God shall wipe away all our tears," and silence all our groans. O blessed report! O glowing hope!

II.

Who will believe the "report?"

Those will believe it who are disposed to do so; and those will be disposed to do so, who, when the means of grace are brought around them, will permit them to affect their hearts, as they are designed to do. No one will believe the report who continually keeps his mind fixed not to believe it; though, by the grace of God, many have been brought to believe it who did once fix their minds that they would not believe it.

But there is one class of persons who choose to believe. The convicted sinner, sighs for pardon of his sins;—the Holy spirit has reproved him—his conscience has been quickened—he is miserable, and self-condemned—to him, the gospel offers mercy and plenteous redemption; and with his spirit all broken and contrite, he gratefully accepts the proffered good, because, to him, there is no other good that will meet the demand of his sorrow. And when the penitent soul has once believed the report, he is constantly urged on, by circumstances growing out of that act, and circumstances around him connected with his various relations in life, to still continue to believe, so long as he attends to the ordinary means of grace.

Is he tempted and perplexed? He believes, because the gospel refers to these very temptations and perplexities, and promises help and deliverance. Is he forsaken by friends? He believes, because the promise of the gospel is, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Do foes multiply around him? He chooses to believe, that "if God be for us, who can be against us." Is he afflicted with poverty? He joyfully believes, that He who feedeth "the birds" of heaven, and "clothes the grass of the field" with beauty, and prepares the wild beasts of the wilderness an habitation, will much more feed, clothe, and cover him, in this world; and in the world to come he shall possess "an house not made with hands," when his "bread shall be given him, and his waters shall be sure."

Do the loved ones of his soul sicken and die? It is grateful to his soul to believe that "they shall come again from the land of the enemy"—that "them also who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him"—that "the dead in Christ shall rise first." Is he himself, sick and dying? How gladly he grasps the promises written: "Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they rise!" "Yet in my flesh shall I see God!" "I will raise him up at the last day!" Do a multitude of evils surround him? He finds consolation in believing, that "all things work together for good to them who love God."

IMPROVEMENT.

Let us seek to understand the gospel "report," as expressed by our Lord, his prophets and apostles.

Let us believe that report, with all our soul and might.

Let us continue steadfast in faith unto the end.

For the Crisis.

The Last Plague.

BY J. E. CLARK.

"And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying—It is done." Rev. 16: 17.

This text gives the account of the last plague that will ever visit our world. It is the last, for it is the last of the seven last plagues; and in them is filled up the wrath of God. Under this seventh vial, great Babylon comes up "in remembrance before God to give unto her of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath."

We look back to the days of Moses in Egypt, and we see these seven last plagues have had their shadow in the plagues which God sent on that wicked people, who kept his chosen in bondage. But God delivered his people with an out-stretched arm.—Under the last plague, he destroyed Pharaoh and his host, at which time the children of Israel were shouting deliverance on the banks of the Red Sea.

So we think this last plague will be poured out upon spiritual Egypt,—slave-holding Babylon, who has enslaved the people of God for centuries, and trafficked in the bodies and souls of men. As they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, God will give them blood to drink, for they are worthy. We who believe the vials have been poured out, (except the seventh) may differ as to the chronology of the events when they were fulfilled. We admit six of them have been poured out, and the seventh remains to be accomplished. Under the pouring out of the sixth vial the Savior says,—"Behold I come as a thief. Blessed is he that keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked and they see his shame. He would have his people on the lookout, for he is soon to come—as a thief too on those who are not watching. Under the pouring out of this vial there are "three unclean spirits like frogs" that come out of the mouth of the "dragon," the "beast," and the "false prophet." Their work is to gather the kings of the earth and of the whole world to the "battle of that great day of God Almighty." They have a bad spirit, for their work is devilish. They have been doing this work for a good time past, and they have it just about accomplished, and the great day is about to usher in upon us.

The rush of nations is coming; we are just about entering upon the day of God, and into Daniel's time of trouble; at which time the people of God will "be delivered, every one whose name is found written in the Book of life."

"And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven from the throne saying,—"it is done."

The seventh and last vial we believe will be poured out very soon, and the effects of it will have a quick and rapid circulation over the whole world.

"And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake and so great." We understand by the symbols, voices, thunders—political strife and disunions. Lightning is a representation of anger and war. "Great earthquake," denotes a great revolution; such an one as was not since men were upon the earth. O poor sinner, you will cry for mercy in that great day! Mercy will have left the world forever, and men will be left to all their evil passions; to butcher each other; "and the slain of the Lord will be from one end of the earth even to the other end, they shall not be lamented, neither gathered nor buried; but they shall be dung upon the ground." What an awful sight! And when this vial is poured out there will be political strife among all nations, divisions among all sects, societies, and associations of men upon earth. Anger, war, and blood-shed will fill the countries with dismay. One would think to look over the world now, that this state of things already existed, and would be led to believe this vial was already being poured out.

Next in order is—"And the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell: and great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath."

The "great city" we understand to be the "woman which reigneth over the kings of the earth." Rev. 17: 18, and the woman is Papacy. Hence Papacy must be divided with three parties or parts, to show her end. How these things will be fulfilled, God knoweth. "And the cities of the nations fell."

As "city" denotes the papal power and religion; so "cities" represent the power and religion of all other nations; therefore, all the theories of men, and national religions, will fall under this vial, and the anti-christian power—bloody Papacy, will be judged. All her sins, cruel persecutions, and bloody deeds, will be brought into judgment, into remembrance before God, and he will fill to her the cup which she has made others drink, and she in her turn must drink the dregs; and God will burn her with fire, for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her. "And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found."

Islands and mountains are figures of small and great governments. This text has reference to the same time and circumstances with Nebuchadnezzar's dream, (Dan. 2: 35, 45,) when the stone cut out without hands shall smite the image upon its feet, and all the kingdoms of the earth be carried away, that no place be found for them. In this verse, the islands and mountains were not found. "And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven." This closes the history of the wrath of God contained in the vials. And this storm of hail is the last part of the seventh vial,—it is the closing up of the judgments of God on an ungodly world.

Whether we are to understand this "hail" literally or figuratively, I am not able to say. I think, literally, for this reason; I have never been able to find in the word of God any figurative explanation, although it is used in a number of places with reference to the last day. Isa. 28: 17. "Judgment also will I lay to the line, ... and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies." See also Ezek. 13: 11, 13; 38: 22; Rev. 12: 19. By reading these texts, you cannot but be struck with the agreement of the Prophets in their descriptions of this last and dreadful judgment of God upon the world. All of them evidently fix it at the last day, all call it a "rain of great hail stones," like those which fell upon Egypt in the days of Moses. Ex. 9: 23—25. "And Moses stretched forth his rod towards heaven, and the Lord sent thunder and hail.—And the hail smote throughout all the land of Egypt, all that was in the fields, both man and beast, and the hail smote every herb of the field, and break every tree of the field." This, it is evident, is the type of the last part of the seventh plague.

The Revelator wishes us to understand it is the wrath of God upon the wicked inhabitants of the earth, when Christ the judge comes.

The prophets speak of this day of wrath. Hear what Zeph. says. "That day (speaking of the day of the Lord) is a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress, a day of darkness and desolation, and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness." "And I will bring distress upon men, that they shall walk like blind men, because they have sinned against the Lord; and their blood shall be poured out as dust, and their flesh as the dung. Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of the Lord's wrath."

Other portions might be quoted, showing the extent of this day of God's wrath. But we submit it as it is to you dear reader, by asking you to look at these things, investigate them, and pray God to enlighten your mind upon these great and glorious truths; that you may have your loins girt about with truth, oil in your vessels with your lamps, and be washed in the fountain which is open for sin and uncleanness, that you may be all ready.

Christ will soon come and the voice from the throne will be heard—"it is done!" As when the dying Savior upon the cross cried "It is finished," when this seventh vial is poured out, the day of Gospel grace with sinners will be over, the trump in Zion will be still, to be blown no more.

Haste, O haste to Christ, your friend now, but soon he will be your judge; and if you have no hope in him, he will be your executioner.

A few hours more and all will be over. What you do, do quickly! Amen.

Fair Haven, Conn., July '56.

For the Crisis.

A Visit to R. I.

BY W. S. CAMPBELL.

BRO. GRANT:—Some of the facts and incidents of my labors for ten days past may interest your readers.

Heaven was against my taking the boat from Hartford, Saturday 9th—I mean the elements—for the terrific, and almost unheard-of tempest of lightning, rain, and wind, kept me out of the city till the boat had left for New London, and I of course took cars for Providence, just in time to take the Stonington train for Kingston and Peacedale. Here I found Bro. Dixon and the brethren and sisters generally firm in the faith, and free from any dissensions,—a matter of rejoicing to me, since in so many instances there are strifes and divisions. They might be more engaged; I hope they will be visited with a gracious manifestation, but it is certainly a satisfaction to see a church which can appreciate the plain word of life, and feel an abiding interest in the gospel of God our Savior. The congregation was good, and, by the way, they have a very flourishing sabbath school. There is a sad neglect in many of the Advent churches of Sabbath-school instruction. Such is the neglect of brethren that I find often the children of our families attending elsewhere. How much do we value the doctrines of the word, if we allow our children to be instructed in views adverse to the truth of life?

Found brother Hastings at home. He was away "in the region round about" on Sunday, and came to speak in the evening at P. I was very much refreshed by his sermon, and also by a day or two's visiting in which, among other exercises, we visited the beach; and enjoyed the invigorating breath of the ocean, while we boyishly played with the crested surf, till our strength was exhausted, as often heretofore, the old sea-god driving us high and dry upon the sand.

On Tuesday I came to Lafayette, where I met Bro. Bellows, and preached in the evening to a goodly number. Bro. Bellows has had some hard struggles, and is very much alone down there. The Advent people of that old church will soon come out, and being identified as believers in the faith of the kingdom, it is to be hoped they will prosper, more.

Came in the next train to Apponaug, and walked a mile and a half to see Bro. Wait, who is in the greatest possible prostration, being entirely helpless, except the use of his left arm; and thus he has lain for months. Poor man! Probably drugs have had something to do with his condition. He has faith in God, yet. We had a praying season, in which the Lord seemed to be near. I arose to leave. It was now dark. I had not ascertained the place of meeting till I reached his house. It was five miles off. He sent a team with me, and arrived as some were beginning to leave. Ah! that was a good time. The people were glad to hear. Long (?) and earnestly, and plainly we spake, and after the sermon, others gave testimonies, that were pathetic and spiritual. To receive such evidence of the "hearing ear" and "understanding heart" gave me solid satisfaction; toil-worn and discouraged as I am, I shall not soon forget the season at Arnold's bridge.

Now, read the piece through, before you fling down the paper again. I walked some three miles, I should think, to reach River-point on Thursday. Here I found Bro. Taylor and others expecting me, and glad I came before night. I took a hint. It does the brethren good to know the preacher has come. Oh! Hiram, had my appointments been left as they were, the friends would not have been disappointed last week; thus we wish to throw the responsibility of our mistakes, and sometimes faults, upon others. The meeting was fully attended. Had ministers and people—houseful (Bro. Taylor's) and many out of doors. I gave them a lecture on the "Wilful King" power, in Dan. 11th chapter. That was new indeed to them. They think that the "Advents" attend to the prophecies, at least.

My next appointment was at Providence. Here I met with many old acquaintances in the cause, among them Bro. S. S. Brewer, Dr. Towne, and others. We had a good meeting that evening, and by invitation I concluded to remain with them over Sabbath, having received a line from New Bedford of Bro. Cook's preaching there for the present. There is some prosperity at the chapel on Pearl-st., and a prospect of more union and edification. I see not why they may not flourish. I preached twice and lectured once, yesterday. I say "preached and lectured," for I do not call lectures the preaching which is demanded just now: some lecturing is required, but more preaching. There has been too little preaching and too much lecturing for the up-building of the church. I find that preaching the gospel is well received by the faithful, and that good can be done.

The brethren in Providence are Bereans indeed; they study the scriptures and especially the prophetic scriptures. They are disposed to go down to the bottom of the book of Revelations. Their Bible-class is an efficient instrumentality in compassing the object. With proper limitations, and with love in our hearts, the Bible Class is useful everywhere. To-day I am under the "Monday power"—my throat is badly damaged.

Yours truly,

W. S. C.

Prov. R. I., Aug. 18, '56.

P. S. I express my gratitude for the the liberality of the brethren in this city, at Peacedale, and indeed at all the places.

W. S. C.

For the Crisis.

Heavenly-mindedness.

BY J. NUTE.

"Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." Matt. 6: 19—21.

"No man can serve two masters."

"All that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father but is of the world."

It seems that the devil reigns in this world; but we are looking forth to the time when he will be destroyed, and Christ shall take the throne and on it reign forever. Glory be to God that his children are to have deliverance in a little while.

Let us live like pilgrims and strangers on this earth; for here we have no continuing city, or abiding place, but are seeking one to come.

"Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in Glory."

Look not on things which are seen, which are carnal, but look on things which are not seen, which are eternal.

"Love not the world, neither the things

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1856. WHOLE NO. 128. VOL. IV. NO. 4.

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE

Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Sermon.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

"Who hath believed our report." Isa. 53 : 1.

This text seems to manifest a measure of discouragement, on the part of the speaker. The messenger of God had just beheld in prophetic vision, the ministers of the gospel, with beautiful feet upon the mountains, bringing "good tidings of good," and publishing "peace" and "salvation." Isa. 52 : 7.

While thus contemplating the progress of the gospel among men, his soul became at once impressed with thoughts and perceptions of the final result; and he thus proceeded to declare:

"Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with the voice together shall they sing: for they shall see eye to eye, when the Lord shall bring again Zion." Isa. 52 : 8.

He next beheld the subsequent prosperity of the chosen city of the Lord, Jerusalem, and spake of "her" restored "waste places," her comfort, and her redemption; and referred to the final display of Almighty power, in the eyes of all the nations," even to "the ends of the earth." Isa. 52 : 9, 10.

He then proceeded to prophesy of the deliverance of the Jews from captivity, and of Messiah, and his mission. Isa. 52 : 11-15.

At this point, he seems to have discovered the manner of reception with which the Savior met among his people, and their general unbelief in the doctrine taught by him and his apostles; and, as if speaking for them, in language of discouragement, uttered the words of my text, with other words equally important and expressive. The Evangelist refers to this passage under peculiar circumstances:

"But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him; that the sayings of the prophet Esaias might be fulfilled, which he spake, Lord who hath believed our report? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed." John, 12 37, 38.

I propose, in this discourse, to show,

I.

What is the "report" that is to be believed.

It is the gospel report. It is the report of life and death; of heaven and hell; of salvation and damnation; of time and eternity; of sin and holiness; of God, of Christ, of the Holy Spirit, of angels, of men, of devils; of things past, present, and to come; of all good, and all bad; of the amazing, wonderful, unbounded, infinite, and eternal love of a merciful, benevolent, and condescending Father, to millions of vile, polluted, degenerate, fallen and ungrateful children. It is the report of the fearful, and unequaled sufferings of the adorable Son of God, for our redemption; and of his resurrection from the dead that he might be "Lord both of the living and the dead." It is the report of our stupendous folly, of sinning against a kind and merciful God, thus striving to plunge our souls into eternal perdition in spite of all he is doing to keep us back therefrom. It is the report of God's continued care over us; of what he will do for us in the present tense, and, also in the world to come; of the temptations we must here endure; of the manner of life we must here lead, in all moral virtue and spiritual devotion, that we may "inherit the kingdom;" of our duty to our God, to our fellow beings, and ourselves; of the present blessedness of labor and suffering in the cause of truth and humanity. It is the report of joys to come. Of endless life, granted on the confines of death and corruption, by a glorious resurrection! Of an immortal inheritance with saints in light! Of eternal association with the ever blessed Redeemer, and holy angels, and a freedom of reverential approach to communion with God, which we cannot now enjoy. Then, no sense of sin, or guilt will torment; no fountains of sympathizing sorrow will need to open in the soul for the grief of others; nor will troubles of our own sink down into our spirits; "God shall wipe away all our tears," and silence all our groans. O blessed report! O glowing hope!

II.

Who will believe the "report?"

Those will believe it who are disposed to do so; and those will be disposed to do so, who, when the means of grace are brought around them, will permit them to affect their hearts, as they are designed to do. No one will believe the report who continually keeps his mind fixed not to believe it; though, by the grace of God, many have been brought to believe it who did once fix their minds that they would not believe it.

But there is one class of persons who choose to believe. The convicted sinner, sighs for pardon of his sins;—the Holy spirit has reproved him—his conscience has been quickened—he is miserable, and self-condemned—to him, the gospel offers mercy and plenteous redemption; and with his spirit all broken and contrite, he gratefully accepts the proffered good, because, to him, there is no other good that will meet the demand of his sorrow. And when the penitent soul has once believed the report, he is constantly urged on, by circumstances growing out of that act, and circumstances around him connected with his various relations in life, to still continue to believe, so long as he attends to the ordinary means of grace.

Is he tempted and perplexed? He believes, because the gospel refers to these very temptations and perplexities, and promises help and deliverance. Is he forsaken by friends? He believes, because the promise of the gospel is, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Do foes multiply around him? He chooses to believe, that "if God be for us, who can be against us." Is he afflicted with poverty? He joyfully believes, that He who feedeth "the birds" of heaven, and "clothes the grass of the field" with beauty, and prepares the wild beasts of the wilderness an habitation, will much more feed, clothe, and cover him, in this world; and in the world to come he shall possess "an house not made with hands," when his "bread shall be given him, and his waters shall be sure."

Do the loved ones of his soul sicken and die? It is grateful to his soul to believe that "they shall come again from the land of the enemy"—that "them also who sleep in Jesus will God bring with him"—that "the dead in Christ shall rise first." Is he himself, sick and dying? How gladly he grasps the promises written: "Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they rise!" "Yet in my flesh shall I see God!" "I will raise him up at the last day!" Do a multitude of evils surround him? He finds consolation in believing, that "all things work together for good to them who love God."

IMPROVEMENT.

Let us seek to understand the gospel "report," as expressed by our Lord, his prophets and apostles.

Let us believe that report, with all our soul and might.

Let us continue steadfast in faith unto the end.

For the Crisis.

The Last Plague.

BY J. E. CLARK.

"And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying—It is done." Rev. 16 : 17.

This text gives the account of the last plague that will ever visit our world. It is the last, for it is the last of the seven last plagues; and in them is filled up the wrath of God. Under this seventh vial, great Babylon comes up "in remembrance before God to give unto her of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath."

We look back to the days of Moses in Egypt, and we see those seven last plagues have had their shadow in the plagues which God sent on that wicked people, who kept his children in bondage. But God delivered his people with an out-stretched arm.—Under the last plague, he destroyed Pharaoh and his host, at which time the children of Israel were shouting deliverance on the banks of the Red Sea.

So we think this last plague will be poured out upon spiritual Egypt,—slave-holding Babylon, which has enslaved the people of God for centuries, and trafficked in the bodies and souls of men. As they have shed the blood of saints and prophets, God will give them blood to drink, for they are worthy. We who believe the vials have been poured out, (except the seventh) may differ as to the chronology of the events when they were fulfilled. We admit six of them have been poured out, and the seventh remains to be accomplished. Under the pouring out of the sixth vial the Savior says,—"Behold I come as a thief. Blessed is he that keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked and they see his shame. He would have his people on the lookout, for he is soon to come—as a thief too on those who are not watching. Under the pouring out of this vial there are "three unclean spirits like frogs" that come out of the mouth of the "dragon," the "beast," and the "false prophet." Their work is to gather the kings of the earth and of the whole world to the "battle of that great day of God Almighty." They have a bad spirit, for their work is devilish. They have been doing this work for a good time past, and they have it just about accomplished, and the great day is about to usher in upon us.

The rush of nations is coming; we are just about entering upon the day of God, and into Daniel's time of trouble; at which time the people of God will "be delivered, every one whose name is found written in the Book of life."

"And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven from the throne saying,—"it is done."

The seventh and last vial we believe will be poured out very soon, and the effects of it will have a quick and rapid circulation over the whole world.

"And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake and so great." We understand by the symbols, voices, thunders—political strife and disunions. Lightning is a representation of anger and war. "Great earthquake," denotes a great revolution; such an one as was not since men were upon the earth. O poor sinner, you will cry for mercy in that great day! Mercy will have left the world forever, and men will be left to all their evil passions; to butcher each other; "and the slain of the Lord will be from one end of the earth even to the other end, they shall not be lamented, neither gathered nor buried; but they shall be dung upon the ground." What an awful sight! And when this vial is poured out there will be political strife among all nations, divisions among all sects, societies, and associations of men upon earth. Anger, war, and blood-shed will fill the countries with dismay. One would think to look over the world now, that this state of things already existed, and would be led to believe this vial was already being poured out.

Next in order is—"And the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell: and great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath."

The "great city" we understand to be the "woman which reigneth over the kings of the earth." Rev. 17 : 18, and the woman is Papacy. Hence Papacy must be divided with three parties or parts, to show her end. How these things will be fulfilled, God knoweth. "And the cities of the nations fell."

As "city" denotes the papal power and religion; so "cities" represent the power and religion of all other nations; therefore, all the theories of men, and national religions, will all fall under this vial, and the anti-christian power—bloody Papacy, will be judged. All her sins, cruel persecutions, and bloody deeds, will be brought into judgment, into remembrance before God, and he will fill to her the cup which she has made others drink, and she in her turn must drink the dregs; and God will burn her with fire, for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her. "And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found."

Islands and mountains are figures of small and great governments. This text has reference to the same time and circumstances with Nebuchadnezzar's dream, (Dan. 2 : 35, 45,) when the stone cut out without hands shall smite the image upon its feet, and all the kingdoms of the earth be carried away, that no place be found for them. In this verse, the islands and mountains were not found. "And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven." This closes the history of the wrath of God contained in the vials. And this storm of hail is the last part of the seventh vial,—it is the closing up of the judgments of God on an ungodly world.

Whether we are to understand this "hail" literally or figuratively, I am not able to say. I think, literally, for this reason; I have never been able to find in the word of God any figurative explanation, although it is used in a number of places with reference to the last day. Isa. 28 : 17. "Judgment also will I lay to the line, ... and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies." See also Ezek. 13 : 11, 13; 38 : 22; Rev. 12 : 19. By reading these texts, you cannot but be struck with the agreement of the Prophets in their descriptions of this last and dreadful judgment of God upon the world. All of them evidently fix it at the last day, all call it a "rain of great hail stones," like those which fell upon Egypt in the days of Moses. Ex. 9 : 23—25. "And Moses stretched forth his rod towards heaven, and the Lord sent thunder and hail.—And the hail smote throughout all the land of Egypt, all that was in the fields, both man and beast, and the hail smote every herb of the field, and break every tree of the field." This, it is evident, is the type of the last part of the seventh plague.

The Revelator wishes us to understand it is the wrath of God upon the wicked inhabitants of the earth, when Christ the judge comes.

The prophets speak of this day of wrath. Hear what Zeph. says. "That day (speaking of the day of the Lord) is a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress, a day of darkness and desolation, and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness."

"And I will bring distress upon men, that they shall walk like blind men, because they have sinned against the Lord; and their blood shall be poured out as dust, and their flesh as the dung. Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of the Lord's wrath."

Other portions might be quoted, showing the extent of this day of God's wrath. But we submit it as it is to you dear reader, by asking you to look at these things, investigate them, and pray God to enlighten your mind upon these great and glorious truths; that you may have your loins girt about with truth, oil in your vessels with your lamps, and be washed in the fountain which is open for sin and uncleanness, that you may be all ready.

Christ will soon come and the voice from the throne will be heard—"it is done!" As when the dying Savior upon the cross cried "It is finished," when this seventh vial is poured out, the day of Gospel grace with sinners will be over, the trump in Zion will be still, to be blown no more.

Haste, O haste to Christ, your friend now, but soon he will be your judge; and if you have no hope in him, he will be your executioner.

A few hours more and all will be over. What you do, do quickly! Amen.

Fair Haven, Conn., July '56.

For the Crisis.

A Visit to R. I.

BY W. S. CAMPBELL.

BRO. GRANT:—Some of the facts and incidents of my labors for ten days past may interest your readers.

Heaven was against my taking the boat from Hartford, Saturday 9th—I mean the elements—for the terrific, and almost unheard-of tempest of lightning, rain, and wind, kept me out of the city till the boat had left for New London, and I of course took cars for Providence, just in time to take the Stonington train for Kingston and Peacedale. Here I found Bro. Dixon and the brethren and sisters generally firm in the faith, and free from any dissensions,—a matter of rejoicing to me, since in so many instances there are strifes and divisions. They might be more engaged; I hope they will be visited with a gracious manifestation, but it is certainly a satisfaction to see a church which can appreciate the plain word of life, and feel an abiding interest in the gospel of God our Savior. The congregation was good, and, by the way, they have a very flourishing sabbath school. There is a sad neglect in many of the Advent churches of Sabbath-school instruction. Such is the neglect of brethren that I find often the children of our families attending elsewhere. How much do we value the doctrines of the word, if we allow our children to be instructed in views adverse to the truth of life?

Found brother Hastings at home. He was away "in the region round about" on Sunday, and came to speak in the evening at P. I was very much refreshed by his sermon, and also by a day or two's visiting in which, among other exercises, we visited the beach; and enjoyed the invigorating breath of the ocean, while we boyishly played with the crested surf, till our strength was exhausted, as often heretofore, the old sea-god driving us high and dry upon the sand.

On Tuesday I came to Lafayette, where I met Bro. Bellows, and preached in the evening to a goodly number. Bro. Bellows has had some hard struggles, and is very much alone down there. The Advent people of that old church will soon come out, and being identified as believers in the faith of the kingdom, it is to be hoped they will prosper, more.

Came in the next train to Apponaug, and walked a mile and a half to see Bro. Wait, who is in the greatest possible prostration, being entirely helpless, except the use of his left arm; and thus he has lain for months. Poor man! Probably drugs have had something to do with his condition. He has faith in God, yet. We had a praying season, in which the Lord seemed to be near. I arose to leave. It was now dark. I had not ascertained the place of meeting till I reached his house. It was five miles off. He sent a team with me, and arrived as some were beginning to leave. Ah! that was a good time. The people were glad to hear. Long (?) and earnestly, and plainly we spake, and after the sermon, others gave testimonies, that were pathetic and spiritual. To receive such evidence of the "hearing ear" and "understanding heart" gave me solid satisfaction; toil-worn and discouraged as I am, I shall not soon forget the season at Arnold's bridge.

Now, read the piece through, before you fling down the paper again. I walked some three miles, I should think, to reach River-point on Thursday. Here I found Bro. Taylor and others expecting me, and glad I came before night. I took a hint. It does the brethren good to know the preacher has come. Oh! Hiram, had my appointments been left as they were, the friends would not have been disappointed last week; thus we wish to throw the responsibility of our mistakes, and sometimes faults, upon others. The meeting was fully attended. Had ministers and people—houseful (Bro. Taylor's) and many out of doors. I gave them a lecture on the "Wilful King" power, in Dan. 11th chapter. That was new indeed to them. They think that the "Advents" attend to the prophecies, at least.

My next appointment was at Providence. Here I met with many old acquaintances in the cause, among them Bro. S. S. Brewer, Dr. Towne, and others. We had a good meeting that evening, and by invitation I concluded to remain with them over Sabbath, having received a line from New Bedford of Bro. Cook's preaching there for the present. There is some prosperity at the chapel on Pearl-st., and a prospect of more union and edification. I see not why they may not flourish. I preached twice and lectured once, yesterday. I say "preached and lectured," for I do not call lectures the preaching which is demanded just now; some lecturing is required, but more preaching. There has been too little preaching and too much lecturing for the up-building of the church. I find that preaching the gospel is well received by the faithful, and that good can be done.

The brethren in Providence are Bereans indeed; they study the scriptures and especially the prophetic scriptures. They are disposed to go down to the bottom of the book of Revelations. Their Bible-class is an efficient instrumentality in compassing the object. With proper limitations, and with love in our hearts, the Bible Class is useful everywhere. To-day I am under the "Monday power"—my throat is badly damaged.

Yours truly,

W. S. C.

Prov. R. I., Aug. 18, '56.

P. S. I express my gratitude for the liberality of the brethren in this city, at Peacedale, and indeed at all the places.

W. S. C.

For the Crisis.

Heavenly-mindedness.

BY J. NUTE.

"Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: for where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." Matt. 6 : 19—21.

"No man can serve two masters."

"All that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father but is of the world."

It seems that the devil reigns in this world; but we are looking forth to the time when he will be destroyed, and Christ shall take the throne and on it reign forever. Glory be to God that his children are to have deliverance in a little while.

Let us live like pilgrims and strangers on this earth; for here we have no continuing city, or abiding place, but are seeking one to come.

"Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory."

Look not on things which are seen, which are carnal, but look on things which are not seen, which are eternal.

"Love not the world, neither the things which are in the world.

"If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him."

"Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God."

Sandwich, N. H., Aug. 21, '56.

The World's Crisis.

BOTON, SEPTEMBER 24, 1856.

Litchfield Campmeeting.

This meeting has been one of interest and profit. It was in an elevated place among the hills, where pure air and water contributed to the health and comfort of those present.

Our first assembling was on Wednesday evening, which was an interesting prayer meeting.

Thursday A. M. Br. Burnham preached from Ps. 11 : 5. We were shown in a very clear manner the importance of trials, and the fact that the Lord tests his children by placing them where they will develop themselves.

The subject was one of deep interest, and those who listened to the discourse felt much benefited. It was plainly set before us, that trials are necessary in order to develop our character, and make us acquainted with ourselves.

Thursday P. M. the writer made some remarks on the importance of pleasant words. Text, Prov. 16 : 24.

Thursday evening, Br. Munger preached from Lu. 22 : 32, showing the importance of faithfulness on the part of the ministry in these times of peril, in being examples to the flock of God. Brn. Howell, Mathewson, Decker, and Burnham, followed with interesting remarks.

Friday A. M. Sr. Higgins spoke from 2 Peter, 3 : 14.

Our Sr. was listened to with much interest, while giving a synopsis of our faith, and the evidence that we are near the things for which the church has long been looking.

Friday P. M. Bro. E. Crowell of Hartford Ct., was heard with delight, while speaking on Gen. 49 : 10. He showed us from examination of the Scriptures that sheh-yet, the word rendered sceptre in the text, is usually translated tribe ; and tho't the true idea would be given in this passage were it thus rendered.

[We have since examined the subject, and find that out of the 187 times that this word occurs in the Old Testament, it is rendered tribe and tribes 140 times. Ed.]

The idea then is, that Judah shall not cease to be a tribe until Shiloh come. The ten tribes were lost or scattered, long before the first advent of the Messiah, but not so with Judah.

Friday evening, Bro. J. Howell from Ill. preached from Eph. 5 : 18, a discourse of deep interest and practical utility. He made the point plain that it is our duty and privilege to be filled with the Holy Spirit now, as well as in the early days of christianity, and that without it, we are shorn of our strength as preachers of the gospel, and that all need its aid,—"for we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered."

Saturday was occupied by Bro. Decker of Buffalo, in presenting the prophetic and historic evidences showing that we are very near the saints' happy home. Many responded—"let thy kingdom come."

First day, A. M., Bro. H. L. Hastings presented very clear evidence that we are in the period called by Daniel,—"the time of the end," and that we may soon expect the King of Kings to come in all his glory.

First day, P. M., Bro. Burnham preached from Mat. 6 : 10, showing that when Christ comes he will set up a kingdom on this earth, after the cleansing of the sanctuary, and the removal of the curse. We think all must have been satisfied that the Bible clearly teaches that this earth after some changes, is to be the future abode of the righteous.

At 5 o'clock, Bro. Turner of Hartford preached from Luke 21 : 25—31, showing from the history of the past, that the kingdom of God is about to be established, and that what is to be done should be done quickly.

In the evening, Bro. Flavel presented further evidence that the kingdom of God will soon come, for which the church has been so long praying.

Monday A. M., Bro. H. L. Hastings spoke on 2 Tim. 2 : 11—12, showing that we must suffer with Christ, if we would reign with him.

Bro. Burnham followed with closing remarks, urging the children of the Lord to press "forward" for the prize at the end of the race.

We were obliged to leave at the close of the Monday morning meeting.

The campmeeting was to continue until Wednesday. We have had no report of the meetings on Tuesday, but learned from Br. Munger, whom we saw Tuesday morning, that the meeting continued with deep interest during Monday afternoon and evening.

A number of backsliders were reclaimed, and some sinners converted during this campmeeting.

Some of the social meetings were among the best I ever enjoyed.

The spirit of God rested upon us in power, producing great comfort and rejoicing.

Many will remember the meeting with heartfelt gratitude to the Lord, for the privilege of attending that feast of tabernacles. We parted in sadness, but hope to meet in joy.

Boston.

It is presumed that our brethren and sisters scattered abroad, would like to know something of the state of things in this city.

Well, the good Lord blesses us, and we feel more determined than usual to endure to the end, believing that our hope will soon be consummated.

During the summer we have had prayer-meetings every Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings, and have found them to be of great benefit.

Recently two have been converted and baptized, and one backslider reclaimed.

Those who have been ignorant of the blessed hope are becoming interested, and are searching the Bible to know the truth of the things declared unto them.

Two rose for prayers last Lord's day, and others are seeking for a deeper work of grace in their hearts.

We have agreed to fast and pray next Friday, and humble ourselves before the Lord, entreating him to revive his work in this city, and other places.

We feel conscious that it is time to work earnestly in the vineyard of the Lord.—Pray for us.

For the Crisis.

"Know Thyself."

BY MARTHA.

Man looks upon the outward appearances, but God looks upon the heart.

We may deceive our fellow-beings around us, but we cannot deceive God.

His all-seeing eye is ever upon us: every secret thought and every word is recorded, and the very motive of the heart is all known to him.

We must give a strict account of our behavior here, in the great reckoning day which is fast approaching; and each day as the sun sinks in the western horizon, we should be reminded with what rapidity time is rolling upon and fast hastening the hour when all must stand before the bar of God and hear their everlasting destiny decided.

How necessary then, that we all look well to our own selves while it is called today, and see that we are not deceiving ourselves with a mere profession.

But let us know of a surety that we abide in the vine, and be always found bearing the same manner of fruit as the vine which we profess to be grafted into; and not be found at one time with a heart sending forth sweet water, and at another time bitter water. Is this the way with a pure fountain?

Let us look at the life of our Master, our Pattern, our great Teacher, and see if our life corresponds with the example he has set for us to follow. Let us see if we daily possess the same spirit that he possessed while here upon earth, for his word declares;—"if we have not the spirit of Christ we are none of his."

Can we be reviled, and revile not again? can we bear to be evil spoken of, and feel no spirit of retaliation, but on the contrary exhibit a meek, gentle, long-suffering, forgiving spirit?

Have we a heart to pray for one we know seeks our injury?

If not, let us now examine the ground of our hearts, and be sure that we know our own selves, lest any of us should come to the judgment with an expectation of a seat at God's right hand, and have to take up with the sad lamentation,—"the harvest is past the summer is ended, and we are not saved."

Let us search our hearts with all diligence, while mercy's hours are extended, and see that our every action, and motive is to do all with an eye single to the glory of God.

Let us see that our affections are not set on this vain and transitory world, and that we are not striving to carry this world in one hand, and the religion of Jesus in the other.

Can we stand unmoved with our arms folded and see one of God's little flock suffering, with the means in our hand to supply their wants?

Let us not be deceived, God is not mocked. What a man soweth, that shall he also reap.

Plymouth, Ct., August, '56.

For the Crisis.

Letters to a Friend.

NUMBER I.

My Dear Sister:—In your letter you write of peculiar trials and temptations; of being depressed with an indifference and coldness from which it seems impossible to arouse; also that the confusion and divisions which exist among those who profess to believe in the immediate coming of Jesus, cause you to doubt the past, and even to enquire—"what is truth?"—"where is the word of the Lord, and who are the watchmen that are sounding the trump of God, and giving the household meat in due season?' You seem to be on the point of giving up and drawing back, which would be perdition. May the spirit guide my thoughts and pen, while I try to write a few encouraging words.

First, I would say, realize the great truth that you and I, and all are to settle our own accounts with the Judge, and that by the word we are to be judged; not by this Br. or Sr, who may condemn or acquit us by their peculiar notions. The great leading truth is, Jesus is coming, and there will be a few who will be ready, waiting, and watching, pure, fitted for translation; and having this hope, they will not be inactive, but will purify themselves.

The Bride maketh herself ready, therefore they will come to the faith having the unity of the spirit and the bonds of peace. Here one and there one scattered abroad will compose the few, who will have faith on the earth when Jesus comes.

Second. The great individual work here, is to make our own calling and election sure. I do believe a personal work here is needed, and instead of looking to others, we should see that we are right. We need, as a people, to strike out into a new path, or to enquire for the "old paths;" and with entire consecration, and in the exercise of perfect faith, really loving God with all the heart.

Perfect assurance is our privilege, yea, our duty; and we must have it and live it, if we would be ready for the kingdom. This holiness, with all its attendant graces, (which catalogue we find in the Word) was found in the primitive church; and there have been christians of this stamp in all ages and churches since.

Such a piety, such a religion is a beautiful picture to present from the Word and practically in our lives; and no other will prove salvation.

We need a baptism, like that of the primitive church; and we may expect it as individuals and as a church, if we are thus holy; for the apostle in speaking of this very thing, says,—"the promise is unto you and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as our Lord shall call."

The promise has not been reversed. The words of our Savior were,—"Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." The mass of professing christians may desire it when they view it, but their experience shows they prefer trying to serve God and mammon.

I do believe in "fighting the good fight of faith," and getting a perfect and permanent victory. It seems that many, who are earnest, conscientious, trying to fight the good fight, get no victory; and I fear in most cases it is not the "good fight," but rather a legal struggle. Conscience goads them on to do things that they do not love to do; hence, there is a perpetual struggle, as there always must be, till "conscience falls asleep in the bosom of love."

Now, the commandment is,—"Come out and be ye separate;" and the promise is, "I will receive you." If we hunger and thirst after righteousness, we shall be filled.

Dear sister, we shall find it will be unto us according to our faith. "By faith we stand." This desire to be holy, to stand complete in all the will of God, must be the work of the spirit.

O let us strive to enter in at the straight gate. Seek for truth from the Scriptures—understand the time in which we live—know the signs—avoid even listening to evil surmising and slander—in a word, live with our eye single to the glory of God.

Your sister in Christ,

T. F. Sargent.

Concord, N. H., Aug. 20, 1856.

For the Crisis.

My Journal.

NUMBER I.

BY W. M. INGHAM.

I set sail for the United States Friday, Aug. 15. Had a calm time until the 19th, when it commenced to rain, and wind blew fresh from the southeast; but through the kind protection of our heavenly Father, we arrived safe in Boston Harbor, Wednesday morning. Stopped one day in Boston and Charlestown, and called on a few brethren. 21st, rainy. 22d, I went to Wilbraham campmeeting and arrived just in time to hear preaching. Stopped through the meeting and had a good time. My heart was greatly cheered to see the love and union among the ministers and members; although differing in sentiment, yet agreeing to walk together in love, and striving to keep the unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace. May the Lord help us to do it, that we may show that we are the disciples of Jesus.

25th, I went to Springfield. In the evening, Bro. Whitney preached; had a good meeting: appearance of better union than has been.

26th, Enfield in the evening; had a good, cheering time. Two or three young people professed to be reclaimed.

27th, evening, at Jawbuck. Meeting at the Advent Chapel. Found a few there still striving for the kingdom.

28th, In Scitico.

29th, Warehouse Point; rainy and no meeting. 30th, evening, meeting at the school house, near Bro. House's.

31st, Lord's day, spoke thrice at the Hall in Warehouse Point—had a good, free time. The brethren and sisters appeared to be some encouraged to still persevere.

Bro. Williams was present and took part in the meeting.

Sept 1st, at Windsor. Meeting at the school house, near Bro, Cooper's. But few attended. Few Advent people there.

2d, at Hartford. Called on Bro. Crowell. Was kindly greeted by himself and family; had a pleasant interview. In the evening, spoke a little while to them about the precious promises of the speedy return of Jesus. Had a free time, and quite a number spoke, after I got through, of their prospects for the better land. I think it was not a lost season, thank the Lord!

3d, Springfield. Had a free time. The brethren and sisters appear to be well united now.

4th, meeting at Westboro. Quite a number there that are still looking for the Lord.

5th, South Natick. Meeting at a school house near Bro. Caarles Perry's.

The most that attended were young people. Perhaps there would have been others but for the political meeting not far distant, the same evening, and politics are before religion, I fear, with many who profess to love Jesus.

6th and 7th, at Worcester. Lord's day, spoke three times at Waldo Hall. Had a free time, and hope some good was done in the name of the holy child Jesus. A number spoke of their desire to go through, having no idea of stopping short of the end, which they still believe is near.

Bro. Morgan was present part of the day, and took part in the meeting.

Dear brethren and sisters, I would just say that my heart has often been made glad for the few weeks past, while I have had the pleasure of seeing a number of Father's family; some that I have seen in days past, and others that I never saw before, and hear them speak of the heavenly country, and their prospects of soon getting there.

Cheer up, lonely pilgrims, the prospect is brightening, the land is nearing; soon the warfare will be over, and the family all safely at home with Jesus. Let us all be faithful to the end.

From a pilgrim and stranger, still looking for a better country.

W. M. Ingham.

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 8.

New Hampshire State Conference.

The undersigned, Committee, appointed at the last Conference to call the next State Conference, at such time and place as they might deem proper, would give notice that the Conference will be holden at Lake Village, in the Advent Chapel, commencing Thursday, Oct. 9th at one o'clock P. M., and continue over the Sabbath.

Some may think the Conference this year should be holden at some other place, as it was at Lake Village last year; but the brethren at Lake Village are the only ones who have invited the Conference to be holden with them; and hence the decision.

It is hoped that the brethren in the vicinity will make one general and united effort to attend the meeting. Come one, come all; and also the brethren in the membership.

It will be remembered that at our last State Conference, and also at our "Ministers' Conference," it was agreed that "Christian character should be the only rule for christian fellowship."

Let all who can adopt this principle, come to the Conference and participate in the meeting; and may it result in the salvation of souls.

Soon "the righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein forever."

John Knowles, } Committee.
T. M. Preble, }

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. C. B. Turner.

Bro. Grant:—While reading the contents of the Crisis my heart is cheered by the spirit manifested by its numerous correspondents. It does my soul good to read such spiritual communications from Brn. and Srs. scattered abroad over the land; yes, and many I see from those who have hardly heard a sermon on the subject of the second advent.

It has been about seven years since I was brought to see the truth of the Lord's soon coming, and life only through Christ. Since that time, I have never felt for a moment to doubt the truthfulness of our position in the main.

Although we have looked for the Lord at a certain point of time and have been disappointed, yet the truth of God's word will stand, and all the evidences still remain, speaking to us in thunder tones, the Lord is soon coming.

I am fully satisfied in my own mind that our work is not all done yet, for when it is, the Master will come. There are many yet in the world that have never heard a word on the speedy coming of Christ, and life through Him. I have been led to think of late, that those who are looking for the coming of the Lord were too apt to think there could not much more be done for the world, but I think this is a sad mistake. I find there are yet in many places where the Advent doctrine has never been preached, those, who, when they hear the truth, will embrace it with all their hearts.

I have seen it of late where the truths of God's word have never been brought to light; especially, the Lord's soon coming, and life only through Christ.

When we hold up these truths in the light of God's word with the aid of the Holy Spirit, the traditions in the minds of many, vanish like the dew before the rising sun, and the truth fills its place. Then, instead of looking for death, they are found rejoicing in the soon coming of Christ to give them life; and can say with the apostle,—"Our life is hid with Christ in God; when He who is our life shall appear then shall we also appear with him in glory."

Brn. and Srs., gird on the armor anew, and work while the day lasts. There are many ways in which we can let our light shine and confess our faith; we can do so by our godly lives from day to day, and this we must do if we ever expect to be found in the kingdom of God.

O let us heed the words of the apostle, when he says—"we may understand all mysteries, and all knowledge," and even go so far as to give our bodies to be burned, yet it will profit us nothing unless it is mixed with faith, and all done with an eye single to the glory of God. We can let our light shine by confessing the truth from day to day to those with whom we associate, and not only let them understand what we believe, but let them see by our life that we do believe all that we profess.

We can let our light shine by distributing tracts on this great subject; and this is a method I am disposed to think we neglect.

Brn. and Srs., do we believe the Lord is soon coming, and all the world is rushing mad to perdition? Oh, how we ought to exert ourselves to save, if possible, some from destruction. You may think what good will a few tracts do? Ah, you cannot tell. "Cast your bread upon the waters and be satisfied to let the judgment determine the result. One dollar's worth of tracts rightly distributed, with the aid of your prayers, may be the means of saving one soul from death, and that is worth more than the whole world.

Oh, think of it. Do you wish to lay up your money? I know there are those in the Advent church who, instead of having all they have and are upon the altar consecrated to God, are striving to lay up treasures in this world. Oh, my prayer to God is that such may yet be converted. Faith without works is dead. A poor, dead, formal Advent faith is no better than any other. I fear there are many deceiving themselves upon this point.

Do you not want life everlastsng? Then sow to the spirit. How long do you think it would take to convince man that you believed the Lord was soon coming with all you could say to him, and still go on and let all your actions tell to the contrary?

You could not convince him of the truth, for while they hear you say the Lord is soon coming, they see you at the same time as eager after the world as any one, striving to lay up a treasure on earth.

But you go to him and tell him the Lord is soon coming, show him the evidences—give him some tracts to read, and then let every act of your life correspond with your faith, and you shed an influence which may be the means of saving him in the day of God.

Oh Brn. and Srs., let us gird on the armor anew and go to work in good earnest for the Lord, and if you cannot buy ten dollars' worth of tracts, buy what you can, and distribute.

We can all preach in this way. A word spoken in season is often the means of turning a soul from error into truth. It was but a word dropped by my own brother that set me to investigating this subject. Would to God that every little flock scattered over the land would take up a collection for a tract fund and let each member of the same become a worker in the vineyard of the Lord in distributing the tracts; and by so doing, while the Lord tarries, there may yet be good done in His name.

Oh, Brn. and Srs., shall we do it? Let us lay all that we have and are upon the altar, and see the importance of living out our faith. Should we suffer those who have spent all their money and time in preaching the gospel to quit the field of conflict and go to work with their hands to sustain themselves and families? God forbid. Stay up their hands in this hour of severest conflict. Let them blow the trumpet in Zion, and spread abroad the news of a King that shall reign in righteousness.

Cheer up, lonely pilgrim, the Life-giver is coming the crown is with him, He will soon deck thy brow. The conflict is sharp, yet we can overcome through the blood of the Lamb, glory to His name. I long to be there. I can say with the poet—

"Let thy kingdom, blessed Savior,
Come and bid our sorrows cease."

Yours truly, C. B. Turner.

Syracuse, Aug. 24, 1856.

P. S. One word in reference to tracts. There are many tracts published, but I find none advertised that gives an exposition of the prophecies of Daniel. I think there ought to be a tract published taking up the second and seventh of Daniel, giving the outlines of the history of the world in the most simple form with the signs of the times, for those who have never investigated the subject. I would like a thousand of such.

Dear Brn. let us work for the Lord, that when He comes we may receive a crown of life that fadeth not away.

C. B. T.

Christian graces are like perfumes. The more they are pressed, the sweeter they smell; like stars, that shine brightest in the dark; like trees, the more they are shaken, the deeper root they take, and the more fruit they bear.

Letter from Bro. W. P. Wentworth.

Bro. Grant:—It is with joy I anticipate the glory that awaits those who fear God and keep his commandments. When the future age is ushered in, we shall see and be with our Savior. We shall all know the Lord from the least to the greatest. We shall dwell in peace and safety; "For as I live," saith God, "the whole earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Then the righteous shall shine forth in the kingdom which was prepared from the foundation of the world. Then the meek will inherit the earth, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace.

Dear Brn. and Srs., I exhort you in the name of the Lord to be faithful; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh, and soon, if we are faithful, we shall receive a crown of life that fadeth not away. Then we shall have received the end of our faith, even the salvation of our souls. Let us all gird ourselves anew for the good work before us. Soon our sore conflicts will end and the reward of eternal life be given to all the faithful in Christ Jesus.

Wm. P. Wentworth.

East Homer, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. Stoddard.

Bro. Grant:—I wish to let those who are pilgrims and strangers here, know that I am trying to keep on the road to Mount Zion. We are alone here in the faith of the soon coming of our Lord. I know of no others in this large town of like precious faith. I feel lonely at times, yet not discouraged for I know in whom I have believed. I often wish for the privilege of meeting with those who love the appearing of our Lord.

I rejoice when the welcome return of the Crisis greets us; truly it is like bread to the hungry, and water to the thirsty. We thank those who have so kindly sent it to us. I feel to put my trust in the Lord, knowing that he careth for those who try to do his will. O may we overcome all selfishness and sin, for we read that none but those who have pure hearts and clean hands shall be able to stand when the Lord shall appear, taking vengeance on those who know him not.

I feel the need of more patience, more love, more meekness, more humbleness of heart: in short, I feel the need of living more like my Redeemer, for he is our pattern and we must be like him, if we would enter through the gates into the city.—When I view the narrowness and straitness of the way and my own imperfections, I ask myself, shall I be there? I believe all will be there that are found faithful.—I desire to be there,—I must be an inhabitant of that land, where no one will say I am sick. This world looks dark and dreary to me, but the night is far spent. I believe the time is not far in the distance, when "he that shall come will come and will not tarry." May the Lord help us to shun all the devices of Satan, that we may escape those things that are coming on the earth. O that the Lord's people may have a mind to work while the day lasts, is the prayer of one hoping to overcome.

Jane Stoddard.

Dummerston, Vt.

For the Crisis.

Letter From Sr. Shaw.

[Published by request of Br. Burnham.]

Dear Bro. Burnham:—It is with a heart broken with sorrow, that I write you. My loved one is gone. John sleeps. The companion of my youth is no more. He died last Monday morning about 4 o'clock. He had been confined to the house only one week. He suffered much, but he is at rest. We moved out here last Fall in hopes that his health might be better, but he has not been able to preach since. We are left in a land of strangers, some kind friends, but no Advent people. O if there was only one to sympathize with me, how glad I should be, but I am alone.

He had his senses to the last. On Sunday, he talked with us, and exhorted us to be faithful, but it was hard for him to leave me and the children. He wished me to write to the brethren East, to remember me. He used to speak in the F. W. Babtist meetings some, and had won the love of a good many. I think if he could have lived, we might have had an Advent society. He chose Eld. Cary,—F. W. Baptist—to preach, and the text, which was Job 14: 14; "If a man die shall he live again." The funeral was in the Presbyterian meeting house, Eld. Curt's and Eld. Cumings assisting. There was a large concourse of people. Eld. Cary preached a good discourse on the resurrection.

O may the [illegible] day speed on when the saints will come forth.

If you, or any one, come West, do not fail of coming to see me. I live eight miles from Janesville, the same from Beloit, one and a-half from Emerald Grove, which is my P. O. address.

From the widow of one of your dearest friends. I believe the Lord will provide. Pray for me.

Susan H. Shaw.

For the Crisis

Letter from sister Abby M. Bement.

Bro. Grant:—I would like to say a few words to the scattered flock in this dark and cloudy day. Our God has given us His word, written by inspiration, to be a lamp to our feet and a light to our path, and has promised to give us his Holy Spirit to help our infirmities, and guide us into all truth that we may be without excuse in the day of judgment.

I believe we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we have looked for Jesus soon to come. The coming of the King of Kings again on earth to reign, has been the hope of the true church ever since the days of the apostles, and farther back in the lapse of ages. We may look to the time Enoch sojourned on earth; he prophesied of His return with ten thousand of His saints. And although most treat the subject with contempt, neverthe- God's word will prove true, for Jesus has said, "though heaven and earth pass away my words shall not pass away." And although there is but a little remnant of the faithful remaining, there was but a few saved in Noah's ark, while many million were drowned.

Be not discouraged then, fellow traveler, hope thou in God, the race will soon be run, the victory gained and God's people gathered into the everlasting kingdom.

What a prize to be gained by the soldier of the cross. Then endure a little while longer and the crown will be yours.

Abby M. Bement.

Woodstock, Vt., Aug. 1856.

Always Speak Kindly.—Our correspondent R., sends some excellent thoughts under this title, which our space obliges us to condense. If the reader never speaks unkindly to anybody—neighbor, husband, wife, or child, man servant, or maid servant—he may pass on to the next article. But if he does, he will permit us to speak kindly to him for a moment for his own and others' sake. I will suppose the best, that your unkind words do not spring from any willful intention to wound or offend; but you think you have some provocation, or you are sad or depressed from low spirits, or some cross or disappointment. But are not others as much afflicted in this way as yourself? Alas, what heart does not know its own bitterness, and often feel itself in such a state that ki d words are absolutely necessary to enable it to bear up under its numerous troubles. Would you needlessly add to that grief which you might assuage by words of kindness, which would, at the same time, mitigate your own? The unkind words of others, which provoke your own, proceed, perhaps, from causes which, if you knew them, you would be unwilling to aggravate by a word or look. You would, perhaps, see that it would require a much less severe exercise of self-discipline in you than in them to be kind. Be assured the safest rule is, always to speak kindly to all.—[Parish Visitor.

Obituary.

Died, of consumption, in Barnston, C. E., July 20, 1856, Albert A. Clark, son of Matthew L. and Clarissa Clark, in the 27th year of his age.

Brother M. L. Clark and family became believers in the speedy coming of Christ, by hearing Elder Columbus Green lecture on the subject in 1842. Albert was the youngest of four sons. In October '48, by lifting too hard in collecting stone for building, he caused a rupture in his stomach, from which he never entirely recovered, though the most skilful medical aid within reach was procured. In 1853, brother Clark moved from Melbourne to Barnston. In the winter following there was a revival of religion in the neighborhood, and quite a number were baptized, Albert among others; though it was a cold day in December, he was firm and decided in his purpose to go forward in this ordinance; he took no cold, but his health rather improved, so that he became able to walk among the neighbors. Last winter he appeared to be failing; he gradually grew worse, and at times his sufferings were severe, but he bore all with Christian patience and fortitude. Brother Himes, when on his way to the Conference at the Outlet, called and prayed with him, which visit he seemed to enjoy much. He was quite calm in view of death, and said he did not want to get well. As his end approached he became more devoted and prayerful,—he loved more than ever to hear the Bible read and good pieces from the papers. He fell asleep in Jesus, in expectation of soon being raised in the likeness of his Redeemer. A funeral sermon was delivered by the writer to a large and attentive audience, founded on Job 19:21, "Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye friends, for the hand of God hath touched me."

S. W. Thurber.

Two weeks have passed, and quickly flown,
Since we were sadly called to mourn
A lovely brother borne away,
By cruel death's resistless sway.

Another tender bud was nipt,
And now lies with'ring where we wept;
To wait the resurrection morn,
When all the saints shall be brought home.

There side by side those loved ones lie,
Our hearts are sad, we mourn, we sigh,
O Lord thy Kingdom soon restore
When death s foul work shall be no more.

We long to have the monster slain,
We long to have Messiah reign;
We long to clasp those lovely ones
Where grief, where sorrow never comes.

Melissa.

Domestic Summary.

The Late Fights in Kansas,—by a Participant.—From a letter dated August 19, to the Rev. Daniel Foster, of Lowell, written by his brother, who was engaged in the recent affairs at Franklin, Washington Creek, and Titus' Camp, near Lecompton, Kanzas, the following extracts are taken:

"War is a terrible thing I have before heard of it. I have now seen it. I have heard the balls whistling about my ears. I have stood where men were shot down as you would shoot wild beasts. I have heard the groans of the wounded and dying. I have seen the bloody corpses of the dead, and truly war is a terribly cruel thing."

"Last Tuesday evening, the 12th of August, we started from Lawrence, i. e., 25 horsemen and 56 footmen. On arriving at Franklin, the first point of attack, we found the enemy had been apprised of our expedition, and was prepared to give us a warm reception. Their log fort was flanked on the one side by another log building, in which was kept the post office, and on the other by a large hotel. We could make no impression upon them with our rifles, and they refused to surrender. We were determined, however, to recover our cannon, which we wanted for routing these nests of land pirates. We accordingly surrounded the fort, and commenced a brisk firing with Sharpe's rifles, which they vigorously returned. This continued about three hours. One of our men was killed, and several wounded. We then loaded a wagon with hay, backed it against the post office, and set it on fire. When the flames burst forth the poltroons cried lustily for quarter. We then extinguished the fire, the enemy in the meantime making good their escape. They left in our hands the cannon and upwards of 50 muskets. The citizens of Franklin took no part in this attack. The night had passed in this engagement at Franklin.

"We had now to prepare balls for the cannon, and we were not ready to proceed to Sander's till Friday. We marched upon his fort to the number of nearly 400. When about three miles distant they could see us on a hill, and they at once fled. We found their flag in the bushes, with the motto "Enforce the Laws." Some arms, ammunition and tents fell into our hands here. We reduced the fort to ashes.

"That night Col. Titus was out with his desperadoes, engaged in his favorite pastime of stealing horses, and intending, it is supposed, to attack Judge Wakefield's house, which, however, he found too strongly guarded. They stole three or four horses and went back to their fort, little dreaming how hard retribution was treading on their heels. In the morning his fort was surrounded, and the firing commenced. One of our best men, Captain Shambra, was mortally wounded before our cannon arrived. That was soon brought up, and planted forty rods from the fort. It was loaded with balls run from the type metal of the Herald of Freedom press, which Col. Titus had destroyed last May. When the first shot was fired, the Lawrence boys shouted, 'The Herald of Freedom is issued again!' The cannon was fired six times. At the sixth fire they surrendered. One of their men was killed, and Col. Titus badly wounded. We took nineteen prisoners, and a quantity of arms and ammunition. Some of the tents were identified as belonging to the Chicago company. I had the good fortune to receive the sword of Col. Titus, to very nice article, which I mean to transmit a my children."

Kansas. A dispatch of the 16th, inst., from Chicago, says:

"Mrs. Robinson arrived in this city to-day. She says the bail of her husband was fixed at $5,500, and that of the other prisoners at $5,000 each.

Gov. Geary had released all the prisoners that were in the hands of the mob at Leavenworth.

The Missourians generally had fled from Westport, fearing an attack from General Lane.

Gen. Smith had ordered all the families seeking safety at Fort Leavenworth, to leave on Wednesday, the 10 inst.

The pro-slavery men report a batle at Planters Bridge on the 31st ult., between five hundred Missourians under General Atchison, and a party of Free Soilers. The Missourians fled at the first charge."

The report of the capture of Gen. Richardson by Gen. Lane, is contradicted by the St. Louis Republican.

A petition is in circulation in Chicago, requesting the Governor of Illinois to call an extra session of the Legislature to consider measures for the protection of Citizens of that State who have emigrated to Kansas.

C. H. Branscomb telegraphs from St. Louis, 15th, to the Springfield Republican, as follows:

"The State prisoners are released on bail by Judge Lecompte. Gov. Geary is in Leavenworth, and leaves for Lawrence soon. He will call to his aid 100,000 United States troops and 50,000 volunteers from the North if necessary. Captain Emery's banditti arrested an officer of the army, for which they were all brought before Gen. Smith. Rev. Mr. Nute is in Lawrence. There is a jubilee of rejoicing. The marauders all are to be driven out."

Foreign News.

Arrival of the Asia.

England. The Royal British Joint Stock Bank, London, has failed. The Bank had done business, having branches in other places. It had 300 stockholders, all individually liable to the extent of their means, and as the assets are very unsatisfactory, there will be total ruin to all concerned.

Switzerland. An insurrection has taken place in the canton of Neufchatel. The Royalist or Prussian party seized the Chateau, arrested the Councillor of State and hoisted the Prussian flag. The federal party subsequently retook the town and arrested Count Pourtalis, the insurgent leader. Twelve Prussians were killed.

Italy. Italian affairs remain unsettled. The Paris correspondent of the Times says it is certain a second note has been addressed by Naples to France and England of a more conciliatory nature. The Sardinian army is to be increased. Count Cavour has addressed a note to the Sardinian Ministers at foreign Courts, declaring that this measure had been adopted solely in consequence of the policy of Austria, and intimates decidedly that Sardinia will not tolerate Austrian intervention in Italy.

Italy

Mazzini has published in the L'Italia e Popolo an address to all Italian military men, of the following tenor:

He reproaches them for submitting to the dominant power of a few Swiss regiments in the two Sicilies and Rome, as also to that of Austria in the Duchies and Lombardy. He holds up to them the example of France and England, and asks whether a hundred thousand Frenchmen or Englishmen, with arms in their hands, would permit 10,000 or 12,000 Swiss to keep them down.

It appears at last decided that the document attributed to the King of Naples, at the reply to the remonstrances of England and France, is true. Efforts have been made to induce the King to withdraw this reply, but these efforts remain without effect. These words that he will "repel force by force" stand intact in their proud absurdity.

A Vienna paper says that King Ferdinand has addressed a second note to France and England couched in a tone designed to do away with the impression made by his former note; that the French Minister at Naples was "almost satisfied" with it, and that Austria was entirely so.

Serious Riots at Malaga.—At 2 o'clock in the morning of July 21, 1500 regular troops marched up to the castle of Gibralfaro and possessed themselves of it by 4 o'clock, when they hoisted their standard, and fired a salute of thirteen guns. The commotion which prevailed in the city in consequence cannot be described. The civil governor finding that the troops were without rations of any kind, ordered two 32-pounders to be conveyed to a hill at the back of the castle, from which he anticipated driving them out. Five or six hundred militiamen were told off for that duty, and very soon accomplished the task. Without loss of time the 32-pounders were brought into play, but the distance being too great the firing proved ineffectual. At about 2 o'clock in the afternoon eighteen unarmed men and women, who were despatched from the citadel to procure provisions, were met by the militia and shot on the spot. Immediately after fifteen others left the citadel for the same purpose, and they were taken prisoners. This result induced the regulars to put two or three guns in position for firing on the town in case of not receiving the supplies. Before 6 o'clock, however, mules and asses, in great numbers, laden with bread and other provisions, were observed proceeding to the castle. The streets of Malaga are all barricaded, and militiamen are at every corner. It was rumored that the civil governor, M. Velo, had made up his mind to attack the citadel with a large force without loss of time; and in consequence the inhabitants were in a fearful state of alarm Business of all kinds was suspended and the shops and houses closed.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Canada East.

Eld. E. Burnham having responded to the request made by the Brethren in Barnston, Hatley, Melbourne and Danville, will spend the last two Sabbaths in Sept. in Hatley and Barnston, as the brethren there may arrange.

Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 1st and 2d, at Melbourne.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Danville.

The brethren at Hatley will receive him from the Portland train on Saturday, Sept. 20, at the Compton station. J. Porter.

Maine Annual Advent Conference.

The annual conference of Adventists in Maine will be holden in the Read Meeting-house, Richmond, Thursday, Oct. 2, at 2 o'clock, and continue until Sunday evening. It is hoped that the brethren generally throughout the State will feel a sufficient interest in this meeting to make an effort to attend, especially our preaching brethren. Come, brethren, in the spirit of labor and unity, and let us confer in the love of Christ in relation to the great work to which He has called us; praying for heavenly wisdom. Though there are but few brethren in the neighborhood to sustain this conference, yet they will do all they can, and those from abroad will expect to aid in the expense according to their ability.

Nicholas Smith.
S. K. Partridge.

Br. Grant:—Please say in the Crisis, that I will be at New Bedford (Mass.) the last two two Sabbaths in Sept. F. H. Berick.

P. S.—My P. O. Address from Sept. 20 to 27 will be New Bedford, after that I will receive letters at Boston, care of George T. Adams, No. 167 Hanover St. F. H. B.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Casco, 28. [illegible] Partridge.

The Lord permitting, I will preach as follows:—

In the vicinity of Crane's Grove, Adaline, Payne's Point, East and West Plumb River, until Oct. 1.

Ripley, Brown Co. Ill., Oct. 5, 6, and 7.
Cooperstown, Ill., Oct. 8 and 9.
Mt. Sterling 10 and 11.
Ripley, 12.
Camp Point 13 and 14.
Detroit, 15 and 16.
Pleasant Vale, 17 and over Sunday.
Bozra, 20 and 21.
Detroit 23.
Ripley 25, and over Sunday.
Freeport, 31 and over Sunday Nov. 2 Bro. Leister, of Buchanan, wil lmeet me there and accompany me to Dubuque, Iowa.

I will visit other places in Ill., if desired, if brethren will address me at Freeport and give the necessary direction. If brethren think it not best for me to visit them as proposed, will they please inform me by letter, directed to South Bend, or Laporte, Ind., or Freeport, Ill., as we do not wish to impose ourself by preaching on communities where it is not desired. L. H. Chase.

Providence permitting, I will preach as follows:

Concord, N. H., Sunday, Sept. 21.
Woodstock, Vt., [Densmore Hill] Sunday, Sept 28.
Rawsonville, Vt., Sunday, Oct. 5.
North Adams, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 12.
Springfield, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 19.
Providence, R. I., Sunday, Oct. 26th.
Worcester, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 2.
Lowell, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 9.

S. W. Bishop.

Providence permitting I will preach as follows:—

Girard, Pa., near Bro. L. D. Allens, Wednesday eve., 24.
Edenboro', Thursday eve., 25.
Blooming Valley, Friday, and Saturday evenings, 26 and 27, over Sunday.
Fredonia, N. Y., Tuesday eve. 30.

If the Brethren there desire it, please inform me in time at Waterloo, N. Y., or at Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 1.
Toronto, C. W., Oct. 2.
Whitby, C. W., Oct. 3.
Reach C. W., 4 & 5.

John T. Ongley.

Bro. D. E. Moulton will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 12.

Bro. J. Hemenway will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 26.

S. W. Bishop.

Bro. D. E. Moulton will preach in Great Falls. Sund Oct 5 S. W. B.

If Providence permits, I will preach at Flying Point, Sunday, Sep. 21.
Woolwich, " " 28.

R. R. York.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren al Westfield Farms, the 4th Sunday in Sept. H. Pratt.

Providence permitting, I will meet the "little flock" in Vernon, Vt., the last Sunday in Sept. All the brethren in the vicinity are requested to attend. A. Decker.

The Lord will, I will preach at Footville Ct. near Bro. Hall's, Oct. 1st and 2nd evenings.

Lanesville, Wednesday evening, Oct. 8th, and continue over the Sabbath.

S. G. Mathewson.

If Providence permit, I will preach at
Windsor, Ct., Oct. 2.
New Britain, Oct. 3.
Cheshire, Oct. 5.
Meridan, Oct. 6 & 7.
Fair Haven, Conn., 8.
Bridgeport 10, and over the Sabbath as Bro. Bassett may appoint.
Waterbury, Ct, Oct. 13.
Plymouth Hollow, 14 & 15.
Northfield, 16.
Litchfield Station 17.
Newfield, 19.
Collinsville, 20.
Canton, 21.
Winsted, 22.
Pleasant Valley, 26.

C. Goodrich.

If I am well I will attend to Bro. Bishop's appointments as follows:
Worcester, Sept. 30.
Lowell, Oct. 1.
Lawrence, 2.
Portsmouth, 3.
Kennebunt Port, 4 and over the Sabbath.
Great Falls, 6.
Portsmouth, 7.
Newburyport, 8.
Marblehead 9 & 10.
Salem, 12.
Lynn, 13.
Boston, 14.
Natick, 15th where Bro. Persy directs.
Westboro, 16.

I hope the Brethren will inform me if these appointments conflict with previous ones, in season to save me expense and trouble.

Hiram Munger.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

GLAD TIDINGS:
OR
BIBLE PROOF

That WOE and SIN are to end in the Universe, by a LITTERAL DESTRUCTION of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment.

All Texts on FUTURE PUNISHMENT collected and arranged.

By JACOB BLAIN,
Baptist Minister, of Buffalo, New York.

"And there shall be no more death, sorrow, crying, nor pain."—Rev. 21: 4.

"And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, * * * herd I saying, blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, forever and ever."—Rev. 5: 13.

"The last enemy shall be destroyed."—1 Cor. 15: 26.

Published by the author, No. 19 North Division Street, Buffalo, N. Y., and for sale at the Crisis Office, Boston, Mass. Price 10 cts. single.

Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called the 'Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double that amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

Dr. Decker's pamphlet on the 2300 Days. Price, singly 10 cts.; per dozen, 50 cts.

NEW BOOKS.

We have just received two new and interesting works. One from Bro. J. Lenfest, entitled "The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion," and "The New Birth."

Price for single copy 12 cts; per hundred, $8; to the poor free.

They can be had at this office, or of Bro. Lenfest at Machiasport, Me.

Another from William Shepherd, Elizabeth City, N. J., entitled, "The Saints' Inheritance."

Bro. Shepherd will furnish this work of 50 pages at the following low rates, which he says is below cost, as he wishes the truth to be spreading:

Four copies	$0.25
Nine	0.50
Eighteen	1.00
Fifty	2.50
One hundred	5.00

And in addition, he will prepay the postage.

"Wellcome's Treatise on Matt., 24th and 25th chapters.—Permit me to say a word in favor of this work, and that is, in brief, I express my conviction that it is the best work on Matt. 24th and 25th I have ever seen. It is truthful, stirring, perspicuous, adapted to convince, and not lengthy. I hope our brethren will circulate it widely."

D. T. Taylor.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

The following works are published and sold by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.—They are also for sale at the Office of the "World's Crisis," 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.; and by W. Pratt, Moline, Ill.; P. A. Smith, 4 Frank street, Rochester, N. Y.; A. F. Porter, 20 Erie street, Philadelphia, Pa.; S. S. Brewer, 54 Wilson street, Providence, R. I.:—

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By I. C. Welcome. 38 cents; postage 6 cents.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions of the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 16 cents per volume.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—by D. T. Taylor. Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—by John Cumming. State of the Dead, by Milton. Intermediate State, by Grew. Each 24 pages. Price 5 cents single; $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the Coast of Man—Ancient Landmarks—Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—price 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred.——Future Punishment—The Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise, it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

A Stacy, L Plummer, F Tibbals, J M Soule, H B Baldwin, L R Barker, J A Stillman, L H Hill, Wm W Scoville, W Harris, A D Smith, P Jones, J F Baker, L T Moses, H J Peck. R Palmer, R Scoville, J Gregory, E Potter, G L White, M G Dunham, R Chase, L Tuttle, A R White, R J Whitehead, G M Garritt, J E Baldwin, C H Russ, J Sharp, O Haynes, T Chambers, W P Wentworth, J Pinkham, J Dinman, S Hovey, S C Clark, A P Wells, S Dodge, J Linard, J Reves, W Fanagan, P Sanborn, C Malone, G L Raymond, J Estey, J Towser, J Baker, C Louge, C Robinson, N Hornaday, J Squire, J W Foster, P A Deming, F W Don, J Curtis, C Staples, L Hart, A Osman, A Ware, W McCullock, M B Cowley, E Hall, A Edgecomb, T M Preble, M Gavit, $1.00 each.

C H Cotton, A Hunt, J Scoville, J Ackerman, E Hogan, W B Rose, E Taylor, J French, J Hine, J Quimby 50 cents each.

Susannah Grant $3.00; C Baldwin 32 cts; E Hobbs, $1.50; E Allen, $2.00; V R Matthews $3.00; M Barlen $2.00; P Blood $2.00; W F Higgins $12.00; J Worthing $2.00; J Emmons $2.00; C Raymond $2.00

For books—A young man, $1.00; E Hobbs 50 cents; W McCullock $2.00.

Poetry.

[Written for the Christian Reformer.]

THE LAST WATCH.

'Tis the last watch we're keeping,
O, Christian, awake!
Slumber not, lest the morning
Thy dreams should o'ertake.
O, watch for the Day-Star, and hail its first beam;
E'en now yon horizon is flushed with its gleam.

'Tis the last storm that gathers
All wildly and dark,
O'er the rough billows tossing
Our frail trembling bark.
The last sighs and tears are now heaving the breast;
We're nearing the haven—the mansions of rest.

Our last tears we're weeping—
Grief's fount will soon dry;
God's own hand will wipe out
All tears from each eye.
Temptations and trials will soon all be past;
Oh, faint not, worn pilgrim, thou'rt bearing thy last.

Our last prayers are rising
To heaven's high throne,
For mercy imploring,
Ere mercy is gone.
Soon we'll change these sad pleadings for rapturous song,
And on Mount Zion shout with the angelic throng.

'Tis the last watch we're keeping,
O, let us awake!
Nor slumber, lest morning,
Our dreams should o'ertake:
But watch for the Day-Star, and hail its first beam,
For now yon horizon grows bright with its gleam!

MARIA.

From The Tribune.

NOW.

There is crying in the forest,
There is crying in the darkened air;
Earth's need is at its sorest,
She groaneth in despair.
The mountains drop their tears into the river,
The river weeps toward the sea,
And the sea flings up its bitter spray forever,
Till the sand-shores fail and flee.

For the earth is heaped with ages,
It is covered with the dead, dead past,
The Time-wind, as it rages,
Heaps the sand with every blast.
Now through the hot, red desert roaring,
Another glory with the dust it vails,
Now, swooping from its lonely, star-lit soaring,
It whirls the crumbled clay, and sadly wails.

Its lifted face above the ashes
A mighty sphynx with dumb lips stands,
While the Time-wind madly dashes,
The burning desert-sands.
But the dumb lips send a thrill of awful wonder
Across the silence to the sea,
And the vexed surf beats the shore with deeper thunder,
For the terror of that mystery.

And hark! from all the nations
Comes up a queenly widow's cry,
And the sleeping generations,
Give no answer where they lie.
The old Earth-mother on her throne is dying,
The mad wind heaps a pillow for her crown;
The dust of all her dead above her lying—
In the Valley of the Vision she lies down.

O God! the Resurrection!
Thou madest not one thing in vain;
With thy sceptre of protection
Arose the earth again!
Hear how she travaileth and groaneth,
How deep amid the grainy dust she lies,
With the mortal anguish of her dead she moaneth
Hear! speak! let these dry bones arise.

A. W. H.

WHAT CHRIST DID FOR YOU.

For you he left his home on high:
For you to earth he came to die;
For you he slumbered in a manger;
For you to Egypt fled, a stranger;
For you he dwelt with fishermen;
For you he slept in cave and glen:
For you abuse he meekly bore;
For you a crown of thorns he wore:
For you he braved Gethsemane:
For you he hung upon the tree;
For you his final feast was made;
For you by Judas was betrayed;
For you by Peter was denied;
For you by Pilate crucified!
For you his precious blood was shed;
For you he slept among the dead!
For you he rose with might at last;
For you beyond the skies he passed;
For you he came, at God's command;
For you he sits at his right hand!

—Calender.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis

An Address

To the Church Looking for the Immediate Coming of our Blessed Lord.

BY A. FLAVELL.

[Concluded.]

If those days commenced in A. D. 521, they will end in A. D. 1781, and we may reasonably expect that they will end, like the captivity of mystical Babylon's great prototype, in a decree of free toleration; and this decree must come from that imperial government on which the pope was depending for the power which he exercised over the religious rights of the church.

Let me here present historical testimony which sets this matter in the clearest light.

"But the wisest and best digested part of his (Joseph II. of Austria,) plan, and which continued longer than his other innovations, was the edict of toleration, issued on the 13th of October, 1781, and afterwards enlarged at different intervals. By this edict he granted to all members of the Protestant and Greek churches, under the denomination of Acatholici or Non-Catholics, the free exercise of their religion. He declared all christians of every denomination equally citizens, and capable of holding all charges and offices in every department of State; he permitted every community consisting of three thousand souls resident in any town, to build a church, provided they could establish a permanent fund for support of a preacher and the relief of the poor; and he ordered a new translation of the Bible to be made in the German tongue. On the Jews he also conferred many liberal privileges, and granted to them the right of exercising all arts and trades, following agriculture, freely pursuing their studies at the schools and in the universities. These innovations introduced with such precipitancy by the first sovereign of Europe, whose ancestors had evinced so warm an attachment to the Catholic faith, alarmed the See of Rome, and occasioned the memorable journey of Pius VI. to Vienna."

"After an intimate, but ineffectual correspondence, the Pope, who was vain of his eloquence, hoped, by his personal interference, to arrest the progress of these dangerous reforms. The unbending spirit of Joseph did not brook this interference, and he declared that the presence of the Pope would not change his resolutions. Pius, however, persisted, and notwithstanding his advanced age, weak state of health, and the severity of the season, commenced his journey on the 27th of February, 1782. * * * The pontiff, however, obtained only some marks of distinction; his exhortations and remonstrances were received with coldness and reserve, and he was so narrowly watched, that the back door of his apartments was blocked up to prevent him from receiving private visitors without the knowledge of the emperor. Even his presence at Vienna did not for a moment suspend the progress of the ecclesiastical reform; the Archbishop of Goritz, who had distinguished himself by his opposition to the imperial edicts, was sent in disgrace to his diocese, and several convents in Lombardy were suppresed. Pius, chagrined at the inflexibility of the emperor, and mortified by an unmeaning ceremonial and an effected display of veneration for the holy church, while it was robbed of its richest possessions and deprived of its most valuable privileges, quitted Vienna at the expiration of a month, equally disgusted and humiliated, after having exhibited himself a disappointed supplicant at the foot of that throne which had been so often shaken by the thunders of the Vatican." (Coxe's House of Austria, v. 3, pp. 491—3.)

It is admitted by all that Joseph II. of Austria, produced those great reforms which so powerfully affected the See of Rome, and those reforms were always referred to in the '54 argument, as proof of the termination of the 1260 years. But he did not come to the throne until the last month of 1780, six months after the sun was darkened.

There is a type of our two years' mistake in the fall of ancient Babylon. Daniel supposed by the reading of books that the 70 years had ended when Babylon fell. (See Dan. ix.) His prayer was for the restoring of Jesucalem and the Sanctuary, which were desolate. He urges his request for the Lord to defer not. We now see his mistake as well as ours. The 70 years did not end until the first year of Cyrus, which was two years after the fall of Babylon, and ended with a decree of toleration. (2. Chr. 36: 20–23, Jer. 28: 2, 3.) We supposed the 1260 years had ended with the tribulation in 1779, but we now see they extend two years farther to the decree of Joseph II, of free toleration. The analogy is perfect.

This edict of toleration was issued on the 13th of October, 1781. From that point there remains 75 years to make up 1335, which brings us to the 13th of Oct. 1856, which comes this year on the first day of the feast of Tabernacles.

The Passover is one of the most perfect types of our deliverance, and is to be continued to the end of the gospel dispensation,—not in its season—but "as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come."

The Lord established a type kingdom with the seed of Abraham coming out of Egypt. Their king, laws, subjects, territory and capitol were typical.

With this new arrangement God established a new year, (Ex. xii. 1,) at the full moon on the first month they were delivered. This, I believe, is typical of the feast of Tabernacles, which is celebrated at the full moon in the first month of the original year, which occurs this year on the 13th of October; the very day the church was delivered from papal bondage; God grant that we may be delivered on the self same day.

It was 430 years before the coming out of Egypt that the promise of the land was given to Abraham, when the year commenced in the seventh month. Kennday says, in his astronomical calculations, that "every time the Jews celebrated the feast of Tabernacles, they celebrated the birth of the world."

Let us all avail ourselves of the present blessings promised through the great atonement; and have an unspotted garment for the Marriage Supper of the Lamb. When once the Master of the house rises up and shuts the door, all that are filthy must be filthy still. May the God of all grace spare the little flock. Amen.

Newark, August 10, 1856.

For the Crisis

The Lord is near.

BY J. B. COOK.

THE CROWNING TESTIMONY that the Lord is near is this:—the jots and tittles of the symbols, and their inspired explanation seem fulfilled up to the right point to demand Divine interference in the first scene of the Lord's coming. Isa. 26: 19–20; 1 Thess. 4: 13–18; Rev. 11: 15; 1 Cor. 15: 51.

The four symbols with all their appendages in Dan 7;—the symbolic stages of Satanic development through the Roman earth,—"the seventh head"—Napoleon I. II. III. "was, is not, and yet is," allow us to "look up" in hope.

The period of the sixth trumpet is most precise—"hour, day, month and year." If it began at the conquest of Constantinople by the Turks, 1453, we have too much time; but if it began at the fall of the last branch of the empire in the Morea, 1465, then it ends about here.

Thus the 2300 days (Dan. 8: 14) from Artaxerxes' 20th year, "end" about here also, in harmony with the symbolic accomplishments; and the cry of "peace and safety" which covers both the Eastern and Western subjects of God's judgment! The rays seem to converge to a focal point!

See how natural! Nothing is forced. But allow the facts their places; allow the periods to begin at the last authorized or revealed event so far as known, and our minds are borne on to this thrilling conclusion, the resurrection trump may sound soon. It may herald the Son of Man ere another warning shall sound in the ears of a slumbering world.

"But the Father was to MAKE KNOWN the time, as He did to Noah, to Lot, or as some one did to the virgin band by 'the midnight cry,'" saysan objector.

Answer. The Father did give the whole "Revelation" to Jesus, and he by his angel through John, to the church! Nay, He has fulfilled all the symbols and all the trumpets up to the seventh! We have all the time about out from the last known date!

The call to Noah,—"Come thou and thy house into the ark, yet seven days and the flood shall be on the earth:"—the angel's call to Lot and the midnight cry may be just the thing to look for, the action by human agency being about accomplished up to the point where the Lord must interpose as He himself did to Noah.

"But we are to know and we don't know now!"

Answer. We have each period, and each symbolic series, referred to in "Daniel the prophet" about to be accomplished. Now, "when ye see THESE THINGS (not others) come to pass, know ye!" "Lord increase our faith."

Many seem to have lost the Lord's landmarks. I do not "know" anything aside from the Revelation of God by his word and the facts of His providence. Only let them stand and fairly apply them.

NOTE. Here we rest on the consideration that we may not yet know precisely every jot. Hitherto we have not known all. We know that this is our best light. But no sin is so sinful as the sin of unbelief. "Take heed to yourselves," saith the Lord.

I am misunderstood on both extremes, and cannot help it. Our argument has, to me, all the solidity and Divine authority that it ever had, only embrace the jots and tittles since '43; and the last dates for the periods. But some will not stop here; they assume that their knowledge is Divine.

The wisdom of the wise could not thirteen years ago, correct our application of the great symbolical events and periods; nor can it be denied now—save by a lack of confidence in the "sure word." Yet it reads, "Ye do well to take heed" to it, as to a "light that shineth in a dark place."

How long?

"Till the day dawn!"

Why should we thus walk by "the sure word of prophecy?"

Because it was given by inspiration of the Holy Ghost.

Are we to look for another "light?"

No, sir; not "till the day dawns."

Then does the Father make known the time only by the word and its precise accomplishment?

Yes, sir! This is the way precisely, so far as I can learn.

"Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief." Amen.

For the Children.

Kindness.

"How beautiful it is to see children kind to old people—to have respect for the hoary head. I knew a poor widow who for years after her husband's death was supported by her daughter. The daughter worked very hard, and finally her health failed, and she has been for weeks, months, years, an invalid, unable to do anything. The mother feels it greatly at her age to have so many cares resting upon her; she has no little child to do even an errand for her. The last winter was very severe; there was much snow and ice, so that it was very dangerous for an old lady, lame as she, to venture upon the walks. I presume all the little boys and girls will remember it, for they enjoyed coasting so much.

One morning, her provisions having become exhausted, she felt that she must go and obtain new supplies. Her daughter expressed fears that she might fall, but commending herself to the care of 'Him who notices the sparrow's fall,' she ventured forth.

On reaching the street she found it much colder than she had anticipated; but, choosing the way she thought most free from ice, she proceeded as rapidly as her lameness would permit, until she came to three steps, down which she must go—she could not possibly avoid them. They were completely filled with ice; but, seeing a rough place at the side, she ventured down the first step and found it impossible to go forward, and retreat she could not. There was no friendly tree, post, or fence to which she could cling for support. She could stand but a short time longer—if she fell who would take care of her? she must fall, she could not hold out another moment.

Just then she heard a sweet, joyous voice behind her, such as comes only from a merry heart and 'doeth good like a medicine'—

"Here is my shoulder, put both hands upon it—there lean upon me, and you can come down without falling.'

After thanking the kind-hearted boy they each proceeded their ways much happier for this little occurrence.

A 'sunbeam' had gleamed across her path that made her road seem much shorter, and certainly the atmosphere must have felt the genial effects of that voice, for there had been a great change since she left home. The cold, sharp air, had really softened. How like magic the leaven of kindness works.

And Willie,—were not his slumbers that night much sweeter than if he had said, 'there is an old woman, she is going to fall, won't it be real sport; I'll hide here and then she won't see me, I want to see her pick herself up.'

But God would have seen him. And we would say to Willie, we pray our Heavenly Father that 'He will give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways,' and that 'they may bear thee up in their hands, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.'" NETTIE HAYDEN.

EVIL SPEAKING.—"The following anecdote is related of the late excellent J. J. Gurney, by one who, as a child, was often one of his family circle:

One night—I remember it well—I received a severe lesson on the sin of evil speaking. Severe I thought it then, and my heart rose in childish anger against him who gave it; but I had not lived long enough in this world to know how much mischief a child's thoughtless talk may do, and how often it happens that talkers run off the straight line of truth.

S. did not stand very high in my esteem, and I was about to speak further of her failings of temper. In a few moments my eyes caught a look of such calm and steady displeasure, that I stopped short. There was no mistaking the meaning of that dark, speaking eye. It brought the color to my face, and confusion and shame to my heart. I was silent for a few moments, when Joseph John Gurney asked, very gravely:

'Dost thou not know any good thing to tell us of her?'

I did not answer; and the question was more seriously asked:

'Think; is there nothing good thou canst tell us of her?'

'O, yes; I know some good things; but'——

'Would it not have been better, then, to relate these good things, than to have told us that which would lower her in our esteem? Since there is good to relate, would it not be kinder to be silent on the evil? 'Charity rejoiceth not in iniquity,' thou knowest.'"

Choice Selections.

RELIGION IN COMMON LIFE.—The admirable sermon, preached before the Queen of England and published by her command, which has made so much sensation among the established Religionists of England, has found its way to our desk. We understand there is to be a reprint soon. Meanwhile, our readers can divine its drift, from the following extract:

"Religion is not a perpetual moping over good books. Religion is not even prayer, praise, holy ordinance; these are necessary to religion—no man can be religious without them. But religion is, mainly and chiefly the glorifying God amid the duties and trials of the world.—The guiding our course amid the adverse winds and currents of temptation, by the starlight of duty and the compass of divine truth; the bearing us manfully, wisely, courageously in the conflict of life. Away then with the notion that ministers and devotees may be religious, but that a religious and holy life is impracticable in the rough and busy world. Nay, rather, believe me, that is the proper scene, the peculiar and appropriate field for religion—the place in which to prove that piety is not a dream of Sundays and holiday hours; that it can bear the light of day; that it can wear well amid the rough jostlings, the hard struggles, the coarse contacts of common life—the place in one word, to prove how possible it is for a man to be at once "not slothful in business" and "fervent in spirit, serving the Lord."—John Caird, Minister of Errol.

DIFFERENT ADVICE OF TWO MINISTERS.—A company of very gaily dressed ladies being in company with a clergyman, on his being informed that they were professed Christians, were kindly, but very solemnly, reproved by him, for their extravagance in dress. He reminded them that God had commanded that "women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety, not with broidered hair or gold, or pearls, or costly array, but which becometh women professing godliness with good works; whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and the wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which in the sight of God is of great price." They were somewhat offended, and with the hope of quieting their consciences, went to another clergyman, and asked him if he thought there was any harm in their wearing feathers in their hats, with artificial flowers, &c., &c. He gravely replied, "There is no harm in feathers and flowers. If you have in your hearts the ridiculous vanity and desire to look pretty, you may as well hang out the sign, and let every one know what is the ruling passion of your heart."

SELF-RIGHTEOUSNESS REPROVED.—"Having, in my youth," says a celebrated Persian writer, "notions of severe piety, I used to rise in the night to watch, pray, and read the Koran. One night while deeply engaged in these exercises, my father, a man of practical virtue awoke whilst I was reading. 'Behold,' said I to him, 'thy other children are lost in irreligious slumber, whilst I alone awake to praise God.' 'Son of my soul,' he answered, 'it is better to sleep than wake to remark the faults of thy brethren.'"

KIND WORDS are the brightest flowers on earth's existence; they make a paradise of the humblest home the world can show. Use them, and especially round the fireside circle. They are jewels beyond price, and more precious to heal the wounded heart, and make the weighed-down spirit glad, than all other blessings the earth can give.

ALLEGED SERIOUS ILLNESS OF LOUIS NAPOLEON.—A SINGULAR STORY.—The Paris correspondent of the Newcastle Chronicle says:—An undercurrent of strange rumors has repeatedly reached me for the last month or so, but they were so unauthenticated that I let them pass like many other fancies of the popular mind. The news, however, such as it has been whispered so much lately in very well informed circles, and so many numerous circumstances come to corroborate it, that, considering its very high importance, I do not hesitate to transmit it to you. You will recollect, perhaps, that it has been for a long time reported that the present ruler of the French is suffering under morbid affection of the spinal cord. I am not versed sufficiently in medical science to describe the many different bad effects that the human frame is subject to from that disease; your medical contributors may perhaps enlighten your subscribers on that subject, but it is now affirmed beyond contradiction that the nephew of the great Bonaparte is occasionally a prey to strange and extraordinary hallucinations! The first attack that was brought under the notice of the court, took place in presence of M. Fould, Minister of State, who having communicated to him important documents, was astounded and much frightened to see his master remain speechless, gazing or rather staring on vacancy! M. Fould ran out, terrified, telling every one that his master was insane! At that time the attack lasted about five or six minutes; they extend now to half an hour or more. All this I hold from one of the chief ministers of Louis Philippe, who, of course, has still a good many friends at court. Add to this, another fatal affection, with an ugly Greek name, which is the result of a disease of the spinal cord, and you have an idea of the mental and physical state of our present ruler."

POPERY IN FRANCE AND ENGLAND.—It was but the other day that the Archbishop of Paris alluded to the Protestantism of Britain as but a slight aberration from Catholicism, which would disappear if only the Anglo-French aliiance were to develop itself sufficiently—the same dignitary declaring, at the same time, that even the Turks were a "sect of Christians," and hinting that an able policy of Catholicism might include even them and the rest of the East in the fold of the Latin Church. These are signs worth regarding; and, though Cardinal Wiseman and the Archbishop of paris seem to represent different tendencies of the Catholic church at the present moment, a unity may, after all, lie beneath their apparent divergence. The resent Pope, Pious the IX., as the Ediuburg Review well remarks, is distinguished by the tenacity with which he adheres to the very highest mediæval idea of the eclesiastical rights of the Papacy; and he may be but preparing the way, as a Pope of the old school, for a Pope of the new school, who will blend the same idea with something of the "liberalism" of the Emperor Napoleon's nimble-thoughted Archbishop.—Witness,

ANCIENT RUINS IN TEXAS.—The Washington American has received information of some ancient ruins, which, if correct, must possess great interest for our readers, as furnishing another link in the chain of evidence showing that this continent was inhabited years ago by a highly civilized race of men. The fact that this discovery has, as is reported, been made almost in our own neighborhood, in what is called Big Thicket, on the San Jacinto, will probably cause some of our readers to be incredulous. The discovery is said to have been made by a Mr. Smith, in company with two or three other men, while examining a tract of land belonging to a Mr. Johnson, about twenty miles distant from Montgomery. The ruins described were found on Mr. Johnson's land. The fragments show that they are the remains of an edifice of remarkable and magnificent architecture, constructed of material nowhere to be found in this country. We copy the description as follows:

The only portion of this gigantic structure which remains whole, is a marble column, fluted and surmounted by a capitol, upon which is carved on one side a sheaf of wheat, and on the other something which was supposed to be a water-fall, but somewhat defaced; on the other two sides is a plain engraving of evergreens. A portion of another column is also there, about the same size. The column that remains whole is about sixteen feet in length. The foundation of the edifice covered an area of three hundred and ten by two hundred and sixty feet. There appeared to be four main entrances, and Mr. Smith believes, though it is not certain, that there were on each side of the building a portico fronting about one third of the distance. There are a great many fragments of fine workmanship, but the gentlemen accompanying Mr. Smith had not time to place them together to ascertain to what part of the building they belonged.

There were several marble arches, nearly whole, which they supposed to have been over the doors and windows. There are also in preservation two or three marble slabs, which are supposed to have belonged to a flight of stairs. The stone of which the edifice was built is a grey limestone, presenting a beautifully polished surface, the most of which are buried, as also was most of the columns discovered. Mr. Smith has no doubt that wonderful and valuable discoveries may be made by excavation. and has promised to return in four weeks to assist in making further examinations into the mysterious affair.

The ruins are situated in the midst of a dense thicket, almost impenetrable, and in all probability would not have been discovered by these gentlemen had it not been for a pack of dogs having overtaken a bear near the spot, in quest of which the gentlemen went.

Mr. Smith is surprised that the surveyor who surveyed the country did not make this discovery, as Mr. Johnson's line passes within two feet of the marble column described, and a line tree is marked within thirty feet of it.

There have been a great many evidences discovered proving the settlement of this country anterior to the present race; but this is the surest testimony we have yet seen proving the civilization of the race which preceded us. The most mysterious part of this affair is the marble employed in the structure, as it is well known that no marble is to be found in this country nearer than Austin, and it would be an utter impossibility to transport so massive a piece as this is reported to be by land carriage. The only reasonable conclusion we can come to is, that the heavy material was exported from other countries and brought up the San Jacinto River, by water, to within a mile and a half of the structure. The fact is, the whole affair is a profound, impenetrable mystery, and we should be disposed to doubt the existence of the structure did not our personal knowledge of the author forbid such a conclusion. We shall await anxiously further developments, which will be made in a short time.—[Montgomery, Ala., Mail.

Christian graces are like perfumes. The more they are pressed, the sweeter they smell; like stars, that shine brightest in the dark; like trees, the more they are shaken, the deeper root they take, and the more fruit they bear.

Poetry.

[Written for the Christian Reformer.]

THE LAST WATCH.

'Tis the last watch we're keeping,
O, Christian, awake!
Slumber not, lest the morning
Thy dreams should o'ertake.
O, watch for the Day-Star, and hail its first beam;
E'en now yon horizon is flushed with its gleam.

'Tis the last storm that gathers
All wildly and dark,
O'er the rough billows tossing
Our frail trembling bark.
The last sighs and tears are now heaving the breast;
We 're nearing the haven—the mansions of rest.

Our last tears we're weeping—
Grief's fount will soon dry;
God's own hand will wipe out
All tears from each eye.
Temptations and trials will soon all be past;
Oh, faint not, worn pilgrim, thou'rt bearing thy last.

Our last prayers are rising
To heaven's high throne,
For mercy imploring,
Ere mercy is gone.
Soon we'll change these sad pleadings for rapturous song,
And on Mount Zion shout with the angelic throng.

'Tis the last watch we're keeping,
O, let us awake!
Nor slumber, lest morning,
Our dreams should o'ertake:
But watch for the Day-Star, and hail its first beam,
For now yon horizon grows bright with its gleam!

MARIA.

From The Tribune.

NOW.

There is crying in the forest,
There is crying in the darkened air;
Earth's need is at its sorest,
She groaneth in despair.
The mountains drop their tears into the river,
The river weeps toward the sea,
And the sea flings up its bitter spray forever,
Till the sand-shores fail and flee.

For the earth is heaped with ages,
It is covered with the dead, dead past,
The Time-wind, as it rages,
Heaps the sand with every blast.
Now through the hot, red desert roaring,
Another glory with the dust it vails,
Now, swooping from its lonely, star-lit soaring,
It whirls the crumbled clay, and sadly wails.

Its lifted face above the ashes
A mighty sphynx with dumb lips stands,
While the Time-wind madly dashes,
The burning desert-sands.
But the dumb lips send a thrill of awful wonder
Across the silence to the sea,
And the vexed surf beats the shore with deeper thunder,
For the terror of that mystery.

And hark! from all the nations
Comes up a queenly widow's cry,
And the sleeping generations,
Give no answer where they lie.
The old Earth-mother on her throne is dying,
The mad wind heaps a pillow for her crown;
The dust of all her dead above her lying—
In the Valley of the Vision she lies down.

O God! the Resurrection!
Thou madest not one thing in vain;
With thy sceptre of protection
Arose the earth again!
Hear how she travaileth and groaneth,
How deep amid the grainy dust she lies,
With the mortal anguish of her dead she moaneth
Hear! speak! let these dry bones arise.

A. W. H.

WHAT CHRIST DID FOR YOU.

For you he left his home on high:
For you to earth he came to die;
For you he slumbered in a manger;
For you to Egypt fled, a stranger;
For you he dwelt with fishermen;
For you he slept in cave and glen:
For you abuse he meekly bore;
For you a crown of thorns he wore:
For you he braved Gethsemane:
For you he hung upon the tree;
For you his final feast was made;
For you by Judas was betrayed;
For you by Peter was denied;
For you by Pilate crucified!
For you his precious blood was shed;
For you he slept among the dead!
For you he rose with might at last;
For you beyond the skies he passed;
For you he came, at God's command;
For you he sits at his right hand!

—Calender.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis

An Address

To the Church Looking for the Immediate Coming of our Blessed Lord.

BY A. FLAVELL.

[Concluded.]

If those days commenced in A. D. 521, they will end in A. D. 1781, and we may reasonably expect that they will end, like the captivity of mystical Babylon's great prototype, in a decree of free toleration; and this decree must come from that imperial government on which the pope was depending for the power which he exercised over the religious rights of the church.

Let me here present historical testimony which sets this matter in the clearest light.

"But the wisest and best digested part of his (Joseph II. of Austria,) plan, and which continued longer than his other innovations, was the edict of toleration, issued on the 13th of October, 1781, and afterwards enlarged at different intervals. By this edict he granted to all members of the Protestant and Greek churches, under the denomination of Acatholici or Non-Catholics, the free exercise of their religion. He declared all christians of every denomination equally citizens, and capable of holding all charges and offices in every department of State; he permitted every community consisting of three thousand souls resident in any town, to build a church, provided they could establish a permanent fund for support of a preacher and the relief of the poor; and he ordered a new translation of the Bible to be made in the German tongue. On the Jews he also conferred many liberal privileges, and granted to them the right of exercising all arts and trades, following agriculture, freely pursuing their studies at the schools and in the universities. These innovations introduced with such precipitancy by the first sovereign of Europe, whose ancestors had evinced so warm an attachment to the Catholic faith, alarmed the See of Rome, and occasioned the memorable journey of Pius VI. to Vienna."

"After an intimate, but ineffectual correspondence, the Pope, who was vain of his eloquence, hoped, by his personal interference, to arrest the progress of these dangerous reforms. The unbending spirit of Joseph did not brook this interference, and he declared that the presence of the Pope would not change his resolutions. Pius, however, persisted, and notwithstanding his advanced age, weak state of health, and the severity of the season, commenced his journey on the 27th of February, 1782. * * * The pontiff, however, obtained only some marks of distinction; his exhortations and remonstrances were received with coldness and reserve, and he was so narrowly watched, that the back door of his apartments was blocked up to prevent him from receiving private visitors without the knowledge of the emperor. Even his presence at Vienna did not for a moment suspend the progress of the ecclesiastical reform; the Archbishop of Goritz, who had distinguished himself by his opposition to the imperial edicts, was sent in disgrace to his diocese, and several convents in Lombardy were suppresed. Pius, chagrined at the inflexibility of the emperor, and mortified by an unmeaning ceremonial and an effected display of veneration for the holy church, while it was robbed of its richest possessions and deprived of its most valuable privileges, quitted Vienna at the expiration of a month, equally disgusted and humiliated, after having exhibited himself a disappointed supplicant at the foot of that throne which had been so often shaken by the thunders of the Vatican." (Coxe's House of Austria, v. 3, pp. 491—3.)

It is admitted by all that Joseph II. of Austria, produced those great reforms which so powerfully affected the See of Rome, and those reforms were always referred to in the '54 argument, as proof of the termination of the 1260 years. But he did not come to the throne until the last month of 1780, six months after the sun was darkened.

There is a type of our two years' mistake in the fall of ancient Babylon. Daniel supposed by the reading of books that the 70 years had ended when Babylon fell. (See Dan. ix.) His prayer was for the restoring of Jesucalem and the Sanctuary, which were desolate. He urges his request for the Lord to defer not. We now see his mistake as well as ours. The 70 years did not end until the first year of Cyrus, which was two years after the fall of Babylon, and ended with a decree of toleration. (2. Chr. 36: 20–23, Jer. 28: 2, 3.) We supposed the 1260 years had ended with the tribulation in 1779, but we now see they extend two years farther to the decree of Joseph II, of free toleration. The analogy is perfect.

This edict of toleration was issued on the 13th of October, 1781. From that point there remains 75 years to make up 1335, which brings us to the 13th of Oct. 1856, which comes this year on the first day of the feast of Tabernacles.

The Passover is one of the most perfect types of our deliverance, and is to be continued to the end of the gospel dispensation,—not in its season—but "as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come."

The Lord established a type kingdom with the seed of Abraham coming out of Egypt. Their king, laws, subjects, territory and capitol were typical.

With this new arrangement God established a new year, (Ex. xii. 1,) at the full moon on the first month they were delivered. This, I believe, is typical of the feast of Tabernacles, which is celebrated at the full moon in the first month of the original year, which occurs this year on the 13th of October; the very day the church was delivered from papal bondage; God grant that we may be delivered on the self same day.

It was 430 years before the comipg out of Egypt that the promise of the land was given to Abraham, when the year commenced in the seventh month. Kennday says, in his astronomical calculations, that "every time the Jews celebrated the feast of Tabernacles, they celebrated the birth of the world."

Let us all avail ourselves of the present blessings promised through the great atonement; and have an unspotted garment for the Marriage Supper of the Lamb. When once the Master of the house rises up and shuts the door, all that are filthy must be filthy still. May the God of all grace spare the little flock. Amen.

Newark, August 10, 1856.

For the Crisis

The Lord is near.

BY J. B. COOK.

THE CROWNING TESTIMONY that the Lord is near is this:—the jots and tittles of the symbols, and their inspired explanation seem fulfilled up to the right point to demand Divine interference in the first scene of the Lord's coming. Isa. 26: 19–20; 1 Thess. 4: 13–18; Rev. 11: 15; 1 Cor. 15: 51.

The four symbols with all their appendages in Dan 7;—the symbolic stages of Satanic development through the Roman earth,—"the seventh head"—Napoleon I. II. III. "was, is not, and yet is," allow us to "look up" in hope.

The period of the sixth trumpet is most precise—"hour, day, month and year." If it began at the conquest of Constantinople by the Turks, 1453, we have too much time; but if it began at the fall of the last branch of the empire in the Morea, 1465, then it ends about here.

Thus the 2300 days (Dan. 8: 14) from Artaxerxes' 20th year, "end" about here also, in harmony with the symbolic accomplishments; and the cry of "peace and safety" which covers both the Eastern and Western subjects of God's judgment! The rays seem to converge to a focal point!

See how natural! Nothing is forced. But allow the facts their places; allow the periods to begin at the last authorized or revealed event so far as known, and our minds are borne on to this thrilling conclusion, the resurrection trump may sound soon. It may herald the Son of Man ere another warning shall sound in the ears of a slumbering world.

"But the Father was to MAKE KNOWN the time, as He did to Noah, to Lot, or as some one did to the virgin band by 'the midnight cry,'" saysan objector.

Answer. The Father did give the whole "Revelation" to Jesus, and he by his angel through John, to the church! Nay, He has fulfilled all the symbols and all the trumpets up to the seventh! We have all the time about out from the last known date!

The call to Noah,—"Come thou and thy house into the ark, yet seven days and the flood shall be on the earth:"—the angel's call to Lot and the midnight cry may be just the thing to look for, the action by human agency being about accomplished up to the point where the Lord must interpose as He himself did to Noah.

"But we are to know and we don't know now!"

Answer. We have each period, and each symbolic series, referred to in "Daniel the prophet" about to be accomplished. Now, "when ye see THESE THINGS (not others) come to pass, know ye!" "Lord increase our faith."

Many seem to have lost the Lord's landmarks. I do not "know" anything aside from the Revelation of God by his word and the facts of His providence. Only let them stand and fairly apply them.

NOTE. Here we rest on the consideration that we may not yet know precisely every jot. Hitherto we have not known all. We know that this is our best light. But no sin is so sinful as the sin of unbelief. "Take heed to yourselves," saith the Lord.

I am misunderstood on both extremes, and cannot help it. Our argument has, to me, all the solidity and Divine authority that it ever had, only embrace the jots and tittles since '43; and the last dates for the periods. But some will not stop here; they assume that their knowledge is Divine.

The wisdom of the wise could not thirteen years ago, correct our application of the great symbolical events and periods; nor can it be denied now—save by a lack of confidence in the "sure word." Yet it reads, "Ye do well to take heed" to it, as to a "light that shineth in a dark place."

How long?

"Till the day dawn!"

Why should we thus walk by "the sure word of prophecy?"

Because it was given by inspiration of the Holy Ghost.

Are we to look for another "light?"

No, sir; not "till the day dawns."

Then does the Father make known the time only by the word and its precise accomplishment?

Yes, sir! This is the way precisely, so far as I can learn.

"Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief." Amen.

For the Children.

Kindness.

"How beautiful it is to see children kind to old people—to have respect for the hoary head. I knew a poor widow who for years after her husband's death was supported by her daughter. The daughter worked very hard, and finally her health failed, and she has been for weeks, months, years, an invalid, unable to do anything. The mother feels it greatly at her age to have so many cares resting upon her; she has no little child to do even an errand for her. The last winter was very severe; there was much snow and ice, so that it was very dangerous for an old lady, lame as she, to venture upon the walks. I presume all the little boys and girls will remember it, for they enjoyed coasting so much.

One morning, her provisions having become exhausted, she felt that she must go and obtain new supplies. Her daughter expressed fears that she might fall, but commending herself to the care of 'Him who notices the sparrow's fall,' she ventured forth.

On reaching the street she found it much colder than she had anticipated; but, choosing the way she thought most free from ice, she proceeded as rapidly as her lameness would permit, until she came to three steps, down which she must go—she could not possibly avoid them. They were completely filled with ice; but, seeing a rough place at the side, she ventured down the first step and found it impossible to go forward, and retreat she could not. There was no friendly tree, post, or fence to which she could cling for support. She could stand but a short time longer—if she fell who would take care of her? she must fall, she could not hold out another moment.

Just then she heard a sweet, joyous voice behind her, such as comes only from a merry heart and 'doeth good like a medicine'—

"Here is my shoulder, put both hands upon it—there lean upon me, and you can come down without falling.'

After thanking the kind-hearted boy they each proceeded their ways much happier for this little occurrence.

A 'sunbeam' had gleamed across her path that made her road seem much shorter, and certainly the atmosphere must have felt the genial effects of that voice, for there had been a great change since she left home. The cold, sharp air, had really softened. How like magic the leaven of kindness works.

And Willie,—were not his slumbers that night much sweeter than if he had said, 'there is an old woman, she is going to fall, won't it be real sport; I'll hide here and then she won't see me, I want to see her pick herself up.'

But God would have seen him. And we would say to Willie, we pray our Heavenly Father that 'He will give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways,' and that 'they may bear thee up in their hands, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.'" NETTIE HAYDEN.

EVIL SPEAKING.—"The following anecdote is related of the late excellent J. J. Gurney, by one who, as a child, was often one of his family circle:

One night—I remember it well—I received a severe lesson on the sin of evil speaking. Severe I thought it then, and my heart rose in childish anger against him who gave it; but I had not lived long enough in this world to know how much mischief a child's thoughtless talk may do, and how often it happens that talkers run off the straight line of truth.

S. did not stand very high in my esteem, and I was about to speak further of her failings of temper. In a few moments my eyes caught a look of such calm and steady displeasure, that I stopped short. There was no mistaking the meaning of that dark, speaking eye. It brought the color to my face, and confusion and shame to my heart. I was silent for a few moments, when Joseph John Gurney asked, very gravely:

'Dost thou not know any good thing to tell us of her?'

I did not answer; and the question was more seriously asked:

'Think; is there nothing good thou canst tell us of her?'

'O, yes; I know some good things; but'——

'Would it not have been better, then, to relate these good things, than to have told us that which would lower her in our esteem? Since there is good to relate, would it not be kinder to be silent on the evil? 'Charity rejoiceth not in iniquity,' thou knowest.'"

Choice Selections.

RELIGION IN COMMON LIFE.—The admirable sermon, preached before the Queen of England and published by her command, which has made so much sensation among the established Religionists of England, has found its way to our desk. We understand there is to be a reprint soon. Meanwhile, our readers can divine its drift, from the following extract:

"Religion is not a perpetual moping over good books. Religion is not even prayer, praise, holy ordinance; these are necessary to religion—no man can be religious without them. But religion is, mainly and chiefly the glorifying God amid the duties and trials of the world.—The guiding our course amid the adverse winds and currents of temptation, by the starlight of duty and the compass of divine truth; the bearing us manfully, wisely, courageously in the conflict of life. Away then with the notion that ministers and devotees may be religious, but that a religious and holy life is impracticable in the rough and busy world. Nay, rather, believe me, that is the proper scene, the peculiar and appropriate field for religion—the place in which to prove that piety is not a dream of Sundays and holiday hours; that it can bear the light of day; that it can wear well amid the rough jostlings, the hard struggles, the coarse contacts of common life—the place in one word, to prove how possible it is for a man to be at once "not slothful in business" and "fervent in spirit, serving the Lord."—John Caird, Minister of Errol.

DIFFERENT ADVICE OF TWO MINISTERS.—A company of very gaily dressed ladies being in company with a clergyman, on his being informed that they were professed Christians, were kindly, but very solemnly, reproved by him, for their extravagance in dress. He reminded them that God had commanded that "women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety, not with broidered hair or gold, or pearls, or costly array, but which becometh women professing godliness with good works; whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and the wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which in the sight of God is of great price." They were somewhat offended, and with the hope of quieting their consciences, went to another clergyman, and asked him if he thought there was any harm in their wearing feathers in their hats, with artificial flowers, &c., &c. He gravely replied, "There is no harm in feathers and flowers. If you have in your hearts the ridiculous vanity and desire to look pretty, you may as well hang out the sign, and let every one know what is the ruling passion of your heart."

SELF-RIGHTEOUSNESS REPROVED.—"Having, in my youth," says a celebrated Persian writer, "notions of severe piety, I used to rise in the night to watch, pray, and read the Koran. One night while deeply engaged in these exercises, my father, a man of practical virtue awoke whilst I was reading. 'Behold,' said I to him, 'thy other children are lost in irreligious slumber, whilst I alone awake to praise God.' 'Son of my soul,' he answered, 'it is better to sleep than wake to remark the faults of thy brethren.'"

KIND WORDS are the brightest flowers on earth's existence; they make a paradise of the humblest home the world can show. Use them, and especially round the fireside circle. They are jewels beyond price, and more precious to heal the wounded heart, and make the weighed-down spirit glad, than all other blessings the earth can give.

ALLEGED SERIOUS ILLNESS OF LOUIS NAPOLEON.—A SINGULAR STORY.—The Paris correspondent of the Newcastle Chronicle says:—An undercurrent of strange rumors has repeatedly reached me for the last month or so, but they were so unauthenticated that I let them pass like many other fancies of the popular mind. The news, however, such as it has obtained so much credit in very well informed circles, and so many numerous circumstances come to corroborate it, that, considering its very high importance, I do not hesitate to transmit it to you. You will recollect, perhaps, that it has been for a long time reported that the present ruler of the French is suffering under morbid affection of the spinal cord. I am not versed sufficiently in medical science to describe the many different bad effects that the human frame is subject to from that disease; your medical contributors may perhaps enlighten your subscribers on that subject, but it is now affirmed beyond contradiction that the nephew of the great Bonaparte is occasionally a prey to strange and extraordinary hallucinations! The first attack that was brought under the notice of the court, took place in presence of M. Fould, Minister of State, who having communicated to him important documents, was astounded and much frightened to see his master remain speechless, gazing or rather staring on vacancy! M. Fould ran out, terrified, telling every one that his master was insane! At that time the attack lasted about five or six minutes; they extend now to half an hour or more. All this I hold from one of the chief ministers of Louis Philippe, who, of course, has still a good many friends at court. Add to this, another fatal affection, with an ugly Greek name, which is the result of a disease of the spinal cord, and you have an idea of the mental and physical state of our present ruler."

POPERY IN FRANCE AND ENGLAND.—It was but the other day that the Archbishop of Paris alluded to the Protestantism of Britain as but a slight aberration from Catholicism, which would disappear if only the Anglo-French alliance were to develop itself sufficiently—the same dignitary declaring, at the same time, that even the Turks were a "sect of Christians," and hinting that an able policy of Catholicism might include even them and the rest of the East in the fold of the Latin Church. These are signs worth regarding; and, though Cardinal Wiseman and the Archbishop of paris seem to represent different tendencies of the Catholic church at the present moment, a unity may, after all, lie beneath their apparent divergence. The resent Pope, Pious the IX., as the Edinburg Review well remarks, is distinguished by the penacity with which he adheres to the very highest mediæval idea of the eclesiastical rights of the Papacy; and he may be but preparing the way, as a Pope of the old school, for a Pope of the new school, who will blend the same idea with something of the "liberalism" of the Emperor Napoleon's nimble-thoughted Archbishop.—Witness,

ANCIENT RUINS IN TEXAS.—The Washington American has received information of some ancient ruins, which, if correct, must possess great interest for our readers, as furnishing another link in the chain of evidence showing that this continent was inhabited years ago by a highly civilized race of men. The fact that this discovery has, as is reported, been made almost in our own neighborhood, in what is called Big Thicket, on the San Jacinto, will probably cause some of our readers to be incredulous. The discovery is said to have been made by a Mr. Smith, in company with two or three other men, while examining a tract of land belonging to a Mr. Johnson, about twenty miles distant from Montgomery. The ruins described were found on Mr. Johnson's land. The fragments show that they are the remains of an edifice of remarkable and magnificent architecture, constructed of material nowhere to be found in this country. We copy the description as follows:—

The only portion of this gigantic structure which remains whole, is a marble column, fluted and surmounted by a capitol, upon which is carved on one side a sheaf of wheat, and on the other something which was supposed to be a water-fall, but somewhat defaced; on the other two sides is a plain engraving of evergreens. A portion of another column is also there, about the same size. The column that remains whole is about sixteen feet in length. The foundation of the edifice covered an area of three hundred and ten by two hundred and sixty feet. There appeared to be four main entrances, and Mr. Smith believes, though it is not certain, that there were on each side of the building a portico fronting about one third of the distance. There are a great many fragments of fine workmanship, but the gentlemen accompanying Mr. Smith had not time to place them together to ascertain to what part of the building they belonged.

There were several marble arches, nearly whole, which they supposed to have been over the doors and windows. There are also in preservation two or three marble slabs, which are supposed to have belonged to a flight of stairs. The stone of which the edifice was built is a grey limestone, presenting a beautifully polished surface, the most of which are buried, as also was most of the columns discovered. Mr. Smith has no doubt that wonderful and valuable discoveries may be made by excavation, and has promised to return in four weeks to assist in making further examinations into the mysterious affair.

The ruins are situated in the midst of a dense thicket, almost impenetrable, and in all probability would not have been discovered by these gentlemen had it not been for a pack of dogs having overtaken a bear near the spot, in quest of which the gentlemen went.

Mr. Smith is surprised that the surveyor who surveyed the country did not make this discovery, as Mr. Johnson's line passes within two feet of the marble column described, and a line tree is marked within thirty feet of it.

There have been a great many evidences discovered proving the settlement of this country anterior to the present race; but this is the surest testimony we have yet seen proving the civilization of the race which preceded us. The most mysterious part of this affair is the marble employed in the structure, as it is well known that no marble is to be found in this country nearer than Austin, and it would be an utter impossibility to transport so massive a piece as this is reported to be by land carriage. The only reasonable conclusion we can come to is, that the heavy material was exported from other countries and brought up the San Jacinto River, by water, to within a mile and a half of the structure. The fact is, the whole affair is a profound, impenetrable mystery, and we should be disposed to doubt the existence of the structure did not our personal knowledge of the author forbid such a conclusion. We shall await anxiously further developments, which will be made in a short time.—[Montgomery, Ala., Mail.

Christian graces are like perfumes. The more they are pressed, the sweeter they smell; like stars, that shine brightest in the dark; like trees, the more they are shaken, the deeper root they take, and the more fruit they bear.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1856. WHOLE NO. 129. VOL. IV. NO. 5.

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months - - - -	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months - - - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months -	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months -	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis

Selfishness.

BY MARY A. GRANT.

Selfishness is that supreme love for and satisfaction in ourselves and interests, which leads its possessor to sacrifice the interests, wants, and happiness of others on the altar of self-preferment. It is therefore wholly opposed to the genius of christianity, and the principles contained in the word of God.

Its chilling breath blighted the peacefulness of earth's first circle of domestic love and bliss. It drove man from Paradise into exile—from a constant, open communion with the Lord, in the midst of the garden of God, to a state of labor and servitude amid the thorns and briars of an existence consequent upon his mis-doing—from a state of confidence and peace, to that of apprehension and inquietude—from felicity to disgrace—from an atmosphere of serenity into the elements of strife and discord—from hope to despair—from an hallowed life to dying and death. From thence its dread influence has brooded on earth, enshrouding, ultimately, with misery all who have yielded to its seductions.

It is a wily flatterer, insinuating in its arguments, and when listened to, becomes a charmer as dangerous as successful. It is to be shunned in all its insidious efforts, which surely work the soul's ruin; and these efforts are as multitudinous as our race.

It is astonishing, while soberly examining our hearts, to behold the selfish tendencies which too often flow forth, and but naturally enough too, from this hated love of self-aggrandizement and preferment. And we are surprised to find that where we fondly imagined this affection was nearly, if not quite lacking, there its hideousness became the more apparent.

Nature has no capabilities in and of itself to exterminate, though it may stifle its existence; this work is a prerogative of a higher and holier One, whose existence and love are eternally commensurate.

That pure and "well-beloved" Being, who sacrificed the (to us) unknown glories which he possessed with the Father before the world was, and by whom the world was made, "and without Him was not anything made that was made," instituted by example and precept the way of blessedness through earth to heaven, and established a means of emancipation from the selfish bondage which had so long enthralled the family of man. His earthly life was a perfect exemplification of that devoted love to others which breathes the atmosphere of Heaven: which exhibition attracted the admiration and adoration of those seraphic worshippers who bow and cast their fadeless crowns before the world's great Sacrificant—even Christ our annointed. His was the most perfect life of benevolence and disinterestedness of which we have any conception; the supremest devotion to the interests and continued joy of all around him in every phase and circumstance of life, trancending all human experience, theory, and philosophy.

On the ruins of the temple dedicated to universal good and equity, reared by the ancient Epicurus, Zeno, and their cotemporaries; Jesus,—messenger of peace—erected, in ages after, an immutable superstructure whose foundation was love, pure as the source from which it emanated. It had its beginning with the infancy of creation, but until the Olive branch of Peace visited the land of Israel, its blessings lay hidden, at the same time earnestly desired and hoped for.

The principles of the gospel of peace when fully received and practiced, forbid an indulgence in this inordinate love of self so tormenting to the heart which loves and strives to be good.

There certainly can be no fellowship with the spirit and sufferings of the Redeemer; no partaking of the Divine nature; no conformity to the will of Him whose religion and cause we espouse, if in us there be found the reigning of this rebellious spirit of selfishness. It is a canker-worm which eats up all our moral freshness and beauty; the devourer of our joys; the "weight" which often overpowers us in our strivings to run the race set before us in the gospel.

By presenting to our sight the various ignes fatui of earthly joys and promotions, it would blind from us the "enduring substance," the incorruptible inheritance, the unfading crown which a gospel purity of life, and adherence to all that is good and true, ensures.

Instead of present, or permanent peace being obtained through this medium, it destroys it; narrows down the energies of the soul, with its affections and sympathies.

It must necessarily detract from God and all that is good: therefore it is the bane of christian life and exertion, and cannot with impunity be allowed a transient visit to the home of the heart.

To know ourselves, is a valuable lesson learned, and earnest self-examination promotes this knowledge; and as we strive for a closer union with the good and pure of heaven and earth, self will vanish, and all worthiness merge in Christ. He will be the object of adoration, of contemplation—the One sought unto—the "chiefest among ten thousand and the one altogether lovely." Then the praise or censure of men will be our torment no more; the world in its enticements will become a crushed victim beneath our feet, deterring us no more from the obligations of our holy religion and the faithful performance of duties to those within and without the fold of Christ, which its requirements demand.

Instead of quaffing poisoned joys, love and benevolence, wide-spread as the universe shall mix in sweetness our cup of life; and while administering of our good and communicating to others as we are commanded, although it be with sacrifice of momentary ease and satisfaction, yet its fruits are peace and righteousness.

And as the desolations of this spirit of selfishness become more and more apparent in the world, let christians raise their standard higher, and their banner of love be more widely unfurled, that men may learn a better way—the enemy of truth and holy charity be vanquished, and the doctrines of men yield to the simplicity and purity of the revelation of God.

Let the following be the prayer of every loving disciple of Christ:

'"Uphold me, O God, with thy free spirit!' 'strengthen me with might in the inner man!' that being emptied of all selfish solicitude, I may no longer be the slave of restless and tormenting desires; but with holy indifference may consider all earthly good of whatever kind, as continually passing away, and my own fallen life as passing with it; for there is nothing permanent under the sun, 'where all is vanity and vexation of spirit.'"

With this in the heart, christ'ans will be prepared for private and public usefulness, for an effectual conflict with the powers that be, and the exercise of that faith which purifies the heart and crucifies the world, with its affections and desires.

Boston, Sept. 1856.

For the Crisis.

The Reason of our Faith.

Brief Outlines of the Time Argument.

BY R. PORTER.

It was a prevailing opinion in the early days of the church, that the six days of the creation were typical of 6000 years, at the end of which Christ would appear and raise the dead and establish his everlasting kingdom.

In the second chapter of Daniel it is recorded, that the king of Babylon had a dream, which was interpreted by the prophet Daniel to represent that the kingdom of Babylon should be succeeded by three successive kingdoms or empires, the last of which should be succeeded by a commixture of regal and ecclesiastical power; and that this state of the world should be succeeded by the everlasting kingdom of God.

In the first year of Belshazzar, king of Babylon, it was represented to Daniel in a dream or vision, that Babylon would be succeded by the Medo-Persian kingdom, and that by the Grecian; and that the Grecian kingdom, after being divided into four kingdoms, should be succeeded by a great and powerful kingdom, or empire, which should be subsequently divided into, ten kingdoms; and another peculiar power should appear, and having demolished three of the other kingdoms, should make war against the saints, and prevail against them "until a time, times and the dividing of time," or 1260 years; but that it should be destroyed, and succeeded by the everlasting and glorious kingdom of God. And now history informs us that the Medo-Persian kingdom was succeeded by the Grecian, which on the death of Alexander, was divided into four kingdoms which were succeeded by the Roman empire; and that this empire was divided into ten kingdoms, and then the Papal church became united to the Grecian empire, and they destroyed three of the other kindoms, and persecuted by death or banishment, all who did not embrace the Papal faith; and this power of persecution continued from 521 to 1781; a period of 1260 years.

In the third year of Belshazzar, Daniel had a great and extensive vision as recorded in the 8th chapter; but the details and explanations of which are continued in the 9th, 11th and 12th chapters.

In this vision is represented the Medo-Persian and Grecian kingdom, and a succeeding great and powerful empire, which, by the description, clearly designated the Roman.

Then in answer to a question concerning the chronological extent of the state of the world represented in the vision, Daniel was informed that it should extend 2300 days (which signiy years;) and that at the end of that period, the saints should be delivered and the sanctuary (supposed to be the earth) should be cleansed.

The person who communicated these things to Daniel, was the angel Gabriel; and he was commanded to make Daniel understand the vision. A few days or weeks later, Gabriel again visited Daniel, and in continuation of his communication, instructed him concerning the time of the commencement of the period of 2300 days; (years) namely, at the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem, (with its streets and walls.)

It was moreover revealed, that after 69 weeks (483 years) from the going forth of the said commandment, Messiah would be cut off; and that subsequently Jerusalem should be again destroyed.

On a subsequent visit, Gabriel communicated the intelligence, that a cruel, persecuting [illegible], which he designates as "the abomination that maketh desolate," should be set up, and that the saints should fall by the sword and by flame, by captivity and spoil many days, (elsewhere repeatedly explained to be 1260 years.) But that at the end of 1335 days (years) from the setting up of this abomination, Daniel should stand up in his lot.

Now the Bible chronology shows, we think, that the termination of the Babylonish captivity, when the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem went forth, was precisely 3700 years from the creation; so that the subsequent 2300 years would make up the even number of 6000. This commandment was issued in the 20th year of Artaxerxes, as recorded in the second chapter of Nehemiah; and we have positive, and indisputable evidence that the 20th year of Artaxerxes was the 4269th year of the Julian period, and B. C. 445; and that in the 483d year from that date, the crucifixion occurred;—Messiah was cut off:—and of course the period of 2300 years must terminate about here.

The commandment to build Jerusalem took effect in the autumn of 445 B. C. 482 1-2 years extended to the crucifixion in the spring of A. D. 39. An equal period of 482 1-2 years (the second wing of a great eagle mentioned in Rev. 12: 14,) extended to the autumn of 521, at which time the "abomination of desolation" was established, by the ratification of a union of the Papal church and Grecian empire. 1260 years from that date, in the autumn of 1781, the power of papacy to persecute the saints was abolished by a decree of the Austrian emperor; therefore the 1335 days (years) must terminate very soon.

Prior to 1781 however, the rigor of the persecution had abated, and the event was indicated by the darkening of the sun and moon in 1780, according to the prediction of Matt. 24: 29, and Mark 13: 24. Other signs of the approach of the "last day," have also appeared, as the falling of stars in 1833, the sea and waves roaring by unprecedented storms and tempests, the universal promulgation of the Gospel, (Matt. 24: 14,) and distress of nations with perplexity, (Luke 21: 25,) great facilities of traveling, and increase of knowledge. (Dan. 12: 4.)

It was, moreover, plainly predicted or intimated in the Scriptures, that prior to the coming of the Lord in glory, a general proclamation of the approaching event should go forth (Isa. 62: 11) and that there would be a premature movement on the subject, and consequent disappointment, and waiting of the saints. (Dan. 12: 12. Hab. 2: 3. Zech. 13: 4. Matt. 25: 5.)

It is generally known that the chronology of the world commenced in the autumn; and the Jewish feast of tabernacles was supposed to be the anniversary of the creation, and in which the people were required to rejoice: (Lev. 23: 39, 40.) and it seems reasonable to expect that the antitype of that feast, the joyous salvation of the saints, will occur in the same season of the year.

And if the sun and moon have been darkened,—the gospel promulgated through the nations by missionaries and Bible societies, and other events predicted have been fulfilled, then we are very near the end; for the prophetic chain is so complete, and the several events are so connected, that if any part has been fulfilled, we surely know where we are, and that the Lord is soon coming.

The evidence of the time of the commandment to build Jerusalem appears to be entirely positive and certain. Not only was the chronology of events, at that time recorded by three different nations, all of which agree, but that of Ptolemy is confirmed by the record of more than twenty eclipses in connection with prominent political events, and which have been ascertained by many modern astronomers, to have been correctly recorded.

And these records prove that the reign of Artaxerxes Longimanus commenced in the year 4249 of the Julian period, and of course his 20th year, when the commandment went forth, must have been 4269 of the Julian period. Add to this 2300 years and we have 6569, which is the number of the Julian period of the present year.

There is also strong historical evidence that the crucifixion occurred in 4752 of the Julian period, A. D. 39; and that the great persecuteon commenced in 521, from which date, the other great prophetic period of 1335 years extends to the present year.

Let us be found continually ready to meet the Lord.

Washington, D. C., Sept.

For the Crisis.

Jews.

Reasons why I believe something of importance is to be done for a class of the Jews, literally, after the second advent. I mean by "Jews," the literal race of Israel.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

REASON I.

Because God declares, "Behold, the eyes of the Lord God are upon the sinful kingdom, and I will destroy it from off the face of the earth; saving that I will not utterly destroy the house of Jacob, saith the Lord. For, lo, I will command, and I will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth. All the sinners of my people shall die by the sword, which say, The evil shall not overtake nor prevent us. In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up his ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old: That they may possess the remnant of Edom, and of all the heathen, which are called by my name, saith the Lord that doeth this. Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the trader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt.—And I will bring again the captivity of my people of [illegible] the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord God." Amos, 9: 8—15.

This is not a conditional prophecy.—There is not a condition, in any way, directly or remotely connected with it. It is positively thus saith the Lord. it shall be so and so. Now, certainly, there are some declarations here which have not been fulfilled, and which must be in another age than the present. Let us see.

1. "All the sinners" of God's people have not yet been destroyed by the sword; but will not this work be perfected in the great battle of the day of the Lord?

2. "The tabernacle of David" is not yet "raised up;" and it cannot be until He comes who is to raise it up, and possess it forever.

3. "The tabernacle of David" has not yet been builded "as in the days of old."

4. The people of Israel have not yet possessed (to say nothing of "the remnant of Edom") "all the heathen," who are called by the Lord's name. The prophecy, in one form of it, began to be fulfilled in the apostolic age, (see Acts 15: 13—17) but no one can contend that it was finished there.

5. "The days" have not yet come for "the plowman to overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed." Will we contend the prophecy is to be fulfilled "spiritually"? Then let us say no more about taking the Bible in the simple form of it; for there is not the most remote intimation, here, or anywhere else, that this is so to be understood.

5. God certainly has not caused Israel yet to return again from their captivity, "and build the waste cities, and plant vineyards, and make gardens," and settle in "their own land" in such a state of things as to "never more be pulled up out of their land"! And mark you, this promise is made to the people of Israel that are in captivity. Why not believe all the Word of God?

REASON II.

Because God declares, "And I will set my glory among the heathen, and all the heathen shall see my judgment that I have executed, and my hand that I have laid upon them. So the house of Israel shall know that I am the Lord their God from that day and forward. And the heathen shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity: because they trespassed against me, therefore hid I my face from them, and gave them into the hand of their enemies: so fell they all by the sword.

According to their uncleanness and according to their transgressions have I done unto them, and hid my face from them.—

Therefore thus saith the Lord God; Now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the whole house of Israel, and I will be jealous for my holy name: after that they have borne their shame, and all their trespasses whereby they have trespassed against me, when they dwelt safely in their land, and none made them afraid. When I have brought them again from the people, and gathered them out of their enemies' lands, and am sanctified in them in the sight of many nations; then shall they know that I am the Lord their God, which caused them to be led into captivity among the heathen: but I have gathered them unto their own land, and have left none of them any more there. Neither will I hide my face any more from them: for I have poured out my spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord God." Ezek. 39; 21—29.

Will it be said this is a conditional prophecy? Where are the conditions stated? Our assumptions do not prove anything.—It cannot possibly be conditional, from the fact that a portion of it has been, and is being already fulfilled, literally, to the very letter. Who are the people to whom God makes the promises here recorded?—[illegible] they believing Gentiles? Are they converted Jews of this dispensation only? Let us see. They are those whom God calls "the house of Israel"—who "went into captivity for their iniquity"—from whom God "hid" his "face," and "gave them into the hand of their enemies"—who "fell by the sword"—the "captivity of Jacob,"—who "have borne their shame"—who have "trespassed" against the Lord—who once "dwelled safely in their land, and none made them afraid."

Can such language refer to any other people, than the literal race of Israel, in captivity, away from the land where they once were settled? I trow not. What does God declare by this prophecy that he will do for them?

1. Set his "glory among the heathen" (Gentiles.) Has he yet done it? Can he, will he do it until "the glory of God shall be revealed, and all flesh see it together"?

2. "All the heathen shall see" his "judgment" executed. Have all the heathen (Gentiles) seen it yet?

3 He "will bring AGAIN the captivity of Jacob." It was brought once from Babylon, and now it is to be brought AGAIN.

4. He "will have mercy on the whole house of Israel." He has had mercy, and is having mercy on individual cases of them, past and present, but he will at length have mercy on the whole house of them.

5. And this is to be, "after they have borne their trespasses whereby they have trespassed against" him. Have they finished bearing them yet? Are they not bearing them now?

6. He will gather "them into their own land, and leave none of them any more there," in the land of their captivity.—Who will pretend that this has been done?

7. He will pour out his "spirit upon the house of Israel," and "no more hide his face from them." This has not yet been done, certainly. Now it will do no good to laugh at such a prophecy as this, or sneeringly exclaim "pshaw,"—"age to come"—here is the Word of the [illegible]

I do not, in this article, contend for the salvation of all the Jews who have ever lived on the earth, nor for probation after the Lord comes, as some hold it, but only that such promises as these will be literally fulfilled to the literal seed of Israel, in some form contradistinction to the Gentiles.

what does it mean if not what it says? or, if it is conditional, where are the conditions?

(Concluded next week.)

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 1, 1856.

Questions.

No. V.

The following questions are a continuation of the series proposed by a sister:

"There is a spirit in man; and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth him understanding." Job, 32: 8.

Ques. "Is the understanding a moral power of the soul? or a genuine grace of the "spirit in man?"

Ans. The word rendered spirit in Job 32: 8, is ruakh, the same word found in Eccl. 3: 19, where Solomon declares when speaking of man and beast, "they have all one breath," (ruakh.) The same occurs again in Ps. 104 29. "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled; thou takest away their breath, (ruakh) they die and return to their dust."

It will be seen at once, that "the understanding" is, not "a genuine grace of the spirit" (breath) in man," as this is not an intelligent principle, for one may have the breath of life without intellect.

In answer to the first part of the question we would remark, if by soul is meant the mind, that the understanding is the result or sequence of the power of the mind, but should object to the use of the word moral as used in the question.

QUESTION NO. 6.

"The spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life." Job 33: 4.

Ques. "Did each of the persons of the Trinity form each of the substances of man? In other words, is the Divine Spirit the Creator and Father of the Spirit in man?"

Ans. Were we to answer the first part of the question, we should reply in the negative; but to the second, in the affirmative. Proof, Zech. [illegible] The Lord formeth the spirit (ruakh) of man within him."

QUESTION NO. 7.

"Having the understanding darkened; being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart." Eph. 4: 18.

Ques. "Does 'the life of God,' here mean the life which God first communicated to man?"

Ans. We think not; although it is true that when Adam was created, he had "the life of God," or in other words he was a godly man. We do not think the apostle referred to Adam's condition before his transgression, but to men then existing, as in Rom. 6: 11. "Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord."

When one is alienated from "the Life of God," we understand him to be in a sinful state, and when "alive unto God," in a state of righteousness.

Our Fast.

It will be remembered that we spoke about a fast in Boston, to be held by our brethren and sisters, Friday 26th inst., in order to have a more thorough self-examination than usual, and to pray the Lord to revive his work in our hearts, and among the people generally.

We have had the fast, and the result has been blessed. A large number attended the meeting on Friday evening, which was held at the Free Chapel, corner of Causeway and Lowell streets, commencing at 6 1-2 and continuing till after 9 o'clock. Many came who have not been in the habit of attending our evening meetings, and felt a deep interest in the work of preparation for the world to come.

We all felt that the Lord was pleased with us for observing a day of fasting and prayer.

The result, thus far, has been, to lead us to consider the beam in our own eyes, instead of the mote in our brother's eyes, and greatly to increase brotherly love and christian forbearance, besides leading us to humble ourselves before the Lord,—"confess our faults one to another, and pray one for another that we may be healed."

We find in looking over the history of the church as recorded in the Bible and history, that special blessings have been given after fastings and prayer, as in the case of Daniel, the Ninevites, Cornelius and others.

In view of the nearness of the judgment, the want of preparation for the event, and the constant surrounding perils of these last days, it seems proper that the church of Christ should fast and pray, and humble themselves in the dust before the Lord, instead of feasting at fairs, levees, picnics etc., that are so common among professors at the present time.

As a people, we need more of the holy, devotional feelings of former times—more of the self-sacrificing, self-denying disposition, more power with God in prayer, more faith and love, patience and meekness; and, in order that this may be accomplished, we must have more of the spirit of God, and be more entirely consecrated to his service.

Brethren and sisters, it is time to awake and put on the whole christian armor.—We have not a moment to lose. The enemies of man and of God are all aroused and marshalled for the conflict, and shall we sleep till we are made fast in the snare of the devil?

We would recommend that all churches appoint a time for fasting and prayer.

We are satisfied that heaven will approbate, and that rich blessings will follow.

A New Work.

We have received from the author an interesting work, entitled "LOUIS NAPOLEON PROPHETICALLY CONSIDERED in connexion with the Advent of the Lord Jesus Christ."

Published by B. Bussier,
No. 238 So. Third-st.,
Philadelphia, Penn.

For the Crisis.

"To every purpose there is both time and season."

BY SETH ROGERS.

BRO. GRANT:—I have never written a communication for any of our Advent papers, for the sixteen years that I have believed in the near personal advent and reign of our Lord, having been hindered by the fear that more harm than good might be the consequence of presenting so [illegible] but I now propose [illegible] present a few tho'ts.

"To every purpose there is both time and season."

In God's Revelation to man, time, in some form, is an ever recurring element, and if we can truly apprehend and apply it to its own legitimate subjects, without involving it in inferences not strictly appropriate, and analagous; perhaps there are few subjects more interesting and important to believers in Divine Revelation. It is my purpose, in as brief a manner as possible, to treat of TIME AS A WHOLE without its details.

I believe that somewhere along the stream of events, affecting this planet's history and destiny, that a point will be reached when time proper, as we realize it, will cease, and be merged in the great ocean of Eternity—when mankind will have obtained the super-angelic state;—everything preparatory to that state belongs to Time Proper.

The first mention of time in Scripture, is associated with the Creation of this world and the first human pair. For obvious reasons, I can attach no other importance, or significance, to the record of the first week of time in the first chapter of Genesis, than, that it stands distinctly out as the type of the duration of this world till its entrance on its eternal state. In that record we are told that God finished this work of creation,—the last of which was man—and rested (or ceased) from his work. It is not to be supposed that God rested from fatigue, nor that he suspended any of his functions as the author and ruler of the world he made, because he ceased from his original creative works. Neither is it stated that Adam and Eve rested on the seventh day, in the sense that the Creator did. It should be remembered that there was no positive enactment of a Sabbath day for man, in the sense of abstaining from employments until long after the creation, even not till Moses' time, when the seventh day became an important element in the Mosaic economy. This consideration, to my mind, gives to the recorded week in Genesis its true import as a type.

To sum up in brief, a week is recorded at the beginning;—the world has had a six thousand years as near as is known; one thousand years are wanting to complete the week, and is unquestionably in the future.

As the various time calculations in their details favor the belief that the last day of the week will soon commence; so, the harmony of the prophetic periods, together with the chronology of the "Divine Week," (as I love to call it) seem to demonstrate the coming of the "seed of the Woman"—"the seed of Abraham"—the Son of David'—"the Son of God,"—"the Second Man"—"the Lord from Heaven."—The Being who bears all the above names, will be present in the World's Sabbath. After blessing man, the first command given to him was to "multiply, and increase, and replenish the earth, and subdue it and have dominion over it."

Now, as this command has not been fulfilled, and as the will of God will be done in the earth as in Heaven; so the "second man" alone can fulfil it, in the "restitution of all things spoken by all the holy prophets, since the world began."

Restitution is not properly creation, nor re-creation, but simply restoring something which has been taken away, or changed, to its original state.

Assuming, for the sake of argument, that the time of the restitution, is the proper reign of the "Son of David" "the Son of Man, we arrive at two important results:

1. The analogy of time, so familiar to believers will be maintained to its full completion.

2. An ample time and space is afforded for the fulfillment of all those glorious promises concerning the righteousness, peace, and happiness, which we shall obtain on the earth under the reign of Christ,—"the Anointed King"—and prior to the final judgment, and the "new creation." In view of the reign and glory of the "Son of David," the subject and the scene grows in our thoughts and hopes, 'till it obtains a magnitude and amplitude, difficult to describe, within proper limits for your paper. I have rather given hints, than arguments, written hastily in intervals of daily duty. Whoever can enlarge on this theme—the reign of Christ—the next soon coming event—and describe it Scripturally, so as to have its jots and tittles fulfilled, will do the Advent cause an important good.

Charlestown, Mass., Sept. 1856.

The Sabbath.

BY R. WAKEFIELD.

BRO. GRANT:—The efforts which are made by some brethren to prove the obligation of the Sabbath upon the church of Christ, lead me to pen these few lines in which I wish to propose a few enquiries.

1. That to "remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," is an essential part of the law, must of course be admitted.

Well then, if "Christ is the end of the law . . . to every one that believeth," why is he that believeth required to keep any part of that which has come to an end?" Rom. 10: 4.

2. If the law was our school-master to bring us unto Christ, and if, after that faith is come we are no longer under the school master, by what authority does the school-master insist that we must learn to keep the Sabbath? Gal. 3: 24, 25.

3. If that is dead under which we were held, we are not therefore free from all of its requirements. And what right have we to endeavor to briug to life again that which God has declared dead, and from which "we are delivered?" Rom. 7: 6.

4. Is the law which said, "Thou shalt not covet," Rom. 7: 7, the same as that which said, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." Exod. 20: 8; and is not this the law to which the apostle refers in this place?

5. Moses calls the law which he received in Horeb, the "covenant . . . even ten commandments:" and says that God "wrote them upon two tables of stone." And the apostle calls that which was written and engraven in stones," "the ministration of death," and says that it was "glorious." 2 Cor. 3: 7.

Now when he says v. 11, "For if that which was done away was glorious," does he not refer to the glorious ministration "written and engraven in stones?"

And again, when the apostle says v. 13, "the children of Israel could not steadfastly look to the end of that which is abolished," does he not have reference to this same "ministration"—the law, of which Christ is the end to every one that believeth?

Newark, N. J., Aug. 4, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from sister M. H. Morrison.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel it duty to write for the Crisis, yet I feel so unqualified to contribute to its columns that I hardly know how, but God being my helper I will try to write a few words.

It is not to the great and learned, God looks. Blessed be His holy name, who has provided a way whereby the poor, tried and tempted pilgrims can communicate with each other as they journey through this vail of tears. I, with brother Berick, feel downcast sometimes on account of temptations and trials, at other times rejoicing in the full assurance of hope.

My dear brethren, pray for me, and yourselves, that while engaged in the business of the world, we may be kept from its evils, and glorify our God in all that we may do. My prayer is, come Lord, and come quickly. My expectation is, that He will come, and that soon.

I hope the brethren and sisters will be exhorted by brother Burnham's letter on "Wrong Things." For the wrongs it points out are very prevalent, even among those from whom we would expect other fruits.

And you sisters, who have hitherto deceived yourselves by believing you were walking well-pleasing to God, while adorned with flowers, ribbons, jewelry and all the vanities of the world; let me in the love of the gospel, entreat you to read and give heed, to brother I. H. C.'s poetry, in a late No. of the Crisis, (July 23) headed, "A Wreath of Flowers and a Crown of Thorns."

Yes, dear sisters, let us who have professed to love that Jesus endeavor to imitate Him; (not the world) let not our adorning "be that outward adorning, of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price."

I would remark on brother E. T. W.'s letter on bearing the Cross, in the Expositor and Advocate of August first. He says:

"Some seem to think speaking in meeting is the cross they must bear; and when they have done that, they think little more about the cross. We apprehend that is a very small item in bearing the cross. Men are naturally in love with this world."

To this world we must become crucified. Crucifixion is a hard death; but few persons are willing to die such a death. There is, however, no other way of entering into the kingdom of God. We must be crucified unto the world, and the world unto us. Most professed christians, it is to be feared, have made a covenant with the world; but 'if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him.'" 1 John 1: 15.

These remarks of our brother's, I fear have too much truth in them: but let those who have this covenant with the world remember,—"No man can serve two masters." "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Matt. 6: 24.

There is a hidden motive in faith that Satan and the world cannot perceive. Hence, they cannot conceive how any can serve God for nought. They can see no motive to labor and endurance, but in a present gain of an outward, worldly nature, such as wealth, security from loss and peril, a good name, success of and with a party, &c; hence the temptations from Satan and wicked men. To show the falsity of this notion, and give assurance to all, that faith rests on no such supports and is moved by no such motives, Satan was allowed to try Job and the Savior with all the inducements that could be drawn from these sources. Their examples assure us that faith scorns such paltry considerations. It loves God because He is love; believes Him because His word is truth; and serves Him because worthy and in view of the reward in His kingdom. Then let us cultivate a trusting and working faith that we may glorify God and enjoy his peace here, and eternal life in the kingdom.

My faith in God and His word fails not, notwithstanding it has been often predicted that we would become infidels. I confidently believe that God will ultimately make a clean work, by destroying the sinner, and cleansing all things that are to remain.

Then dear brethren and sisters, let us prove ourselves by the sure rule(the Bible) and we shall be saved if we are faithful.

We are in perilous times. Heavy waves are rolling over us; but the Lord has the helm, and will surely bring us into the haven of rest in due time.

Your sister, looking for life and immortality at his appearing and kingdom,

M. H. MORRISON.

New Glasgow, Aug. 12, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter from brother L. Plummer.

BRO. GRANT:—As every christian wishes to know the truth in his case, and to have everything that will enable him to understand his true position in relation to God and the world to come made perfectly clear, I thought that I would write a few lines suggested by the question,—what are the characteristics of a servant of God? and how may we know that we are one?

This is a question that every child of God desires to answer in a manner that admits of no mistake, for he that truly loves God wants to enjoy the blessedness of that inheritance, the earnestness of which has led him to exclaim, "O, taste and see that the Lord is good!" "Blessed are they all that trust in Him."

Again, another question is started in the mind. How can the subjects of the Mosaic and gospel dispensations, whose duties differ so widely, ever unite in the same acts of duty and service in the world to come?

A few facts will answer them both. In the first place, God is unchangeable in the principles of his government. The new creature is the same under all dispensations and conditions; his duties differing according to the circumstances in which he is called to act.

Joshua, in the dispensation under which he lived, and the circumstances in which he was placed, was faithful and true, when with sword in hand he went forth to slay "all that breathed." God was so pleased with his obedience, that he granted his request to have the day prolonged that the work might be accomplished; yet, when he meets the angel of the Lord in the appearance of a man with a drawn sword in his hand, his commission is laid aside, and with the characteristic humility of the new creature, he reverently asks, "What saith my Lord unto his servant?" And when told to put his shoes from off his feet, with characteristic obedience "Joshua did so."

But with a change of dispensation came also a change of circumstances, and consequently a change of duties. The commansds "Put up thy sword into its sheath,"—"resist not evil"—had been issued, and now we find the same new creature becoming a gazing stock both by reproaches and afflictions; taking joyfully the spoiling of goods, suffering every inconvenience both in person and family, and when not actually called upon to suffer themselves, standing boldly by those that were, and becoming companions of those that were so used. Love to God and each other triumphed over every selfish consideration, so that they remembered those in bonds as bound with them, and those who suffer adversity as being themselves also in the body, liable to the same condition and needing the same sympathy and aid. So the dealings of God with his people are the same in principle under both the old and new dispensation, but differing in operation as much as the duties of his people differ.

When Israel was passing through the wilderness, because there was no means by which they could supply their own wants, God sent them manna from Heaven for food, and the rock poured them out water for drink. But when they came to where they found the old corn of the land, the manna ceased. Thus throwing them upon their exertions under a common providence, instead of leaving them in idleness to feed upon a special providence.

So when the disciples were first sent out, they were to take nothing for their journey, no money or scrip, no extra coat or pair of shoes, but as lambs, going in the midst of wolves, they were the objects of a special providence; themselves directed to be "wise as serpents and harmless as doves;" simply inquiring as they entered a city who in it was worthy; and like those who were sent for the colt for the Master's use, or the guest-chamber in which to prepare and eat the last supper, they readily found the object of their enquiry, and there they were to abide till they left the place.

But afterward, when churches were planted in different places, the care of the poor and the preachers, was made their duty. God, however, falling back in cases of emergency upon the former method of special providence, as in the case of the widow's meal and oil, and Elijah's fare in the old dispensation, and Peter's deliverance from prison, together with the many instances that might be named in the days of the church's persecution and the suffering in the new.

Thus, while we find the duties of God's people different at different times, we find that the same principle has always actuated them and always will. So that understanding what character has pleased God, and does please him, we may know what will always please him in the world to come.

Had they reverence in the past? Is it a trait of their character now? And does the Scripture represent the holy ones before the throne as possessing it?

"God is greatly to be feared in the assembly of saints, and to be had in reverence of all about him," says the Psalmist. "Let us have grace whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear," says the apostle Paul. And Isaiah heard those before the throne cry one to another, "Holy, Holy, Holy is the Lord of hosts."

Did they have humility? Do they have it now? And will they have it in the world to come?

Says Job, "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth thee, wherefore I abhor myself and repent in dust and ashes." "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ," is the language of converted Paul. Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou king of saints. Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? for thou only art holy," is the language of those who had gotten the victory and stood upon the sea of glass, with the harps of God in their hands.

Was devotion a prominent feature in the character of the Old Testament saints? and do those of the new imitate them?

It is written of Daniel that he kneeled upon his knees three times a day and prayed, and gave thanks before his God; and when Cornelius' messengers arrived at Peter's house, they found him praying. So with the holy ones before the throne, they cry holy, and they bow to worship. Submission to the will of God is a trait in the character of God's servants under all circumstances. "It is the Lord, let him do what seemeth him good," was the exclamation of good old Eli when told of calamity to come upon his family, the hearing of which would make the ears to tingle; and the language of our Master when in deep distress,—"not my will but thine be done," has been the language of every true christian's heart, from that day to this. That it is the character of those who are accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection of the dead, is evident, from the fact that they obtained it only by submission.

One thing more and it seems to me that we have the characteristics of the new creature, that is obedience. By faith, Abraham, when called to go out into a place which he should after receive, obeyed, and he went out not knowing whither he went. Peter and John when commanded not to speak in the name of Jesus, answered,—"whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye." "We ought to obey God rather than men." And the whole tenor of God's word goes to prove that perfect obedience to the one great Law-giver constitutes the harmony and happiness, and is the glory of the world to come.

Now, brethren, have we the characteristics of the new creature,—reverence, humility, devotion, submission, and obedience? If so we may rejoice in the full assurance of hope, and wait without fear for our Lord from Heaven.

Thy brother, through peace daring to hope, LEONARD PLUMMER.

Roxbury, Sept. 7, 1856.

For the Crisis

Letter from Br. J. Jquire.

BRO. GRANT:—I take this opportunity to address you a few thoughts.

While I was reading the account of the Wilbraham Campmeeting, my heart was made glad. This last week past seemed more than a month to me on account of not getting the Crisis, and I was longing to hear the result of the meeting. I am thankful to our Father in heaven that the results were so rejoicing and strengthening.

Dear brother, we here in Canada, have no such meetings, no one to preach to us, only once in a while. I do not think it is right, for I do believe that there are some faithful brethren here in Canada and they are willing to help a preacher to go forward in preaching the coming of Jesus, which is my only hope. I can say I do long for Jesus to come and put a stop to the wickedness there is in the land; but I do not expect things to get better, but worse and worse.

I see an appointment in the Crisis for brother Edwin Burnham for Canada East, I only wish we could get him to come to Canada West.

If he has not means to pay his expenses, we will send them.

Dear brother Grant, if you know where to send to brother Burnham, do so for us, for we do love the truth and we want to hear it. We would like him to come over and stop some time; that is, if dear Jesus does not come as soon as some of the brethren think he will. We are willing to help forward the work of warning a guilty world. Above everything else I want Jesus to come, and my heart rejoices when I hear that Jesus is so nigh. I only hope that brother Decker's conclusion is right,—if so, we shall soon go home.

While the world at large is crying "peace and safety" we know that sudden destruction is to come on them and they shall not escape. Now dear brother I must conclude by sending my love to all the dear children of God, and I hope we shall soon meet in the kingdom of God's dear Son. Amen and Amen.

Yours as ever, looking for the soon coming of Jesus. JAMES SQUIRE,

Port Perry, Sept. 9, '56.

For the Crisis.

Letter From Br. Z. Campbell.

BRO. GRANT:—"Rejoice! rejoice! the blessed time has come" for a reaction among the children of God. Dark and dreary have been our prospects: but as we near the haven of rest, the atmosphere begins to light up with the sun-beams of endless day. We have hitherto been a crude, unorganized mass, suddenly emerged from Egyptian darkness into the divine light of revelation. And taking the word of God for the man of our counsel, and discarding all iron-bedsteads, every member has searched the Scriptures for himself, and been his own commentator. So far this is right. But as men are constituted of different moulds and faculties differently impressible, we have embraced different views. Now, is this, in itself, wrong? it is an unavoidable consequence; but now comes the error. We have individually pushed forward our own private views to the exclusion of all others, until the whole body has been pushed asunder, and jargon with his thousand mouths has assumed the ascendency, and discord and unpleasant feelings have sprung up among us. But, thanks to God alone, the brethren begin to see their error, and a better state of feeling is springing up. The blessed spirit of the Wilbraham camp-meeting is spreading among the Advent churches; to bring them into Gospel order and lead them to strive for peace among themselves, recognizing all to be brethren that give evidence of a Christian character, irrespective of some peculiar views on which there is a difference of opinion.

At Springfield, a happy union has been effected; thank the Lord. At New Britain, also, the boisterous elements are fast sinking into a calm. I came here on Wednesday last, preached in the evening, and again on Sunday; and in the evening had Brethren Munger and Luddington with me.

The brethren agreed to erect, for their standard, the Bible rules of order, and, trusting in God, to abide by them; and in conformity, have chosen their officers requisite to a wholesome church government.

This was a work commenced by brother Luddington in July last, and after surmounting much difficulty, has been effected.

We have been too much afraid of "organization." The word has been dressed with gorgon terrors and made a scare-crow long enough. The fact is,—organization is indispensable to life. There is not a living thing in the universe, neither animal nor vegetable, but what is organized. Organization preceeds life in every instance. The reeds of plants are organized bodies before germination into life. God organized his man before he breathed into him the breath of life. The malcules of matter are all organized before the formation of crystals: and—"Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular."—But a body implies an organization and members. But the disorganized body is always a dead body, for disorganization is death. No wonder, then, that so many of our Advent churches are dead. Let us organize a body and pray to God to breathe into our nostrils the breath of life, that we may become a living soul.

I am satisfied the course heretofore taken by some of our Advent preachers has been wrong. I mean myself first, and as many others as have fallen into the same error.

We have had our peculiar views, and have advocated them when they have injured the cause. Our over-heated zeal has produced over-action. I see it, and intend to avoid it in future and to preach the plainer and more practical parts and leave the sublime doctrinal parts until the time and occasion demand it. I still believe there is further truth to be developed, for we have not come to the perfect day, and the path-way of the just must shine more and more until that come. And from past experience I have been convinced that the cause of truth can be better served by a private and friendly conversation, and the reading of judicious works, than by dry argumentative preaching.

May the Lord forgive us all our past errors and lead us into all truth and righteousness, and deliver us from all further discord and unholy spirits, and save us in his kingdom.

Z. CAMPBELL.

New Britain, Sept. 7, '56.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. S. H. Waldron.

WELL, BRN. AND SRS:—Time still continues, yet the day "hasteth greatly" when we must all stand before the judge of earth, to receive our just reward of life, or death. It therefore becomes us intelligent beings, so to improve the few days we may have, in a way that shall be most beneficial to ourselves and those around us, and let God have all the glory.

We are all aware that at this time every evil influence exists to turn us aside from the strait and narrow way that leads to eternal life.

Political strife, pride, and fashion of the day, what shall we eat and drink and wherewithal shall we be clothed, with the riches and honors of the world, are combined against us. Here we have aches, and pains, we mourn over our sins and the loss of near and dear kindred.

The true Christian cannot desire an eternal home like this, but must long for the time to come when he will be made like Christ in his kingdom, with all that have died in the Lord in every age and clime. When the humble child of God contrasts the difference between this and a better world where these things have an end, he can but cry out, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly;" "let thy Kingdom come, and thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven."

Many of us have been looking, longing, and waiting for the coming of the Lord in his kingdom, to raise the dead and change the living saints; and the subject of inquiry has been as it was with Daniel;—"how long?"

We have come to honest conclusion from time to time, from history and the prophetic word, that the days would end at certain points of time, and as often have been disappointed. All this is no argument that we may never know the time.

Bro. Grant, our hope is a blessed hope. May you one and all not shun to declare the whole counsel of God, whether men will hear or forbear, giving the household their portion of meat in due season, wisely discerning between truth and error.

Your unworthy brother,

S. H. WALDRON.

Portland, Aug. 23, '56.

HER SILENCE SAVED ME.—I remember, said a young man, being in company with several thoughtless girls. Among them, however, there was one exception; a serious, quiet, and beautiful woman, and whose pen had for a long time spoken eloquently in the cause of truth and virtue through the columns of our village paper.

Suddenly I conceived the thought of bantering her upon religious subjects, and with the fool-hardiness of youth, and the recklessness of impiety, I launched forth with some infidel objection that none but the fool who saith in his heart there is no God, would venture to reiterate. The flock of silly goslings about me laughed and tittered, and I, encouraged by their mirth, grew bold, and repeated my inuendoes, occasionally glancing slyly towards the principal butt of all my fun. She did not seem to notice me at all; she did not smile, did not look away, did not look at me.

Still I continued my impious harangue, thinking she must refute something, that she would not surely hear her own faith held up to ridicule by a beardless boy.—The snickerers around me gradually began to glance towards her. Her face was so quiet that seriousness stole over them, and I stood alone, striving by my own senseless laughter, to buoy up my fast sinking courage.

Still she never spoke, nor smiled—scarcely moved; her immobility grew awful; I began to stutter—to pause—to feel cold and strange—I could not tell how.—My courage oozed off; my heart grew faint—I was conquered.

That night after I went home, in reflecting over my fool-hardy adventure, I could have scourged myself. The sweet angelic countenance of my mute accuser came up before me even in the visions of night; I could not sleep. Nor did I rest, till some days after I went to the house of the lady I had insulted and asked her pardon.—Then she spoke to me—how mild! how Christianly! how sweetly!

I was subdued—melted down: and it was not long after that I became an humble Christian, and looked back to my miserable unbelief with horror.

Her silence saved me. Had she answered with warmth, with sarcasm, with sneer or with rebuke, I should have grown stronger in my bantering, and more determined in my opposition. But she was silent, and I felt as if my voice was striving to make itself heard against the mighty voice of an omnipotent God! Oh! how often would it be better if, instead of vain argument or hot dispute, the Christian would use the magic of silence.

A SPECIAL APPEAL.

Do read this appeal and HEED it. I wish to publish another edition of my "GOSPEL VINDICATOR," (a work of 187 pages,) for gratuitous distribution in Minnesota. It will cost comparatively but little to do it, as it is already stereotyped. It is just the work needed to follow up the "Key of Truth," as it removes the many objections to our faith. How much will you now pledge for this object, to be paid January 1st 1857!

Send your pledges to the Crisis immediately, that I may arrange accordingly. Who will pledge $1, $5, or $10?

Remember that this is missionary ground, and GOD has a claim upon your dollars!

Friends, you must help. Do not refuse.—If more than enough should be pledged, it will be used to issue the fifth edition of the "Key of truth." "Let us not be weary in well doing." W. SHELDON.

Vermillion, Dakota Co., Minnesota.

The Voice of the Church.

"This work is described as an essay 'on the coming and Kingdom of the Redeemer, or a history of the doctrine of the reign of Christ on earth.'

The object of the writers is to demonstrate the antiquity of the doctrine of the second coming of Christ, and, at the same time, to show its consistency with the holy Scriptures. It is a work of remarkable research and patient collection, and shows that the authors have been dilligent searchers for evidence of the truth of their doctrine; and also zealous advocates of them.

To those who desire to see the doctrines of the Adventists clearly and ably defined, we recommend this book."—Worcester Spy.

Published by H. L. Hastings, Peacedale R. I., and for sale at this office.

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus, at Tolland, Conn., the 17th inst., after an illness of one week, Bro. Joseph Tryon, aged 60 years.

The subject of this notice, was, for several years previous to the flying angel's message, as we have learned from those who have been longer acquainted with him than ourselves, a member of the Methodist church.

While united with that body, he lived a consistent, well ordered life, and maintained a Godly conversation. He heard the angel's first proclamation, and anon, with joy received the glad tidings of speedy redemption.

In '44, he, with others of like precious faith, was disappointed; but did not relinquish his hope.

During the whole advent movement, his course has been steady and onward. He fondly embraced all the glorious truths connected with the speedy coming of Christ, as they were presented from the oracles of God. He engaged in making the cry, "Behold the bridegroom cometh"

He came up to May 19, '55, confidently expecting, then, to realize his hope. Again he was disappointed, but did not cast away his confidence, for he believed that it had great recompense of reward.

We have often heard him express a desire, (and sometimes an expectation) that he might remain until the trump of God should awake the sainted sleepers, and rob the enemy of his precious spoil—the pious dead. But, alas! he has fallen a victim to the grave, by the cruel hand of the relentless tyrant!

We mourn, but "not as others which have no hope;" for we have full confidence that he sleeps in Jesus; and that soon, "he that raised up Christ from the dead" will "also quicken" his "mortal" body. Thus while we mourn, hope gives us comfort. And when we think of the trying circumstances in which he was placed, together with the fact that "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse," we are also comforted by the tho'ts, that he is taken from the evil to come,—that piercing sorrow, has, for the last time rent his heart; that he has shed his last tear, that his bosom has heaved its last sigh; that he has uttered his last groan: and that,—

Not another wave of trouble shall ever roll across his breast;
Not another vexing fear shall e'er disturb his quiet rest.

The thunders of earth's last revolutions may roll over his head, he heeds them not; he sleeps in Jesus.

He has "fought a good fight," "finished his course," he has "kept the faith;" "henceforth there is laid up for him a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give him at that day; and not to him only, but to all them also that love his appearing." R. ROBBINS.

Willington, Conn., Sep. 22, '56.

Foreign News.

Arrival of the Canada.

HALIFAX, Sept. 24.

The Royal Mail steamship Canada, Capt. Lang, from Liverpool, 9 A. M., on Saturday 13th, arrived at this port about noon to-day.

GREAT BRITAIN.

There is no political news.

FRANCE.

Rumors are afloat that an exchange of colonies is negotiating between France and England—France to give up her factories on the main land of India, in exchange for the island of Mauritius.

It is also reported that France wishes to purchase from Denmark a strip of the coast of Iceland for fishing stations.

It is further reported that the state of Algeria demands a large addition of troops.

The emperor is still at Biarritz. On the 9th he visited San Sebastian.

SPAIN.

No political news of note.

ITALY.

Vienna papers declare that the Western powers have addressed a second note to Naples, in the same spirit as the former one, but in milder language.

SWEDEN.

M. St Jerneld, Minister of Foreign Affairs has resigned.

It is reported that the relations between Russia and Sweden become more and more unfavorable.

TURKEY.

Kars was formerly restored by the Russians to the Turks Sept. 6. The principal part of the ceremony consisted of a dinner and champagne given by the Russians.

German papers say that Austria has offered to meditate between Turkey and the Montenegrins.

CHINA.

Dates from Hong Kong are July 25, Singapore Aug. 2.

The Chinese insurgents took possession of Tang Yang, July 6, which brings them close to Souchow, the capital of the province and the outlet of commerce from Shanghæ.

The imperial fleet of 40 sail is blockaded near Nankin.

The export of tea was 4,280,000 pounds.

RUSSIA.

It is stated that the Czar is about to effect a full understanding in religious matters with the Pope.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

The Lord permitting, I will preach asf ollows:—

In the vicinity of Crane's Grove, Adaline, Payne's Point, East and West Plumb River, until Oct. 1.
Ripley, Brown Co. Ill., Oct. 5, 6, and 7.
Cooperstown, Ill., Oct. 8 and 9.
Mt. Sterling 10 and 11.
Ripley, 12.
Camp Point 13 and 14.
Detroit, 15 and 16.
Pleasant Vale, 17 and over Sunday.
Bozra, 20 and 21.
Detroit 23.
Ripley 25, and over Sunday.
Freeport, 31 and over Sunday Nov. 2 Bro. Leister, of Buchanan, wil lmeet me there and accompany me to Dubuque, Iowa.

I will visit other places in Ill., if desired, if brethren will address me at Freeport and give the necessary direction. If brethren think it not best for me to visit them as proposed, will they please inform me by letter, directed to South Bend, or Laporte, Ind., or Freeport, Ill., as we do not wish to impose ourself by preaching on communities where it is not desired. L. H. CHASE.

Providence permitting, I will preach as follows:
Concord, N. H., Sunday, Sept. 21.
Woodstock, Vt., [Densmore Hill] Sunday, Sept 28.
Rawsonville, Vt., Sunday, Oct. 5.
North Adams, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 12.
Springfield, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 19.
Providence, R. I., Sunday, Oct. 26th.
Worcester, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 2.
Lowell, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 9.
S. W. BISHOP.

Providence permitting I will preach as follows:—
Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 1.
Toronto, C. W., Oct. 2.
Whitby, C. W., Oct. 3.
Reach C. W., 4 & 5.
JOHN T. ONGLEY.

Bro. D. E. Moulton will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 12.

Bro. J. Hemenway will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 26.

S. W. BISHOP.

Bro. D. E. Moulton will preach in Great Falls. Sund Oct 5 S. W. B.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren at Westfield Farms, the 4th Sunday in Sept. H. PRATT.

Providence permitting, I will meet the "little flock" in Vernon, Vt., the last Sunday in Sept. All the brethren in the vicinity are requested to attend. A. DECKER.

The Lord will, I will preach at Footville Ct. near Bro. Hall's, Oct. 1st and 2nd evenings.
Lanesville, Wednesday evening, Oct. 8th and continue over the Sabbath.
S. G. MATHEWSON.

If Providence permit, I will preach at
Windsor, Ct., Oct. 2.
New Britain, Oct. 3.
Cheshire, Oct. 5.
Meridan, Oct. 6 & 7.
Fair Haven, Conn., 8.
Bridgeport 10, and over the Sabbath as Bro. Bassett may appoint.
Waterbury, Ct, Oct. 13.
Plymouth Hollow, 14 & 15.
Northfield, 16.
Litchfield Station 17.
Newfield, 19.
Collinsville, 20.
Canton, 21.
Winsted, 22.
Pleasant Valley, 26.
C. GOODRICH.

If I am well I will attend to Bro. Bishop's appointments as follows:
Lowell, Oct. 1.
Lawrence, 2.
Portsmouth, 3.
Kennebunt Port, 4 and over the Sabbath.
Great Falls, 6.
Portsmouth, 7.
Newburyport, 8.
Marblehead 9 & 10.
Salem, 12.
Lynn, 13.
Boston, 14.
Natick, 15th where Bro. Persy directs.
Westboro, 16.
I hope the Brethren will inform me if these appointments conflict with previous ones, in season to save me expense and trouble.
HIRAM MUNGER.

I will preach, Providence permitting, at
Portsmouth, Sunday, Oct. 5.
Kennebunkport, 6, (evening)
Portland, 7.
Poland, 10.
Boston, 12.
F. H. BERRICK.

If nothing prevents, I will meet the brethren and friends as follows:—
Brunswick, Sunday, Oct. 12.
West Falmouth, 19.
Flying Point, 26.
R. R. YORK.

If the Lord will, I will preach at Boston, Tuesday eve, Oct. 7.
Roxbury, Wednesday eve. 8.
Lynn, (Dye house Ville.) Friday eve, 10
Salem, Lord's day, 12.
Portsmouth, N. H., Friday eve, 17.
Rye, N. H., Lord's day, 19.
Kennebunk Port, Thursday eve, 23.
Portland, Me., (Clark's Hall,) Lord's day, Oct. 26. WM. M. INGHAM.

The Lord permitting, Brother Edwin Burnham will preach in Massena, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., the third and fourth Sabbaths in Oct. He will also hold meetings through the intervening week. JAMES DANFORTH.

Notice.

Providence permitting, the Free Chapel at West Poland, Will be dedicated Friday, Oct. 17. Services to commence at 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M. The meeting will continue over the Sabbath.

It is hoped there will be a general gathering, and that it may be a season of interest and profit, both to the Church here, and those that may come.

Brn. E. Burnham, and J. Couch, are expected to attend.

For the brethren, JESSE PARTRIDGE.

If either of the above named brethren cannot attend, please write me at West Poland as soon as convenient, and oblige

Yours truly,

JESSE PARTRIDGE.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

GLAD TIDINGS:
OR
BIBLE PROOF

That WOE and SIN are to END in the Universe, by a LITTERAL DESTRUCTION of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment.

All Texts on FUTURE PUNISHMENT collected and arranged.

By JACOB BLAIN,

Baptist Minister, of Buffalo, New York.

"And there shall be no more death, sorrow, crying, nor pain."—Rev. 21: 4.

"And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, * * * herrd I saying, blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, forever and ever."—Rev. 5: 13.

"The last enemy shall be DESTROYED."—1 Cor. 15: 26.

Published by the author, No. 19 North Division Street, Buffalo, N. Y., and for sale at the Crisis Office, Boston, Mass. Price 10 cts. single.

Bro. Brewer's Hymn Book, called the 'Jubilee Harp," is for sale at this office. It is a good selection and well adapted to the present wants of the church. It contains nearly all the Hymns published formerly in different Advent Books, with many appropriate additional ones. It contains 328 pages and 324 Hymns. The postage, if prepaid, is only 7 cts.; if not prepaid it is double the amount. Persons in want of this work will please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail, the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

Dr. Decker's pamphlet on the 2300 Days. Price, singly 10 cts.; per dozen, 50 cts.

NEW BOOKS.

We have just received two new and interesting works. One from Bro. J. Lenfest, entitled "The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion," and "The New Birth."

Price for single copy 12 cts; per hundred, $8; to the poor free.

They can be had at this office, or of Bro. Lenfest at Machiasport, Me.

Another from William Shepherd, Elizabeth City, N. J., entitled, "The Saints' Inheritance."

Bro. Shepherd will furnish this work of 50 pages at the following low rates, which he says is below cost, as he wishes the truth to be spreading:

Four copies	[illegible]
Nine	0.5[illegible]
Eighteen	1.00
Fifty	2.50
One hundred	5.00

And in addition, he will prepay the postage.

"WELLCOME'S TREATISE ON MATT., 24TH AND 25TH CHAPTERS.—Permit me to say a word in favor of this work, and that is, in brief, I express my conviction that it is the best work on Matt. 24th and 25th I have ever seen. It is truthful, stirring, perspicuous, adapted to convince, and not lengthy. I hope our brethren will circulate it widely."

D. T. TAYLOR.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

The following works are published and sold by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.—They are also for sale at the Office of the "World's Crisis," 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.; and by W. Pratt, Moline, Ill.; P. A. Smith, 4 Frank street, Rochester, N. Y.; A. F. Porter, 20 Erie street, Philadelphia, Pa.; S. S. Brewer, 54 Wilson street, Providence, R. I.:—

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By I. C. Welcome. 38 cents; postage 6 cents.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions of the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 16 cents per volume.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—by D. T. Taylor. Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—by John Cumming. State of the Dead, by Milton. Intermediate State, by Grew. Each 24 pages. Price 5 cents single; $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the Coast of Man—Ancient Landmarks—Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—price 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred.——Future Punishment—The Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

Business.

BR. W. PRATT:—Br. Needham's money was credited in the paper dated Aug. 6; Brn. H. Simons and Troxel in Sept. 3.

Brn. Martin and McCullock:—We are out of some of the tracts for which you sent, and send others in their place.

Brother Chaffee:—We are entirely out of No. 1 of vol. 4.

Brother Taylor; the books will be very acceptable.

D. R. Mansfield's P. O. address is Kingsbury, Ind.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise, it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

J C Wheeler, W G Perry, J Sanderson, G W Mitchell, Capt D Sparks, J H Trufant, W H Doughty, R E Ladd, W Burnham, S O Lord, D Bates, E A Martin, J Danforth, M C Helme, H Christenson Mr. Nudd, B Jones, D Sparks, $1 each.

C H Colby, J P Longee, A Felt, O M Trask, T M Clapp.

H W Pray $15,00. T Hardy $22,00 C Phillips, Jr. $2.00. S G Edgerly $.90 M. B Piper $2.00. Elisha Dexter $6,00.

FOR BOOKS.—H C Felton 60 cts. S G Edgerly $1,10. H Christenson 15 cts.

FOR THE POOR.—C H Colby 50 cts.; W Burnham $1,00.

BOOKS SENT.—S G Edgerly, W McCullock, A Martin, B Irish.

FOR BRO. SHELDON'S TRACTS, A Friend $5,00.

Kind words are among the brightest flowers of earth; they convert the humblest home into a paradise; therefore use them, especially around the fireside circle.

Opportunity is the flower of time; and as the stalk may remain when the flower is cut off, so time may with us when opportunity is gone forever.

Life is short and they mistake its aims and lose its best enjoyments, who depend for happiness on outward things and not on the state of the heart.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LINES.

BY VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

Suggested by a few remarks from Brother Brewer, at Wilbraham Campmeeting.

Yes, give us the strong gale that rocks our lone pillows,
That presses our bark to the dear home-land shore;
We'll welcome the storm-cloud that sweeps o'er the billows,
And hastens us home where our toiling is o'er.

The fearful are grieving and daily contrasting
The past with the present, the whirlwind and calm;
While Satan, aware that his kingdom is wasting,
Forth furiously rides on the terrible storm.

But we are inured to the mountain waves rolling,
To winds howling wild through the old time-worn mast;
We'll enter the port though the dark clouds are scowling—
Then haste, gallant vessel, before the fierce blast.

We ask not a calm, or a smooth sea to sail on,
While the rainbow of promise the dark heavens span;
And bright in perspective the sweet fields of Canaan
Are blooming, where beauty and love never wane.

The Conqueror is coming, the King in his glory,
The meek will be hid in the day of his ire;
They'll live through the conflict, to tell the glad story
They'll smile at the danger, and shout in the fire.

We'll bare our wan brows to the spray of old ocean,
And still calmly wait for the morning to dawn:
We'll soon share with Abram the saints' blessed portion,
And finish with rapture, our dark voyage through time.

Charlemont, Mass.

Selected for the Crisis.

THOUGHTS IN A NIGHT OF SORROW.

"For our light afflictions, which are but for a moment, work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

"These light afflictions!"—must I then resign
The name of mighty woe for griefs like mine?
I paused a moment for my anxious heart,
Seemed from its long-worn burden loth to part.
Then I remembered days and nights of woe,
Whose secret bitterness no friend might know;
I thought of fond affections vainly nursed,
Of hopes that rose and glittered but to burst;
Of secret troubles with unconquered sin!
Of all the mighty warfare yet within!
"But for a moment!" sorrow seemed to stay,
Through many a weary hour and live-long day;
Each opening month renewed the secret tear,
And memory claimed it each revolving year.

"But for a moment!" could I read aright?
And must I reckon these afflictions light?
I looked again—and lo! before my sight,
There lay in visions stretched the land of light!
There were the living streams! I heard them roll,
And softest gladness gushed upon my soul;
I heard the ransomed wake their golden lyres,
And living music breathed from all their wires.
I would have learned their praise, but 'tis not given
To mortal ears to catch the notes of heaven.
High on those hills I saw the rainbow gone
That girds with circling light the golden Throne;
I gazed intensely, but my feeble sight
Was dimmed and dazzled by such cloudless light;
For I am weak and may not vainly dare,
That far exceeding weight of joy to share.
Oh! 'twas not fleeting! for no changeful day
Marked how those blessed periods stole away.
The love, the joy, the praise would never cease,
Where every echo hymned eternal peace!
Then I returned to weigh my griefs again
With that unbounded glory—Oh, 'twere vain.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Holy Living.

BY A SISTER.

It is written "Be ye holy for I am holy," and without holiness no man shall see the Lord. What is it to be holy? Let us examine God's word and see if we can find out. That teaches us to abstain from every appearance of evil, to deny ourselves of all ungodliness, and every worldly lust. Can we be denying ourselves all ungodliness while we are gratifying any unnatural appetite?

We are taught in the word to lay aside "every weight and the sin that doth so easily beset us." We all have our besetting sins, but we are commanded to lay them aside; than it appears we have something to do to overcome our evil propensities. How shall we conquer them? "Of ourselves we can do nothing, but through Christ strengthening us we can do all things." Then we can stop doing wrong, and learn to do well. Is it right for us to take the Lord's money to purchase a worse than useless article, to gratify our unholy desires? If we do all that we do with a single eye to honor and glorify God, I do not think we shall be found making a god of our appetites.

If we love anything better than we do our Maker, is it not our idol? Dear Bro. did you ever think you loved your tobacco better than the best friend you had on earth? No doubt you will answer, no.—Have you a wife, mother, or sister? Did they ever come to you with tears in their eyes and beg, pray, and entreat you to lay it aside? And yet you persist in using it. How can you think you love that friend better than self? If we love God, we shall love to do his will. If we love an earthly friend better than anything else, it will be our greatest pleasure to please him. If we love not them whom we have seen, how shall we love Him whom we have not seen? The road is straight and narrow that leads to life; so narrow that we cannot take any unsanctified thing with us; for no unholy thing shall enter the kingdom, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or that defileth. "Well," you say, "it is not what goeth into the mouth that defileth a man, but what proceedeth out of it." That is true; out of the mouth proceed evil thoughts; if the heart is pure, the actions will be. If we take anything into the mouth which in any measure injures the health, it causes us to have evil thoughts and many times to do very wickedly. "Well," you say, "I do not use tobacco enough to hurt me, I only take a little, just enough to make me feel better." So says the rum-drinker, the tea-drinker, and the coffee-drinker; they only take a little to quiet that morbid appetite which has been formed by the use of them.—"Well," says one. "I know it is a bad habit, but I am so uneasy without it I do not know how to set myself to work." Yes, I know you are uneasy; that morbid appetite calls loud for its accustomed stimulus, no matter what it is, tobacco, tea, or brandy. The rum-drinker is all but crazy without his bitters. If it is right for you to take a little tobacco to quiet your nerves, why not right for the rum-drinker to have his bitters? "Oh rum destroys the senses and makes one crazy." So does tobacco destroy the senses, and fills the very life-blood with one of the most deadly poisons. It not only poisons the individual, but is a great cause of suffering to others. "Well," you say, "if it is so very bad why do not our ministers say more against it? There is Br. L—— and Br. H———, you think they are good ministers and they use it." We are not to compare ourselves by others; but by the word, which tells us to "abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul." If we are under the control of the appetite, it certainly must war against the soul. If we would be holy we must "crucify the flesh with the affections and lusts."

Paul thought it wrong to do anything to cause a weak brother to stumble. He said, if meat made his brother to offend, he would eat none while the world stood. I think if we regarded our brother's feelings as much as St. Paul did, we should be willing to deny ourselves all ungodliness and every worldly lust, and live soberly, righteously, and godly; "looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ."

Erving, Sept. 4, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Prophecy.

BY A. ROSS.

Notwithstanding we have often found ourselves mistaken in some things relative to our expositions of prophecy, yet there seems to be at present a strong desire in the ministry of God's people to know all he has been pleased to communicate to us. God does not condemn us for this spirit of inquiry, but causes the Divine benediction to rest on "those that read, and those that hear the words of this propnecy, and keep those things which are written therein; for the time is at hand."

That there is a great importance attached to the study of the prophecy is evident from the testimony of the apostles. Says Peter, in his second epistle 3: 1, 2, —"This second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you, in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance: that ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets."

Again, the same apostle says—"We have a more sure word of prophecy whereunto ye do well that ye take heed,"&c.

One great leading object in God's dispensing his word to the children of men, is to make us participants of his own thoughts. He could not give us a more tender pledge of his love and confidence, nor anything have a holier tendency as it regards ourselves. If men are to be known by the ends they are pursuing, our conduct in the present life will have the impress and bearing of that futurity which we are expecting. Our life here will be colored by a foretaste of things there.

Those whose ambition leads them to seek for dignity and power; those who dream of riches; those who have no other aim than the pleasures of this world, act according to that which is in their hearts. Their deportment bears the marks of that for which they are longing.

So it is with the church. If christians understood their calling here, which is no less than a participation in a comiug heavenly glory, what would be the consequence?

Nothing less than living here as pilgrims and strangers, like Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; who looked for a "city which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God."

We should not see them, as many have been and are still, so immersed in worldly care and speculation as to be annoyed when the evidences are presented of the speedy return of Him who has gone to receive for himself a kingdom.

Another benefit derived from a knowledge of prophecy is, it enables the present generation to judge (if they will but give heed to what is written) of the spirit of the age, and preserve their hearts from being engrossed by human objects, and from many a care and distraction hurtful to the life of the new man. They would exercise a happy dependence on Him who orders all things after the counsel of His own will, and knows the end from the beginning, and would yield themselves entirely to the diicharge of those duties growing out of the relation they sustain to God and each other.

The position taken by some is, that the real use of the prophecies is to show the divinity of the Bible, by those which have already been fulfilled. This is certeinly a use which may be made of them; but appears to me that this is not the special object for which they have been given.

They are to communicate the intentions of God to the church, and be its guide and light, before the arrival of those events which they predict, or during their accomplishment.

Shall we use the Revelation of God merely as a means of convincing us afterward, that he has told the truth?

It is as if some one were treating me as his intimate friend, heaping benefits upon me, and communicating to me his most sacred thoughts, telling me all he knew would shortly come to pass, and that I should use all his confidence for no other purpose than to convince myself that he was a truth-telling person, when every thing had happened.

Dear reader, we wrong the goodness and friendship of God, in acting thus towards him. We have no need of witnessing future events before we believe God is true; his faithfulness in the past should remove all doubt and fear from our minds.

Prophets at sundry times and in divers manners, and the Son of God himself hath spoken to the world the word of God, all of which that relates to the present dispensation are nearly accomplished.

Now, when the present administration of mercy shall be brought to its consummation, and human probation be ended, it will be too late to be convinced of the truth of prophecy, or to employ them for the conviction of others. The terrible judgments that will come upon those who disbelieve them, will be a sufficient demonstration of their truth.

But they are given to us now to direct our present walk in the ways of the Lord, and to enable us to see that God is the disposer of all events, and not man. Thus, the church of God, amid the upturning of human things, is quieted from acting any part in the political strife now raging among the nations of earth, seeing in the events now transpiring, the unfolding of the purpose of the Most High, and not a field abandoned to the struggles of human passion.

The judgments of God are to be poured upon the wicked nations of earth, which may be looked upon as no less than an embodiment of Satan's power, though some of them claim to be the defenders of the faith. They are destined to drink of the cup of God's fury, their awful doom is penned by inspiration.

Of this the church is informed, and, thanks to the teaching of the Holy Spirit, understands and believes it and escapes the things which are coming.

For one, I have no disposition to alter the great plan, or to turn things in a different direction from which they are moving at present among the nations of the world. Prophecy warrants us to believe that the closing up of this dispensation will be characterized by an increase of wickedness, morally and politically.

I do not rejoice that men are doing wickedly, but I do rejoice that in the wickedness of this generation I see the dawning of an eternal day of glory.

"From this national confusion,
From this ruined earth and skies,
See the times of restitution,
See the new creation rise."

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

Letter From Br. B. Spaulding.

Bro. Grant:—Since I was at Boston, I have visited Bangor, Brewer, Edington, Walden, Surry, and am now among the Islands. I had much pleasure in giving away the papers and "Scripture Searches," which you gave me, and I wished I had ten times as many. I found a great interest to read and enquire about the state of the dead, and the destruction of the wicked. Light upon that subject is needed, and is now called for: the subject is everywhere discussed. Now, if I only had the tracts and papers which the Advent families generally have lying on their tables useless, how much good I could do with them. Very much has been done to scatter light by tracts, and very much more ought to be done. If any brethren have old tracts on hand, useless to themselves, if they would make up a bundle and send them to Green's Landing, Me., I will pay the postage, and do my best to put them where they will be read and lent. Frequently, one tract is like a Missionary going from house to housa. Tracts on the "Life and Death" question are more particularly needed; but other subjects, such as the coming of the Lord, the Resurrection, the Inheritance of the saints, etc. etc., will be needed.

I shall remain here a few weeks, for I see an interest is waking up. Brother Bragg and wife have been laboring here with good effect. The field looks encouraging, white, ready for harvest. Praise the Lord. Ears are open to hear. Probably much is curiosity, but I trust some will receive and love and practice the truth.

I had a good season at East Holden.—The subject of the reign of Jesus on the earth, and kindred subjects, were new to them there. They listened with candor and interest, every eye and ear was open. I feel encouraged to sow the good seed in such places, not knowing whether this or that will prosper, or both be alike good.

O brethren, who love the Lord and his appearing, when I see the largeness of the field, how much needs to be done, and how few there are to labor, I am led to pray that God will raise up, qualify, and send forth laborers into his harvest. O let every one who can work, enter the field, for he that reapeth receiveth wages, even life eternal. Some can work one way, some another; some can go themselves, some can give money, or send tracts; all can pray for the cause, but praying is not enough; show by your works that your prayer is sincere.

There are too many who are in the "shut door," think that nothing can be done, that all ears are closed, and nobody can be reached. But it is not so. I have not seen so much readiness to hear since 1844.

I continue to visit families every day, sometimes I have a meeting every evening in the week. Sometimes there are only two or three families get together, and I am very familiar on such occasions, and think quite as much is done as in larger meetings.

So I keep laboring in these various ways; visiting, exhorting, praying, singing, giving tracts, and preaching.

My health is good, praise the good Lord.

I enjoy the work. Yes, I had rather be a servant of the church, than to be a king on a throne.

O brethren, be faithful, be up and doing; keep your hearts right, and your lamps trimmed: keep your eyes on the signs of the times, and lift up your heads and rejoice, for your redemption draws nigh. Pray for me. Pray for each other, love one another, be kind, be pitiful, be courteous; shun this testing, judging, condemning spirit, and bear with each other.

If some are now slow to believe, and do not get along so fast as you do, do not push them off the track, but reach after them, and beckon them along.

O how much more good is done by kindness, forbearance, patience, charity, and brotherly love, than by harshness, overbearing, condemning and hating each other.

Your fellow-laborer,
Benj. Spaulding.

Deer Isle, Me., Aug. 22, '56.

For the Crisis.

From Br. O. Raymond.

Bro. Grant:—I feel it to be my duty to say a few words about the debt of the Advent Watchman, as I was once an agent for that paper.

I sympathize with Bro. Turner, and if any Bro. or Sr. is owing for the Advent Watchman, and has got a dollar in his or her possession, recollect it is the Lord's money. If one person has any better right to it than another it is Bro. Turner. Now just write to him, and tell him you have done wrong in keeping his money away from him, and be sure to enclose the amount due to him in the letter. Don't say I can't spare it,—what! can't spare that which in reality does not belong to you! Away with such an idea.

Your unworthy brother,
O. Raymond.

Bark Shanty, Mich. Sept. 6, '56.

For the Crisis.

Letter from sister B. L. Clark.

Bro. Grant:—If I should be deprived of the Crisis, I should be shut out from my Advent brethren and sisters. I rejoice to hear from them, and also of the spread of the great and glorious truth of the gospel, which truth is not preached here, but there is everything said against it.

O that some one of God's ministers would find their way into this part of God's heritage. There are many souls perishing for the sincere milk of the Word. Only three of us believe in the Advent doctrine, fully; and we have the finger of scorn pointed at us, being accused of believing heresy, because we do not believe in an intermediate state.

But I rejoice in the hope of a glorious immortality when Christ comes. Truth will stand. God's truth will prevail in spite of men or devils.

My prayer is, Lord, keep thy children in the path that leadeth to eternal life. I am a stranger to all of my Advent brethren and sisters, but by reading the Crisis, they seem near to me; and I often feel refreshed in my mind after reading their good letters.

From your unworthy sister, desiring to know more of God's truth,
B. L. Clark.

Maquoketa, Iowa, Aug. 1856.

For the Children.

Noble Self-sacrifice.

Some years ago, a Russian nobleman was traveling on special business in the interior of Russia. It was the beginning of winter, but the frost had set in early.—His carriage rolled up to an inn, and he demanded a relay of horses to carry him on to the next station, where he intended to spend the night. The inn-keeper entreated him not to proceed; for he said there was danger in traveling so late, the wolves were out. But the nobleman tho't the man merely wished to keep him as a guest; he said it was too early for the wolves, and ordered the horses to be put to. He then drove off with his wife and only daughter inside of the carriage with him.

On the box of the carriage was a serf, who had been born on the nobleman's estate, to whom he was attached, and who loved his master as he loved his own life. They rolled over the hardened snow, and there seemed no signs of danger. The moon shed her pale light, and brought out into burnished silver the road on which they were going. At length the little girl said to her father,

"What was that strange howling sound that I just heard?"

"O, nothing but the wind sighing thro' the forest trees," replied the father.

The child shut her eyes and was quiet. But soon she said again, "Listen, father; it was not the wind I think."

The father listened; and far, far away, in the distance behind him, through the clear, cold, frosty air, he heard a noise which he too well knew the meaning of.

He then put down the window and spoke to his servant.

"The wolves, I fear, are after us: make haste. Tell the man to drive faster, and get your pistols ready."

The postilion drove faster. But the same mournful sound which the child heard had approached nearer and nearer. The nobleman tried to calm the anxious fears of his wife and child.

At last the baying of the pack was distinctly heard, so he said to his servant,

"When they come up with us, do you single out one, and fire, and I will single out another; and while the rest are devouring them we shall get on." As soon as he put down the window, he saw the pack in full cry behind, the large dog-wolf at their head. Two shots were fired, and two of their number fell. The others instantly set upon them; and meanwhile the carriage gained ground.

But the taste of blood only made them more furious, and they were soon up with the carriage again. Again two shots were fired, and two more fell, and were devoured. But the carriage was speedily overtaken, and the post-house was yet far distant.

The nobleman then ordered the postilion to loose one of his leaders, that they might gain a little time. This was done, and the poor horse plunged frantically into the forest, and the wolves after him, and was soon torn to pieces. Then another horse was sent off, and shared the same fate. The carriage labored on as fast as it could with the two remaining horses: but the post-house was still far distant.

At length the servant said to his master,

"I have served you ever since I was a child: I love you as my own self. Nothing can save you but one thing. Let me save you. I ask you only to look after my wife and little ones."

The nobleman remonstrated, but in vain. When the wolves next came up, the faithful servant threw himself amongst them. The horses galloped on with the carriage, and the gates of the post-house just closed in upon it, as the fearful pack were on the point of making the last and fearful attack. But the travellers were safe.

The next morning they went out, and saw the place where the faithful servant had been pulled down by the wolves.

His bones only were there. And on the spot the nobleman erected a wooden pillar, on which was written,

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend." "But God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."—Cross and Crown.

Choice Selections.

Dangerous Criticisms.

Whoever accompanies a congregation which has just been dismissed from church, may hear a great variety of criticisms on the sermon. These ordinarily refer more to the manner of delivery, and to the style of composition, than to the Scriptural handling of the subject, or the practical character of the discourse.

There is a way of discussing the merits of a sermon which has just been delivered, which is eminently proper and profitable. There is another way, which is not only injudicious, but dangerous to the spiritual welfare of the unconverted.

The recital of an actual occurrence will be the best illustration of our meaning. A pious lady once left a church in this city, in company with her husband, who was not a professor of religion. She was a woman of unusual vivacity, with a keen perception of the ludicrous, and often playfully sarcastic. As they walked along toward home, she began to make some amusing and spicy comments on the sermon, which a stranger, a man of very ordinary talents and awkward manner, had preached that morning, in the absence of the pastor.

After running on in this vein of sportive criticism for some time, surprised at the profound silence of her husband—she turned, and looked up into his face. He was in tears. That sermon had sent an arrow of conviction to his heart! Let the reader imagine the anguish of the conscience-stricken wife—thus arrested in the act of ridiculing a discourse, which had been the means of awakening the anxiety of her unconverted husband!

Incalculable harm is done by these inconsiderate criticisms. Many a child has gone home from church full of trembling solicitude about eternal things—longing perhaps to throw itself into the arms of the parent, and ask, "What must I do to be saved?"—only to have all concern chilled, and all convictions chased away by the captious or mirth-moving criticisms of the father and mother. Many an unconverted wife or husband, many an impenitent friend, has thus had all interest dissipated by those who were perhaps at that very time praying for their salvation.

An interesting account appears in the London Times of August 20th, of an ascent of Mount Ararat by five Englishmen. The natives believed the feat to be impossible, and that the summit was guarded by Divine prohibition. It is 17,323 feet above the sea level, and terminates in a precipitous snow-capped cone which has hitherto foiled all the attempts of explorers. Major Robert Stewart who was one of the party, and who writes the account of it from Erzeroum states that on reaching the top they struck to the hilt in the snow a short double-edged sword. They also drank the health of the Queen. On this he observes "Her Majesty's name is probable the first that has been pronounced on that solemn height since it was quitted by the great patriarch of the human race, as no record or tradition exists of the ascent having ever been made before."

All true Christians must be like Noah's ark, that was pitched within and without, Gen. vi. 14. They must have a holy inside and a holy outside—their profession and practice must agree together.

Providence is like a curious piece of tapestry, made of a thousand shreds, which single, appear useless. put together they represent a beautiful history.

Never do that in prosperity whereof you may repent in adversity.

Life is short and they mistake its aims and lose its best enjoyments, who depend for happiness on outward things and not on the state of the heart.

Opportunity is the flower of time; and as the stalk may remain when the flower is cut off, so time may with us when opportunity is gone forever.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167, HANOVER [illegible] BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1856. WHOLE NO. 130. VOL. IV. NO. [illegible]

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS,	MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH,	GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months - - - -	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months - - - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months -	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months -	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Bru., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis

The ground of Faith.

BY J. B. COOK.

"And Moses and Aaron went and gathered together all the elders of the children of Israel, and Aaron spake all the words which the Lord had spoken unto Moses and did the signs in the sight of the people, and the people believed." Ex. 4: 29–31.

They heard from the lips of Aaron the words of Divine promise, as they had been addressed to Moses and the Patriarchs. "The fourth generation" had come. The 400 years of their bondage was about ending; Gen. 15: 13–15, and now the majesty of the Lord was seen in the visible glory of the Shekinal presence. Then his power was displayed in this recorded series of miraculous wonders. The general prophecies concerning their deliverance at the end of 400 years were sustained by what they heard and saw. Such is the history. Faith was based on the word of God and corresponding facts.

Thus it was in the record of Joshua's crossing Jordan. The word of God and its accomplishment sustained his faith.

Thus it was with Gideon, in marching to his matchless triumph. He saw the angel, —the fleece was wet—the fleece was dry—in sensible contrariety to the dryness or moisture of all around. The proof was not of the nature of an impression. It was fact—fact that occurred in precise accordance with the general prophecies concerning that people—nay, it was fact that fulfilled even the most specific signals that doubt could demand of their Divine Guardian.

The proof must have satisfied the most skeptical who admitted the foregoing prediction, and witnessed its actual accomplishment.

Thus John the Baptist had the whole range of Messianic prophecy, to prove Messiah near, he had the 69 weeks of Dan. 9: 25, ending in that age; and then the Lord assured him that on whomsoever he should see the spirit descending from Heaven like a dove, the same should be he—"and I saw and bare record that this is the Son of God!" John 1: 29–34.

In this event, and in the Divine bestowment of the spirit on the day of Pentecost the most subtle and insubstantial of all the promises, we see a like zeal and matter of fact fulfillment, positive, precise, and unmistakable.

To John, the proof of Jesus' Messiahship lay in the prophetic word, and its most sensible and satisfactory fulfilment. Then he said "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world."

This was the character of the proof that Jesus gave for faith to John's inquiring disciples: "The blind see, the deaf hear, and to the poor the gospel is preached." Matt. 11: 1–5

Thus the resurrection of "the Christ," and his ascension was demonstrated to have been real and personal. Indeed, this has been the ground of faith. It is the Divine word, sustained by its successively associated and accomplished facts in the history of "Jew, Gentile, and the church of God!"

The whole outline of all history was first given to the world in the form of prophecy. Prophecy is history only it is given in advance! Hence, all the authentic and proper history of Israel, of Babylon, Persia, Greece and Rome, (their Gentile oppressors) and the gathering of the christian church out from the nations by the gospel of Christ, is embraced in its leading facts; and is but the record of the prophecy fulfilled.

Let who will doubt the "sure word of prophecy," this fact must stand while the earth rolls in its orbit,—"the prophecy went before."

The history has been written often and often by unbelieving hands, in the most complete harmony with the letter of prophecy, as if on purpose to demonstrate its Divinity!

"God hath magnified his word above all his name; He also is wise and will not call back his words." He declares "the end from the beginning. . . . . saying, my counsel shall stand and I will do all my pleasure, ... the wrath of man shall praise Thee, the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain."

Having briefly shown that the faith of God's people from Moses to Messiah was based on the "plain word of the Lord," and its most obvious and matter of fact fulfillment,—nay, on the fulfillment of the general or specific prophecy as it stands in its relation to the grand scheme of Revelation as a whole; we proceed to say that there is a marvelous oneness in the Divine purpose, from the first promise, that the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's "head," on to the crowhing consummation of all prophetic declarations—in the world made "new," "the whole earth filled" with a deathless population under the blessings and the glory of Jehovah. Matt. 6: 10, Ps. 72: 19, Rev. 21: 1–5, 22; 1–5.

THE COMING CRISIS.

What ground is there for faith that the judgment trump on the Apocalyptic Babylon is about to sound?—that the spoiler shall himself be "spoiled," and the "oppressor cease?" Isa. 14: 4; 33: 1; Rev. 11: 15–18, and the 17th 18th and 19th chapters.

In reply to this question, we respectfully submit, that we may (not to say must) hold the same style and strength of statement—the like Divinely authoritative argument that could have been claimed by the elders of Israel and by believers in all other ages.

We trust that we are aware of the rock on which we thus take our stand. We hold in our hands the unerring word of Him who spake to Moses, Joshua, Gideon, John and Jesus! Its truthfulness turns not on the wisdom or virtue of those by whose organs it has been preserved. No; no. It never did, but only on the faithfulness of Him who speaks; and then infallibly fulfills; or who, by his Providence invariably secures its fulfilment.

Its credibility, nay, its Divinity, is not altered (except as its progressive exhaustion and verification in the world's growing history, confirms its utterances) by the ages that have intervened since "the living Oracle was spoken.

The fact answering to the word, always was the crowning—the only ultimate evidence of any prophet's Divine mission.

It is not in the shortness of time between the announcement and the event—not in the organs of the prophet, that the proof is found. No, the proof lies in the event; and its harmony with the pre-diction as to time, order of sequence, and manner of occurrence. Thus it was with Moses and Israel; thus it was with John; and thus it is with us. The fulfillment established the truth of the prophecy, beyond all controversy. Deut. 18: 21–22.

The scope of inspired prophecy—its wideness of range through all the generations and revolutions of the gospel dispensation, presents the only practical obstacle to its satisfactory illustration among candid and intelligent believers in the Bible, or in the world's true history. But as "the word" has existed for ages—as it has been oft translated and widely circulated both by Jews and Gentiles, we can justly call attention to its most positive, precise, matter of fact fulfillments! The Scriptures are only the more wonderful, the more credible, and possess a more remarkable degree of the elements of Divine authority as they embrace in their most comprehensive range the whole outline of all human interests and events. No inspired instructor ever approached this.

The destruction of Jeruselem by Rome, the dispersion of the Jewish people, and the desolation of their land and city through 1786 years—the actual plowing of Mt. Zion, (187 acres) have transpired. The testimony is borne to us by almost every arrival from Europe that "the word" spoken from eighteen to thirty hundred years ago, is verified by the physical condition of Jerusalem and all Palestine—the national degradation of Judah, and the moral corruption of her present Gentile desolators.

Our faiht should be as firm and immovable as the proof of the prophetic fulfillment is certain and undeniable.

The dismemberment of the Pagan Rom n empire—its ecclesiastical or Papal form, and persecuting character (through three and a half "times,—forty and two months, or 1260 days," and its world-renowned revolution at the expiration of that period) has now become history. The pencil of prophecy in olden times sketched what the hand of Providence has since traced out truthfully in this great world's most important and eventful history. The mystic symbol was explained by the living Oracle; but it is now established by the actual accomplishment.

Papal Rome's desolating tyranny in association with the "ten kingdoms," only equals the dreadful sublimity of its pretold, but Satanic characteristics. It has been Satan's counterfeit of the true "Priest-King"—Melchisedec.

The absurdity in the terms of prophecy may at the first blush, seem to discourage confidence; but their wonderful and otherwise unapproachable accuracy, with our most easy apprehension of this form of instruction, furnishes one of the highest evidences of its Divine authenticity. It is unique, above all counterfeit, and of unparalleled comprehension, and simplicity.

A raging "beast with ten horns," explained to foreshow a desolating, remorseless, persecuting power, Dan. 7: 22, 24, —an outrageous, egregious monstrous "whore," to set forth an apostate, miscalled christian church, is too appropriate and too pointed to be mistaken as to its design. Even Roman Catholics and Romanized Protestants have generally agreed in this the main design, and in its application to the age of apostacy, somewhere in the past, and present church. The disagreement is, or should be settled by the location of this prophetic con-central symbol in the city of "seven hills"—"the great city" that then reigned "over the kings of earth! Rome has prevailed through nearly all the intervening ages since. The symbol applies to our common christendom by common consent; hence, while it should forestall all self-complacency from any, it ought to inspire the profonndest humility in all.

Our boastful humanity in the centres of chrtstian civilization and freedom, has so signally failed, as to need the Divine "Physician." (The whole need not a physician, but they that are sick.") The disease is incurable.

Let all "be ready" to welcome the Heavenly Healer! Let us hail him when "He shall appear the second time to salvation."

The present prevailing political organizations—in prophetic phrase "the beast and false prophet," (suggested by Balaam and his beast) contain no power of self-restitution. A Divine King and Restorer is essential.

The times of this prophecy are easy of apprehension. The 69 weeks, Dan. 9: 25, reach 483 years to Messiah—"each day for a year," Ezk. 4: 6; Gen. 29: 21–30, a week—seven years.

From Justinian's code which recognized and began to establish the supremacy of the Papal See, and its taking effect in Italy at the conquest of the Goths, A. D., 538, the 1260 years extend to 1798. Then the pope, as foretold, was led "into captivity,"—the popedom was "killed" politically by the French "sword." Thus we come to our own age.

Our faith in the Advent near is founded in the Word of God, and in its most obvious and matter of fact fulfillment. Take three particulars.

1st, "The time of the end"—following the period of 1260 years, or "time, times and a half." Dan. 12: 4. It is known by the "many" who "run to and fro," and the "knowledge" which does "increase!" This is our age.

2nd, The power that prevails at this point where the Pope goes "into captivity," &c., is not maritime—but interior—"out of the earth." It is "like a lamb," but again "it speaks like a dragon." It "has two horns," and makes "an image" to the Papal beast. Rev. 13: 11, (the rest of this prophecy is future. See 2 Thess. 2: 9, Rev. 16: 13–14—in the judgment.)

Note the corresponding facts. The French Republic began in Paris,—not on the Mediterranean. Its motto was "liberty, fraternity, and equality"—"like a lamb:" but Napoleon became emperor and "spake as a dragon"—one of the old Roman Cæsars, (v. 4.) "He had two horns"—Napoleon took only two crowns. He was crowned Emperor of France, and king of Italy—"horns" being the symbol of sovereign authority. "He exerciseth all the power of the first beast." Napoleon was equal to his predecessors; and the Papal system was re-organized—"an image made"—"under French patronage." (Ency. Americana.)

Thus the history matches prophecy as the impression does the seal that made it. "THE KINGDOM OF GOD IS NIGH AT HAND."

3d, "The seven heads" of the symbol beast and the last "of the seven" in Rev. 17: 9–11, they answer to the "seven hills" on which Rome was originally built. "They are seven kings" the "heads" are so many forms of government in the Romish history. Five had fallen; one then was, which existed till the other, which should continue for "a short space, "should rise. Its history unfolds itself and makes itself known. "That was, is not, and yet is." "The beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth (head) and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition!"

Napoleon I. was "head" master of church and state: but at Waterloo he fell in 1814, and for about 8 years "was not" (head) till he died, in 1811.

Napoleon II. never attained majority—never advanced beyond a mere titled son of the greatest man in the Roman earth for many ages.

Napoleon III. "is!" Against the decree of the holy alliance—in defiance of the combined powers of Europe he became Napoleon III. Emperor of France! He "is" ruler in Rome—the champion of that church. He "is" or has been the acting head in Constantinople—the capital of the East! He has been sustained in humbling Russia by the whole material and moral power of the Grand Turk! He "is" aided also, as energetically by Protestant England! Thus, counting the great Napoleon "the 7th head"—(the other six headships having been before filled) this Napoleon "is the eighth," and is of the seventh!"

The government of Great Britain, one of the "ten" leading dominions of the iron Roman—though separate for ages from the Papal kingdoms, has levelled her barrier against Romanism, or laid it very low.

This was done by the Queen in declining a public sanction of Protestant worship, when recently she was in Paris—also in allowing the national symbol to become a part of the pageant in the church of Notre Dame, after the fall of Sebastopol; thus honoring the Virgin Divinely as do the idolatrous Papists of France!

This is the most signal feature in the whole scene. It is not surprising that the Papal States should sustain Napoleon their champion. But England, Protestant England takes the lead in this sustainment! "The ten kings will agree" "to give their kingdoms" to "the eighth" head.

Thus we may hear God's word; see its progressive fulfilment; and believe! Divine intervention is thus indicated soo,n in behalf of suffering humanity,—of "Jew Gentile and the church of God." Rev. 11: 15, Dan. 12: 1, Heb. 9: 28, Acts 3: 21, Dan. 7: 13, 14.

For the Crisis.

Jews.

Reasons why I believe something of importance is to be done for a class of the Jews, literally, after the second advent. I mean by "Jews," the literal race of Israel.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

(Concluded.)

REASON III.

Because it is written, "Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision: for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision. The sun and moon shall be darkened, and the stars shall withdraw their shining.

The Lord also shall roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and the heavens and the earth shall shake: but the Lord will be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel. So shall ye know that I am the Lord your God dwelling in Zion, my holy mountain: then shall Jerusalem be holy, and there shall no strangers pass through her any more.

And it shall come to pass in that day, that the mountains shall drop down new wine, and the hills shall flow with milk, and all the rivers of Judah shall flow with waters, and a fountain shall come forth of the house of the Lord, and shall water the valley of Shittim. Egypt shall be a desolation, and Edom shall be a desolate wilderness, for the violence against the children of Judah, because they have shed innocent blood in their land. But Judah shall dwell forever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation. For I will cleanse their blood that I have not cleansed: for the Lord dwelleth in Zion." Joel 3: 14—21.

This prophecy declares—

1. The Lord will be "the strength of the children of Israel."
2. God shall dwell "in Zion."
3. He shall "utter his voice from Jerusalem."
4. "Jerusalem" shall "be holy."
5. "No strangers shall pass through her any more."
6. There shall be an abundance of "milk," "wine," and "water" from "river" and "fountain."
7. The enemies of Israel shall be desolated.
8. "Judah shall dwell forever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation."
9. The work of cleansing, which is not finished shall then be perfected.

And when is all this to be accomplished?

1. After "multitudes" have been gathered to the "valley of decision."
2. After the "sun and moon" have been "darkened."
3. After "the heavens and the earth" have been shaken. Must not this then be in the future, and after the close of this dispensation? It seems so to me.

REASON IV.

Because it is written,

"When I shall bring again their captivity, the captivity of Sodom and her daughters, and the captivity of Samaria and her daughters, then will I bring again the captivity of thy captives in the midst of them:

That thou mayest bear thine own shame, and mayest be confounded in all that thou hast done, in that thou art a comfort unto them.

When thy sisters, Sodom and her daughters, shall return to their former estate, and Samaria and her daughters shall return to their former estate, then thou and thy daughters shall return to your former estate.

For thy sister Sodom was not mentioned by thy mouth in the day of thy pride,

Before thy wickedness was discovered, as at the time of thy reproach of the daughters of Syria, and all that are round about her, the dauhters of the Philistines, which despise thee round about.

Thou hast borne thy lewdness and thine abominations, saith the Lord.

For thus saith the Lord God; I will even deal with thee as thou hast done, which hast despised the oath in breaking the covenant.

Nevertheless I will remember my covenant with her in the days of thy youth, and I will establish unto thee an everlasting covenant.

Then thou shalt remember thy ways, and be ashamed, when thou shalt receive thy sisters, thine elder and thy younger: and I will give them unto thee for daughters, but not by thy covenant.

And I will establish my covenant with thee; and thou shalt know that I am the Lord:

That thou mayest remember and be confounded, and never open thy mouth any more because of thy shame, when I am pacified toward thee for all thou hast done, saith the Lord God. Ezek. 16: 53—63.

1. God here declares, that when he shall "bring again the captivity of Sodom and her daughters," and "Samaria and her daughters," then will he bring again the captivity of Jerusalem and her "daughters."

2. He positively declares he will do this: vs. 61, 62, 63.

There are many more prophecies of the same import with these, which can only be understood as referring to a future dispensation. So it seems to me.

REASON V.

Because our Savior said to the Jews, "Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Mat. 23: 39.

In immediate connection with his coming, therefore, it appears to me, a work peculiar will commence with them, connected with another dispensation, which will prepare them, as a race, to say this: for I cannot resist the plain conclusion, that he here spoke to them as a race, or people. The verse above makes this certain. Please read.

This view of the matter gives point to a remark of the apostle Paul. He calls himself "one born out of due time"—Greek—"an abortion!"

How born out of due time? Why, the word means "one born before the time." As if he had written thus: "I am, before the time, converted by a miracle—the personal appearing of the Lord to me,—all my nation, in due time, will be blessed in a miraculous manner."

REASON VI.

Because it is written, "For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance." Rom. 11: 20. God called the nation of Israel to be a peculiar people, and gave them a promise that they should be so, and he will not repent.

REASON VII.

Because it is written,

"Now if the fall of them [illegible] of the world, and the [illegible] the riches of the G[illegible] their fulness? Rom. 11: [illegible]

Now what [illegible] can we make of this text but the following:

"Now Israel has fallen and been diminished that the world—the gentiles—might be enriched by an impartial [illegible] of salvation to all, in the gospel [illegible] when this dispensation [illegible]

[illegible] rich will be the fulness God will give to Israel!"

These are some of my reasons, and I have many more, which are fully satisfactory to me; but I will not intrude more at present.

Now I propose to meet some objections.

1. "Is not the middle wall of partition between Jews and Gentiles broken down?"

"Yes."

"Will it be built up again?"

"No. Why should it be? What necessity of it? Things will be entirely changed from what they ever have been, in another dispensation.

2. Does not the New Testament teach that there is neither Jew nor Greek?

Yes: and it teaches that there is "neither male nor female" too! We must understand one, just as we do the other—not in the radical sense, for that is not true, but in the sense in which Paul is speaking. In Christ, in this dispensation, God receives all alike—Jews, Greeks, male and female. That is the apostle's argument.

3. Does not Paul teach that he is not a Jew which is one outwardly?

Yes: and Paul teaches too, that "neither is he that planteth anything, neither he that watereth." Now is not he that planteth and watereth something in the radical sense?

Yes; but "nothing" in the sense in which he is speaking: so in this case, he is not a Jew in a moral sense, of necessity, who is one physically.

4. Does not the Lord teach, that the harvest is the end of the world?

Yes: it is the end of this age, this dispensation, this state of things.

5. Will not the wicked all be destroyed in the end, as above?

Yes: they will all be destroyed in the day of God—the dispensation of judgment; but where is the proof that it will all be done at once, and in a sudden movement? There will be "time" for the judgment!

6. Does not Peter declare that "God is no respecter of persons?"

Yet: but that is not true in every sense, because it is written, "he hath respect unto the lowly:"

We must observe the sense in which he is speaking. Peter does not say, he is no respecter of nations, but he "is no respecter of persons:" he is then speaking in an individual sense. "In every nation he that feareth God &c."

7. But when are all the wicked to be destroyed so as never to exist any more?

At the end of the "age to come"—after the end of the thousand years of Revelation 20. So I understand it. You may not see it so. Very well, let us be brethren.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

Newburyport, Mass.

Choice Selections.

THE DOOM OF OUR WORLD.—"What the change is to be we dare not even conjecture; but we see in the heavens themselves some traces of destructive elements, and some indications of their power. The fragments of broken planets, the descent of meteoric stones upon our globe, the wheeling comets welding their loose materials at the solar furnace, the volcanic eruptions of our own satellite, the appearance of new stars and the disappearance of others, are all foreshadows of that impending convulsion to which the system of the world is doomed.

Thus placed on a planet which is to be burnt up, and under heavens which are to pass away; thus treading, as it were, on the cemeteries, and dwelling in the mausoleums of former worlds, let us learn the lesson of humility and wisdom, if we have not already been taught it in the schools of revelation."—Timb's "Things not generally Known.

EXCERPTS.—"He who formed the heart certainly knows what thoughts pass within it. The greatest misery is to be condemned by our own hearts. To lie down on the pillow after a day spent in temperance in benificence, and in piety, how great is it. Insult not another for the want of a talent you possess; he may have others, which you want."

GOOD AND BAD SIGNS.—"It's a good sign to see a man doing an act of charity to his fellows. It's a bad sign to hear him boasting of it. It's a good thing to see the color of health in a man's face. It's a bad sign to see it all concentrated in his nose. It's a good sign to see an honest man wearing old clothes. It's a bad sign to see them filling holes in his windows."—Life Illustrated.

MAXIMS AND RULES OF LIFE.—"Remember that every person, however low, [illegible] Do not attempt to frighten your children and inferiors by passion; it does more harm to your own character than it does good to them: the same thing is better done by firmness and persuasion.

Find fault when you must find fault in private if possible; and some time after the offence, rather than at the time. The blamed are less inclined to resist when they are blamed without witnesses; both parties are calmer, and the accused party is struck with the forbearance of the accuser, who has seen the fault, and watched for a private and proper time for mentioning it."—Sydney Smith."

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 8, 1856.

Question.

No. VIII.

"The soul that sinneth it shall die." Ezk. 18: 20.

Ques. 1. "Where does the Bible affirm that the spirit shall die?

2. Is the soul the moral part of man?

3. Is the mind, the memory, the judgment, the reasen, the conscience, the will, and the affections, each, a moral power of the soul?

4. Are these powers of the soul, the life, or only the evidences of it?

5. Can a man exist in the body when these powers are all deranged?

6. Do these powers comprise the intellectual faculties of man?

7. Is the inherent essence of life, or vitality independent of these powers of the soul?"

Ans. 1. Nowhere. Neither does it anywhere affirm that the "spirit,"—(ruakh in in O. T., & pneuma in N. T.) is alive.

2. We think not.

3. Memory, judgment, reason, conscience, will, and the affections, are each properties or attributes of the mind.

Memory, will, and the affections, are strongly developed in beasts, and cannot be considered moral powers, unless it be proved that animals have a moral character.

4. We answer, only the evidences of life.

5. We do not admit that a man can exist or be a man without a body, but may exist when all these faculties of the mind are deranged.

6. They do not comprise all the intillectual faculties of the man.

7. We answer, the breath, or spirit of life that constitutes man "a living soul," (see Gen. 2: 7,) is independent of these powers of the mind.

BRO. GRANT:—As the books I have for sale are advertised in your columns weekly, and their prices: permit me to say, that all may understand perfectly; I will sell all books at the eastern advertized prices.

Reference to past numbers of the Crisis will inform you the kinds I have on hand. Send in orders with cash—let us work while the day lasts. W. PRATT.

Moline, Ill.

POPULAR HELL.—A minister tried to portray the flames of this realm to a skeptic. He replied, "If hell is such a place, I couldn't stand it."

"O yes you could" said the clergyman.

"Well, if I can I don't care," rejoined the skeptic.

What folly to picture a burning hell, and then deny that it will ever burn anybody—eternally trying to burn man, and yet he "can stand it," and "don't care"!!!

W. SHELDON.

For the Crisis.

Incidents by the Way:

No. I.

BY S. S. BREWER.

Several months have passed away since I have written an article for the Crisis, though frequently solicited. I concluded when my last article, No. I. on "The Distress of Nations" was finished, to suspend any claims to the columns of the Crisis for the present, if time should continue, and life be spared.

I left my home very early on the twelfth day of Sept.; was soon seated in Nahum's chariot, and on my way to Stonington, where a boat was in readiness on our arrival to convey us to New London where we arrived in safety in time for dinner. Owing to a misunderstanding we had to tarry until after four o'clock the next day, there not being, to my knowledge, a proper looking for the return of our long absent King.

I looked up board and lodging and was soon seated comfortably in my own hired room, reading the work of Elder Ramsey, recently re-published by brother H. L. Hastings, on the delusions of the old father of necromancers, witches, wizards, table-tippers, spirit-rappers, and all the rest of the family referred to by an high priest and apostle of the profession in Luke's gospel, chap. VIII., ver. 30.

The above work is the best among the many that has falllen in my way; and beyond a doubt, it attributes the birth and pedigree of this mysterious progeny (at least to some people) to their own legitimate sire, and origin. Get it and read it.

On Saturday morning, I crossed over the Thames river to visit the spot on which stands the remains of Fort Griswold; a spot somewhat famous in the annals of our country, during the war with Great Britain.

It was here, when, through the perfidy of the traitor Arnold, the Briton conquered; and when Col. Ledyard was interrogated by the English officer, "who commands this fort?"

"I did command it." "But do you not now?" and on delivering up his sword to the Briton, the latter immediately plunged it to the heart of his victim.

Here stands the antiquated looking brick house, in a dilapidated condition; there are the windows out of which many an anxious eye gazed with the deepest and most painful solicitude, as they watched the marching and countermarching of the enemy.

There are the old parapets on which our fathers bravely fought and nobly dared. There, doubtless, many of them stood, and with throbbing hearts looked out amid the darkness of the night, as the flames burst forth from their once peaceful dwellings, fired by the torch of an army of foreign incendiaries. There, in the South-west corner of the fort, is the same well where the pent up little army of Revolutionary braves slaked their thirst. Here, where I now stand, the contending parties met. Here the booming of the cannon, the racket of musketry, the clash of arms, the shout of the warrior, and the groaning of the dying was heard. Here the shattered fragments of human bodies, mutilated and mangled carcasses with garments rolled in blood, were strewn in wild disorder all around;—but O, the change! The same sun pours down his golden rays that looked forth upon those scenes of blood and carnage. There is the old brick powder magazine, now empty. There are the barracks, but tenantless. The same old vamparts, but no sentry-patrols there now. No roll of the drum, nor brazen trumpet, nor shout to arms, is heard; all, all is silent.

But let me descend and take an observation from that corner. O, how beautiful. There are a number of steamers running past. There is the staid city of New London, with a great many very fine buildings, and hundreds of peaceful homes. The waving fields of corn bid fair to reward the husbandman with a golden harvest. Far, far out upon the distant sheet of water we watch the beautiful craft gliding to and fro, laden with precious freight with white canvass spread to the breeze. All, all at the present time are free from the mailed hand of the foreign oppressor.

But I am permitting my mind to run too far. I must bring this article to a close. Permit me very briefly to recapitulate.

How rapidly we are rushing to the end of time, much swifter than the steam hurries us over the iron road.

Soon the present state must be changed by the transforming power of God; and instead of a spiritual, foggy, mystical, undefinable progression, which neither Satan nor any of his apostles can explain, we shall have a new heaven and a new earth.

Although we are free from foreign aggression, yet mothers and their tender offspring are driven forth from their firesides, their dwellings consumed to ashes, and they left to seek shelter from the elements in the wilds of a western forest. Many a widow mourns the loss of a bosom companion; and many an orphan sheds the tear of mournful recollection for a father that shall never return or press them to his loved embrace.

Thank God, the great, the glorious, the all-conquering Emancipator is preparing to make his advent, and the signal of His approach will soon be heard,—the jubal trump will proclaim him KING OF KINGS and LORD OF LORDS." Then we shall enjoy eternally the God-created blessing of a clear sky, free soil, free from the least taint of sin. And O, glory, glory, hallelujah! after living and roaming, singing and praising God; seeing all the old worthies, prophets, apostles, martyrs, confessors,—all the untold millions, of every kindred, people, tribe and tongue, in unmeasured cycles of time, it will only be an eternal now! O to be there!

[To be continued.]

Extracts from the Writings of Theo. R. Gates.

Written between the years of 1810—18.

"I would ask, what foundation there is in the Gospel of Christ for the many sects and parties now among christians? It is certainly contrary to the whole tenor of the gospel. How closely did the apostle reprove the christians at Corinth, for the small divisions that took place among them. And if it be an evil altogether, that there are sects and parties in religion, infinitely greater are the evils that result from them.

No sooner is a body of people constituted a distinct sect or society, than they are anxious to promote it, and bring every one to fall in with or unite himself to it. And every one that joins himself to it, generally becomes more and more biased in his mind towards everything practised among them, and thinks more and more unfavorably of every other society, and of every person that does not assent to everything it embraces; till he becomes a compl te worshipper of the beast and his image as it exists in the little society, and has his mark both in his right hand and in his forhead.

Nor must you do otherwise than they dictate. If you have but little religion and are seeking your own, rest assured you will not be likely to act contrary to the mandate; because, you will lose your good name, be thrust out of the synagogue, and will have no one to pity, help or assist you. How many in this way, are brought to mistake attachment to a party for attachment to Christ.

There is an exceeding difference between the friendship of the various sects of religion, and that of a true follower of the Lord Jesus.

The former exists solely in selfishness, the latter in pure love and affection.

The former are utter strangers to Jesus Christ: notwithstanding their great profession of religion, the more weighty precepts of the gospel are laid aside; they make void the most express commands of Christ; through their party creeds, rules, and systems; and among all the multitude of sects, every sect is under an idea that whenever the Lord comes to establish truth in the earth, it will be to establish their creed, raise up their sect, and bring the whole world into their way.

And when the faithful witnesses whom God will raise up, shall openly declare that they have all gone out of the way, that the greatest professors have so much of guile, selfishness and party spirit about them, as to be nothing but hypocrites; and that a person must be better than they are or be lost forever—that sects are an abomination to the Lord—denounce eternal death upon every advocate and adherent of men-made establishments—testify that they will all be destroyed and done away, and that the Lord will bestow his blessings, and cause to inherit the earth, another sort of people, even spiritual and true worshippers;—I say, when such a testimony as this goes forth, as it sooner or later will, no wonder that the sects, all with one accord, should set themselves against it—should call it heresy—declare it will ruin the churches if it is not suppressed, and endeavor by every possible means to destroy the testimony and the authors of it.

From Br. W. Sheldon.

BRO. GRANT:—As I am glad to hear from my Eastern friends, and thinking they may be equally as glad to hear from the West, I will drop a few words. I am still unflinchingly allied to the "faith once delivered to the saints," and at war with modern dogmas.

I am doing what little I can to enlighten people upon the truths of God's word, and not without effect; but I regret that I cannot devote more time to this important work. Many in this part of the world can be reached with proper effort. People listen with candor. But the greatest trouble is, ministers who come West on their own expense, incapacitate themselves for constant exertion in the gospel field, by bringing themselves under pecuniary embarrassments, thus obliging themselves to "serve tables," or something else of a worldly nature, to keep their heads above the water, in temporal matters. In a word, in a field so entirely new as this the minister must be a self-supported missionary, which very much circumscribes his missionary efforts, and thus hinders the greater portion of the good which he otherwise might accomplish. This is the case with myself: hence, although the truth spoken is accomplishing good, yet not to the extent I wish to see it. I have not yet held a series of meetings anywhere: such meetings do the most good. Hope I shall be able to engage in protracted efforts this fall and winter, to some extent. My whole soul is in the Master's cause. I hope to see it flourish in this remote Territory.

Yours in Christian love,

W. SHELDON.

Vermillion, Dakota Co., Minnesota,
Sept. 15, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Jews.

Reasons for not believing in the restoration of the CARNAL Jews, either before or after the second advent.

BY F. H. BERICK.

REASON I.

Because the Lord declares.—"For thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, Let not your prophets and divines, that be in the midst of you, deceive you, neither harken to your dreams which ye cause to be dreamed. For they proppesy falsely unto you in my name; I have not sent them saith the Lord. For thus saith the Lord, That after seventy years be accomplished at Babylon, I will visit you, and perform my good word toward you, in causing you to return to this place." Jer. 29: 8—10.

In the language of another we would say, "This is not a conditional prophecy. There is not a condition, in any way, directly or remotely connected with it. It is positively thus saith the Lord, it shall be so and so. Now, certainly, there are some declarations here which have been fulfilled," and hence, cannot refer to a future age. Let us see.

1. We learn from the foregoing passage that a portion of God's ancient people (the Jews), were carried into captivity by the king of Babylon.

2. We are informed in the chapter from which we have already quoted, that another portion of God's ancient people (the Jews), who at this time (the time when the prophet is speaking), dwelt in the land of Palestine, were to be persecuted "with the sword, with the famine, and with the pestilence."

3. That after seventy years, the Lord was to visit them and "perform his good word," in causing them to return to their own land.

4. That the Lord did, agreeable with his promise, "In the first year of Cyrus," cause a decree to be published (Ezra 1: 1—4,) by virtue of which, the prediction of Jeremiah was fulfilled.

5. That the tabernacle of David was subsequently raised up, and was "builded as in the days of old;" and that this fact is confirmed by Prideaux, who, in speaking of the Jews in the time of the Maccabees, says "He" (Hyrcanus) "took the advantage of the disturbances and divisions that henceforth ensued through the whole Syrian empire, not only to enlarge his territories by seizing Medeba, Samega, and several other places in Syria, Phænicia, and Arabia, and adding them to his dominions, but also, after this, or "from this time, to make himself absolute and wholly independent. For, after this, neither he nor any of his descendants owned any further dependence on the kings of Sy ia, but thenceforth wholly freed themselves from all manner of homage, servitude, or subjection to them." (V. 2, pp. 201, 202).

6. That they (the children of Israel) did possess the remnant of Edom, Amos 6: 12, as we learn from the following testimony:

"Then Judas fought against the children of Esau in Idumæa at Arabattine (Akrabattine), because they besieged Israel; and he gave them a great overthrow, and abated their courage, and took their spoils."—Newton, in speaking of this, says: "Judas Maccabæus attacked and defeated them several times, 'killed no fewer than twenty thousand' at one time, and 'more than twenty thousand' at another, and took their chief city 'Hebron, and the towns thereof, and pulled down the fortress of it, and burnt the towers thereof round about.'"—Again. "At last his nephew, Hyrcanus, the son of Simon, took other of their cities, and reduced them to the necessity of embracing the Jewish religion, or of leaving their country and seeking new habitations elsewhere, whereupon they submitted to be circumcised, and became proselytes to the Jewish religion, and ever after were incorporated into the Jewish Church and nation." (p. 41.)

Now if the foregoing testimony does not teach us that the Israelites "possessed the remnant of Edom" or the Edomites, pray tell us what it does teach!

Again, "In this complete overthrow of the Edomites, was fulfilled the prophecy of Ezekiel 25: 12—14, 'Thus saith the Lord God; because that Edom hath dealt against the house of Judah by taking vengeance, and hath greatly offended, and revenged himself upon them; therefore thus saith the Lord God; I will also stretch out mine hand upon Edom, and will cut off man and beast from it; and I will make it desolate from Teman; and they of Dedan shall fall by the sword. And I will lay my vengeance upon Edom by the hand of my people Israel: and they shall do in Edom according to mine anger and according to my fury; and they shall know my vengeance, saith the Lord God." It was at this time that the Edomites ceased to be a distinct nation, and as Newton says: 'the very name was abolished and disused about the end of the first century after Christ.'"

(To be continued.)

An Appeal to My Brethren.

DEARLY BELOVED IN THE LORD:—I wish to settle up my book accounts and pay some borrowed money I owe; and I now make the following proposition to those owing me for books. If you will deduct ten per cent from the wholesale price for all you have on hand now unsold and forward the amount of what you have sold to me, you will do me a very great favor. Brethren help me in this matter.

Address—S. S. Brewer, No. 54 Wilson st.,
Providence, R. I.

From Bro. W. Pratt.

BRO. GRANT:—We all have been sick. Since the third of August we have scarcely blown out our lamp. Two of the children have had the dysentery followed by fevers. The other has had the ague and fever. I had first an attack of the cholera morbus—have since had chill-fever of a billious type. We are on the amend with the exception of our youngest, which is very feeble. We hope soon to enjoy comfortable health as the weather has changed. I have been at home for the last six or seven weeks, watching over the sick; hence I have done but little in the gospel field in that time. It has been more sickly here this season than for years before—cause no doubt, river low, and thousands of logs in the pond—perfect nuisance.

Lord sanctify affliction. Pray for us.

W. PRATT.

Moline, Ill., Sept. 23, '56.

For the Crisis.

From Br. H. Munger.

BRO. GRANT:—As the brethren wished me to give a short account of the Cheshire Campmeeting, I will say, there were but three tents, and a small meeting.—The preaching was of a practical turn, generally, and seemed to strengthen the little flock.

Friday evening we had victory in the North Adams tent; very much such a meeting as we had in Pleasant Valley tent, at Litchfield, when the saints were filled with laughter. This astonished some, while it pleased God to bless others, as is always the case.

One, who was formerly a Spiritualist, and had seen the way God's people acted when they got victory, told a brother that we acted as they, the Spiritualists, did in their meetings. Judging from outward appearances, we felt the same spirit or influence.

This statement, when made to me, affected me somewhat at first, because I saw it was working on others. I prayed God to carry on his work far enough to show the difference between Mesmerism and the power of God. I did want it tested.

Saturday, I felt like a cart under a load of sheaves all day. It was proposed for me to speak in the evening. When I made up my mind I determined not to yield to the influence, but by the help of God push this thing to a test. I had liberty in speaking and felt the same influence as on the evening before, whether it was mesmerism or the spirit of God. I meant to follow it and did until I felt like calling sinners and backsliders forward for prayers; and with the help of brother Samuel Brasee we got some ten or twelve forward.

One young woman came forward leading two others, and spoke as follows:

"I do not come here thinking it will benefit me, for I am a miserable backslider, and do not want others to do as I have done; and I warn you not to follow me, but give your hearts to God, &c."

At this moment she melted, and God was at work sure enough. This backslider was very efficient in encouraging others.—While we were praying, God blessed her on the spot, I thought unexpectedly to herself, and in a few minutes after, she began to work for others. She talked like another person, and felt so, judging by what she said. While I was trying to direct the mind of a deep-feeling mourner to Christ, I discovered it was the one who had made the observation the evening before, that our meeting seemed to her like theirs, the Rappers. I was astonished, thanked God, and took courage.

I thought by the way she cried, God was showing her what the inward work of his spirit was, which proved to be the case, for she professed faith in Christ, and went home rejoicing.

Glory to God, it did me good when Bro. Cummings told me that he carried them home five miles, after meeting, and they both were happy in God, and determined to live out their faith before the world.—They said they knew what it was going to cost them to live in that wicked, scoffing village, for they were the only ones in that place, and only one day old. But God can keep them. Pray, brethren, for them, that God will make them new, sharp threshing instruments, having teeth. If there are any more Clairvoyants who wish to attend our meetings, in God's name we bid you welcome. HIRAM MUNGER.

Chickopee Falls, Sept. 27, '56.

For the Crisis.

Letter From Bro. J. T. Dixon.

BRO. GRANT:—I read with much interest Br. E. Burnham's article, headed "Meddling with Politics."

In the abstract I agree with him. Ever since I became an Adventist I have had no connection with political parties, as such; voting only once or twice on the Temperance question. I still feel that in that question, and that of Slavery, where in my judgment, there is a prospect of checking for the time being either of those great evils, it is my christian duty to vote, and in this I do not endorse any of the anti-christian acts and laws of a corrupt Government or political party.

Some of our Brethren say, if we vote for good laws we of course must vote for men; and our Governors and Presidents being, by virtue of these offices, commanders-in-chief of armies, we bind ourselves to go at their bidding to fight with carnal weapons their battles.

I don't understand it so. The right to worship God according to the dictates of conscience is guaranteed to us in our bill of rights; which in the North, so far, thank God, has been respected, if not at the South. And the Quaker non-resistant, who occasionally votes, pays his taxes &c., is not subject to enlistment in armies, or to fines for non compliance.

But enough of this. I am no apologist for the corrupt Governments of these last days.

Kossuth spake truth when he said there was not a christian Government on earth. I know they assume the titles of "Most Christian," "most Catholic Majesties," "defenders of the Faith," &c; but it is all a mere sham;—blasphemy, as much so as for the Pope to sit in the temple of God showing himself as God. There is not a christian Government so called on earth, but what has incorporated in its constitution or laws some law that is antagonistic to the laws of Jesus Christ. Witness ours in relation to slavery, and that more recent enactment, "the Fugitive Slave Law" preparing the way for the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and that train of blood-shed and wrong that is following in Kansas.

Therefore, I am more and more confirmed in the belief that this Government, in common with the European, is part and parcel of that great and terrible beast of Daniel 7; applying in all its ramifications of horns &c. down here, close by the sitting of the judgment: when all these anti-christian powers, whether Kingly or Republican, shall be consumed—become truly chaff, as in the metalic image vision; and then the everlasting Kingdom shall succeed, where a King shall reign in righteousness, and princes rule in judgment. Praise the Lord. Truly our Rock is not their Rock.

JOHN T. DIXON.

Peacedale, R. I., Sept. 1856.

A FLATTERER is not often detected; for an honest mind is not apt to suspect, and no one exerts the power of discernment with much vigor when self-love favors the deceit.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

BE FAITHFUL.

BY FLORA.

Be faithful, Christian, faithful,
Thy Master to obey;
And tread the path of duty,
The straight and narrow way.
Gird on, gird on thine armor,
And on his word rely;
Who, to his waiting pilgrims
Declares redemption nigh.

Be faithful, Christian, faithful,
The glorious day draws near,
When with the holy angels,
King Jesus shall appear;
To gather from his kingdom
All things that do offend,
And then shall sin and sorrow
Forever, ever end.

Be faithful, Oh! be faithful,
The battle ne'er give o'er;
For soon thy blest Redeemer
Shall reign from shore to shore.
With power and great glory,
King Jesus shall come down;
And give his waiting children
A bright, immortal crown.

East Lee, Sept., '56.

For the Children.

Conquering by Kindness.

"I once had a neighbor,—a clever man—who came to me one day and said:

Squire White, I want you to come and get your geese away.

Why, says I, what are my geese doing?

They pick my pigs' ears when they are eating, and drive them away; and I will not have it.

What can I do? said I.

You must yoke them.

That I have not time to do now, said I. I do not see but they must run.

If you do not take care of them, I shall, said the shoemaker in anger. What do you say, Squire White?

I cannot take care of them now, but I will pay for all damages.

Well, said he, you will find that a hard thing I guess.

So off he went, and I heard a terrible squalling among the geese. The next news was, that three of them were missing. My children went and found them terribly mangled and dead, and thrown into the bushes.

Now, said I, all keep still and let me punish him.

In a few days, the shoemaker's hogs broke into my corn. I saw them, but let them remain a long time. At last I drove them all out, and picked up the corn which they had torn down, and fed them with it in the road; by this time the shoemaker came up in great haste after them.

Have you seen anything of my hogs? said he.

Yes, sir, you will find them yonder, eating some corn which they tore down in my field.

In your field?

Yes sir, said I, hogs love corn you know; they were made to eat it.

How much mischief have they done?

O not much, said I.

Well, off he went to look, and estimated the damage to be equal to a bushel and a half of corn.

O, no, said I, it can't be.

Yes, said the shoemaker, and I will pay you every cent of the damage.

The shoemaker blushed and went home. The next winter when we came to settle, the shoemaker determined to pay me for my corn.

No, said I, I shall take nothing.

After some talk, we parted, but in a few days I met him on the road, and we fell into conversation in the most friendly manner. But when I started on he seemed loth to move, and paused. For a moment, both of us were silent. At last he said,

I have something laboring on my mind.

Well, what is it?

Those geese. I killed three of your geese, and I shall never rest until you know how I feel; I am very sorry. And the tears came into his eyes.

O, well, said I, never mind; I suppose my geese were provoking.

I never took anything of him for it; but when my cattle broke into his fields after this, he seemed glad, because he could show how patient he could be.

Now said I to my children, conquer yourselves, and you can conquer with kindness, where you can conquer in no other way."—Morning Traveller.

Domestic Summary.

Arrival of Steamship Illinois.

The steamship Illinois, from Aspinwall 19th, arrived at New York on Saturday afternoon, bringing California mails of 5th inst. and 636 passengers.

The events which have happened throughout the State since the sailing of the last steamer for the East, have been comparatively of little interest or importance.

THE CATASTROPHE ON LAKE MICHIGAN—66 LIVES LOST.—CHICAGO Sept. 27, 1856.—It is now estimated that sixty-six of the persons on board the Niagara were lost. The schooner Dan Marble saved thirty, and the schooner Mary Grover, eleven, neither of which vessels has arrived. The following additional passengers are known to be saved:

Mr. Deviny of Boston, J. Miller of Chicago, Edward J Collins, D Lyons, and Cornelius Bryar of Montreal, and A. A. McKay, residence unknown.

The following are known to be certainly lost:

Almon Atwood and wife, of Charlotte, Vt., Mr. Clark Steward, of Buffalo, Hon. J. B. Macy, Fon du Lac, Wisconsin.

Harvey Ainsworth of Royalton, Vt., lost his wife, three children, father, and sister-in-law.

The hulk of the Niagara is sunk a mile and a half from the shore, in seven fathoms of water. She was valued at $75,000.

CRITICAL STATE OF AFFAIRS ON THE ISTHMUS—RUMORS OF A TERRIBLE RIOT.—NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Mr. Chas. Bonner who came passenger by the Illinois, states that considerable political bad feeling existed on the Isthmus generally since the month of June, when the votes were taken for Governor, and the blacks were made aware that Calvo, who was known to be the white candidate, had a large majority.

The blacks then determined to fight, to prevent his inauguration as such, and also to prevent his inauguration by force of arms. In such an anxious state of the public mind, application was made by the authorities for aid to the officers in command of the U. S. ships Independence and St. Mary's, and 425 marines were despatched, in 14 boats, and lay against the city of Panama. This threatening aspect of affairs caused many members of the Legislature to secrete themselves; but, however, a quorum was found, and, in the end, Calvo was proclaimed, as announced.

Fifty of the first families of the city of Panama, with all their jewels and treasure, sought shelter with the U. S. naval officer. Before the Illinois left, the excitement had subsided a little, but, Mr. Bonner states, that when he was on board the ship at Aspinwall, the 19th inst., he was informed that a telegraphic despatch had reached Colonel Patten, from Panama, to the effect that a bloody riot had taken place there, and that some fourteen or fifteen persons had been killed, and a large number of others badly beaten. It was also stated that a member of the Legislature had been shot in his chair.

It was reported on the Isthmus before he left, that peace had been made by treaty between Walker and the President of Costa Rica.

It was reported also that Walker's men were deserting him in large numbers, and joining the Rivas force, at Leon.

In Costa Rica President Mora had banished 15 or 18 leading men from the country, as they had he said, conspired for his overthrow after his retreat from Nicaragua.

FULL PARTICULARS OF THE LAST INVASION OF KANSAS.—The Intelligencer says:

Dates from the border of the 19th, give the particulars of the last days of the war in Kansas, and circumstances attending the final treaty of peace at Franklin.

The Missourians true to their word, marched from Westport to attack Lawrence on the 13th. The army was composed of one regiment of foot and two of mounted men, in all 2400 men, attended by four pieces of artillery.

Gen. Heiskell was in command.

On the 13th and 14th, the army marched 40 miles, reaching Franklin, 3 miles from Lawrence.

When about 4 miles from Franklin, the advance guard was fired on by the picket guard of the Lawrence army and one man killed.

The main body was hurried up as fast as possible, for the purpose of attacking Lawrence that evening.

By the time it reached Franklin, however, it was night, and the contemplated attack was postponed.

The army encamped at Franklin. intending to make the assault the next day, the 15th.

At midnight, however, an express arrived in camp, with the information that Col. Cook, with a large force of U. S troops, had taken up a position in front of Lawrence for the purpose of protecting it from the proposed attack.

Col. Cook communicated notice of his resolution to defend the town, in a note to Gen. Haskell warning him of the consequences.

It was said that Cook had been sent by Gov. Geary to protect Lawrence.

On the 15th Gov. Geary arrived at Franklin, and had a consultation with the officers of the invading army.

He told them that he was prepared to enforce the laws; to arrest offenders; to crush insurrection, and suppress disorder with the aid of the troops under his command, and that the interposition of the Missourians was no longer necessary.

As an evidence of his ability to enforce the laws, he told them that he had just arrested 90 or 100 outlaws who would be properly tried by the authorities.

In view of these facts, the Governor urged the Missourirns to disband, and abandon their projected attack on Lawrence.

Gen. Atchinson, Gen. Reed and Col. Titus addressed the meeting, and urged compliance with the Governor's proposal.

The request of the Governor was acceeded to.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 2.

A letter to the Republican, dated Lecompton 26th, gives the following:

The armed bands that have been ranging through the territory, are dispersed, and citizens are returning to their claims.

Business is reviving. Confidence is restored, and peace reigns throughout the territory.

Warrants have been issued for the arrest of Jones, Stringfellow, and other pro-slavery agitators.

Gov. Geary has appointed Col. Titus to form a volunteer battalion, to preserve the peace in the neighborhood of Lecompton, and he has awarded the same duty to Capt. Walker in the vicinity of Lawrence.

FROM KANSAS.—St. Louis, Sept. 20.—The steamer Polar Star, from Kansas 15th inst., reports that Capt. Robinson, with a company of 52 slavery-men, attacked a free State force at Grasshopper Falls on the 15th, killing two of their men and capturing their provisions, ammunition and horses.

The next day Col. Harvey, with 200 free soilers, attacked Robinson, who had fortified himself in a log house at Hickory Point. After fighting two hours and losing twelve men and having several wounded, Col. Harvey proposed an armistice of 30 days, which was accepted. Capt. Robinson lost three men killed, and had many wounded. Leavenworth was deserted. Governor Geary was at Lecompton.

THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.—The first attempt to lay a cable telegraph across the Atlantic having been unsuccessful, another is about to be made. The length of the cable will be about 2,400 miles, and two steamers, each with 1,200 miles of cable, will meet midway between Ireland and Newfoundland, and after uniting the cables will proceed in opposite directions to land.

MARTIN LUTHER'S WILL.—In the last will and testament of this eminent reformer, occurs the following remarkable passage:

"Lord God, I thank thee that thou hast been pleased to make me a poor and indigent man upon earth. I have neither house nor land, nor money to leave behind me. Thou hast given me wife and children, whom I now restore to thee. Lord, nourish, teach, and preserve them, as thou hast me."

Lawrence, Sept. 15.

(Correspondence.)—Twenty-eight hundred men, mostly Missourians, reached Franklin yesterday, destined to attack Lawrence. Owing to our reliance upon Gov. Geary somewhat for protection, our force is mostly in the country. About 500 remain, preparing to fight in our fortifications. Our advance gaurds came into collision last night, and three of the enemy are reported killed. None of our men are injured.

Just then orders came from the Governor forbidding the approach of the pro-slavery forces. They then fell back and camped at Franklin. 400 troops arrived here last night for the protection of Lawrence.

This morning the Governor disbanded the pro-slavery forces in person, under General Reed, member elect to the next Missouri Legislature. They are no longer a territorial militia. A collision is feared.

Colonel Harvey's regiment fought at Hartford yesterday, and won, killing three, and wounding many.

Foreign News.

Arrival of the Baltic.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.

The Collins steamship Baltic, Capt. Comstock, from Liverpool 17th inst., arrived at her dock in this port about 8 o'clock this A. M.

The European news is generally dull.

The only subject that affords interest is the state of affairs in Naples.

Arrival of the Africa.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3

Steamship Africa, from Liverpool 20th ult., arrived this morning.

The news by this arrival is very uninteresting.

The chief subject of interest in Paris is the arrest of numerous members of the Societe Marianne, on charges of an intention to assassinate the Emperor on his return from Biarritz.

Arrival of the Anglo-Saxon.

RIVER DU LOUPE, Oct. 6.—A. M. The propeller Anglo-Saxon, from Liverpool 24th ult., passed this point this forenoon, en route for Quebec.

The news from Great Britain is entirely devoid of interest, and political intelligence from France is equally so.

Reports respecting a hostile Anglo-French demonstration against Naples, acquires consistency. The Journal des Debats, as also the Paris correspondents of the London papers, state that if Naples does not accede to the concession demanded, four line-of-battle-ships, two frigates, and two corvettes, already detained for the purpose, will rendezvous at Ajaccio, thence proceed to Naples, and take on board the French and English embassies.

A RAILROAD TO THE EAST.—A railroad is about to be established from the Mediterranean to Jerusalem, with the sanction of the Turkish and British governments; the material of the line from Balaklava to Sebastopol will probably be transferred for that purpose. Another is to be for the purpose of establishing a new route to India by a railway of eighty miles from the Mediterranean to the Euphrates. It is supposed that it will be completed within two years, and that the distance between England and the East will by it be shortened one half.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

If the Lord permit, Eld. S. S. Brewer will preach the word in Fairhaven, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 12.
River-head, Monday evening, 13.
Faunce's Corner, Tuesday evening, 14.
Will Brother White meet me on Monday at Fairhaven and convey me to Riverhead?

A Conference will be held at Portsmouth, N. H., to commence on Wednesday evening, Oct. 15, and continue over the Sabbath. Brn. Hastings, Berrick, and Ross, are expected, and other preaching brethren are invited.

By request of the brethren,
J. COUCH.

I will preach at Portland, Me., the last Sabbath in Oct. (if the Lord will.)
J. COUCH.

The Lord permitting, I will preach as follows:—
Cooperstown, Ill., Oct 8 and 9.
Mt. Sterling 10 and 11,
Ripley, 12.
Camp Point 13 and 14.
Detroit, 15 and 16.
Pleasant Vale, 17 and over Sunday.
Bozra, 20 and 21.
Detroit 23.
Ripley 25, and over Sunday.
Freeport, 31 and over Sunday Nov. 2 Bro. Leister, of Buchanan, will meet me there and accompany me to Dubuque, Iowa.

I will visit other places in Ill., if desired, if brethren will address me at Freeport and give the necessary direction. If brethren think it not best for me to visit them as proposed, will they please inform me by letter, directed to South Bend, or Laporte, Ind., or Freeport, Ill., as we do not wish to impose ourself by preaching on communities where it is not desired. L. H. CHASE.

Providence permitting, I will preach as follows:
North Adams, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 12.
Springfield, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 19.
Providence, R. I., Sunday, Oct. 26th.
Worcester, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 2.
Lowell, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 9.
S. W. BISHOP.

Bro. D. E. Moulton will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 12.

Bro. J. Hemenway will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 26.
S. W. BISHOP.

Bro. D. E. Moulton will preach in Great Falls, 2nd Oct 5 S. W. B.

The Lord will, I will preach at Lanesville, Wednesday evening, Oct. 8th and continue over the Sabbath.
S. G. MATHEWSON.

If Providence permit, I will preach at
Fair Haven, Conn., 8.
Bridgeport 10, and over the Sabbath as Bro. Bassett may appoint.
Waterbury, Ct., Oct. 13.
Plymouth Hollow, 14 & 15.
Northfield, 16.
Litchfield Station 17.
Newfield, 19.
Collinsville, 20.
Canton, 21.
Winsted, 22.
Pleasant Valley, 26.
C. GOODRICH.

If I am well I will attend to Bro. Bishop's appointments as follows:
Newburyport, 8.
Marblehead 9 & 10.
Salem, 12.
Lynn, 13.
Boston, 14.
Natick, 15th where Bro. Perry directs.
Westboro, 16.
I hope the Brethren will inform me if these appointments conflict with previous ones; in season to save me expense and trouble.
HIRAM MUNGER.

I will preach, Providence permitting, at
Poland, 10.
Boston, 12.
F. H. BERRICK.

If nothing prevents, I will meet the brethren and friends as follows:—
Brunswick, Sunday, Oct. 12.
West Falmouth, 19.
Flying Point, 26.
R. R. YORK.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Roxbury, Wednesday eve. 8.
Lynn, (Dye house Ville.) Friday eve, 10.
Salem, Lord's day, 12.
Portsmouth, N. H., Friday eve, 17.
Rye, N. H., Lord's day, 19.
Kennebunk Port, Thursday eve. 23.
Portland, Me., (Clark's Hall,) Lord's day, Oct. 26.
WM. M. INGHAM.

The Lord permitting, Brother Edwin Burnham will preach in Massena, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., the third and fourth Sabbaths in Oct. He will also hold meetings through the intervening week. JAMES DANFORTH.

Notice.

Providence permitting, the Free Chapel at West Poland, Will be dedicated Friday, Oct. 17. Services to commence at 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M. The meeting will continue over the Sabbath.

It is hoped there will be a general gathering, and that it may be a season of interest and profit, both to the Church here, and those that may come.

Brn. E. Burnham, and J. Couch, are expected to attend.

For the brethren, JESSE PARTRIDGE.

If either of the above named brethren cannot attend, please write me at West Poland as soon as convenient, and oblige

Yours truly,
JESSE PARTRIDGE.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

GLAD TIDINGS:

OR

BIBLE PROOF

That WOE and SIN are to END in the Universe, by a LITTERAL DESTRUCTION of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment.

All Texts on FUTURE PUNISHMENT collected and arranged.

By JACOB BLAIN,

Baptist Minister, of Buffalo, New York.

"And there shall be no more death, sorrow, crying, nor pain."—Rev. 21: 4.

"And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, * * * herrd I saying, blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, forever and ever."—Rev. 5: 13.

"The last enemy shall be DESTROYED."—1 Cor. 15: 26.

Published by the author, No. 19 North Division Street, Buffalo, N. Y., and for sale at the Crisis Office, Boston, Mass. Price 10 cts. single.

NEW BOOKS.

We have just received two new and interesting works. One from Bro. J. Lenfest, enitled "The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion," and "The New Birth."

Price for single copy 12 cts.; per hundred, $8; to the poor free.

They can be had at this office, or of Bro. Lenfest at Machiasport, Me.

Another from William Shepherd, Elizabeth City, N. J., entitled, "The Saints' Inheritance."

Bro Shepherd will furnish this work of 50 pages at the following low rates, which he says is below cost, as he wishes the truth to be spreading:

Four copies	$0.25
Nine	0.50
Eighteen	1.00
Fifty	2.50
One hundred	5.00

And in addition, he will prepay the postage.

"WELLCOME'S TREATISE ON MATT., 24TH AND 25TH CHAPTERS.—Permit me to say a word in favor of this work, and that is, in brief, I express my conviction that it is the best work on Matt. 24th and 25th I have ever seen. It is truthful, stirring, perspicuous, adapted to convince, and not lengthy. I hope our brethren will circulate it widely."

D. T. TAYLOR.

[illegible] is a good [illegible] ... and 324 Hymns. [illegible] only 7 cts.; if not prepaid [illegible] amount. Persons in want of [illegible] please send in their orders.

They are for sale at the Office of the Christian Reformer, Hartford, Ct., and by D. A. Brown, 201 High st., Providence, R. I.

Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, [illegible]; per hundred, $20. When sent by mail the postage will be charged extra, if prepaid.

Dr. Decker's pamphlet on the 2300 Days. Price, singly 10 cts.; per dozen, 50 cts.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

The following works are published and sold by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.—They are also for sale at the Office of the "World's Crisis," 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.; and by W. Pratt, Moline, Ill.; P. A. Smith, 4 Frank street, Rochester, N. Y.; A. F. Porter, 20 Erie street, Philadelphia, Pa.; S. S. Brewer, 54 Wilson street, Providence, R. I.:—

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 38 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cts.—postage 9 cents.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By I. C. Welcome. 38 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions of the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 16 cents per volume.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—by D. T. Taylor. Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—by John Cumming. State of the Dead, by Milton. Intermediate State, by Grew. Each 24 pages. Price 5 cents single; $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the Coast of Man—Ancient Landmarks—Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—price 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred.——Future Punishment—The Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

A SPECIAL APPEAL.

Do read this appeal and HEED it. I wish to publish another edition of my "GOSPEL VINDICATOR," (a work of 187 pages,) for gratuitous distribution in Minnesota. It will cost comparatively but little to do it, as it is already stereotyped. It is just the work needed to follow up the "Key of Truth," as it removes the many objections to our faith. How much will you now pledge for this object, to be paid January 1st 1857?

Send your pledges to the Crisis immediately, that I may arrange accordingly. Who will pledge $1, $5, or $10?

Remember that this is missionary ground, and GOD has a claim upon your dollars!

Friends, you must help. Do not refuse.—If more than enough should be pledged, it will be used to issue the fifth edition of the "Key of truth." "Let us not be weary in well doing." W. SHELDON.

Vermillion, Dakota Co., Minnesota.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise, it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

W A Brewster, F Cole, C N Harvey, Mrs. L P Drake, M Green, S Smith, G W Gillespie, J A Barnes, C C Deane, S Raine, E Harrington, M A Joice, E H Simpson, W S Willey, S F Leavitt, S A Porter, Capt. M Brooks, $1 each.

E Miller, D Merrill, D Drake, J A Cole, $2 each.

C A Warner $2,08.

BOOKS LENT.—Mrs. L P Drake, N [illegible], H E Felton.

[illegible]—Wm. [illegible], $[illegible]; Mrs. L P Drake 5 [illegible]; N [illegible], 12 [illegible].

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

A HYMN OF PRAISE.

BY H. P. P.

"Praise ye the Lord."—Ps. [illegible]

Sweep your harps ye angel throng,
Heaven's highest arch along!
Earth and sky repeat the words,
"King of Kings and Lord of Lords!"
Firm his Word—His promise pure—
Sanctified they shall endure,
Till the time to Israel sweet,
When the saints with Jesus meet!

Lo! on Zion's brow He stands,
Breaking the Oppressor's bands;
Time and Death are vanquished now,
Humbly in the dust they bow.
View the Builder's "Corner Stone"
Flaming forth amid the Throne,
All his foes beneath his feet,
When the saints with Jesus meet!

Church of God, from dust arise!
Look away to Paradise!
Little flock, thy Shepherd's voice
Bids thee even now rejoice!
Spreading wide the dawn appears—
Mourn no longer! dry thy tears!
Raise thy voice the King to greet,
When the saints with Jesus meet.

Sinner! know, ye strive in vain;
Christ will soon in triumph reign.
He, whose love and power combine,
Teaching words and works divine,
Kindly bids thee fear his wrath,
Bids thee fear the "second death!"
Mercy offers no retreat,
When the saints with Jesus meet.

Praise the Lord, ye hosts, and sing
Pæans to the Victor King!
"Swell the chorus," raise the song,
Praises to our Lord belong;
Let assembled worlds combine,
To celebrate His love divine.
Heaven and Earth his praise repeat,
When the saints with Jesus meet.

Chemung, Ill., Sept. 20.

For the Crisis.

LINES.

BY VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

TUNE—"Wait for the wagon."

"God also hath set thee one over against the other, to the end that man should find nothing after him."—Eccl. 7: 14.

A little gleam of sunshine
Preceeds a cloud of gloom;
A little halt in trav'ling,
A visit to the tomb.
Our precious casket broken,
We have a jewelled gem;
The tear of parting spoken,
We journey on again.
Then welcome the sunshine,
Bright evanescent;
The dark storm will strengthen—
O bid it welcome too.

A touching strain with fleetness
Is borne along the air,
We haste to drink its sweetness,
So soft, so rich, so rare;
A kindred zephyr floating
Bears on its downy wing
A piercing note of wailing—
Thus constant changes spring.
Then welcome the sunshine, etc.

A poor deformed creature
Presents his palsied hands,
We weep to see him totter,
So helplessly he stands.
A beauteous child is passing
With joyful beating heart—
Thus daily contrasts blending,
Fill up life's chequered chart.
Then welcome the sunshine, etc.

And thus our blessed Father
Will fill the chalice up,
And mingle it with sorrow,
And sweeten it with hope.
He'll cut the strongest cable,
That binds us to this shore;
And as our strength is able,
Perfect us in the fire.
Then welcome the sunshine, etc.

Charlemont, Mass.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Length of the Tarrying Time.

BY JOHN MORRISON.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—Who are now looking for that blessed hope, the appearing of Jesus Christ "the second time without sin unto salvation,"—God speaks to us by the prophets, apostles, and his son Jesus Christ, and by Ezek. 12; that the days would be prolonged, and every vision fail; and that they, "the rebellious house" would use it for a "proverb in the land."

And does he not tell his servants who stand on the watch, and answer their request, by saying to them through the prophet, Hab. 2: 2, "write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it, for the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end (of the appointed time) it shall speak, and not lie; though it tarry, wait for it, because it will surely come, it will not tarry."

Now to know the proper length of the tarrying time we must go back to the time when the virgins (wise) took their lamps (Bibles) and went forth to meet the Bridegroom; and did not the watchmen give the sound in the year '44, tenth day, seventh month, when all those virgins arose, took their Bibles, went out, and made a separation from the rest of the world in strong faith hoping the Lord would come?

Now was not this the beginning of disappointments, and has it not tarried ever since?

Now, what made the disappointment? was it not in not following God's direction to us by the angel, or man Gabriel, whom God sent to make known the time? Did he not instruct Daniel to begin the 2300 days "from the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem," and that "the wall should be builded in troublous times?" (Dan. 9: 25,) And was not that in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king? (Neh. 2: 1, 4–16.) and was it not our mistake to start from the seventh year of king Artaxerxes, (Ezra 7: 7,) which was thirteen years too soon?

O foolish virgins that we were, to think that we could enter the Kingdom without being tried,—and blessed are those that endure the trial, for when they are "tried" they shall receive the "crown of life," which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.

Our faith has been tried; O may it "be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ:" and then we shall "receive the end of our faith, even the salvation of our souls."

"Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompence of reward. For ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while, and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry."

Dear brethren, let us not draw back,—the light is shining brighter and brighter,—nearer to perfect day.

Let us hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ," for He will come the second time, "without sin unto salvation," and reward all them that love His appearing, with a crown of righteousness.

May the writer and the reader be counted worthy to stand before the Son of man, and hear Him saying, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Amen.

New Glasgow, June 5, '56.

For the Crisis

"Interior Life."

BY C. S. BARNES.

Bro. Grant:—The following, I copy from a work which I have in my possession, entitled "The Interior, or Hidden Life," by Thomas C. Upham, published in 1844, which I thought might interest some of the readers of the Crisis, who are looking at the relation of consecration to assurance of faith. C. S. B.

"In respect to the nature of assurance of faith, we may remark here, after an examination of various statements and illustrations on the subject, that it appears to consist essentially in two things:—

First, in a general but unwavering confidence in God's character, administration, and promises.

Secondly, in a confident belief of our personal acceptance with God through Christ: and accordingly it is not limited to the second particular, as some persons may suppose, but the second element: viz., that of a particular or personal acceptance. which probably, in the popular view of it, is the striking or characteristic trait, has its basis in a prevailing or assured faith of a more general character.

With these remarks I enter upon the principal topic of this article, viz; the relation existing between consecration and assurance.

Faith, (especially that faith which is appropriating and purifying) and the commission of known sin cannot go together. They are antagonistical and destructive of each other.

Just so far as consecration which implies a fixed determination with divine assistance to resist sin in all its forms, actually exists, and no farther, is the way open for the principle of faith, especially in its appropriating character, to enter and to take effect in the soul. The Savior himself has explicitly taught us, (John 5: 44) that those who, in the spirit of self-seeking, pursue worldly honor, and not the honor which cometh from God only, are unable, in the religious sense of the expression, to believe.

1. But proceeding from the more general view of the subject to the particular and specific one now under consideration, we remark in the first place,—that assurance of faith, like all other forms of religious faith, considered in distinction from natural faith, is the gift of God.

No one has it without the Divine blessing. But here, as in every other case of God's dealings, we see no other course but to take the position as almost a self-evident one, that there are reasons in the Divine mind for every occurrence or fact, and also for every modification of the Divine conduct; and that God, in imparting the immense blessing of assurance of faith, does not, and cannot act accidentally; in other words, there is some antecedent fact, some preparatory condition, in connection with which this great blessing takes place; not a meritorious condition, it is true; nothing which lays God under obligation; but still a preparatory antecedent or condition actually existing in the view of the divine mind, and as an indispensable part of the divine arrangement, and that condition, as the matter presents itself to our view, is consecration. Not a consecration in part, but in whole; a solemn and a permanent giving up of the whole being to God.

If with any inferior degree of consecration there may be an inferior degree of faith, there cannot be a perfection or assurance of faith, without a consecration corresponding to it, both of body and spirit; both of ourselves and our possessions, entire, permanent, and irrevocable."

(Continued.)

For the Crisis.

The Coming of the Lord.

BY ZETA.

"But of that day and hour knoweth no man." Matt. 24: 36. Mark 13: 32.

The signs which were to foretell the coming of the Lord, are doubtless now all in the past. The great injunction of the Savior applicable to the present time, is, "Take ye heed, watch and pray." "Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." Mark 13: 33.—Matt. 24: 42.

The Saviour's approach to judge the world is evidently very near. The signs, those faithful monitors which bade us "look up and lift up our heads," are now no longer looked for, but we look for the immediate appearing of the Lord.

I sincerely believe that the signs of the times predicted by the prophets and apostles, and now beheld in the fulfillment of prophecy, are sufficient to convince the candid enquirer after truth; that "the Lord is at hand," "even at the door" and that "in a little while he that shall come, will come and will not tarry."

The candid inquiry of the faithful waiting ones may be,—"Why may we not know or why knoweth no man of that day and that hour?"

The most plausible, and scriptural reason that I can assert, aside from the plain declaration of our text, is, by reference to the little season mentioned in the 20th of Revelations 3rd verse, contrasting and harmonizing it wiih the great type and antitype of the earth's existence. The type—seven days. The antitype—seven millenial days, or 7,000 years. Arising from this consideration, and in order to have the subject more plainly understood, there are some prominent, leading questions, necessary to be proposed.

1. Does this little season come within the 7,000 years of time, or beyond it, in eternity?

2. If in time, where must it be disposed of, in point of location in order to a perfect fulfillment of type and antitype?

3. May not Christ appear a little season previous to the commencement of the seventh millennium, making room for the little season, mentioned in the 20th of Revelation to occur within the 7,000 years of time, and yet reign a thousand years with his saints, on the earth, in perfect peace, undisturbed by Satan, or his deception on the nations?

If I cannot surmount these questions by solution, I shall rightfully expect that some of our brethren of the Crisis will aid me in doing so, through their worthy paper.

But I proceed by a few remarks to notice these questions conjunctively.

I readily embrace the position that the little season occurs, within, and near to, or at the closing up of time. If this position be correct, then of necessity, Christ must appear a little season prior to the commencement of the seventh millennium, and set up his reign. Otherwise should he begin his reign at the commencement of the seventh millennium, there would be confusion and disorder, occurring from the loosing of Satan and his assaults upon the nations to deceive them, and to make war among them.

We have no rule by which to measure this little season, hence the failure of the prophetic periods, and the apparent incorrectness of chronological reckonings.

I make no distinction between the thousand years of Satan's being bound, and that of Christ reigning on the earth. As narrated by the Revelator, they might appear to come in succession, but as located in point of time, they appear to be the same; for the dead are judged at the expiration of both: that is, the wicked dead, or nations which will be deceived by Satan when they rise from their sleeping dust.

Again, I do make a distinction between the thousand years termed the seventh millennium, for it appears that Christ's reign will begin a little season prior to the commencement of the seventh, then there will be a fulfillment in the type and antitype in regard to the whole week, and for proof that the reign of Christ and the binding of Satan will occur at the same time read in connection the 6th and 7th verses of the 20th of Revelations.

Yours, waiting for the Lord,

Zeta.

For the Crisis.

The Promise and the Heirs of Promise.

BY B. MATTHIAS.

There is a great deal of vagueness in religious belief, much that is uncertain and unfounded.

The sects have taken for granted almost all they believe, and are most confident in their dogmas. Natural immortality—the passage of the righteous to heaven, and of the wicked to torment, at death, with them is most true—not even to be discussed.

A temporal millenium, and the world's conversion are equally important and orthodox; also that the carnal Jews have a promise of restoration to their fatherland.

There is yet another class that do not give them any promise of this inheritance, neither themselves or anybody else. These are they who think the kingdom of heaven will be everywhere in general, and nowhere in particular.

Suppose in this state of the case we refer the question to the Scriptures for settlement.

THE PROMISE.

What was promised? That men should go to heaven at death?

We shall see.

The promise of which we speak, was first made by God, to Abram.

True faith is persuasion of its truthfulness and literality, and a hearty embracing of it, like the patriarchs of old.

This same promise was repeated unto Israel, and confirmed unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant, "saying, unto thee will I give the land of Canaan the lot of your inheritance." Ps. 105: 11.

Abram was called from his kindred and his father's house, unto a land which he should after inherit. God said unto him; "Unto thy seed will I give this land." Gen. 12: 7.

Again, the second time the Lord met him, and said, "Lift up now thine eyes and look from the place where thou art, Westward, Southward, Eastward, Northward; for all the land which thou seest to thee will I give it and to thy seed for ever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth, so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered. Arise; walk through the land in the length of it, and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee." Gen. 13: 14–17.

This is not enough; it must be made more sure.

Abram enquired, "Lord God, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit this land?"

At the Divine command, he prepared a sacrifice; and watched it till the sun went down, when it was miraculously accepted. On the same day the Lord made a covenant with Abraham,—"Saying, unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates." Gen. 15: 18.

But this is not enough. The promise must not be misunderstood. It is not only to this man, but for a thousand generations, and to certain of all nations. "As for me, behold my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations; neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee. And I will establish my covenant between thee and me, and thy seed after thee in their generations, for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee. And I will give unto thee and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God." Gen. 17: 4–8.

HIS OATH UNTO ISRAEL.

"Sojourn in this land and I will bless thee: for unto thee and unto thy seed I give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham, thy father." Gen. 26: 3–4.

"And confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant. That thou mayest inherit the land wherein thou art a stranger which God gave unto Abraham."

After this benediction from Isaac, Jacob left his father's house and went to Padan-aram. In his way he had a vision of a ladder reaching from earth to heaven; and the angels of God ascending and descending upon it. "And, behold the Lord stood upon it, and said, I am the Lord God of Abraham, and Isaac: the land where thou liest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed. And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the West and to the East, to the North and to the South, and in thee, and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. And behold I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken." Gen. 28: 13–15.

This promise could not have been fulfilled in the history and experience of the three patriarchs, all of whom were strangers in the land. Nor of the twelve, for they went down into Egypt in the lifetime of Israel. Here they remained four hundred years, fulfilling the prediction to Abraham, that his seed should be in bondage to strangers.

"Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them, and they shall afflict them four hundred years. Afterwards shall they come out with great substance."

This promise was not fulfilled after their coming out of Egypt, in the temporary possession of the land by this family. If this were all, the promise failed, as far as the patriarchs are concerned. The promise is "unto thee and thy seed." The apostle's comment is,—"to thy seed which is CHRIST." Gal. 3: 16.

They expected the promised inheritance after the resurrection. This was Joseph's hope when he gave commandment concerning his bones, expecting to live in the land of promise by the resurrection.

But we have not done with the promise; it is repeated unto Jacob. The Lord met him when going, and when returning from Padan-aram. "Thy name is Jacob; thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name. And they called his name Israel!"

"And God said unto him, I am God Almighty; be fruitful, and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins; and the land which I gave Abraham and Isaac, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land." Gen. 35: 10–12.

The land where these patriarchs sojourned is the inheritance promised. Then, certainly, our Protestant relations are mistaken when they talk of going up to heaven for the promised inheritance, or expect the reward at death.

The gospels and epistles agree with the prophets in this matter without a shade of difference: all agree that when Christ comes, he will enter upon the glorious reign in his kingdom.

The patriarchs expected when sojourning in Canaan, that they would have a city of foundations, built by the Lord.

This item is named to show that they did not count on any stability in worldly institutions; hence they would trust none, dwelling in tents. So they went from one nation to another, from one kingdom to another people, and God reproved kings for their sakes; saying, "touch not mine anointed and do my prophets no harm." But their faith is commended, because they believed in an immovable kingdom to come.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. L. M. Collins.

Brn. and Srs.:—I have felt for a long time that all was not right, but feared to speak my mind lest I might offend some one. I have prayed over the matter, but found I had got to do something besides pray in order to have my prayers answered. I have a duty to do, as a member of the family, to the household.

Besides, "he that knoweth his Master's will and doeth it not, shall be beaten with many stripes." I have so often neglected to do duty, that I fear the consequences. I have come to the conclusion that I will ask of God, and in the name of Jesus, do as he bids me.

I have said that all was not right. I say so still. I look around me and an awful picture meets my eye. The mass of professed christians have become popular. It was not so in the apostle's day, neither was it in John Wesley's. Christians then were known by their dress, as well as by their daily walk and conversation. Would to God that it were so now; but it is quite the reverse. A large majority of those professing godliness are growing more and more popular every day; they do not consider the velocity with which the wheels of time are rolling them along, nor how soon their popularity will end in destruction. I feel at times as though I could weep over them, as my blessed Master did over Jerusalem.

Popularity is not the only thing that is wrong, it is only one among many evils. There is hatred, malice, envy, strife, covetousness, backbiting, and many other things that might be named; all within the pale of the church; and I may say within the Advent ranks, too.

Brethren and sisters, shall this be so? While I have looked over the picture which has so often presented itself, I have felt sad. In my fancy, a response comes back from you which cheers my almost bursting heart, saying it shall not be so.

Then let us at once arise, and come upon the platform, throwing aside all party spirit and sectarianism of every kind, and wherever we can see the image of our Master stamped upon the character of an individual, let us esteem that person our brother or our sister.

Again, I am cheered when I look into the Word and find that there is to be a class when the Lord comes that will be "purified, and made white, and tried." This is the way the Lord prepares his people.

There will be no contention in the little church when He comes. It will stand out pure and holy, without "spot or wrinkle" Truly, it will be a "birde adorned for her husband."

Some things ought to be considered, and if not, may prove our ruin. We must live in peace avoiding all contention.

Brother, have you a wife? Sister, have you a husband? If so have no contention. The Lord when He comes will not wait for you to settle difficulties. If you are not ready, "the door will be shut and you yourselves thrust out."

Think of these things. Many have engaged in hard words, and angry looks, and the result has been the family altar has been neglected.

Does this look right?

Certainly not.

Let us each, dear brethren and sisters, take the subject home to our hearts,—let us each ask,—am I right? Do I not indulge in some known sin?

If we find that we do, let us repent heartily before the Lord. We may have an occasion to correct our children; let us do it in love then, not in anger, for this would not be right. Can we punish our children for anger, when we ourselves get angry? this would not be Christlike.

O for a religion which will enable us to do right; and we must have it in order to be saved when Christ comes.

Yours, with the expectation of soon seeing Jesus in the clouds of heaven,

Lydia M. Collins.

Bath, N. H., July 20, 1856.

As rivers and fountains proceed from the sea, and return thither again, so true grace in the heart, as a fountain, sends forth all its streams towards God, the ocean from whence it flowed.

Kind words are among the brightest flowers of earth; they convert the humblest home into a paradise; therefore use them, especially around the fireside circle.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1856. WHOLE NO. 131. VOL. IV. NO. 7.

The World's Crisis, IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Be Kind.

BY H. L. H.

Yes, yes, be kind: don't feel so full of vinegar and gravel. Don't look so everlastingly on others' faults.

Total depravity may do well enough for an opinion provided you recollect that you are as bad as any one else, but self-righteousness for you and depravity for others, is rather a poor arrangement, I apprehend.

There, don't scold so. Your wife isn't so much worse than every other one; your children are not just the ugliest under heaven (and if they are, who is to blame but you?); your tenants are not the most dishonest, nor your servants the laziest, nor your house the leakiest, nor your chimney the smokiest of all others under the heavens of the Lord. Your neighbors are not the most disobliging, nor their dogs the most yelping little curs in the world, —at least they were not, till you scolded the neighbors and stoned the dogs.

Come, come, don't be so ugly. The sun shines just as bright on your field as on your neighbor's. Your cows do give sweet milk, even tho' your scowl is sour enough to curdle it.

The rain falls, the grass springs up, the harvest matures, the fruits ripen on your fields as much as on anybody's, even tho' you stand scowling enough to out-scowl a north-wester, and growling enough to outgrowl a thunder tempest.

Really, God does dare to bless you, even though you seem inclined to curse every one else about you.

Come now, why not try to be a decent man?

There! what did you kick that cat for? —Why need you scold that child, so like a snarling cur?

"Tries your patience?"—you haven't much patience to try.

Now try to be a man. Love your wife, speak kindly to her, poor woman, and brighten her weary pathway through the world. Take up that little boy on your knee—quite a fine fellow if he does look a very little like his father,—he may act like him sometime if you don't behave more like a man in his presence.

Love that little trembling girl that's been crying behind the door ever since you scolded her so about that little hole she tore in her apron.

Put your arms round her neck. Kiss her—don't be so shy of your own flesh and blood: you may learn her to love her father yet, though she'll be a little timid for a while, but you persevere and these little slinking plagues of your life will expand into comely children, and will call you father with an unction that you never knew or dreamed of.

Try it. Be kind. Love your neighbors, speak kindly to their children, don't insult their dogs and cats, treat your workmen like men—hunt all over your premises and find some solitary thing that's done right, and say so.

Learn to praise as well as blame. You have scowled long enough—learn to smile: you have sinned long enough—learn to pray.

Go into your closet and recall that prayer that you learned from your mother's lips before the world had seared your heart; bring up the treasured memories of other days—the gray hairs that are pillowed 'neath the clods—the eyes that are dimmed beneath the shades of death,—come, pray—"Forgive us our sins as we forgive those that trespass against us."

God will hear your prayers—you may have a heart of flesh yet. Come, lead your family to Christ—set before them the examples of meekness, and patience, and love.

Try, and you may yet stand an unbroken circle on Zion's heights.

Now try. Be kind, be patient, be faithful to the end.

God bless you, and save you evermore. Amen.

For the Crisis

Realities.

BY MARY A. GRANT.

It is a saddening reality that all of earth soon passes and is no more. Nature, earth-wide, presents but an autumn landscape—varied and fading. There are flowers, but they wither at unfriendliness. There are creations of art and power almost divine, but the revolutions of ages leave them crumbling, and in ruins. There are joys for man growing out of present associations and endearing ties, but they are evanescent as the summer cloud. There are buds of beauty, and blossoms of sweetness, which cluster in our bowers of love, but their blooming is but for a season. The spoiler crushes them, and they lie withered now in our own home-haunts. Earth has its hopes, but they decay; it has its ambition—but its acme is seldom gained, and if ever, it is through toil and struggling, and at last with a mingling of disappointment.

It needeth not to be said that all of earth is vanity—"vanity of vanities, all is vanity"—for every heart, worldly or christian, feels and would testify to its truthfulness.

Where is the heart that has not felt it? Where the favored one whose heart-strings have not been at some time rudely swept or broken, or are not now quivering with the burden of their own, or others' woe? Say, in the wide world is there one whose heart has been untouched by grief—destitute of compassion for lack of objects to call forth its bestowal?

Nay, such there may not be. The reality of woe, suffering, change, and passing away, knows but the ends of the earth as its bounds.

It is a reality that the present existence of things, of corruptness and sorrow, is not to be perpetual. It is impossible, in the nature of all around us. There must be a change. Earth will soon have wrought its own ruin. Man will soon have attained to the height both of ingenuity and immorality. The crisis must ensue: and this is a reality.

In the wisdom of Him who seeth the end from the beginning, results succeed causes, which, while they subserve the present interest and selfishness of man, tend to the bringing about of the great drama, ere long to be enacted before the assembled world. As it is a fact that strife and anarchy burn in the heart of the nations, so true is it that their "wickedness shall come to a perpetual end; and the righteous shall be established in the earth." Oppression shall not brood over the fairest portions of our world, pestilence shall not for aye stalk through the land, treading upon its millions slain; misery and deformity shall not always cast their uncouth shadows on their native earth; these must end for God hath spoken it.

It is a reality that the Day of Doom is hastening on with accelerated speed. Days, weeks, months, years, fleet away; and but too surely wing us to the hour of all mankind's eternal destiny. "It hasteth greatly." The fiat of Jehovah has gone forth, and at the sounding of the seventh angel, the "great voice" from out the throne in Heaven shall be heard saying,—"it is done."—"The mystery of God is finished." The signs indicative of His near approach are left, plainly inscribed for our understanding, by our blessed Lord. His love anticipated the necessities of his people down here, at the close of time; therefore, we find for our comfort,—"When ye see these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." "Behold the fig tree and all the trees; when they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye the kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

Earth, air, and sea; society, in its moral, social, and political phases; declension of vital piety and devotion to God, and the waning of that love of which the gospel speaks so much;—all declare but too plainly for the sinner, that the day of retribution is casting its shadows o'er the land. This, too, is a solemn reality. And while the contemplation of it brings terror and consternation to the unrighteous soul; to the trusting disciple of faith, it gives occasion for rejoicing and delight. The believer "hasteth unto the coming of the day of God; but the world-seeker puts it far away. "The night is far spent; the day is at hand."

Then look up, Zion's pilgrim, thy dusty garb will ere long be exchanged for the raiment of Heaven, and thy weary feet will soon pass the verdant banks of the living stream, which gushes from beneath the throne. Then cheer thee—the Day-star beams no more afar.

It is a reality, that all the promises our God, and his dear Son have made and left for us, in the future, will have their literal accomplishment. And how abundant are those promises! They gild with heavenly brightness every page of Scripture truth. And how many a child of suffering, has been led to exclaim with the singer of Israel,—"Unless thy law had been my delight, I should then have perished in my affliction." Blessed be the Lord. "As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even forever." His people are unto him as the apple of his eye; and by all his dealings with them in this present state, and by what he is preparing for them in the world to come, an infinite interest is manifest.

Who can peruse such promises as the following, without that burning of soul, that intense desire, of which the Psalmist speaks? What devoted heart longs and prays not for their accomplishment, and that speedily?—

"Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of Hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and before his ancients gloriously. * * * * And in this mountain shall the Lord of Hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines upon the lees, of fat things well refined. And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away all tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth; for the Lord God hath spoken it." "In that day shall the Lord of Hosts be for a crown of glory, and for a diadem of beauty, unto the residue of his people." "Look upon Zion the city of our solemnities: thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down; not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed, neither shall any the cords thereof be broken. But there the glorious Lord will be unto us a place of broad rivers and streams; wherein shall go no galley with oars, neither shall gallant ships pass thereby. For the Lord is our Judge, the Lord is our Law-giver, the Lord is our King; he will save us." Blessed be his name forever!

What christian can read the thirty-fifth of Isaiah, and portions of the sixtieth and sixty-fifth chapters—with many kindred ones—with other than an overflowing heart? Read them ye fainting, weary ones, and refresh your worn spirit yet again.

"He that overcometh the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life; but I will confess his name before my Father and the holy angels." "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God." "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne; even as I have overcome and am set down with my Father in his throne." And these, the overcomers, shall "sing a new song;" and the voice of it will be like the "voice of many waters," and as the "voice of mighty thundering" rolling through the concave of Heaven;—"Alleluia! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth! Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come."

Reader, these are realities. Christian, they are for you; will you endure, and obtain them? Sinner, they may be yours to enjoy; will you submit to Christ that you may inherit them? Remember, these sayings which have been quoted, are true and faithful. Embrace them with Jesus, and the glory of which they speak shall be your inheritance forever.

Boston, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Different Kinds of Preaching.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

Some men preach like thunder. They make a tremendous noise of rattling, roaring, and bellowing, but it does not amount to much, only to frighten and disgust.

Some preach like lightning. They burn, scath, kill, dazzle, frighten, and electrify, but they produce no rain, and do not refresh.

Some preach like earthquakes. They shake, rend, demolish, upheave, and desolate; but they do not build up, or gather together, or regenerate.

Some preach like showers of rain, without wind, hail, lightning, thunder, or any thing else that startles or awakens. They are the everlasting sons of unvarying consolation. They seldom touch the sleeping conscience of the daring sinner.

Multitudes are under them consoled and comforted, that should be made to tremble under a sense of their guilt.

Some men preach like thunder, lightning, hail, rain, wind, earthquakes, and dews.

They, by the blessing of God, alarm, awaken, convict, burn, scath, refresh, build up, gather, settle, confirm, and help.

God fill us with the Holy Spirit, and make us, what we should be, thine own ministers.

For the Crisis.

Incidents by the Way.

No. II.

BY S. S. BREWER.

Saturday, Sept. 13.—The weather is lovely. Now for a walk in the forest. Nature begins to change her garb. A few days since and all appeared green and vigorous. Old Sol shed down his rays and vegetation steadily pressed on to its meridian. Alas, it is gone, and now the fields that a few days since presented their broad surface with a beautiful green carpet, present a mournful appearance to a contemplative mind.

The harvest is past. The trees begin to doff their raiment of changeable apparel. The yellow, brown, red, crimson, russet, and all the variegated colors and tints, with the prismatic beauties of the rainbow appear. The winds of autumn begin to sigh in mournful melody through the grove, and cold winter is fast treading on its heels, and soon like an angel of death, he will breathe upon the fading beauties that yet linger around us as mementos of the past, and strew them dry and withered to the ground. O what a land of changes. Spring, summer, winter; morning, noon, night; youth, manhood, old age; health, sickness, death. O for the land of PERPETUAL NOW—the vigor of eternal youth, and the home where God lives, and fills, and moves, and is seen in everything.

But I must haste to learn when the boat leaves for Sag Harber. Having ascertained the hour, I will return to my room.

Well, what a thoughtless generation this is. The world, the world! farms, merchandise, dollars, cents, trade, traffic, pleasure and politics, are the all absorbing elements that engross the minds of the entire community. Give me money, pleasure, my favorite candidate for President, and I desire no more,—I belong to the meeting house; and all is well. We have a popular preacher and have need of nothing, seems to be the outgushing language of this church-going, and time-serving generation, if we are permitted to judge by their fruits.

Well, we will now walk down to see if the steamer has arrived. After waiting and straining our eyes for something near an hour after the time appointed to leave, she is seen in the distance. O how much better to be found waiting, in readiness, than to neglect the necessary preparation, and in the hurry of the moment to reach the boat, be left behind.

Tis now after four o'clock, and we have some thirty odd miles to travel by water before we reach Sag Harbor. A slow old boat, head wind, and the prospect of a rough trip across the long Island Sound. Quite a number of passengers, but all strangers to me.

It is now six o'clock. We are out to sea and it looks squally in the north-west. We soon reached Plumb-gut, where two seas meet; here it was quite rough. After sailing for about the space of three hours and a half, we reached the port.

Well, here I am. It looks like a storm. It has been raining. It is near eight o'clock. I have fourteen miles yet to travel in order to reach my appointment, and the stage has left. If I attempt to walk that, I shall not be able to preach to-morrow in my enfeebled state of health. O, for my Father's house. If I wait till morning, it will make it late when I get there, and probably some will give up expecting me.

While meditating on the dock with my valise and bundle by my side, an elderly man inquired where I wished to be carried. After informing him I learned the price was $5.00; a pretty round sum. Another person seeing there was a chance for competition, put in his willingness for a much less sum, and I let them settle it the best way they could; but I got conveyed to my destined place where I arrived at twelve o'clock at night, tired and weary, and soon found repose in nature's sweet restorer—balmy sleep.

Well, here I am. The morning begins to dawn. All strangers except one brother who called to see me and invited me to come to this place. I will offer up to God my morning sacrifice. "O Righteous Father, how manifold are thy mercies, they are new every morning; they are borne on the wings of every moment, and at evening they fail not." Turn and read David's song of praise in the CXXXVI Psalm.

The weather is fine. A pleasant breeze is gently rustling among the branches of the trees. Off to the South-west is heard the roar of old ocean. Just across the road from brother Bunns', where I am staying, is a building, used for a meeting and a school-house. I concluded if it was rainy during my stay so that we could not hold our meetings in the grove, we might occupy that. But I soon obtained the fact that this is an age of progression, at least so far as the issuing of bulls is concerned. And now while the thunders of the Vatican, and the bellowing of the bulls from the shorn monster of iniquity at the seven-hilled city has become as harmless as the bleating of a lamb; little, petty, diminutive, would-be popes make all the advancement they can under this age of toleration, to tread in the steps of their illustrious predecessors; and seemingly, in their John-like zeal, would lash the ocean into a tempest to waft a feather, or to drown a fly, if either had been in the atmosphere where the second coming of Christ had been preached. Such is the state of feeling in the minds of some in this place, so I am informed. The mandate has gone forth years since, and to this day it remains like the one in the latter part of the twelfth and fifteenth verses of the sixth chapter of Daniel.

But the time for meeting has arrived, and now we will proceed with elder Lee, who is a resident of this place, to the little grove, where seats are prepared for the accommodation of those that may come to hear the evidences of the speedy return of the Nobleman. But alas! the leaven of sectarian proscription has done the work its author designed, and but few come to hear.

The deacons that belong to the meeting house, who are at strife and will not fellowship each other in their meetings, had taken precaution as they heard I was coming, and had obtained a peace and safety-crier, who administered a quantity of opiates to the sugar-coated pills of old Diabolus they had taken from time to time on previous occasions.

We held these meetings during the day and evening, and endeavored to comfort the few waiting ones with the words of holy Writ.

Monday, we spent in visiting a few families. And I would here state, that the few who are looking for the return of the Just One in this place, are the descendants of the aborigines of Long Island, known in history as the Shinnecock tribe. And I could not but remark on one occasion to brother Lee, as I viewed their patches of corn, potatoes, beans, and different kinds of vegetable and a good soil easy of cultivation, the ocean flowing on each side of the neck of land, affording various kinds of fish,—truly this looks like the original design of Providence; at least, in some respects, for it does not appear to me that God ever designed that man should be pent up in cities.

Tuesday, Sept. 16.—Some of the brethren are now far out on South Hampton beach, endeavoring, with others, to get a vessel off the sand, that was thrown there and her cargo injured some days since. Come, let us take a sail down and see how they succeed.

There she lies, some of her planks started, her cargo transferred to other crafts. They have filled her with empty casks, and dropped an heavy anchor out in the channel, and attached a good strong cable; and now they wait for the tide and a good sea to raise. Then with a good tug at the windlass, and a seamen's hearty "yo heave yo," they expect to clear the beach.

Well, the wind is fair and there is a boat coming. "It looks like our folks," says our pilot.

Yes, it is them; we will about helm and put for shore.

We soon reached the shore in safety, and spent the afternoon in searching the Scriptures. O, precious book!

Old Sol begins to gather his garments of purple and gold around him, and calmly and serenely sinks to rest in an ocean of light, far, far in the west, the dim twilight is settling around, and the hour for meeting approaches.

We had, I trust, a profitable waiting on the Lord. More out this evening than on Sunday.

One day nearer the judgment, tired and weary we laid to rest, beneath the eye of our Guardian who never slumbers nor sleeps. Conscious thanks to Him, now, henceforth, and forever. Amen.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

A Satanic Delusion.

Bro. Grant:—I wish to call the attention of your readers to the [illegible] work of Wm. Ramsey, D. D., published by H. L. Hastings, on Spiritualism, and Spirit-rapping &c.

It is, in my own judgment, [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

A HYMN OF PRAISE.

BY H. P. P.

"Praise ye the Lord."—Ps. cxlix.

Strike your harps ye angel throng,
Heaven's highest arch along!
Earth and sky repeat the words,
"King of Kings and Lord of Lords!"
Pure his Word—His promise pure—
Sanctified they shall endure,
Till the time to Israel sweet,
When the saints with Jesus meet!

Lo! on Zion's brow He stands,
Breaking the Oppressor's bands;
Time and Death are vanquished now,
Humbly in the dust they bow.
View the Builder's "Corner Stone"
Flaming forth amid the Throne,
All his foes beneath his feet,
When the saints with Jesus meet!

Church of God, from dust arise!
Look away to Paradise!
Little flock, thy Shepherd's voice
Bids thee even now rejoice!
Spreading wide the dawn appears—
Mourn no longer! dry thy tears!
Raise thy voice the King to greet,
When the saints with Jesus meet.

Sinner! know, ye strive in vain;
Christ will soon in triumph reign.
He, whose love and power combine,
Teaching words and works divine,
Kindly bids thee fear his wrath,
Bids thee fear the "second death!"
Mercy offers no retreat,
When the saints with Jesus meet.

Praise the Lord, ye hosts, and sing
Pæans to the Victor King!
"Swell the chorus," raise the song,
Praises to our Lord belong;
Let assembled worlds combine,
To celebrate His love divine.
Heaven and Earth his praise repeat,
When the saints with Jesus meet.

Chemung, Ill., Sept. 20.

For the Crisis.

LINES.

BY VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

TUNE—"Wait for the wagon."

"God also hath set thee one over against the other, to the end [that man should find nothing after him."—Eccl. 7: 14.

A little gleam of sunshine
Preceeds a cloud of gloom;
A little halt in trav'ling,
A visit to the tomb.
Our precious casket broken,
We have a jewelled gem;
The tear of parting spoken,
We journey on again.
Then welcome the sunshine,
Bright evanescent;
The dark storm will strengthen—
O bid it welcome too.

A touching strain with fleetness
Is borne along the air,
We haste to drink its sweetness,
So soft, so rich, so rare;
A kindred zephyr floating
Bears on its downy wing
A piercing note of wailing—
Thus constant changes spring.
Then welcome the sunshine, etc.

A poor deformed creature
Presents his palsied hands,
We weep to see him totter,
So helplessly he stands.
A beauteous child is passing
With joyful beating heart—
Thus daily contrasts blending,
Fill up life's chequered chart.
Then welcome the sunshine, etc.

And thus our blessed Father
Will fill the chalice up,
And mingle it with sorrow,
And sweeten it with hope.
He'll rend the strongest cable,
That binds us to this shore;
And as our strength is able,
Perfect us in the fire.
Then welcome the sunshine, etc.

Charlemont, Mass.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Length of the Tarrying Time.

BY JOHN MORRISON.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—Who are now looking for that blessed hope, the appearing of Jesus Christ "the second time without sin unto salvation,"—God speaks to us by the prophets, apostles, and his son Jesus Christ, and by Ezek. 12; that the days would be prolonged, and every vision fail; and that they, "the rebellious house" would use it for a "proverb in the land."

And does he not tell his servants who stand on the watch, and answer their request, by saying to them through the prophet, Hab. 2: 2, "write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it, for the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end (of the appointed time) it shall speak, and not lie; though it tarry, wait for it, because it will surely come, it will not tarry."

Now to know the proper length of the tarrying time, we must go back to the time when the virgins (religious) took their lamps (Bibles) and went forth to meet the Bridegroom; and did not the watchmen give the sound in the year '44, tenth day, seventh month, when all those virgins arose, took their Bibles, went out, and made a separation from the rest of the world in strong faith hoping the Lord would come?

Now was not this the beginning of disappointments, and has it not tarried ever since?

Now, what made the disappointment? was it not in not following God's direction to us by the angel, or man Gabriel, whom God sent to make known the time? Did he not instruct Daniel to begin the 2300 days "from the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem," and that "the wall should be builded in troublous times?" (Dan. 9: 25,) And was not that in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king? (Neh. 2: 1, 4–16.) and was it not our mistake to start from the seventh year of king Artaxerxes, (Ezra 7: 7,) which was thirteen years too soon?

O foolish virgins that we were, to think that we could enter the Kingdom without being tried,—and blessed are those that endure the trial, for when they are "tried" they shall receive the "crown of life," which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.

Our faith has been tried; O may it "be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ:" and then we shall "receive the end of our faith, even the salvation of our souls."

"Cast not away therefore your confidence, which hath great recompence of reward. For ye have need of patience, that after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise. For yet a little while, and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry."

Dear brethren, let us not draw back,—the light is shining brighter and brighter,—nearer to perfect day.

Let us hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ," for He will come the second time, "without sin unto salvation," and reward all them that love His appearing, with a crown of righteousness.

May the writer and the reader be counted worthy to stand before the Son of man, and hear Him saying, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Amen.

New Glasgow, June 5, '56.

For the Crisis

"Interior Life."

BY C. S. BARNES.

BRO. GRANT:—The following, I copy from a work which I have in my possession, entitled "The Interior, or Hidden Life," by Thomas C. Upham, published in 1844, which I thought might interest some of the readers of the Crisis, who are looking at the relation of consecration to assurance of faith. C. S. B.

"In respect to the nature of assurance of faith, we may remark here, after an examination of various statements and illustrations on the subject, that it appears to consist essentially in two things:—

First, in a general but unwavering confidence in God's character, administration, and promises.

Secondly, in a confident belief of our personal acceptance with God through Christ: and accordingly it is not limited to the second particular, as some persons may suppose, but the second element: viz., that of a particular or personal acceptance. which probably, in the popular view of it, is the striking or characteristic trait, has its basis in a prevailing or assured faith of a more general character.

With these remarks I enter upon the principal topic of this article, viz; the relation existing between consecration and assurance.

Faith, (especially that faith which is appropriating and purifying) and the commission of known sin cannot go together. They are antagonistical and destructive of each other.

Just so far as consecration which implies a fixed determination with divine assistance to resist sin in all its forms, actually exists, and no farther, is the way open for the principle of faith, especially in its appropriating character, to enter and to take effect in the soul. The Savior himself has explicitly taught us, (John 5: 44) that those who, in the spirit of self-seeking, pursue worldly honor, and not the honor which cometh from God only, are unable, in the religious sense of the expression, to believe.

1. But proceeding from the more general view of the subject to the particular and specific one now under consideration, we remark in the first place,—that assurance of faith, like all other forms of religious faith, considered in distinction from natural faith, is the gift of God.

No one has it without the Divine blessing. But here, as in every other case of God's dealings, we see no other course but to take the position as almost a self-evident one, that there are reasons in the Divine mind for every occurrence or fact, and also for every modification of the Divine conduct; and that God, in imparting the immense blessing of assurance of faith, does not, and cannot act accidentally; in other words, there is some antecedent fact, some preparatory condition, in connection with which this great blessing takes place; not a meritorious condition, it is true; nothing which lays God under obligation; but still a preparatory antecedent or condition actually existing in the view of the divine mind, and as an indispensable part of the divine arrangement, and that condition, as the matter presents itself to our view, is consecration. Not a consecration in part, but in whole; a solemn and a permanent giving up of the whole being to God.

If with any inferior degree of consecration there may be an inferior degree of faith, there cannot be a perfection or assurance of faith, without a consecration corresponding to it, both of body and spirit; both of ourselves and our possessions, entire, permanent, and irrevocable."

(Continued.)

For the Crisis.

The Coming of the Lord.

BY ZETA.

"But of that day and hour knoweth no man." Matt. 24: 36. Mark 13: 32.

The signs which were to foretell the coming of the Lord, are doubtless now all in the past. The great injunction of the Savior applicable to the present time, is, "Take ye heed, watch and pray." "Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." Mark 13: 33.—Matt. 24: 42.

The Saviour's approach to judge the world is evidently very near. The signs, those faithful monitors which bade us "look up and lift up our heads," are now no longer looked for, but we look for the immediate appearing of the Lord.

I sincerely believe that the signs of the times predicted by the prophets and apostles, and now beheld in the fulfillment of prophecy, are sufficient to convince the candid enquirer after truth; that "the Lord is at hand," "even at the door" and that "in a little while he that shall come, will come and will not tarry."

The candid inquiry of the faithful waiting ones may be,—"Why may we not know or why knoweth no man of that day and that hour?"

The most plausible, and scriptural reason that I can assert, aside from the plain declaration of our text, is, by reference to the little season mentioned in the 20th of Revelations 3rd verse, contrasting and harmonizing it with the great type and antitype of the earth's existence. The type—seven days. The antitype—seven millenial days, or 7,000 years. Arising from this consideration, and in order to have the subject more plainly understood, there are some prominent, leading questions, necessary to be proposed.

1. Does this little season come within the 7,000 years of time, or beyond it, in eternity?

2. If in time, where must it be disposed of, in point of location in order to a perfect fulfillment of type and antitype?

3. May not Christ appear a little season previous to the commencement of the seventh millennium, making room for the little season, mentioned in the 20th of Revelation to occur within the 7,000 years of time, and yet reign a thousand years with his saints, on the earth, in perfect peace, undisturbed by Satan, or his deception on the nations?

If I cannot surmount these questions by solution, I shall rightfully expect that some of our brethren of the Crisis will aid me in doing so, through their worthy paper.

But I proceed by a few remarks to notice these questions conjunctively.

I readily embrace the position that the little season occurs, within, and near to, or at the closing up of time. If this position be correct, then of necessity, Christ must appear a little season prior to the commencement of the seventh millennium, and set up his reign. Otherwise should he begin his reign at the commencement of the seventh millennium, there would be confusion and disorder, occurring from the loosing of Satan and his assaults upon the nations to deceive them, and to make war among them.

We have no rule by which to measure this little season, hence the failure of the prophetic periods, and the apparent incorrectness of chronological reckonings.

I make no distinction between the thousand years of Satan's being bound, and that of Christ reigning on the earth. As narrated by the Revelator, they might appear to come in succession, but as located in point of time, they appear to be the same; for the dead are judged at the expiration of both: that is, the wicked dead, or nations which will be deceived by Satan when they rise from their sleeping dust.

Again, I do make a distinction between the thousand years termed the seventh millennium, for it appears that Christ's reign will begin a little season prior to the commencement of the seventh, then there will be a fulfillment in the type and antitype in regard to the whole week, and for proof that the reign of Christ and the binding of Satan will occur at the same time read in connection the 6th and 7th verses of the 20th of Revelations.

Yours, waiting for the Lord,

ZETA.

For the Crisis.

The Promise and the Heirs of Promise.

BY B. MATTHIAS.

There is a great deal of vagueness in religious belief, much that is uncertain and unfounded.

The sects have taken for granted almost all they believe, and are most confident in their dogmas. Natural immortality—the passage of the righteous to heaven, and of the wicked to torment, at death, with them is most true—not even to be discussed.

A temporal millenium, and the world's conversion are equally important and orthodox; also that the carnal Jews have a promise of restoration to their fatherland.

There is yet another class that do not give them any promise of this inheritance, neither themselves or anybody else. These are they who think the kingdom of heaven will be everywhere in general, and nowhere in particular.

Suppose in this state of the case we refer the question to the Scriptures for settlement.

THE PROMISE.

What was promised? That men should go to heaven at death?

We shall see.

The promise of which we speak, was first made by God, to Abram.

True faith is persuasion of its truthfulness and literality, and a hearty embracing of it, like the patriarchs of old.

This same promise was repeated unto Israel, and confirmed unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant, "saying, unto thee will I give the land of Canaan the lot of your inheritance." Ps. 105: 11.

Abram was called from his kindred and his father's house, unto a land which he should after inherit. God said unto him; "Unto thy seed will I give this land." Gen. 12: 7.

Again, the second time the Lord met him, and said, "Lift up now thine eyes and look from the place where thou art, Westward, Southward, Eastward, Northward; for all the land which thou seest to thee will I give it and to thy seed for ever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth, so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered. Arise; walk through the land in the length of it, and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee." Gen. 13: 14–17.

This is not enough; it must be made more sure.

Abram enquired, "Lord God, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit this land?"

At the Divine command, he prepared a sacrifice; and watched it till the sun went down, when it was miraculously accepted. On the same day the Lord made a covenant with Abraham,—"Saying, unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates." Gen. 15: 18.

But this is not enough. The promise must not be misunderstood. It is not only to this man, but for a thousand generations, and to certain of all nations. "As for me, behold my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations; neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee. And I will establish my covenant between thee and me, and thy seed after thee in their generations, for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee. And I will give unto thee and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God." Gen. 17: 4–8.

HIS OATH UNTO ISRAEL.

"Sojourn in this land and I will bless thee; for unto thee and unto thy seed I give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham, thy father." Gen. 26: 3–4.

"And confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant. That thou mayest inherit the land wherein thou art a stranger which God gave unto Abraham."

After this benediction from Isaac, Jacob left his father's house and went to Padan-aram. In his way he had a vision of a ladder reaching from earth to heaven; and the angels of God ascending and descending upon it. "And, behold the Lord stood upon it, and said, I am the Lord God of Abraham, and Isaac: the land where thou liest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed. And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the West and to the East, to the North and to the South, and in thee, and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. And behold I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land; for I will not leave thee until I have done that which I have spoken." Gen. 28: 13–15.

This promise could not have been fulfilled in the history and experience of the three patriarchs, all of whom were strangers in the land. Nor of the twelve, for they went down into Egypt in the lifetime of Israel. Here they remained four hundred years, fulfilling the prediction to Abraham, that his seed should be in bondage to strangers.

"Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them, and they shall afflict them four hundred years. Afterwards shall they come out with great substance."

This promise was not fulfilled after their coming out of Egypt, in the temporary possession of the land by this family. If this were all, the promise failed, as far as the patriarchs are concerned. The promise is "unto thee and thy seed." The apostle's comment is,—"to thy seed which is CHRIST." Gal. 3: 16.

They expected the promised inheritance after the resurrection. This was Joseph's hope when he gave commandment concerning his bones, expecting to live in the land of promise by the resurrection.

But we have not done with the promise; it is repeated unto Jacob. The Lord met him when going, and when returning from Padan-aram. "Thy name is Jacob; thy name shall not be called any more Jacob, but Israel shall be thy name. And they called his name Israel!"

"And God said unto him, I am God Almighty; be fruitful, and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins; and the land which I gave Abraham and Isaac, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed after thee will I give the land." Gen. 35: 10–12.

The land where these patriarchs sojourned is the inheritance promised. Then, certainly, our Protestant relations are mistaken when they talk of going up to heaven for the promised inheritance, or expect the reward at death.

The gospels and epistles agree with the prophets in this matter without a shade of difference: all agree that when Christ comes, he will enter upon the glorious reign in his kingdom.

The patriarchs expected when sojourning in Canaan, that they would have a city of foundations, built by the Lord.

This item is named to show that they did not count on any stability in worldly institutions; hence they would trust none, dwelling in tents. So they went from one nation to another, from one kingdom to another people, and God reproved kings for their sakes; saying, "touch not mine anointed and do my prophets no harm." But their faith is commended, because they believed in an immovable kingdom to come.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. L. M. Collins.

BRN. AND SRS.:—I have felt for a long time that all was not right, but feared to speak my mind lest I might offend some one. I have prayed over the matter, but found I had got to do something besides pray in order to have my prayers answered. I have a duty to do, as a member of the family, to the household.

Besides, "he that knoweth his Master's will and doeth it not, shall be beaten with many stripes." I have so often neglected to do duty, that I fear the consequences. I have come to the conclusion that I will ask of God, and in the name of Jesus, do as he bids me.

I have said that all was not right. I say so still. I look around me and an awful picture meets my eye. The mass of professed christians have become popular. It was not so in the apostle's day, neither was it in John Wesley's. Christians then were known by their dress, as well as by their daily walk and conversation. Would to God that it were so now; but it is quite the reverse. A large majority of those professing godliness are growing more and more popular every day; they do not consider the velocity with which the wheels of time are rolling them along, nor how soon their popularity will end in destruction. I feel at times as though I could weep over them, as my blessed Master did over Jerusalem.

Popularity is not the only thing that is wrong, it is only one among many evils. There is hatred, malice, envy, strife, covetousness, backbiting, and many other things that might be named; all within the pale of the church; and I may say within the Advent ranks, too.

Brethren and sisters, shall this be so? While I have looked over the picture which has so often presented itself, I have felt sad. In my fancy, a response comes back from you which cheers my almost bursting heart, saying it shall not be so.

Then let us at once arise, and come up on the platform, throwing aside all party spirit and sectarianism of every kind, and wherever we can see the image of our Master stamped upon the character of an individual, let us esteem that person our brother or our sister.

Again, I am cheered when I look into the Word and find that there is to be a class when the Lord comes that will be "purified, and made white, and tried." This is the way the Lord prepares his people.

There will be no contention in the little church when He comes. It will stand out pure and holy, without "spot or wrinkle" Truly, it will be a "bride adorned for her husband."

Some things ought to be considered, and if not, may prove our ruin. We must live in peace avoiding all contention.

Brother, have you a wife? Sister, have you a husband? If so, have no contention. The Lord when He comes will not wait for you to settle difficulties. If you are not ready, "the door will be shut and you yourselves thrust out."

Think of these things. Many have engaged in hard words, and angry looks, and the result has been the family altar has been neglected.

Does this look right?

Certainly not.

Let us each, dear brethren and sisters, take the subject home to our hearts,—let us each ask,—am I right? Do I not indulge in some known sin?

If we find that we do, let us repent heartily before the Lord. We may have an occasion to correct our children; let us do it in love then, not in anger, for this would not be right. Can we punish our children for anger, when we ourselves get angry? this would not be Christlike.

O for a religion which will enable us to do right; and we must have it in order to be saved when Christ comes.

Yours, with the expectation of soon seeing Jesus in the clouds of heaven,

LYDIA M. COLLINS.

Bath, N. H., July 20, 1856.

As rivers and fountains proceed from the sea, and return thither again, so true grace in the heart, as a fountain, sends forth all its streams towards God, the ocean from whence it flowed.

Kind words are among the brightest flowers of earth; they convert the humblest home into a paradise; therefore use them, especially around the fireside circle!

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

[illegible] BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1856. WHOLE NO. 131. VOL. IV. NO. 7.

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months - - - -	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months - - - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months -	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months -	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Be Kind.

BY H. L. H.

Yes, yes, be kind; don't feel so full of vinegar and gravel. Don't look so everlastingly on others' faults.

Total depravity may do well enough for an opinion provided you recollect that you are as bad as any one else, but self-righteousness for you and depravity for others, is rather a poor arrangement, I apprehend.

There, don't scold so. Your wife isn't so much worse than every other one; your children are not just the ugliest under heaven (and if they are, who is to blame but you?); your tenants are not the most dishonest, nor your servants the laziest, nor your house the leakiest, nor your chimney the smokiest of all others under the heavens of the Lord. Your neighbors are not the most disobliging, nor their dogs the most yelping little curs in the world, —at least they were not, till you scolded the neighbors and stoned the dogs.

Come, come, don't be so ugly. The sun shines just as bright on your field as on your neighbor's. Your cows do give sweet milk, even tho' your scowl is sour enough to curdle it.

The rain falls, the grass springs up, the harvest matures, the fruits ripen on your fields as much as cn anybody's, even tho' you stand scowling enough to out-scowl a north-wester, and growling enough to out-growl a thunder tempest.

Really, God does dare to bless you, even though you seem inclined to curse every one else about you.

Come now, why not try to be a decent man?

There! what did you kick that cat for? —Why need you scold that child, so like a snarling cur?

"Tries your patience?"—you haven't much patience to try.

Now try to be a man. Love your wife, speak kindly to her, poor woman, and brighten her weary pathway through the world. Take up that little boy on your knee—quite a fine fellow if he does look a very little like his father,—he may act like him sometime if you don't behave more like a man in his presence.

Love that little trembling girl that's been crying behind the door ever since you scolded her so about that little hole she tore in her apron.

Put your arms round her neck. Kiss her—don't be so shy of your own flesh and blood: you may learn her to love her father yet, though she'll be a little timid for a while, but you persevere and these little slinking plagues of your life will expand into comely children, and will call you father with an unction that you never knew or dreamed of.

Try it. Be kind. Love your neighbors, speak kindly to their children, don't insult their dogs and cats, treat your workmen like men—hunt all over your premises and find some solitary thing that's done right, and say so.

Learn to praise as well as blame. You have scowled long enough—learn to smile: you have sinned long enough—learn to pray.

Go into your closet and recall that prayer that you learned from your mother's lips before the world had seared your heart; bring up the treasured memories of other days—the gray hairs that are pillowed 'neath the clods—the eyes that are dimmed beneath the shades of death,—come, pray—"Forgive us our sins as we forgive those that trespass against us."

God will hear your prayers—you may have a heart of flesh yet. Come, lead your family to Christ—set before them the examples of meekness, and patience, and love.

Try, and you may yet stand an unbroken circle on Zion's heights.

Now try. Be kind, be patient, be faithful to the end.

God bless you, and save you evermore. Amen.

For the Crisis.

Realities.

BY MARY A. GRANT.

It is a saddening reality that all of earth soon passes and is no more. Nature, earth-wide, presents but an autumn landscape—varied and fading. There are flowers, but they wither at unfriendliness. There are creations of art and power almost divine, but the revolutions of ages leave them crumbling, and in ruins. There are joys for man growing out of present associations and endearing ties, but they are evanescent as the summer cloud. There are buds of beauty, and blossoms of sweetness, which cluster in our bowers of love, but their blooming is but for a season. The spoiler crushes them, and they lie withered now in our own home-haunts. Earth has its hopes, but they decay; it has its ambition—but its acme is seldom gained, and if ever, it is through toil and struggling, and at last with a mingling of disappointment.

It needeth not to be said that all of earth is vanity—"vanity of vanities, all is vanity"—for every heart, worldly or christian, feels and would testify to its truthfulness.

Where is the heart that has not felt it? Where the favored one whose heart-strings have not been at some time rudely swept or broken, or are not now quivering with the burden of their own, or others' woe? Say, in the wide world is there one whose heart has been untouched by grief—destitute of compassion for lack of objects to call forth its bestowal?

Nay, such there may not be. The reality of woe, suffering, change, and passing away, knows but the ends of the earth as its bounds.

It is a reality that the present existence of things, of corruptness and sorrow, is not to be perpetual. It is impossible, in the nature of all around us. There must be a change. Earth will soon have wrought its own ruin. Man will soon have attained to the height both of ingenuity and im morality. The crisis must ensue: and this is a reality.

In the wisdom of Him who seeth the end from the beginning, results succeed causes, which, while they subserve the present interest and selfishness of man, tend to the bringing about of the great drama, ere long to be enacted before the assembled world. As it is a fact that strife and anarchy burn in the heart of the nations, so true is it that their "wickedness shall come to a perpetual end; and the righteous shall be established in the earth." Oppression shall not brood over the fairest portions of our world, pestilence shall not for aye stalk through the land, treading upon its millions slain; misery and deformity shall not always cast their uncouth shadows on their native earth; these must end for God hath spoken it.

It is a reality that the Day of Doom is hastening on with accelerated speed. Days, weeks, months, years, fleet away; and but too surely wing us to the hour of all mankind's eternal destiny. "It hasteth greatly." The fiat of Jehovah has gone forth, and at the sounding of the seventh angel, the "great voice" from out the throne in Heaven shall be heard saying,—"it is done."—"The mystery of God is finished." The signs indicative of His near approach are left, plainly inscribed for our understanding, by our blessed Lord. His love anticipated the necessities of his people down here, at the close of time; therefore, we find for our comfort,—"When ye see these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." "Behold the fig tree and all the trees; when they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye he kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

Earth, air, and sea; society, in its moral, social, and political phases; declension of vital piety and devotion to God, and the waning of that love of which the gospel speaks so much;—all declare but too plainly for the sinner, that the day of retribution is casting its shadows o'er the land. This, too, is a solemn reality. And while the contemplation of it brings terror and consternation to the unrighteous soul; to the trusting disciple of faith, it gives occasion for rejoicing and delight. The believer "hasteth unto the coming of the day of God; but the world-seeker puts it far away. "The night is far spent; the day is at hand."

Then look up, Zion's pilprim, thy dusty garb will ere long be exchanged for the raiment of Heaven, and thy weary feet will soon pass the verdant banks of the living stream which gushes from beneath the throne. Then cheer thee—the Day-star beams no more afar.

It is a reality, that all the promises our God, and his dear Son have made and left for us, in the future, will have their literal accomplishment. And how abundant are those promises! They gild with heavenly brightness every page of Scripture truth. And how many a child of suffering, has been led to exclaim with the singer of Israel,—"Unless thy law had been my delight, I should then have perished in my affliction." Blessed be the Lord. "As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even forever." His people are unto him as the apple of his eye; and by all his dealings with them in this present state, and by what he is preparing for them in the world to come, an infinite interest is manifest.

Who can peruse such promises as the following, without that burning of soul, that intense desire, of which the Psalmist speaks? What devoted heart longs and prays not for their accomplishment, and that speedily?—

"Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of Hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and before his ancients gloriously. * * * * And in this mountain shall the Lord of Hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines upon the lees, of fat things well refined. And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away all tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth; for the Lord God hath spoken it." "In that day shall the Lord of Hosts be for a crown of glory, and for a diadem of beauty, unto the residue of his people." "Look upon Zion the city of our solemnities: thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down; not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed, neither shall any the cords thereof be broken. But there the glorious Lord will be unto us a place of broad rivers and streams; wherein shall go no galley with oars, neither shall gallant ships pass thereby. For the Lord is our Judge, the Lord is our Law-giver, the Lord is our King; he will save us." Blessed be his name forever!

What christian can read the thirty-fifth of Isaiah, and portions of the sixtieth and sixty-fifth chapters—with many kindred ones—with other than an overflowing heart? Read them ye fainting, weary ones, and refresh your worn spirit yet again.

"He that overcometh the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life; but I will confess his name before my Father and the holy angels." "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God." "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne; even as I have overcome and am set down with my Father in his throne." And these, the overcomers, shall "sing a new song;" and the voice of it will be like the "voice of many waters," and as the "voice of mighty thundering" rolling through the concave of Heaven;—"Alleluia! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth! Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come."

Reader, these are realities. Christian, they are for you; will you endure, and obtain them? Sinner, they may be yours to enjoy; will you submit to Christ that you may inherit them? Remember, these sayings which have been quoted, are true and faithful. Embrace them with Jesus, and the glory of which they speak shall be your inheritance forever.

Boston, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Different Kinds of Preaching.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

Some men preach like thunder. They make a tremendous noise of rattling, roaring, and bellowing, but it does not amount to much, only to frighten and disgust.

Some preach like lightning. They burn, scath, kill, dazzle, frighten, and electrify, but they produce no rain, and do not refresh.

Some preach like earthquakes. They shake, rend, demolish, upheave, and desolate; but they do not build up, or gather together, or regenerate.

Some preach like showers of rain, without wind, hail, lightning, thunder, or any thing else that startles or awakens. They are the everlasting sons of unvarying consolation. They seldom touch the sleeping conscience of the daring sinner.

Multitudes are under them consoled and comforted, that should be made to tremble under a sense of their guilt.

Some men preach like thunder, lightning, hail, rain, wind, earthquakes, and dews.

They, by the blessing of God, alarm, awaken, convict, burn, scath, refresh, build up, gather, settle, confirm, and help.

God fill us with the Holy Spirit, and make us, what we should be, thine own ministers.

For the Crisis.

Incidents by the Way.

No. II.

BY S. S. BREWER.

Saturday, Sept. 13.—The weather is lovely. Now for a walk in the forest. Nature begins to change her garb. A few days since and all appeared green and vigorous. Old Sol shed down his rays and vegetation steadily pressed on to its meridian. Alas, it is gone, and now the fields that a few days since presented their broad surface with a beautiful green carpet, present a mournful appearance to a contemplative mind.

The harvest is past. The trees begin to doff their raiment of changeable apparel. The yellow, brown, red, crimson, russet, and all the variegated colors and tints, with the prismatic beauties of the rainbow appear. The winds of autumn begin to sigh in mournful melody through the grove, and cold winter is fast treading on its heels, and soon like an angel of death, he will breathe upon the fading beauties that yet linger around us as mementos of the past, and strew them dry and withered to the ground. O what a land of changes. Spring, summer, winter; morning, noon, night; youth, manhood, old age; health, sickness, death. O for the land of PERPETUAL NOW—the vigor of eternal youth, and the home where God lives, and fills, and moves, and is seen in everything.

But I must haste to learn when the boat leaves for Sag Harber. Having ascertained the hour, I will return to my room.

Well, what a thoughtless generation this is. The world, the world! farms, merchandise, dollars, cents, trade, traffic, pleasure and politics, are the all absorbing elements that engross the minds of the entire community. Give me money, pleasure, my favorite candidate for President, and I desire no more,—I belong to the meeting house; and all is well. We have a popular preacher and have need of nothing, seems to be the outgushing language of this church-going, and time-serving generation, if we are permitted to judge by their fruits.

Well, we will now walk down to see if the steamer has arrived. After waiting and straining our eyes for something near an hour after the time appointed to leave, she is seen in the distance. O how much better to be found waiting, in readiness, than to neglect the necessary preparation, and in the hurry of the moment to reach the boat, be left behind.

Tis now after four o'clock, and we have some thirty odd miles to travel by water before we reach Sag Harbor. A slow old boat, head wind, and the prospect of a rough trip across the long Island Sound. Quite a number of passengers, but all strangers to me.

It is now six o'clock. We are out to sea and it looks squally in the north-west. We soon reached Plumb-gut, where two seas meet; here it was quite rough. After sailing for about the space of three hours and a half, we reached the port.

Well, here I am. It looks like a storm. It has been raining. It is near eight o'clock. I have fourteen miles yet to travel in order to reach my appointment, and the stage has left. If I attempt to walk that, I shall not be able to preach to-morrow in my enfeebled state of health. O, for my Father's house. If I wait till morning, it will make it late when I get there, and probably some will give up expecting me.

While meditating on the dock with my valise and bundle by my side, an elderly man inquired where I wished to be carried. After informing him I learned the price was $5.00; a pretty round sum. Another person seeing there was a chance for competition, put in his willingness for a much less sum, and I let them settle it the best way they could; but I got conveyed to my destined place where I arrived at twelve o'clock at night, tired and weary, and soon found repose in nature's sweet restorer—balmy sleep.

Well, here I am. The morning begins to dawn. All strangers except one brother who called to see me and invited me to come to this place. I will offer up to God my morning sacrifice. "O Righteous Father, how manifold are thy mercies, they are new every morning; they are borne on the wings of every moment, and at evening they fail not." Turn and read David's song of praise in the CXXXVI Psalm.

The weather is fine. A pleasant breeze is gently rustling among the branches of the trees. Off to the South-west is heard the roar of old ocean. Just across the road from brother Bunns', where I am staying, is a building used for a meeting and a school-house. I concluded if it was rainy during my stay so that we could not hold our meetings in the grove, we might occupy that. But I soon obtained the fact that this is an age of progression, at least so far as the issuing of bulls is concerned. And now while the thunders of the Vatican, and the bellowing of the bulls from the shorn monster of iniquity at the seven-hilled city has become as harmless as the bleating of a lamb; little, petty, diminutive, would-be Popes make all the advancement they can under this age of toleration, to tread in the steps of their illustrious predecessors; and seemingly, in their Jehu like zeal, would lash the ocean into a tempest to waft a feather, or to drown a fly, if either had been in the atmosphere where the second coming of Christ had been preached. Such is the state of feeling in the minds of some in this place, so I am informed. The mandate has gone forth years since, and to this day it remains like the one in the latter part of the twelfth and fifteenth verses of the sixth chapter of Daniel.

But the time for meeting has arrived, and now we will proceed with elder Lee, who is a resident of this place, to the little grove, where seats are prepared for the accommodation of those that may come to hear the evidences of the speedy return of the Nobleman. But alas! the leaven of sectarian proscription has done the work its author designed, and but few come to hear.

The deacons that belong to the meeting house, who are at strife and will not fellowship each other in their meetings, had taken precaution as they heard I was coming, and had obtained a peace and safety-crier, who administered a quantity of opiates to the sugar-coated pills of old Diabolus they had taken from time to time on previous occasions.

We held these meetings during the day and evening, and endeavored to comfort the few waiting ones with the words of holy Writ.

Monday, we spent in visiting a few families. And I would here state, that the few who are looking for the return of the Just One in this place, are the descendants of the aborigines of Long Island, known in history as the Shinnecock tribe. And I could not but remark on one occasion to brother Lee, as I viewed their patches of corn, potatoes, beans, and different kinds of vegetable and a good soil easy of cultivation, the ocean flowing on each side of the neck of land, affording various kinds of fish,—truly this looks like the original design of Providence; at least, in some respects, for it does not appear to me that God ever designed that man should be pent up in cities.

Tuesday, Sept. 16.—Some of the brethren are now far out on South Hampton beach, endeavoring, with others, to get a vessel off the sand, that was thrown there and her cargo injured some days since. Come, let us take a sail down and see how they succeed.

There she lies, some of her planks started, her cargo transferred to other crafts. They have filled her with empty casks, and dropped an heavy anchor out in the channel, and attached a good strong cable; and now they wait for the tide and a good sea to raise. Then with a good tug at the windlass, and a seamen's hearty "yo heave yo," they expect to clear the beach.

Well, the wind is fair and there is a boat coming. "It looks like our folks," says our pilot.

Yes, it is them; we will about helm and put for shore.

We soon reached the shore in safety, and spent the afternoon in searching the Scriptures. O, precious book!

Old Sol begins to gather his garments of purple and gold around him, and calmly and serenely sinks to rest in an ocean of light, far, far in the west, the dim twilight is settling around, and the hour for meeting approaches.

We had, I trust, a profitable waiting on the Lord. More out this evening than on Sunday.

One day nearer the judgment, tired and weary we laid to rest, beneath the "eye" of our Guardian who never slumbers nor sleeps. Ceaseless thanks to Him, now, henceforth, and forever. Amen.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

A Satanic Delusion.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to call the attention of your readers to the [illegible] work of Wm. Ramsey, D. D., published by H. L. Hastings, on Spiritualism, and Spirit-rapping, &c.

It is in my [illegible]

and his angels which I have ever seen, giving a scriptural account of their power and workings, with a truthful expose of their modern manifestations.

Several other works which I have seen, attempting to expose the Spirit-rapping system, are so wanting in logic, or wrong in premise, as to do much to help forward the delusions; some attributing the phenomena to natural principles, which others know cannot produce the miracles which are produced; others, granting that they are the works of dead wicked men's spirits, neither of which can bring an argument founded on Bible evidence in support of their theories.

The above work is free from such charges, and its arguments are sustained by Bible testimony, and other good evidence, that ancient and modern spiritualism, is the work of demons, directed by Diabolos, and that demons are not the spirits of dead men.

Many of our brethren may not need this book for themselves, yet they may do much good by circulating it among others.

I. C. Wellcome.

Hallowell, Sept. 27, '56.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 15, 1856.

Questions.

Further answers to the questions of our Sister in Christ.

No. IX.

"If he set his heart upon man; if he gather to himself his spirit, and his breath, all flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again to dust." Job 34: 14—15.

Ques. "Is the spirit of man and his breath the same thing?"

Ans. The word rendered spirit in ver. 14 is from ruakh, the same word as in Eccl. 3: 19 where it is declared that man and beast "have all one breath"—(ruakh).

The word rendered breath in ver. 14 is n'-shah-mah, which is the same word employed in Gen. 2: 7, where it is said when speaking of the creation of man—"and the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath (n'-shah-mah) of life, and man became a living soul."

This word is translated both breath and spirit.

The same word is found in Isa. 2: 22—"Cease ye from man whose breath (n'-shah-mah) is in his nostrils."

In Gen. 7: 21—22, where we have an account of the flood, and the record of the death of men and animals, it is said,—"And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man; all in whose nostrils was the breath (n'-shah-mah) of life, of all that was in the dry land died."

This scripture shows us plainly that the breath (n'-shah-mah) is common to both man and beast, as Solomon declares in Eccl. 3: 19.

The 15th verse of Job 34 declares that, if the spirit be gathered unto God, "all flesh shall perish together and man shall turn again to dust."

We see from this scripture that man, at death, re-turns to dust instead of heaven. The spirit—breath of life, "returns to God who gave it."

This does not teach that the spirit is the man, for we have found it is common to both man and beast.

This harmonizes perfectly with Ps. 104: 29. "Thou takest away their breath, they die and return to their dust."

In concluding our answer to the foregoing question, we would say, that we understand that breath and spirit are used to represent the same thing.

X.

"The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord." Prov. 20: 27.

Ques. "We know that the lamp of the wicked will be put out;" but will the candle of the Lord ever be extinguished?

Ans.—In the text quoted, the spirit is called a candle; ie., as a room in a dark night is illuminated by a candle, so the spirit of man illuminates his system, or in other words, it sets the whole human machinery in motion, so that he hears with his ears, sees with his eyes, and the man manifests himself by the aid of the spirit in him, as a candle by its light makes the objects in a room known to the observer.

When this spirit or breath is taken from a man, as David says, "in that very day his thoughts or purposes perish."

When the spirit returns, the man is illuminated again and opens his eyes to behold the surrounding objects.

If by the question—"will the candle of the Lord ever be extinguished," is meant, will it ever be annihilated from the world, we answer, certainly not: for men now dead are to live again and possess this spirit or breath.

XI.

"Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return to God who gave it." Eccl. 12: 7.

Ques. Is the spirit that returns to God "the candle of the Lord?"

Ans. We think it is; as it has been shown that the spirit is called "the candle of the Lord."

An Appeal to My Brethren.

Dearly Beloved in the Lord:—I wish to settle up my book accounts and pay some borrowed money I owe; and I now make the following proposition to those owing me for books. If you will deduct ten per cent from the wholesale price for all you have on hand now unsold and forward the amount of what you have sold to me, you will do me a very great favor. Brethren help me in this matter.

Address—S. S. Brewer, No. 54 Wilson st., Providence, R. I.

A SPECIAL APPEAL.

Do read this appeal and heed it. I wish to publish another edition of my "Gospel Vindicator," (a work of 187 pages,) for gratuitous distribution in Minnesota. It will cost comparatively but little to do it, as it is already stereotyped. It is just the work needed to follow up the "Key of Truth," as it removes the many objections to our faith. How much will you now pledge for this object, to be paid January 1st 1857?

Send your pledges to the Crisis immediately, that I may arrange accordingly. Who will pledge $1, $5, or $10?

Remember that this is missionary ground, and God has a claim upon your dollars!

Friends, you must help. Do not refuse.—If more than enough should be pledged, it will be used to issue the fifth edition of the "Key of truth." "Let us not be weary in well doing." W. Sheldun.

Vermillion, Dakota Co., Minnesota.

For the Crisis.

Letters to a Friend.

BY F. T. SARGEANT.

No. II.

My Dear Sister:—I again take my pen to address to you a few lines. I am glad to know that your desire is, to be free from the bondage of sin, and to stand in all the fullness of the Gospel of Christ; to 'fight the good fight of faith."

You say, "O for one grasp of the living faith of which you write! O for the love and peace I once enjoyed."

You seem to understand your duty, and what the Gospel requires for salvation, yet are almost ready to despair.

Ah, we need all of the Gospel armor, to stand in this "grand and awful time." We need holiness of heart, which is the marrow of the Gospel, to know our Redeemer lives; to know we have the witness of the Spirit and that our ways please God.

Then we are, and then only, in a place to grow in grace daily. We must serve the Lord wholly. This half, up and down, changing, not knowing whether we love or serve God, is no faith or religion that will admit us to the kingdom.

If we are ready for the resurrection, be pure, holy, in this life. Jesus Christ says, "He that doeth the will of God," (not the one who hears and knows, merely) will obtain the blessing.

Your frequent use of the word "but" seems to be a sort of turn, by which you excuse yourself.

Such expressions as,—"I could go to meeting, but,—." If I knew they had the truth, but—." "If they were honest, but —." If I could read their hearts, but—." "If I could have such meetings as we had in '54, where they were all united, but now so many opinions, so much contention, and those in whom I had the utmost confidence, have proved themselves dishonest,—but" &c. You feel more like living a hermitage life, not go to meeting—serve the Lord at home. Well sister, I have been through this trial, if trial you call it, and it has done me good.

Now settle this by the Word, and if your conscience will remain quiet, and you can serve God and be happy at home, do thus; but, remember if you are excusable all are.

If all would go to meeting with the Spirit, there would be no unholy contention; we might have different opinions, and we might perhaps be corrected.

We are commanded to "contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints," which faith, is the coming of Jesus, to give the saints their inheritance in the promised land.

Now all that have this faith, and love the appearing of Jesus, so far they are agreed; and other opinions and ideas should not, will not separate, but having the spirit they will come to the knowledge of the truth, by letting their light shine; all will be edified and God glorified. The great thing is to be humble, contrite, and to keep so.

Dear sister, I apprehend your difficulty, like many others, is your looking too much to others, instead of God; measuring ourselves by others is not wisdom. We must here in this time of famine, cling to the Rock and stand on the Word and let the winds blow, our house will stand. We must live for ourselves and have vital union to Christ.

The Advent body as a people, are in a similar condition to the children of Israel after passing the Red Sea. Confusion reigns: murmuring and complaining of this and that: but we need all to humble ourselves and "believe God;" for while man has done many things wrong, God has been with us, and blest what was of truth. The track to the kingdom is here; truth is here: and we must step on the Rock and look ahead, and we shall see by the chart that the old ship Zion is almost into harbor.

If professed christians would individually get ready for the coming of Jesus; having the spirit they could labor for and with each other, and we should see a union which would be according to the gospel, cemented by love. The union and fellowship that the preaching of time produced we see now tested, which has developed character as perhaps nothing else could; and our character is the test by which the saints are to be known. The good tree and bad illustrates it.

Now we are to get ready and be ready, waiting and watching for our Master. Time, will not be the garment, but it will be the pure spotless robe of holiness of heart, without which we never can see the kingdom.

Dear sister, once more I entreat you as for life or death, to leave all for Christ, cost what it may, and once more consecrate yourself a living sacrifice upon the altar, and by faith claim the promise. Thanks be to God, the Christian has an altar. Dr. Clarke says:

"The Christian's altar is the christian's sacrifice, which is Jesus Christ with all the benefits of his passion and death."

O there is something tangible in the religion of Jesus. We can be assured of our acceptance. We can abide in Christ. We can possess vital union with Him, by which we can live and thrive, although adverse winds blow and storms gather, friends prove false, and all manner of evil is spoken of us falsely for Christ's sake.

We are living in a time that, unless we abide in the vine and draw our nourishment from the fountain, we shall wither and die.

In speaking of this vital union, both Christ and his apostles are very careful to state, that it will produce the fruit of holiness, and bring forth much fruit. Especially great prevailing in prayer; for our Lord says,

"If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you."

And the beloved disciple writes,

"Whosoever abideth in him, sinneth not."

Therefore, it would seem the fruits unfailingly testify to the presence of this vital union wherever it exists. And the absence of the fruit must prove the vital connection broken.

Far be it from me to pass censurous judgments upon the professed church looking for Jesus; yet even the largest christian charity must not be blind to the fact that many professed christians do not bring forth such fruits of holiness as the Scriptures connect invariably with this vital union to Christ. Hence, we are pressed to the inference that it has lost its practical power over the mind.

Dear sister, let us study the Word more. The texts and figures of speech under which, vital union, holiness, and faith are represented, deserve to be deeply studied! How rich the meaning they contain and are ready to impart! Ah, it is not in name or profession, ceremonies or ordinances. No matter how much we have been baptised, or how much we prayed, sung or preached, or eaten the sacramental bread; it cannot be those things of themselves that create and compose this vitality which in the end will give eternal life.

Being members with the Advent people, believing in a time, or important doctrine connected, will not save us. There is a wide difference between resolutions and faith.

Christ says,—"without me ye can do nothing." Whoever then is trying to live a christian life by dint of mere resolution, and of more independent effort, apart from Christ, has yet to learn the power of union with Jesus.

The time has come when to live, we must put forth all our power of mind, for the adversary is putting forth every influence to snare the children of God: and if he can get our minds no matter how small the object, he has gained his point; then he will hold his magnifying glass, and if we have not the spirit we shall not be able to discern it, from the gospel mirror.

As we receive the Lord Jesus, even so we are to walk in Him. By laying all upon the altar which sanctifieth, we are sanctified; and by perpetuating the offering thereon, we continue to be sanctified.

God help you sister, with a fixed purpose of heart, to bind the sacrifice with cords to the horns of the altar, that you may henceforth be consecrated to the service of the Most High, and enabled with all his saints to know the love of God which passeth understanding, and to be filled with all his fulness.

Your sister in Christ,

T. F. Sargent.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 25, '56

For the Crisis.

The Promise and the heirs of Promise.

BY B. MATTHIAS.

No. II.

It is written, "He shall reign for ever and ever." "Of the increase of his government and peace, there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and establish it, with judgment and justice, from henceforth, even for ever." Isa. 9.

It is to be "established with justice and judgment for ever." It is very safe to infer with such a wise King at the head of affairs, that rebellions and revolutions can be most effectually prevented.

Evidently everything in the universe will be worked up into the kingdom, or ruled out of it forever. He will send forth his angels and gather out of his kingdom all things that offend and do iniquity, and cast them into a furnace of fire.

Peter calls the coming kingdom "incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away."

John says that everything shall be destroyed that corrupts the earth. Paul says that everything shall be removed that can be shaken."

The promise conveys the old sight of the kingdom to the new, making it the centre of the great kingdom of God.

Now when the patriarchs awake from the dust of death the land must appear familiar to them or they will apprehend some mistake after all. The promise is—"This land, the land wherein thou art a stranger, where thou sojournest." "All this land from the river of Egypt to the great river, the river Euphrates," and such like, forms the language of the promise.

THE HEIRS OF THE PROMISE.

Who are they? The lukewarm professor, who, for the most part, has no apprehensions of it any more than if it were not the promise? It does not look very probable. Neither the thing nor the time of its fulfillment, enters into his creed, hopes, or prayers;—nor does this promise interest him any way as far as we can discern.

Can we find them in the rejecters and and murderers of their own Messiah, or their children, who most cordially endorse the acts of their fathers—who killed the prophets and stoned those that were sent unto them, and killed the Prince of life? The same have maintained hatred, impiety, and impenitency ever since: and to this day are so far wary of christian influence, that they disdain their sympathy, deprecating the service of christian nurses in the hospital at Jerusalem, as appears in one of their organs.

What if there are subdued cases in Palestine and in various places in Europe; where they are proscribed by law and custom, and forced into a sort of docility construed into amiability? Others may make some show of liberality, and award to Jesus wisdom and goodness, and much that is worthy, and yet deny his claims.

There is no compromise to be allowed. If Jesus is worthy of so much, even any praise, he is worthy of all. It is not possible for him to be less than the Son of God, without being the worst of men. We ask for no half way concessions—they are the cants of hypocrites. Jesus told them they were not the children of Abraham, but of their father the devil. Many have been reported converted to the sects: they think they are christians, if so, they believe the promise. If they do, they are Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. It happens, however, to these converts in the general rule, that they throw up their heirship—sell their birthright, and loose their nationality. As to privileges and promises, they have none in their present relation. If they "abide in unbelief," they are outside of all religious privileges. If they believe, God is able to graft them in again.

But surely, my reader, you cannot conceive of a rule in God's government that will extinguish one race for their sins, and reward another with a premium, for transcending all other sinners in depth of guilt and blackness of crime, perpetrated in awful wrath and with malicious impunity.

Yet there are apologists for the Jews, who make their distinctiveness a proof of the divine favor. This is to them an injury. By it they have systematized their rebellion and unbelief, having the means of proscribing such as believe in Christ; in other words, in the Abrahamic faith. They have their synagogues and peculiar services, schools, &c., all a terrible retributive judgment. Their pride has done this for them. God scattered them, indicating a wish to have them mingle with the nations from whence they were taken, in which event they would have had none of the organic and systematic opposition to christianity that now characterizes them.

WHO THEN ARE THE HEIRS?

Abraham proposed his servant, who was born in his house; but God said, "this shall not be the heir. But he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels, shall be thine heir. In Isaac shall thy seed be called." Isaac was born in due time, and then demanded, as a burnt sacrifice.

This was extraordinary. The promise had been deferred beyond all reason, until it became very improbable of fulfillment,—subjecting the parties to intense trials.

And even this is not enough. The father of the promised heir must now slay his son and give him to God as a burnt offering. A new requisition—a human sacrifice! Most strange demand! This became the finishing sin of the heathen. This the Israelites perpetrated to the great offending of God, when they caused their children to pass through the fire to Moloch. And now in this case it is demanded by God Almighty himself.

How could Abraham think it possible that God could ask so much? His faith in God must have been of the highest order. The frequent visits to Abraham—his voice—the sublimity of his divine presence—the frequent benedictions from the Father of all, were most convincing to him of an Almighty presence. Abraham knew it was God that called him from his father's house, while each successive interview was confirmatory of well applied trust. There was a charm and power accompanying these interviews unmistakably sublime. Hence Abraham had no other purpose than obedience to the command and faith in the promise. If he could not see the reason of the thing, he could see the safety and fitness of obedience. He meant to obey. He expected his son back by a miracle, even by the resurrection from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure. Heb. 11.

The heir must be by promise; not the natural seed of Abaham, merely. Ishmael, though his son, cannot be the heir. He is the very type of all pretenders. It was manifest in himself—it is perpetuated in his descendants to this day.

There is a natural opposition between the natural and the promised. "He who was born of the bond-woman was born after the flesh; but he of the free woman was by promise." "Know ye, therefore, that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham. Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not unto seeds as of many, but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ." Gal. 3.

Paul most certainly makes the heirship rest upon the promise and not upon a lineal descent. The promise was made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob successively—to them and their seed. This general promise would very naturally form the shade of a title to a Jew, Arab, or Edomite. We may be sure they would press their claims upon natural grounds, not having the faith or virtue to receive it, and look for it through the only basis of title; that is, by promise, the which promise was made four hundred years before the law. Paul's construction of which is, the law given so many hundred years afterwards cannot annul the promise to make it of none effect. The promise forms the oldest title and the best; and the only one that can be allowed in the impending case.

What was the use of the law then, asks the apostle?

"It was added because of transgression, till the seed should come." Gal.

What then?

Fall back upon the promise.

What then?

A Jew is known in divine statutes no longer. His peculiar institutions terminate in the law. Then the fusion—then all merged in the promise—then there is no difference. No Jew, no Greek, no Scythian, no barbarian, no male or female, but all one in the promise. Eph. 2: 15.

The Scriptures have concluded all under sin that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe. Gal. 3: 22.

Until this time we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith, which should after be revealed; held under an arbitrary custody; slaves in bondage crying,—"who shall deliver me."

Every Jew up to this time, by profession was a believer looking for the promised heir.

The apostle argues the same way in his epistle to the Romans. "For the promise that he should be the heir of the world was not to Abraham or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith. For if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect. * * * * Therefore it is of faith." Rom. 4: 15-16.

It is not possible to mistake this doctrine and the apostle's argument. It is simply that the heirs are believers in Christ.

Furthermore, mark the apostle's conclusion: "Cast out the bondwoman, and her son, for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the free woman."

When these two young men, or their mothers, disputed titles, the great court decided:—"cast out the son of the bond woman—the heirship is not a partnership concern,—he shall not be heir with the son of the free woman.

When the substance came, (for Isaac was but the shadow) the same dispute of title recurred. Those who were born of the flesh and loved bondage, said,—"this is the heir; let us kill him and divide the inheritance."

Here is manifested the spirit of the "bond children." But as then, he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the spirit, even so it is now. Truly, wisdom is justified of her children.

Who are the heirs?

"Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise." So then, brethren, we are not children of the bond woman but of the free.

The sum of all this matter of dispute between the parties named in the foregoing is settled thus:

I. There was a promise made, repeated, confirmed, and sworn to. It was, that the LAND OF CANAAN should form the site—the house of the great kingdom of the Messiah.

II. That the heirs were also by promise; not one merely born in Abraham's house, but of Sarah. In Isaac shall thy seed be called.

III. That even Isaac is only the shade of the heir. "Thy seed which is Christ."

IV. The heirship is not natural to any. It is not by any privileged relation but by faith in the "promise."

All heirs to the inheritance must be overcomers. It is said of the redeemed, "They overcame by the blood of the Lamb."

Salterville, Sept. 1856.

Vice stings us even in our pleasures, but virtue consoles us even in our pains.

and his angels which I have ever seen, giving a scriptural account of their power and workings, with a truthful expose of their modern manifestations.

Several other works which I have seen, attempting to expose the Spirit-rapping system, are so wanting in logic, or wrong in premise, as to do much to help forward the delusions; some attributing the phenomena to natural principles, which others know cannot produce the miracles which are produced; others, granting that they are the works of dead wicked men's spirits, neither of which can bring an argument founded on Bible evidence in support of their theories.

The above work is free from such charges, and its arguments are sustained by Bible testimony, and other good evidence, that ancient and modern spiritualism, is the work of demons, directed by Diabolos, and that demons are not the spirits of dead men.

Many of our brethren may not need this book for themselves, yet they may do much good by circulating it among others.

I. C. Wellcome.

Hallowell, Sept. 27, '56.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 15, 1856.

Questions.

Further answers to the questions of our Sister in Christ.

No. IX.

"If he set his heart upon man; if he gather to himself his spirit, and his breath, all flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again to dust." Job 34: 14—15.

Ques. "Is the spirit of man and his breath the same thing?"

Ans. The word rendered spirit in ver. 14 is from ruakh, the same word as in Eccl. 3; 19 where it is declared that man and beast "have all one breath"—(ruakh).

The word rendered breath in ver. 14 is n'-shah-mah, which is the same word employed in Gen. 2: 7, where it is said when speaking of the creation of man—"and the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath (n'-shah-mah) of life, and man became a living soul."

This word is translated both breath and spirit.

The same word is found in Isa. 2: 22 —"Cease ye from man whose breath (n'-shah-mah) is in his nostrils."

In Gen. 7: 21—22, where we have an account of the flood, and the record of the death of men and animals, it is said,—"And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man; all in whose nostrils was the breath (n'-shah-mah) of life, of all that was in the dry land died."

This scripture shows us plainly that the breath (n'-shah-mah) is common to both man and beast, as Solomon declares in Eccl. 3: 19.

The 15th verse of Job 34 declares that, if the spirit be gathered unto God, "all flesh shall perish together and man shall turn again to dust."

We see from this scripture that man, at death, re-turns to dust instead of heaven. The spirit—breath of life, "returns to God who gave it."

This does not teach that the spirit is the man, for we have found it is common to both man and beast.

This harmonizes perfectly with Ps. 104: 29. "Thou takest away their breath, they die and return to their dust."

In concluding our answer to the foregoing question, we would say, that we understand that breath and spirit are used to represent the same thing.

X.

"The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord." Prov. 20: 27.

Ques. "We know that the lamp of the wicked will be put out;" but will the candle of the Lord ever be extinguished?

Ans.—In the text quoted, the spirit is called a candle; ie., as a room in a dark night is illuminated by a candle, so the spirit of man illuminates his system, or in other words, it sets the whole human machinery in motion, so that he hears with his ears, sees with his eyes, and the man manifests himself, by the aid of the spirit in him, as a candle by its light makes the objects in a room known to the observer.

When this spirit or breath is taken from a man, as David says,—"in that very day his thoughts or purposes perish."

When this spirit returns, the man is illuminated again and opens his eyes to behold the surrounding objects.

If by the question—"will the candle of the Lord ever be extinguished," is meant, will it ever be annihilated from the world, we answer, certainly not: for men now dead are to live again and possess this spirit or breath.

XI.

"Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return to God who gave it." Eccl. 12: 7.

Ques. Is the spirit that returns to God "the candle of the Lord?"

Ans. We think it is; as it has been shown that the spirit is called "the candle of the Lord."

An Appeal to My Brethren.

Dearly Beloved in the Lord:—I wish to settle up my book accounts and pay some borrowed money I owe; and I now make the following proposition to those owing me for books. If you will deduct ten per cent from the wholesale price for all you have on hand now unsold and forward the amount of what you have sold to me, you will do me a very great favor. Brethren help me in this matter.

Address—S. S. Brewer, No. 54 Wilson st., Providence, R. I.

A SPECIAL APPEAL.

Do read this appeal and heed it. I wish to publish another edition of my "Gospel Vindicator," (a work of 187 pages,) for gratuitous distribution in Minnesota. It will cost comparatively but little to do it, as it is already stereotyped. It is just the work needed to follow up the "Key of Truth," as it removes the many objections to our faith. How much will you now pledge for this object, to be paid January 1st 1857?

Send your pledges to the Crisis immediately, that I may arrange accordingly. Who will pledge $1, $5, or $10?

Remember that this is missionary ground, and God has a claim upon your dollars!

Friends, you must help. Do not refuse.—If more than enough should be pledged, it will be used to issue the fifth edition of the "Key of truth." "Let us not be weary in well doing."

W. Sheldun.

Vermillion, Dakota Co., Minnesota.

For the Crisis.

Letters to a Friend.

BY F. T. SARGEANT.

No. II.

My Dear Sister:—I again take my pen to address to you a few lines. I am glad to know that your desire is, to be free from the bondage of sin, and to stand in all the fullness of the Gospel of Christ; to 'fight the good fight of faith."

You say, "O for one grasp of the living faith of which you write! O for the love and peace I once enjoyed."

You seem to understand your duty, and what the Gospel requires for salvation, yet are almost ready to despair.

Ah, we need all of the Gospel armor, to stand in this "grand and awful time." We need holiness of heart, which is the marrow of the Gospel, to know our Redeemer lives; to know we have the witness of the Spirit and that our ways please God.

Then we are, and then only, in a place to grow in grace daily. We must serve the Lord wholly. This half, up and down, changing, not knowing whether we love or serve God, is no faith or religion that will admit us to the kingdom.

If we are ready for the resurrection, be pure, holy, in this life. Jesus Christ says, "He that doeth the will of God," (not the one who hears and knows, merely) will obtain the blessing.

Your frequent use of the word "but" seems to be a sort of turn, by which you excuse yourself.

Such expressions as,—"I could go to meeting, but,—." If I knew they had the truth, but—." "If they were honest, but —." If I could read their hearts, but—." "If I could have such meetings as we had in '54, where they were all united, but now so many opinions, so much contention, and those in whom I had the utmost confidence, have proved themselves dishonest,—but" &c. You feel more like living a hermitage life, not go to meeting—serve the Lord at home. Well sister, I have been through this trial, if trial you call it, and it has done me good.

Now settle this by the Word, and if your conscience will remain quiet, and you can serve God and be happy at home, do thus; but, remember if you are excusable all are.

If all would go to meeting with the Spirit, there would be no unholy contention; we might have different opinions, and we might perhaps be corrected.

We are commanded to "contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints," which faith, is the coming of Jesus, to give the saints their inheritance in the promised land.

Now all that have this faith, and love the appearing of Jesus, so far they are agreed; and other opinions and ideas should not, will not separate, but having the spirit they will come to the knowledge of the truth, by letting their light shine; all will be edified and God glorified. The great thing is to be humble, contrite, and to keep so.

Dear sister, I apprehend your difficulty, like many others, is your looking too much to others, instead of God; measuring ourselves by others is not wisdom. We must here in this time of famine, cling to the Rock and stand on the Word and let the winds blow, our house will stand. We must live for ourselves and have vital union to Christ.

The Advent body as a people, are in a similar condition to the children of Israel after passing the Red Sea. Confusion reigns: murmuring and complaining of this and that: but we need all to humble ourselves and "believe God;" for while man has done many things wrong, God has been with us, and blest what was of truth. The track to the kingdom is here; truth is here: and we must step on the Rock and look ahead, and we shall see by the chart that the old ship Zion is almost into harbor.

If professed christians would individually get ready for the coming of Jesus; having the spirit they could labor for and with each other, and we should see a union which would be according to the gospel, cemented by love. The union and fellowship that the preaching of time produced we see now tested, which has developed character as perhaps nothing else could; and our character is the test by which the saints are to be known. The good tree and bad illustrates it.

Now we are to get ready and be ready, waiting and watching for our Master. Time, will not be the garment, but it will be the pure spotless robe of holiness of heart, without which we never can see the kingdom.

Dear sister, once more I entreat you as for life or death, to leave all for Christ, cost what it may, and once more consecrate yourself a living sacrifice upon the altar, and by faith claim the promise. Thanks be to God, the Christian has an altar. Dr. Clarke says:

"The Christian's altar is the christian's sacrifice, which is Jesus Christ with all the benefits of his passion and death."

O there is something tangible in the religion of Jesus. We can be assured of our acceptance. We can abide in Christ. We can possess vital union with Him, by which we can live and thrive, although adverse winds blow and storms gather, friends prove false, and all manner of evil is spoken of us falsely for Christ's sake.

We are living in a time that, unless we abide in the vine and draw our nourishment from the fountain, we shall wither and die.

In speaking of this vital union, both Christ and his apostles are very careful to state, that it will produce the fruit of holiness, and bring forth much fruit. Especially great prevailing in prayer; for our Lord says,

"If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you."

And the beloved disciple writes,

"Whosoever abideth in him, sinneth not."

Therefore, it would seem the fruits unfailingly testify to the presence of this vital union wherever it exists. And the absence of the fruit must prove the vital connection broken.

Far be it from me to pass censurous judgments upon the professed church looking for Jesus; yet even the largest christian charity must not be blind to the fact that many professed christians do not bring forth such fruits of holiness as the Scriptures connect invariably with this vital union to Christ. Hence, we are pressed to the inference that it has lost its practical power over the mind.

Dear sister, let us study the Word more. The texts and figures of speech under which, vital union, holiness, and faith are represented, deserve to be deeply studied! How rich the meaning they contain and are ready to impart! Ah, it is not in name or profession, ceremonies or ordinances. No matter how much we have been baptized, or how much we prayed, sung or preached, or eaten the sacramental bread; it cannot be those things of themselves that create and compose this vitality which in the end will give eternal life.

Being members with the Advent people, believing in a time, or important doctrine connected, will not save us. There is a wide difference between resolutions and faith.

Christ says,—"without me ye can do nothing." Whoever then is trying to live a christian life by dint of more resolution, and of more independent effort, apart from Christ, has yet to learn the power of union with Jesus.

The time has come when to live, we must put forth all our power of mind, for the adversary is putting forth every influence to snare the children of God: and if he can get our minds no matter how small the object, he has gained his point; then he will hold his magnifying glass, and if we have not the spirit we shall not be able to discern it, from the gospel mirror.

As we receive the Lord Jesus, even so we are to walk in Him. By laying all upon the altar which sanctifieth, we are sanctified; and by perpetuating the offering thereon, we continue to be sanctified.

God help you sister, with a fixed purpose of heart, to bind the sacrifice with cords to the horns of the altar, that you may henceforth be consecrated to the service of the Most High, and enabled with all his saints to know the love of God which passeth understanding, and to be filled with all his fulness.

Your sister in Christ,

T. F. Sargent.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 25, '56

For the Crisis.

The Promise and the heirs of Promise.

BY B. MATTHIAS.

No. II.

It is written, "He shall reign for ever and ever." "Of the increase of his government and peace, there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and establish it, with judgment and justice, from henceforth, even for ever." Isa. 9.

It is to be "established with justice and judgment for ever." It is very safe to infer with such a wise King at the head of affairs, that rebellions and revolutions can be most effectually prevented.

Evidently everything in the universe will be worked up into the kingdom, or ruled out of it forever. He will send forth his angels and gather out of his kingdom all things that offend and do iniquity, and cast them into a furnace of fire.

Peter calls the coming kingdom "incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away."

John says that everything shall be destroyed that corrupts the earth. Paul says that everything shall be removed that can be shaken."

The promise conveys the old sight of the kingdom to the new, making it the centre of the great kingdom of God.

Now when the patriarchs awake from the dust of death the land must appear familiar to them or they will apprehend some mistake after all. The promise is—"This land, the land wherein thou art a stranger, where thou sojournest." 'All this land from the river of Egypt to the great river, the river Euphrates," and such like, forms the language of the promise.

THE HEIRS OF THE PROMISE.

Who are they? The lukewarm professor, who, for themost part, has no apprehensions of it any more than if it were not the promise? It does not look very probable. Neither the thing nor the time of its fulfillment, enters into his creed, hopes, or prayers;—nor does this promise interest him any way as far as we can discern.

Can we find them in the rejecters and and murderers of their own Messiah, or their children, who most cordially endorse the acts of their fathers—who killed the prophets and stoned those that were sent unto them, and killed the Prince of life? The same have maintained hatred, impiety, and impenitency ever since: and to this day are so far wary of christian influence, that they disdain their sympathy, deprecating the service of christian nurses in the hospital at Jerusalem, as appears in one of their organs.

What if there are subdued cases in Palestine and in various places in Europe; where they are proscribed by law and custom, and forced into a sort of docility construed into amiability? Others may make some show of liberality, and award to Jesus wisdom and goodness, and much that is worthy, and yet deny his claims.

There is no compromise to be allowed. If Jesus is worthy of so much, even any praise, he is worthy of all. It is not possible for him to be less than the Son of God, without being the worst of men. We ask for no half way concessions—they are the cants of hypocrites. Jesus told them they were not the children of Abraham, but of their father the devil. Many have been reported converted to the sects: they think they are christians, if so, they believe the promise. If they do, they are Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. It happens, however, to these converts in the general rule, that they throw up their heirship—sell their birthright, and loose their nationality. As to privileges and promises, they have none in their present relation. If they "abide in unbelief," they are outside of all religious privileges. If they believe, God is able to graft them in again.

But surely, my reader, you cannot conceive of a rule in God's government that will extinguish one race for their sins, and reward another with a premium, for transcending all other sinners in depth of guilt and blackness of crime, perpetrated in awful wrath and with malicious impunity.

Yet there are apologists for the Jews, who make their distinctiveness a proof of the divine favor. This is to them an injury. By it they have systematized their rebellion and unbelief, having the means of proscribing such as believe in Christ; in other words, in the Abrahamic faith. They have their synagogues and peculiar services, schools, &c., all a terrible retributive judgment. Their pride has done this for them. God scattered them, indicating a wish to have them mingle with the nations from whence they were taken, in which event they would have had none of the organic and systematic opposition to christianity that now characterizes them.

WHO THEN ARE THE HEIRS?

Abraham proposed his servant, who was born in his house; but God said, "this shall not be the heir. But he that shall come forth out of thine own bowels, shall be thine heir. In Isaac shall thy seed be called." Isaac was born in due time, and then demanded, as a burnt secrifice.

This was extraordinary. The promise had been deferred beyond all reason, until it became very improbabte of fulfillment,—subjecting the parties to intense trials.

And even this is not enough. The father of the promised heir must now slay his son and give him to God as a burnt offering. A new requisition—a human sacrifice! Most strange demand! This became the finishing sin of the heathen. This the Israelites perpetrated to the great offending of God, when they caused their children to pass through the fire to Moloch. And now in this case it is demanded by God Almighty himself.

How could Abraham think it possible that God could ask so much? His faith in God must have been of the highest order. The frequent visits to Abraham—his voice—the sublimity of his divine presence—the frequent benedictions from the Father of all, were most convincing to him of an Almighty presence. Abraham knew it was God that called him from his father's house, while each successive interview was confirmatory of well applied trust. There was a charm and power accompanying these interviews unmistakably sublime. Hence Abraham had no other purpose than obedience to the command and faith in the promise. If he could not see the reason of the thing, he could see the safety and fitness of obedience. He meant to obey. He expected his son back by a miracle, even by the resurrection from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure. Heb. 11.

The heir must be by promise; not the natural seed of Abaaham, merely. Ishmael, though his son, cannot be the heir. He is the very type of all pretenders. It was manifest in himself—it is perpetuated in his descendants to this day.

There is a natural opposition between the natural and the promised. "He who was born of the bond-woman was born after the flesh; but he of the free woman was by promise." "Know ye, therefore, that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham. Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not unto seeds as of many, but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ." Gal. 3.

Paul most certainly makes the heirship rest upon the promise and not upon a lineal descent. The promise was made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob successively—to them and their seed. This general promise would very naturally form the shade of a title to a Jew, Arab, or Edomite. We may be sure they would press their claims upon natural grounds, not having the faith or virtue to receive it, and look for it through the only basis of title; that is, by promise, the which promise was made four hundred years before the law. Paul's construction of which is, the law given so many hundred years afterwards cannot annul the promise to make it of none effect. The promise forms the oldest title and the best; and the only one that can be allowed in the impending case.

What was the use of the law then, asks the apostle?

"It was added because of transgression, till the seed should come." Gal.

What then?

Fall back upon the promise.

What then?

A Jew is known in divine statutes no longer. His peculiar institutions terminate in the law. Then the fusion—then all merged in the promise—then there is no difference. No Jew, no Greek, no Scythian, no barbarian, no male or female, but all one in the promise. Eph. 2: 15.

The Scriptures have concluded all under sin that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe. Gal. 3: 22.

Until this time we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith, which should after be revealed; held under an arbitrary custody; slaves in bondage crying,—"who shall deliver me."

Every Jew up to this time, by profession was a believer looking for the promised heir.

The apostle argues the same way in his epistle to the Romans. "For the promise that he should be the heir of the world was not to Abraham or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith. For if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect. * * * * Therefore it is of faith." Rom. 4: 15-16.

It is not possible to mistake this doctrine and the apostle's argument. It is simply that the heirs are believers in Christ.

Furthermore, mark the apostle's conclusion: "Cast out the bondwoman, and her son, for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the free woman."

When these two young men, or their mothers, disputed titles, the great court decided:—"cast out the son of the bond woman—the heirship is not a partnership concern,—he shall not be heir with the son of the free woman.

When the substance came, (for Isaac was but the shadow) the same dispute of title recurred. Those who were born of the flesh and loved bondage, said,—"this is the heir; let us kill him and divide the inheritance."

Here is manifested the spirit of the "bond children." But as then, he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the spirit, even so it is now. Truly, wisdom is justified of her children.

Who are the heirs?

"Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise." So then, brethren, we are not children of the bond woman but of the free.

The sum of all this matter of dispute between the parties named in the foregoing is settled thus:

I. There was a promise made, repeated, confirmed, and sworn to. It was, that the LAND OF CANAAN should form the site—the house of the great kingdom of the Messiah.

II. That the heirs were also by promise; not one merely born in Abraham's house, but of Sarah. In Isaac shall thy seed be called.

III. That even Isaac is only the shade of the heir. "Thy seed which is Christ."

IV. The heirship is not natural to any. It is not by any privileged relation but by faith in the "promise."

All heirs to the inheritance must be overcomers. It is said of the redeemed, "They overcame by the blood of the Lamb."

Salterville, Sept. 1856.

Vice stings us even in our pleasures, but virtue consoles us even in our pains.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

SOWING.

BY MARTHA.

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

All, all are husbandmen to-day,
All, seed to-day are sowing;
And all have in the fields of life,
Some kind of harvests growing.

Oh, are your harvests beautiful,
Which are growing, mortals, say?
And is the seed good ye are casting
In the furrows of to-day?

Do you each one make your life
A field of moral beauty;
Blossoming with the sweet flowers,
Which bloom of love and duty?

Do you in purity and faith
Sow the seed of things sublime;
Which shall yield you present harvests,
And a joy in coming time?

Oh, be careful! they are countless
Who are watching that you sow,
And should tears or grains of gladness
Spring up, countless ones will know.

Then, are your harvests beautiful
Which are growing, mortals, say;
And the seed good ye are casting
In the furrows of to-day?

Do you sow as if the angels
Would be reapers with you here;
And in Eternity the labors
Of your life-time would appear?

Oh, sow right, and life shall be
Like Eden sweet and fair;
Hope, like flowers in spring and summer
Shall be blooming everywhere.

Yes, sow right, and harvests golden
Shall the angels reap for thee,
Storing them in that vast garner,
Builded for Eternity.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

Letter From Sr. M. H. Thayer.

Dear Brn. and Srs:—My heart has been comforted while hearing from many of you through the Crisis, and I have felt while I have read, some of that love that none but the friends of Jesus know, and which you and I could never have felt, had not Jesus first felt the same for us.

The other day while thinking of my separation from you, and feeling an ardent desire to see you, the question arose in my mind, cannot I be willing for the sake of Him who has been the author of this love, to be in the place that he has seen fit to put me, though it should separate me from every one of his people? My heart responded, yes, I can.

I have thought some of late of the idea of being reconciled to God.

We sometimes hear the question asked, —"Have you become reconciled to God?" The individual seems to look away back to the time when he or she gave themselves to the Lord, and the answer is,—"I think so."

But should we ask pointedly,—are you reconciled to God? the answer might be quite different.

It is a great thing to be thus reconciled, and with the old nature we never can do it. Self must be renounced in all its forms, and God alone revered.

Then, and not till then is there a heartfelt—"Thy will be done."

When this is the case, let outward circumstances be ever so trying, or the ways of God somewhat obscure, still there is a feeling of quiet submission that will not repine.

O that we might ever possess the spirit that Jesus had when he said,—"The cup that my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?"

Well, this is a blessed place to live; and that we may be here, let us take the exhortation of John,—"Little children keep yourselves from idols."

When there is within us a lusting after the things of this world, our ways will run across the ways of God, and there can be no reconciliation.

"Ye lust and have not." "Ye ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts."

How true that he that "will be the friend of the world is the enemy of God." But where sweet submission reigns, the child asks with confidence, and is not sent empty away. From such a heart we hear no complaining, but rather praise, that glorifies God. "Yes, praise is comely for the upright."

But while on the other hand we hear the words of praise at one time, and at another, murmuring and complaining at the providences of God, and at another foolish talking and jesting, the paths are not made straight and the lame are turned out of the way.

It is good to be a servant. Servants do not always have labor, but they must always be at the bidding of the Master, all interest in his business, and not filled with their own plans. Brethren, the conflict is not over yet.

"Ne'er think the victory won,
Nor lay thine armor down;
Thine arduous work shall not be done,
Till thou receive thy crown."

Though too weak of ourselves, we may say with Paul,—"He that has begun a good work in me will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ."

But when will that day come? O when?

Well, in this we must be subject to the will of our Father until he sees best to give us the true light. In our time of need it will come. I know of no surer way to get it, than to live where we have the surety that we are friends of the Lord. The kingdom, the crown, the glory—all are in the future.

Then let us press towards the mark, even the resurection of the dead. O blessed day. How sweet to hear the shout of the victors over the grave.

While reading of the death of our beloved brother Mayhew, I felt nerved to endure that I might hear his shout, together with the many dear ones that have fallen since we have been waiting for the Master's return. O that we might all be as faithful as he was. There is a blessedness in the thought of falling with the armor on. Death is cruel, but faithful soldiers fear it not. They know where their life is hid. They know who has the keys of death and hell; on Him they hang all their hopes, and are blest. I feel a strong expectation to-day of being in the kingdom, and of meeting the pure there. Let none seek their own, but the things that are Jesus Christ's, and he will care for us all the way—bring us safe to eternal rest, and that very soon.

Your sister in the bonds of the gospel,
Mary H. Thayer.

Galesborough, Aug. 5, '56.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. Phebe.

Dear Br. in the Lord:—Having no personal acquaintance I find it not quite as easy to address myself to you as it has been to brother Merriam, still I feel it my duty to overcome the hesitation that has been produced and be governed by that wisdom that is without partiality.

I profess to belong to the "household of faith," the company of "wating ones;" on whom rests the responsibility of the "Crisis" in its financial and religious character.

Truly, I love the blessed truths its columns contain, and sometimes am made to more fully appreciate its worth by way of contrast, and now and then "no paper."

Those who are privileged with preaching or social meetings, I think cannot fully understand how much we value it, who are differently situated.

Having "no paper" to-day, I stepped in and re-read No. 52 to a sick sister, and drank deeply into its spirit.

How easy it is to give thanks—to pray for one another—when the heart is warmed and cheered with "our blessed hope."—Nothing sounds so sweet—nothing stirs the deep fountain of the soul, as,—"Jesus is coming."

The more it is hated, the more I love it —the more despised and rejected, the more tenaciously I cling to it.

It is my only hope, for myself, my family, the church and the world.

May the Lord guide, strengthen, and reward you in this, and in the world to come, is still the prayer of Phebe.

No. Palermo, Aug. 31, '56.

"The Voice of the Church."

"Dividing all Christians into three classes with reference to their belief in the Millennium, viz:—into Anti-Millinarians, who believe the Millennium to be already past; Post-Millennialists—who hold that it is future, and who postpone the personal advent of the Redeemer until its close, and Pre-Millennialists—who hold it as future (the seventh thousand years of the earth) and that it is to commence with, and be introduced by, the personal reign of Christ; it is the object of this volume to accumulate evidence in favor of its own (the latter) theory by extracts from the writings of the early Fathers, and, to some extent, from those of Christian men of every age. A considerable mass of testimony has been thus accumulated."—The Congregationalist.

Published by H. L. Hastings, Peacedale, R. I., and for sale at this office.

Choice Selections.

"With Authority."

Christianity speaks with divine authority, allowing no contradiction or appeal, and demanding the assent of all men to its claims, as the only true religion.

The Christian cannot say to his friend—his intelligent, well-read friend—You have your opinion, I have mine. We are thus on a level. As a gentleman, I can no more question your belief than you can mine. I cannot say to you, believe the gospel, or you are lost.

But can we conceive of Paul thus dealing with educated unbelievers?

No. He does not so discuss Christianity as if men might lawfully take different sides respecting its divine and exclusive character.

He knows that the gospel of Christ is the only true religious system, and, whether among the rude Lycaonians, the refined Corinthians, or the inquisitive, philosophic, Athenians, he is ever the same uncompromising preacher of Christianity, ready always with meekness to listen to honest questionings, and to give good reasons for his faith, yet intolerant toward every other system—not in the spirit of a bigot, but of one who knew whereof he affirms, and who so loves Christ and his fellow men, that he cannot yield an inch of that gospel which honors the one and saves the other. This he must urge upon every man. The gospel is from heaven, believe and be saved, reject, and be lost.

It is evident that this honest, straightforward course must over-ride some of the current courses of worldly gentlemanliness, and subject him who pursues it to the charge of uncharitableness, narrow-mindedness, and even vulgarity.

It may lose for him his literary and fashionable friends. He must suffer the offense of the cross. No doubt Paul, educated and delicately sensitive as he was, sometimes felt keenly at this very point. But this is a part of the minister's trial, and if he have not courage to stand it, he is unfit for his post. He cannot expect to persuade men to believe in Christ, certainly not to convince opposers.

"An obscure man rose up to address the French Convention. At the close of his oration, Mirabeau, the giant genius of the Revolution, turned around to his neighbor, and eagerly asked, who is that? The other wondered at Mirabeau's curiosity.—Whereupon the latter said, that man will yet act a great part; and asked to explain himself, added, He speaks as one who believes every word he says."

Just so with the preacher. Would he make others believe, he must be in earnest —often terribly in earnest—from a deep conviction of the truth of the gospel—of its being the only way of salvation.

Any mixture of false gentlemanliness, which savors of doubt, takes off the edge of his discourse, and his hearers will go away feeling that, after all, it is an open question whether Christianity be divine.

Do ministers, as much as they should, practice this divine intolerance—this gentle, loving, intelligent, yet earnest and persuasive intolerance, which lays hold of sinners, to pull them out of the fire, the real fire of God's righteous indignation? Does not Satan artfully insinuate into society, especially cultivated society, false rules of propriety and politeness, to make earnestness in religion disreputable, and quiet men in sin?—[Watchman and Reflector.

Temperance in Revivals.—I was laboring in a protracted meeting in the Congregational church of a New Hampshire village. There was much intemperance there, and the wife of the principal hotel keeper was a member of the church.

Seeing her and her husband both at the meeting one afternoon, I made some very pointed remarks on the evils of intemperance, and particularly on the character of those who continued those evils, by trafficing in ardent spirits.

Many of the church, too, I knew, used much of the same, and there was doubtless need of plain dealing.

At the close of the exercise that afternoon, the minister in a suppressed tone that told how he felt, said to me, "It won't do to come out so on that subject; you'll stop the revival."

I told him I had no opinion of a revival among drunkards and rumsellers, and that my way to promote righteousness, was to preach against sin—existing sin, and that such a course would hinder no true religion.

He doubted and feared, but allowed me to proceed.

Two days after, the taverner, to my surprise, invited me to his house. The conversation of course, turned upon his business.

He seemed pleased, and yet I wondered why: for he was faithfully warned of the dangers of continuing in such a course.

He had a number of sons, some of them nearly grown to manhood, and he was told what fearful consequences might attend exposing them to such temptations.

At length he rose hastily up, and beckoned me to follow him. I did so, and he conducted me to the bar-room, and throwing open the bar, I saw that it was "empty, swept and garnished."

"There," said he, with emphasis, "I've done."

He was done. A pitcher of cold water and a waiter of tumblers were all that remained of a well furnished establishment.

He was done; for himself and nearly every member of his family became true converts, and are now foremost in every good work.

Others of the craft soon followed, and in less than two months, not a drop of strong drink was sold in that village.

The revival went on.

No one ever dreamed that it was less extensive or less beneficial, on account of plain preaching against existing sins.—[Sketches of Revivals.

Would it not please you to pick up a string of pearls, drops of gold, diamonds, and precious stones, as you pass along the street? It would make you feel happy for months to come.

Such happiness you can give to others.

How, do you ask?

By dropping sweet words, kind remarks, and pleasant smiles as you pass along. These are true pearls and precious stones, which can never be lost; of which none can deprive you.

Speak to that orphan child; see the pearl drop from her cheeks.

Take the hand of the friendless boy; bright diamonds flash in his eyes.

Smile on the sad and dejected; a joy suffuses his cheek more brilliant than the most precious stones.

By the wayside and the city's din, and the fireside of the poor, drop words and smiles to cheer and bless. You will feel happier when resting upon your pillow at the close of the day, than if you had picked up a score of perishing jewels. The latter fade and crumble in time; the former grow brighter with age, and produce happier reflections forever.

Thought.—As the kaleidoscope, at every turn, forms new figures, so does thought change; taking every possible hue and shape, so that no two can think exactly alike.

Domestic Summary.

A Dangerous Bonnet.—An eminent English physician says:—"I have to lament the great increase amongst the female part of my practice of tic doloreux in the head, loss of sight, and great suffering in the ear, induced, I firmly believe, from the present absurd fashion of dressing the neck instead of the head.

During the past month, I have been in attendance upon two lovely girls with the tic doloreux in the forehead, and several others with similar complaints. It is high time the frivolous bonnet of the present day should be done away with."

Kansas.—Chicago, Oct. 11.—A party of Kansas emigrants, chiefly from Ohio, Illinois, and Wisconsin, to the number of about 300, including women and children, on arriving at Taber, Iowa, on the 1st inst., received intelligence of the approach of Governor Geary with 250 dragoons to oppose their entrance into the territory. They, however, determined to proceed on their journey till fired upon, and it was expected they would meet the troops at Little Nebraska river, on the 14th inst.

Milwaukie, Oct. 11.—We have advices from Kansas to the 1st inst., stating that Gov. Geary had caused to be arrested and confined in Lecompton on the charge of murder in the first degree, one hundred and seven Free State men, who are mostly under the charge of Col. Titus.

H. Miles Moore of Leavenworth, was arrested on the 22d inst, while at Kansas City, en route East, by Surveyor General Calhoun, and carried to Wyandotte City and imprisoned.

Foreign News.

Arrival of the Arago

New York, Oct. 8.

Steamer Arago, Lines, from Havre 24th ult., arrived at her dock at 8 o'clock this morning. She brings London dates of the 24th, and 270 passengers, including the late American Minister at Brussels; J. P. Sullivan, Consul at Bayonne, and Jerome Bonaparte.

A serious conflict had taken place at Trebizond, where some Turkish sailors tore down a Russian flag from a merchant ship, and threw the Russian sailors into the sea. The Russian Consul demands the dismissal of the Captain of the port.

Madrid journals state that a severe conflict occurred on the 9th, between the garrison of Melilla, on the Morocco coast, and the Moors, The Spaniards had 90 killed and 70 wounded. The loss of the Moors was still more severe.

Advices from St. Vincents, state a greater portion of the inhabitants had either abandoned the Island, or died of cholera.

Arrival of the Niagara.

Halifax, Oct. 8.

The Royal Mail steamship Niagara, from Liverpool. about 9 A. M., 27th ult, arrived here at 9.45 this evening.

The steamers sailing on the 24th from Liverpool, carried out intelligence that the Spanish Constitution had been promulgated; that O'Donnell had tendered his resignation—which, however, was incorrect; that an Anglo-French fleet is really destined for the bay of Naples; that Russia remains firm in her intention to retain the Isle of Serpents; and that the British fleet remains in the Black Sea —all of which created anxiety and depressed the funds.

Since the sailing of these steamers, Italian affairs have continued to excite attention, but beyond the intention to send a fleet to Naples, nothing definite has transpired—the Anglo-French ultimatum being retained a few days in Paris to allow opportuntty for the Neapolitan Government to make the required concessions

The contemplated expedition is of a formidable character. Eight steamers are provisioning at Spithead, and the Cæsar, Colossus, Dauntless, Melacca, Gorgon, Perseverance and Urgent, all British auxilliary steamers are ready to sail.

The French ships are Bretagne, Ulm, Algesiras, and Napoleon. The expedition is said to be very unpopular in France. Sardinia takes part in the expedition, and will send ships for the protection of the Sardinians in Naples. A Vienna letter states that the English and French ministers had notified Austria of the intended expedition against Naples, to which the Vienna Cabinet interposes no obstacles. This however, is doubtful.

TURKEY.

The frontier Commissioner was at Belgrade on the 8th of Sept. and it was expected the survey would be completed by October. The frontier line is marked off by a furrow with a plough.

The Turks are fortifying both sides of the Danube, with, it is said, the approbation of Austria.

The Turkish troops have also moved from Widin to Kalafat, on the left bank of the river.

The Coronation.—Moscow, Sunday, Sept. 7.—His imperial majesty the Emperor Alexander II. was solemnly crowned to-day, at 12 o'clock. The ceremony took place in the Upenski Ssobor, and the act of coronation was performed by Archbishop Philaretes, the Metropolitan of Moscow. Among the special ambassadors who were present were Earl Granville, Prince Esterhazy, M Castelborgorne, and the representatives of the Sultan. The proceedings had all that august appearance which immense preparation had designed. An immense crowd assembled at the Kremlin palace and in the streets, and very great enthusiasm was everywhere manifested. The ringing of bells, the firing of cannon, the parade of troops, the ceremonials of the church, the procession to the palace, and the decorations of the city rendered the whole affair most inspiriting.

The coronation was favored by beautiful weather, Count Orloff was created a prince, Prince Woronzoff a field marshall, and General De Berg and Soumarokhoff counts.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

—:o:—

Eld. Miles Grant appoints to preach at Portsmouth N. H., Nov. 2.

—:o:—

Eld. J. Hemenway appoints to preach at Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 26.

—:o:—

Eld. J. T. Ongley appoints to preach at Syracuse N. Y., Sunday, Oct. 19.

—:o:—

Eld. J. Couch appoints to preach at
Portland, Me., Sabbath, Oct. 26.
Boston, in the Free Chapel, Nov. 2.

—:o:—

Eld. R. R. York appoints to preach at West Falmouth, Sunday, Oct. 19.
Flying Point, Sunday, Oct. 26.

—:o:—

Eld. W. M. Ingham appoints to preach at Portsmouth, N. H., Friday evening, Oct. 17.
Rye, N. H., Sunday, 19.
Kennebunk Port, Thursday eve., 23.
Portland, Me., (Clark's Hall,) Oct. 26.

—:o:—

Eld. S. W. Bishop appoints to preach at
Springfield, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 19.
Providence, R. I., Sunday, Oct. 26.
Worcester, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 2.
Lowell, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 9.

—:o:—

The Lord permitting, Brother Edwin Burnham will preach in Massena, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., the third and fourth Sabbaths in Oct. He will also hold meetings through the intervening week. James Danforth.

—:o:—

A Conference will be held at Portsmouth, N. H., to commence on Wednesday evening, Oct. 15, and continue over the Sabbath. Brn. Hastings, Berrick, and Ross, are expected, and other preaching brethren are invited.

By request of the brethren,
J. Couch.

—:o:—

Eld. D. E. Moulton, appoints to preach at
Lynn, (Dye House vill,) Sunday, Oct. 26.
Lowell, Classic Hall, Nov. 2
Westford, Tuesday eve. Nov. 4.
Clinton, Wednesday eve. 5.
Worcester, Sunday Nov. 9.
Tolland, Conn., Nov. 16,
where Bro. Storrs may appoint.

—:o:—

Eld. C. Goodrich appoints to preach at
Northfield, Thursday, Oct. 16.
Litchfield Station, Friday, 17.
Newfield, Sunday, 19.
Collinsville, Monday, 20.
Canton, Tuesday, 21.
Winsted, Wednesday, 22.
Pleasant Valley, Sunday, 26.

—:o:—

Eld. Hiram Munger appoints to preach at
Natick, Wednesday, Oct. 15.
Westboro, Thursday, 16.
Chester Factories, Sunday, Oct. 19.
Fair Haven, Ct., Thurs. eve. " 23.
Bridgeport, " 24.
Meriden, " 25.
Cheshire, Sunday, " 26,
Will Bro, Morgan meet me at the fork of the road Sunday morning?
Waterbury, Oct. 27.
Newfield, Tuesday evening, " 28,
to commence a series of meetings with Br Mathewson.

—:o:—

The Lord permitting, I will preach as follows:—
Detroit, Oct. 15 and 16.
Pleasant Vale, 17 and over Sunday.
Bozra, Monday and Tuesday, 20 and 21.
Detroit, Wednesday, Oct. 23.
Ripley, 25, and over Sunday.
Freeport, 31 and over Sunday Nov. 2 Bro. Leister, of Buchanan, will meet me there and accompany me to Dubuque, Iowa.

I will visit other places in Ill., if desired, if brethren will address me at Freeport and give the necessary direction. If brethren think it not best for me to visit them as proposed, will they please inform me by letter, directed to South Bend, or Laporte, Ind., or Freeport, Ill., as we do not wish to impose ourself by preaching on communities where it is not desired. L. H. Chase.

Notice.

Providence permitting, the Free Chapel at West Poland, Will be dedicated Friday, Oct. 17. Services to commence at 10 1-2 o'clock, A. M. The meeting will continue over the Sabbath.

It is hoped there will be a general gathering, and that it may be a season of interest and profit, both to the Church here, and those that may come.

Brn. E. Burnham, and J. Couch, are expected to attend.

For the brethren, Jesse Partridge.

If either of the above named brethren cannot attend, please write me, at West Poland as soon as convenient, and oblige

Yours truly, Jesse Partridge.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering [illegible] will do well to send a small amount [illegible] postage [illegible] eight ounces, or more, [illegible] per ounce.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, [illegible] many Singular Circumstances [illegible] with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very interesting book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

The following works are published and sold by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.—They are also for sale at the Office of the "World's Crisis," 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.; and by W. Pratt, Moline, Ill.; P. A. Smith, 4 Frank street, Rochester, N. Y.; A. F. Porter, 20 Erie street, Philadelphia, Pa.; S. S. Brewer, 54 Wilson street, Providence, R. I.:—

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 25 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cts.—postage 9 cents.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents; postage 16 cts.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents; postage 9 cents.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By I. C. Welcome.—23 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

JUBILEE HARP. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns well adapted to the present wants of the church. Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. Postage 7 cents.

GLAD TIDINGS, or Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to End in the Universe, by a Literal Destruction of Wicked Men and Devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment Collected and Arranged. By Jacob Blain. Price 10 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE. By William Shepherd. Price—four copies, 25 cents; nine copies, 50 cents; eighteen copies, $1; one hundred, $5—post-paid.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and The New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Single copy, 12 cents; $8 per hundred. Postage 1 cent per copy.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions of the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 16 cents per volume.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—by D. T. Taylor. Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—by John Cumming. State of the Dead, by Milton. Intermediate State, by Grew. Each 24 pages. Price 5 cents single; $3 per hundred. —Outline of the Coast of Man—Ancient Landmarks—Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—price 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred.—Future Punishment—The Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

Bro. John Emmons' P. O. address is Center, Rock Co., Wisconsin.

Br. M. L. Clark, we give you credit to the close of this vol. for all the papers sent.

F Eaton—You have paid to Vol. 1, No. 21.

H Pratt—The money you send for Z. F., pays to Vol. 4, No. 13.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise, it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

N Pendleton, C W Richards, W [illegible], L N Coburn, S Boothby, E Mitchell, B B Hoyt, F Eaton, E G Sprague, W Hart, C F Stevens M Joblin, N Branch, jr., A Packard, W C Ford, L C Ford, $1 each.

B S Clark, Mrs. F C Ross, [illegible], J S Younges, $2 each.

F S Mudgett, J J Curtis, H S Fay, A [illegible] Crabtree, C Francis, D Black, B C [illegible], [illegible] Wait, LeRoy Wait, Eld. W. Ongley, E W Russell, J Bliss, J Brown jr., 50 cents each.

W. Simms $6; M L Clark $[illegible]; [illegible] Knobb $1.25.

For Books.—brother Rogers, [illegible]

For the Poor.—Amelia Crabtree [illegible]

For Tracts.—A Friend, $4.00

[illegible] $2.00.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

"HO! PILGRIM!"

Weary and wounded with the trials of life,
Sick of its sin, its pollution and strife—
Sinks my faint heart at the dangers that throng,
Dark is my spirit and sad is my song.
Ho, pilgrim! cheer up! lo, a mighty One stands,
And beneath thee are placed his omnipotent hands.

My way lies in deserts where hurricanes wail,
The path is obscure and my courage doth fail;
And I shrink at the dangers and shrink from the foes
That my feet would beguile, and my progress oppose.
Ho! pilgrim! cheer up; in the path thou dost tread
Are the blood-crimsoned steps of thy Captain and Head.

The thorns and the briars my garments have torn,
From my home as an exile I wander forlorn;
And my foes that press on me are covered with mail.
Their blows and their arrows beat on me like hail.
Ho! pilgrim! cheer up; with the armor of God
Thou canst trample them down like the rush of a flood.

Long, long have I trod the inhospitable shore,
Long, long have I wished that my wanderings were o'er;
And my fainting heart sighs for my far distant home,
To which often I fear that I never shall come.
Ho! pilgrim! cheer up; lo, thy rest is in view!
Thou shalt see it ere long, and shalt dwell in it, too.

In the darkness I watch, 'mid the shadows I stray,
O long have I watched for the breaking of day;
But still the gloom gathers and dim grow my eyes:
Oh, say, shall no starbeam of glory arise?
Ho! pilgrim, cheer up! lo, the day-star on high
Tells of morning at hand, as it gleams on the sky.

Still sad is my soul for it pants for the love
Of the saints, who the Savior's sweet fellowship prove.
Some have turned from the way and departed from God,
Some have fallen, and sleep 'neath the valley's green sod.
Ho! pilgrim! cheer up! Jesus knoweth his own,
And his saints, dead and living shall soon be at home.

Still I fear, for alas, my sad heart I bewail,
Lest at last of the grace of my God I should fail;
Lest the morning that dawneth in glory so fair,
Shall but herald to me the dread night of despair.

Then pilgrim, walk softly, and watch o'er each way,
Live careful, and prayerful, by night and by day;
Let thine eye be on Him who to save thee hath died,
Let thy heart in His promise most surely confide.
Let thy soul become dead to the world and its charms,
Let thy trust be in God, in His word and His arms.
Let thy love wax intense, let thy zeal never fail,
Let thy courage increase and thou'lt surely prevail,
And at last in the mansions of glory and song
Thou shalt have all that's lovely, for which thou dost long;
Thou shalt find loving hearts and shall clasp kindly hands—
Thou shalt greet holy angels and join their bright bands,—
From thy Savior and God nevermore shalt thou rove,
Thou shalt bask in His sunshine and rest in his love.
Ho! pilgrim! cheer up! for thy home is in view,
And bright mansions of glory are waiting for you.

Rochester N. Y., Sept. 26, '56.

Original Articles.

Eor the Crisis.

Jews.

Reasons for not believing in the restoration of the CARNAL Jews, either before or after the second advent.

BY F. H. BERICK.

(Continued.)

7. God did certainly cause the children of Israel to return and dwell in their cities. They did build the waste cities, and "plant vineyards and make gardens." Prideaux, in speaking of their return says: "Several also of the other tribes took the benefit of this decree to return into their own land, for some of them, who were carried away by Tiglath-Pileser, Shalmaneser, and Esarhaddon, still retained the true worship of God in a strange land, and did not go into the idolatrous usages and impieties of the heathen, among whom they were dispersed, but joined themselves to the Jews, when by a like captivity, they were brought into the same parts; and some of all the Assyrian captives were left in the land.

For we find some of them still there in the time of Josiah, and they suffered the Babylonish captivity, as well as the Jews, till at length they were wholly carried away, the last of them by Nebuzaradan, in the twenty-third year of Nebuchadnezzar. And many of them had long before left their tribes for their religion, and incorporating themselves with their brethren of Judah and Benjamin, dwelt in their cities, and there fell into the same captivity, under the Babylonians. And of all these a great number took the advantage of this decree again to return and dwell in their own cities; for both Cyrus's decree, as well as that of Artaxerxes extended to all the house of Israel. The decree of Artaxerxes is by name to all the people of Israel, and that of Cyrus is to all the people of the God of Israel, that is, as appears by the text, to all those that worship God at Jerusalem, which must be understood of the people of Israel as well as of Judah; for that temple was built for both, and both had an equal right to worship God there.

And therefore Ezra, when he returned, in the reign of Artaxerxes Longimanus, sent a copy of the king's decree, whereby that favor was granted him through all Media, where ten tribes were in captivity; as well as through all Chaldea and Assyria, where the Jews were in captivity, which plainly implies, that both of them were included in that decree, and that being a renewal of the decree of Cyrus, both must be understood of the same extent.

And we are told in Scripture, that after the captivity some of the children of Ephraim and Manasseh dwelt in Jerusalem, as well as those of Judah and Benjamin.

And it appears from several places in the New Testament, that some of all the tribes were in being among the Jews even to the time of their last dispersion on the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, though then all were comprehended under the name of Jews, which after the Babylonish captivity, became the general name of the whole nation, as that of Israelites was before." [Prid. v. 1, pp. 144, 145.]

If it be objected, that, all of the ten tribes did not return, and hence, Israel did not; we reply, that, as God recognized those of the ten tribes which did return as Israel, it must suffice. For Zechariah, who was one of the prophets, and one who returned under the decree of Cyrus, and was in Jerusalem, B. C. 520, about sixteen years after the decree was given, [Ezra 5: 1,] prophesied to the Jews which were then in Judea, under the denomination of Judah and Israel; he says (chap. 8: 13, 15), 'And it shall come to pass, that, as ye were a curse among the heathen, O house of Judah, and house of Israel, so will I save you, and ye shall be a blessing; fear not, but let your hands be strong.

For thus saith the Lord of hosts; As I thought to punish you, when your fathers provoked me to wrath, saith the Lord of hosts, and I repented not: So again have I thought in these days to do well unto Jerusalem and to the house of Judah: fear ye not.'

Those whom the prophet calls (v. 13,) Israel and Judah, are in the eleventh verse called the residue; viz., remnant, and if the Lord has been pleased to denominate the remnant (which did return) Judah and Israel, why should we demur?

The same idea is to be found in Ezra 3, he says:—'And when the seventh month was come, and the children of Israel were in the cities, the people gathered themselves together as one man to Jerusalem.

Here, then, we have a restoration of the Jews to their own land, which commenced about fifty years after Ezekiel uttered this prophecy. Many of the Jews returned subsequently, at various times.

"Why not believe all the Word of God?"

8 That God did, according to the prophecy of Ezek. 39: 21, "Set his glory among the heathen," when the Jews, or Israelites under the Maccabees, succeeded in subjecting the Ammonites, Moabites, Phœnicians, Syrians &c.,—heathen nations.— This triumph of the Jews over these nations completed the prophecy of Ezek. 25 and 27: already begun by Alexander the Great, when he subdued Tyre, that proud and opulent city, whose overthrow is thus described by the prophet in v. 20. "When I shall bring thee down with them that descend into the pit, with the people of old time, and shall set thee in the low parts of the earth, in places desolate of old, with them that go down to the pit, that thou be not inhabited; and I shall set glory in the land of the living."

If Tyre has ever been destroyed, then God has set his glory among the heathen; for, he caused the Jews to inherit their land as at the first, and to rule over the heathen round about.

9. That no man will risk his reputation as a scholar on the assertion, that the expression "all the heathen," necessarily means every one whether spoken of nations or individuals.

10. That the expression in Ezek. 39: 25,—"bring again the captivity of Jacob," does not refer to the future, but has been already fulfilled. It is admitted that the captivity was brought once, or first, from Babylon, when about fifty thousand returned to their own land; and if it be true, as we are told by Josephus, who says, that Ptolemy [illegible] king of Egypt, "Set free those that were come from Jerusalem into Egypt, and were in slavery there, who were a hundred and twenty thousand," (Ant. B. 12, chap. 2,) we have the returning "AGAIN" of Jacob about B. C. 250. What a perfect fulfillment!

11. The expressions, "leave none of them" and "gather all of them," can be best understood by placing other Scriptures beside them; viz. "A remnant shall return." "I will take you one of a city, and two of a family, and I will bring you to Zion."— Why not urge the latter as well as the former? Surely they are none the less inspired. Both are true, and when rightly understood are in harmony.

12. The expression, "No more hide his face from them," &c., is no stronger in favor of an everlasting permanency, than are the declarations—"Thou shalt be only oppressed and spoiled evermore;"—"Thou shalt be only oppressed and crushed alway," against it. Why not believe every word of God? Why give so much prominence and attach so much importance to one declaration of scripture to the exclusion of others equally important? O let us be consistent.

Some seem to think that if the Almighty has not specified conditions in every chapter, and on every occasion, that his promises will be fulfilled whether or no.— But does not the Bible teach quite a different fact? Are we not told that "At what instant"—no matter when, where, or how,—"I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to pluck up, and to pull down, and destroy it; if that nation, against whom I have pronounced, turn from their evil, I will repent of the evil I thought to do unto them.

And at what instant, I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to build and to plant it: if it do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice, then will I repent of the good wherewith I said I would benefit them." Jer. 18.

Who cannot see from the foregoing, that whenever God declares good or evil concerning nations, it is to be understood that such declaration involves conditions, whether the conditions are specified or not? It is not mere assumption when we declare this to be the invariable rule upon which the Lord deals with nations, but it is presumption to assert the contrary.

Brethren, let us not be led into the belief that God is to favor the carnal Jews, either before or after the second advent, unless the hypothesis is supported by a plain "thus saith the Lord;" and that I have not been able to find.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

Seventh Day—Sabbath.

No. V.

BY W. SHELDON.

Having a little leisure, I pen a few lines more upon this topic.

It is maintained by some that God instituted the Sabbath at creation. I deny it. The facts are all against this notion. The record simply reads, "And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made: and HE rested on the seventh day." Gen. 2: 2.

It is not so much as hinted in this text, or in any other in the Bible, that God then commanded man to rest on that day.

Let no one try to get rid of this fact, for it is impossible. The record simply tells us what GOD DID on the FIRST day, and on the second day, &c., &c.

But what did he do on the seventh day? Ans.—He RESTED.

Did he tell MAN to rest also?

No! Nor have we an item of proof that that day was ever observed till the time of Moses, but much to the reverse, which we may present in due time.

1. The reason why God gave the Jews a Sabbath day, is assigned in Deut. 5: 15— "Remember that thou wast a servant in Egypt, and that the Lord brought thee out thence through a mighty hand, and by a stretched out arm; THEREFORE [or for this reason,] the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day."

This reason would not suit the case of christians.

2. The reason why God gave them the seventh day for a Sabbath, in preference to the first or sixth, is assigned in Ex. 20: 11—"For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath (or seventh) day."

It is said that the Sabbath will be in force even in the new earth, to prove which Isa. 66: 23 is quoted; "It shall come to pass, that from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the Lord."

If this proves the future observance of the sabbath, it as strongly proves the celebration of the "NEW MOON," which all admit was nailed to the cross.

The perplexity of the sabbath cannot be admitted at such an expense. Beware of unsound arguments.

Vermillion, Dakota Co., Minnesota.

Interior Life.

No. II.

Extract from T. Upham.

The relation of consecration to a full assurance of faith.

2. We proceed to mention, secondly, some considerations in support of this view; viz., that entire consecration is, and must be, the antecedent condition of entire or full assurance.

Assurance of faith, as the phrase is commonly employed by writers, is used not only to express an entire and perfect confidence on the part of those who possess it, in the character and administration of God; but also in their own personal acceptance with God through Christ.

They have no doubt, on the one hand, of the truth, mercy, and justice of God; nor have they any doubts, on the other, that they are the beloved children of God; and that in entire consistency with his truth and justice, are fully accepted of him.

Such is the nature of their assurance. But we hazard nothing in saying, that it is impossible for a man to believe with assurance of faith, that he is fully accepted of God, which is one of the leading elements, though not the only one, in the state of mind denominated assurance—while he is knowingly sinning against him; which, of course, he must be regarded as doing, so long as he remains unwilling to consecrate himself.

It is impossible, among other things, because it is contrary to the operations of the human mind in all analogous cases. It is just as impossible, as it is for us to believe that a man, whom we are injuring and ill-treating every day, and whom we also know to be acquainted with our evil conduct, can regard us as a friend. There is something in such a case, of the nature of a moral contradiction.

The two things cannot go together; and, furthermore, it is impossible, because such a belief, viz., that God does fully and cordially accept of us, while we are withholding the entire consecration of our bodies and our spirits, and are therefore knowingly sinning against him,—evidently implies a conviction on the subject of the belief that God is not necessarily displeased and offended with sin; a view of things alike contrary to reason, the character of God, and the Scriptures; and therefore not reasonably to be expected in any one.

We are constrained, therefore, to draw the conclusion (a conclusion so obvious in itself that it does not require much array of argument,) that assured confidence in the character and administration of God, combined with the additional element of assured faith in our present acceptance with him, cannot exist, except in connection with entire consecration: in other words, we must be conscious of doing all that we can in the fulfillment of God's holy will; of separating ourselves from every voluntary transgression; of discharging with divine aid every known duty; of laying all our powers, possessions, and gifts, deliberately upon the divine altar, and without any intention of ever resuming them.

The man who is truly set apart to God in consecration, strives and prays continually that he may not in the smallest thing, offend his heavenly Father.

He would infinitely prefer death to known transgression.

In this state of mind, it is easy to see that there is a natural basis for the exercise of faith, particularly the faith of personal acceptance, in the highest degree.

In such a state of things, when the obstacles which previously existed are removed, the soul naturally turns to God, and relies upon him. It becomes easy to believe, when before it was very difficult.

The holy Spirit enters and operates without obstruction in the mind, which is in this position. The promises are readily received, such a soul feels that it would be sin to doubt; and thus with the divine blessing, it rises superior to every degree of hesitation and enters into the rest of assurance.

[To be continued.]

Poetry.

HOME.

Oh, what is so sweet as a winter's night,
When the household work is done,
And the family gathers, where love and light
Bid sadness and gloom begone.

'Round the two-leaved stand the dear ones sit,
Some [illegible] read, or sew;
Or the click of the needle's steady knit
Tells of many an added row.

Speak not of the mirth of the busy crowd,
In the halls of revelry found,
For their restless joke and laughter loud
Compare not with joys so sound.

Oh, give me the pious and happy home,
Where the bond that unites is Love,
Where the will of the Holy One is done,
And his blessings sought from above!

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

Letter from sister S. J. Higgins.

BRO. GRANT:—I see in the Crisis an account of the Litchfield Campmeeting up to the time of your leaving, and if no one else furnishes you with a more interesting account, I thought it might be encouraging to the feeble and scattered flock to know the results of that meeting.

After the decision was known that most of our ministering brethren were to leave on Monday, and with them a goodly number of our brethren and sisters, we felt at first discouraged, but, after taking the subject before the Lord, we felt satisfied that our brethren had not taken away the "residue of the Spirit."

We were reminded that the work of God was not so dependent on external circumstances as man's works are; that it was "not by might or power," but by the Spirit of the Lord that good would be accomplished if any was done, and hence the glory would more directly redound to God.

We felt our weakness, and the necessity of leaning on the Lord. The result was, our expectations were not in vain; the meetings never flagged in interest till the last wagon-load left the ground.

Our beloved brother Burnham said, just before leaving the ground, that he would be willing to go many miles on his knees, if he could have the privilege of seeing one who wanted religion. I thought if he had tarried he would have had the privilege; for some five or six took up the cross, so decidedly as to rise in meeting and ask the prayers of God's people, and as a matter of course we next heard the song of the redeemed. To God be all the glory. We hardly had a meeting but some visible results were seen.

Some who left the ground and had gone to their homes in the neighboring towns felt drawn back, and were blest and quickened.

On the whole, it was the most profitable and interesting meeting I have attended for years.

I could but regret that our dear brethren who had preached and prayed and labored, were not present to see the fruit of their labors.

But blessed be God, when we all get home we shall be permitted to see that it has not been in vain that we have gone "forth weeping, bearing precious seed" for we "shall doubtless come again bringing our sheaves" with us; and they will shine as stars in the crowns of our rejoicing, and the great Head of the Church will know how to put the stars in the right crowns. Oh! a soul redeemed to shine eternally in glory, through the instrumentality of a feeble, erring mortal! Amazing condescension! that God should use mortal worms to carry out his purposes of mercy and love! But so it is. If we abide in Christ we shall bring forth much fruit.

I am fully convinced that the "Lord's hand is not shortened that it cannot save," but whenever God's people stand where they can claim His promises, they have only to ask him in faith, and he will pour out his spirit, and sinners will feel their danger whether they will repent or not.— And O, sinner, remember it. Every time the claims of the gospel are made to bear upon your heart through the agency of the Spirit, and you do not yield to its demand —"Son, daughter, give me thy heart,"— you grieve the spirit; and as sure as you now have it, so sure it will not always strive.

"Every time your heart is softened by the spirit's benefiting influences and is rejected, it is grieved, and your heart becomes harder, and you are 'treasuring up wrath against the day of wrath.'"

The same sun that ripens the wheat, ripens also the tares, and they will both be fully ripe when the sickle is thrust in to [illegible] and it depends entirely on our own choice whether we are gathered to shine as the sun in the kingdom, or are left to burn with the chaff. May we all be wise for ourselves: for if we are indifferent, or scorn, we alone must bear it.

From your sister, still praying, "Thy kingdom come." S. J. HIGGINS.

Salem, Oct. 2, '56.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. R. R. Warren.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel like a pilgrim and stranger in a strange land, journeying to a better country; and truly, if I was mindful of the one from whence I came out, I might return, but now I desire an heavenly, even a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God; "choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt, for I have respect unto the recompense of the reward.

I do praise the Lord for what he is doing for me in these last days of peril, and for the grace he gives me to overcome. Yes, blessed be His name, He is a present help in time of trouble, and will never leave nor forsake those that put their trust in Him.

O brethren and sisters, are we trusting wholly in the Lord, or are we trusting in ourselves, or some of the professed watchmen to guide our frail bark on life's tempestuous ocean? It is high time we are sure the true pilot is at the helm.

"Though rocks and quicksands deep
Through all my passage lie;
Yet Christ will safely keep,
And guard me with his eye.
My anchor, hope, will firm abide,
And every boisterous storm outride."

I love the Lord with all my heart, and am trying to serve him with all my ransomed powers. I desire to live before the world in such a way, that my good shall not be evil spoken of. What doth it profit my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and hath not works? Can faith save him? Nay, verily, "Faith without works is dead, being alone."

"So let our lips and lives express
The holy gospel we profess;
So let our works and virtues shine,
To prove the doctrine all divine."

Well, brethren and sisters, we are almost home, and O, let us live the little time we have to stay here as becometh the followers of Jesus. Let us adorn our profession by a well ordered life and godly conversation, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ; whom not having seen we love, and believing in him we rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory. If faithful a little longer we shall receive the end of our faith, even the salvation of our souls.

Then let us not shun to declare the whole counsel of God: live with an eye single to his glory at all times, and in all places, and be ready to give to every one that asketh us, a reason of the hope that is in us, with meekness and fear; and let our light so shine that others may see our good works and glorify our Father which is in Heaven. Let us take to ourselves the whole armor of God that we may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, stand without spot and blameless.

O praise the Lord I should love to see just such a company as will stand on Mt. Zion, redeemed, with crowns on their heads and palms of victory in their hands. Having "come up out of great tribulation they have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.' Therefore, are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his Temple, and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them." "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them and lead them unto living fountains of waters, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

The Lord grant that I may be there when he shall make up his people.

RACHEL R. WARREN.

Chickopee Falls, Sept. 28, 1856.

The London Times, in speaking of the degeneracy of the pulpit, closes thus: "We ask for no polished periods, but simply for burning thoughts, couched in simple and homely phrase, such as those which in other days, drew man from earth to heaven."

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1856. WHOLE NO. 60. VOL. IV. NO. [illegible]

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY, BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Incidents by the Way.

No. III.

BY S. S. BREWER.

Wednesday morning, Sept. 17.—A clear sky. Old ocean seems troubled; his hoarse, heavy murmuring, sounds like the muttering of the distant thunder. After attending to the duties of reading the Scriptures and giving thanks to God for safety by night, and invoking his protection for the day, we spent the morning in the examination of some points of history and prophecy. After dinner, we walked in company with brother Lee to the south-west side of the Neck, to the Indian burying ground.

Here, in silence unbroken and profound, sleeps the red man, who, but a few short years since, could say,—

"From centre all round to the sea,
I'm lord of the fowl and the brute."

The feet that trod in lordly aboriginal pride; the hand that twanged the bow-string, kindled the council fire, and paddled the swift canoe, has long since mingled with its kindred dust.

The voice that once made these sea-girdled wilds ring with the shrill war-whoop, and chimed in merry notes at a festive pow-wow, is silent.

"Lo, the poor Indian, whose untutored mind Sees God in the sun, and hears him in wind."

Here he sleeps till the trump of God shall wake him to life again.

One of the most touching strains of plaintive eloquence I ever read is said to have been uttered by a widowed mother, a daughter of an Indian chief. Weeping over the graves of her husband and child, she is said to have spoken the following:

"The great Father of light and life has taken from me the core of my heart, and the apple of mine eye, and placed them in two graves. I will water one with the tears of mine eyes, and the other with the milk of my breast, till I get to the land where the sun never sets."

My mind seems inclined to melancholy mood, as I permit it to dwell upon a sad catastrophe that occurred not far distant from where I now stand, and concerning which I shall shortly speak. I will take my leave of these sandy mounds where the red man sleeps in silence, with one lingering look.

The sun is fast approaching his hiding place. My head threatens me with a sleepless night. I will return to my usual stopping place, brother David Bunn's.

Night has closed around us. The ever restless sea roars as usual. The murmuring of the wind has subsided. The nocturnal chirper, the cricket, has commenced his monotonous melody. The hours come and go. O, how richly burdened with consolation is the promise,—"And there shall be no more pain." "As darkness shows us stars by night we cannot see by day," so affliction and sorrow show us joy in the trying hour.

There, the clock goes tick, tick, tick. It has struck ten, eleven, twelve. There goes one—tick, tick, tick. There—two, three, and now it has just struck four. I am weary with tossing to and fro—morning comes—well, thank the good Lord, I have passed over that painful part of the road to the better land, and shall not have to retrace those lonely hours of my painful night's pilgrimage.

Weary and worn, nature at last yields and I fall into a short slumber. O how thankful my poor heart felt, when I awoke to feel freed from such severe anguish.

To-night is appointed for preaching. The hour comes, and praise the Lord, strength and needed grace comes with it. A few came out to hear, and we spoke about one hour on the signs of the Lord's return. Thankful to my Heavenly Father for his sustaining grace, I retired to rest and was soon conveyed seven hour's journey o'er the road to Canaan, in an unconscious state.

When I awoke in the morning I concluded that David and all the worthies of whom Paul declares,—"They without us, should not be made perfect,"—knew as much as I did about that part of the road; and I knew as much as they did, and the knowledge of both, is it not written in the book of Ecclesiastes 9 : 5?

Thursday morning, Sept. 18.—Spent the morning in reading and writing. After dinner, brother Smith carried me to South Hampton grave-yard, a spot I had long desired to visit. Here rests the dust of a brother I fondly loved, my father's eldest son, Geo. A. Brewer, who sailed from Philadelphia as first mate of the brig Columbia, Capt. Welsh, for New York; and was cast away in Sept. 1823. There in that little spot rests the loved form f him whose face was mantled with such a sweet smile as we whiled away in merry glee the happy hours of childhood. Alas, those halcyon hours have fled.

Father, mother—O those endearing names! None to answer! Brothers—gone, gone, all gone—torn from each loved embrace. O, Death, Death! thou monster, thou hast severed those fond ties. My heart is riven with anguish. The hoary locks and venerated form of my sire, and my mother, could not appease thy adamantine heart. But my loved off-spring have again and again fallen victims to thy insatiable desire to make a parent's heart bleed. Thanks and adoration to him that hath the keys of Death; thy reign is about to terminate. Then we shall have one vast, universal monarchy, without a devil, pain, sickness, sorrow or death.

Well, it is time to return to our homes. We left the place of graves to visit a spot to be referred to at a future time.

Friday, I spent in writing. On Saturday morning, the 20th of Sept. in company with brother Lee, we left in a small sail boat for South Hampton beach. After reaching, as near as I could ascertain, the spot where the lifeless body of my poor brother was dashed on shore by the raging waves, the scene before me became one of awe, and solemnity. What a theme for poor, puny, insignificant men to contemplate. The sea, the sea? The great, broad, deep, unfathomable ocean, where go innumerable sorts of living things.

The sky is overcast, and a dark cloud hangs gloomily in the distance o'er the bosom of the great father of waters. The winds begin to howl, and the thunder is now booming in the distance.

A storm is arising. The white crests of the rising billows begin to rear their heads in the distance, and the angry waves wash towards the shore foaming and dashing in fury at our feet.

Here, perhaps, on the spot I now stand, the storm-king laid the loved form of my brother; from here they bore him to the place of graves. Let me gather some memento to convey from this spot.

The storm is approaching—we will ascend the beach. And now one long, last final farewell to a place I shall visit no more.

After reefing our sail we put off for home, which, with a stiff breeze we soon reached. After dinner, I commenced writing and continued until retiring to rest.

O haste the day when the sea shall give up her dead, and the earth no more cover her slain.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

Three Texts Considered.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

"For the living know that they shall die; but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten." Eccl. 9 : 5.

Modernly, this text is made to read, "For the living know that their bodies will die, and their spirits will know everything, and enter into their reward."

I will ask the "wise ones" what life is there in the body without the spirit?

It is the spirit in the body, and through the body that is alive; and not the body in the spirit.

What is it, then, that dies? is it the life, or that which the life was in?

"The body without the spirit IS dead," and not the body without the spirit shall die.

"The spirit shall return to God who gave it." The word spirit, here, is simply breath, and the same word is used, throughout the Old Testament, in relation to both man and beast. Why not, then, simply believe that God gave man breath in the beginning, and when man dies, his breath returns to God who gave it, and man knows "not anything" till he lives again, in the resurrection?

This seems easy to believe.

But it is said that "if this text proves that if a dead man knows nothing, in any sense, then it proves, too, man will never have any reward."

It proves no such thing. It says no such thing. This text does not say—neither shall the dead have any more reward—but, "neither HAVE they any more a reward." The word is present tense.

The idea is plainly this—The dead know not anything, neither have they (while they are dead, and know not anything, of course) any more a reward:" nor can they ever have, unless they rise again; and if they do not rise again then those that "are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."

How plain! This must appear to us to be the meaning when we notice the last clause of the text, and the following verse:

"For the memory of them is forgotten. Also their love and their hatred, and their envy IS NOW perished; neither HAVE they any more a portion forever in anything that is done under the sun." If their souls are alive and "their love" is "perished," I cannot envy their condition!

What, their love dead and they alive! I should think, that if their love is dead, that that which loves must be too.

It is not said that the memory of them shall never be remembered; but, "the memory of them IS forgotten." It is not said, neither shall they ever have a portion in anything that is done under the sun; but, neither HAVE they any more"—that is, while they are dead, and know nothing.

Is this inspiration or not? Shall we believe God, or shall we set up our own wisdom?

II.

"His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Ps. 146 : 4.

Who is in this condition?

"The son of man in whom there is no help." Ps. 146 : 3.

Is it the son of man really, or is it only "his shell?"

"His breath"—not his immortal soul—"goeth forth"—not goeth into the spirit land—"he returneth"—not his body only—"his thoughts"—not his earthly thoughts—"perish"—not grow more brilliant.

But, it is said, "it means his plans and purposes, which he had arranged to carry into effect."

It means no such thing. It says no such thing. And indeed, that would not be true—because when princes die, those who came after them, generally, or often carry out their plans and purposes.

Would it not be better to be simple-hearted, and believe it just as it stands?

III.

"For behold the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." Mal. 4 : 1.

This means, says one, "burn up father and son."

What if the son is an infant? What if there are no children that are wicked? But do you really believe they will be "burned up?"

What will be left then? Can they be "burned up," and still be living?

"O, it is their bodies."

What only the body suffer for sin! how is this? has the body only sinned?

"O, it is a figure of eternal misery."

What burned "up" a figure of eternal perpetuation! What book of language do you study?

But let me tell you it does not mean "father and son."

Let us see. Just take the Concordance and trace this word "root and branch" through the Bible, and find how many times it means "father and son," and then see how many times it means the entire or whole of a thing, and we think all will be satisfied.

For the Crisis.

"Man, Know Thyself."

BY F. MATTHEWS.

The knowledge of ourselves is important, because without it we shall never take our proper places, nor gain a knowledge of our obligations.

This knowledge is always a fruit of solemnly calling ourselves to an account, and of carefully watching the exercises of our minds.

To observe seasons of retirement, is a compliance with the duty enjoined by our divine Teacher, of entering into the closet and of shutting the door.

Such retirement helps meditation, prayer and self-acquaintance.

Of the Patriarch Isaac, we read, that "he went out to meditate in the field at eventide."

Jacob, under his troubles, was alone all night, wrestling in prayer.

David, as appears in his writings, was often employed in thinking on his own ways, or in reviewing his life and examining his heart.

To such precious scenes he alluded, when he penned the following words, in the seventy-seventh Psalm; "In the day of my trouble I sought the Lord: my sore ran in the night, and ceased not; my soul refused to be comforted.

I remembered God, and was troubled: I complained, and my spirit was overwhelmed. Thou holdest my eyes waking; I am so troubled I cannot speak. I have considered the days of old, the years of ancient times.

I call to remembrance my song in the night; I commune with my own heart; and my spirit made dilligent search."

And in another Psalm;—"I thought on my ways, and turned my feet unto thy testimonies.

I made haste and delayed not, to keep thy commandments."

Had not this pious man, amidst all his cares, reserved some time to commune with his own heart, he would have lived and died like most other men, a stranger to himself. At the close of an active and laborious life, he might have taken up the sad lamentation,—"they made me the keeper of the vineyards; but my own vineyard have I not kept."

But we have a brighter example than that of David, or the patriarchs.

The Savior of the world had his seasons of withdrawing from the multitude who thronged around him to hear his instructions, and even from the disciples who composed his particular family, that he might commune with God and his own heart.

This, he viewed an important part of his duty, and, by his example, he has enjoined the same on all his friends.

"O God, thou hast taught me from my youth; and hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works."

"He established a testimony in Jacob, and appointed a law in Israel which he commanded our fathers, that they should make them known to their children."

"Marvelous things did he in the sight of their fathers, in the land of Egypt, in the field of Zoan.

He divided the sea, and caused them to pass through; and he made the waters to stand as a heap. In the daytime also he led them with a cloud, and all the night with a light of fire.

He clave the rocks in the wilderness, and gave them drink as out of the great depths. He brought streams also out of the rock and caused waters to run down like rivers. * * * And had rained down manna upon them to eat, and has given them of the corn of heaven. * * And guided them in the wilderness like a flock."

To obtain a knowledge of ourselves, we must also carefully compare our feelings and practice, with the requirements of the gospel. The gospel, it is true, is good news for sinners. Does it countenance them in their sins?

No. The requirements of the gospel are strict, and, like the law, which we have been considering, they try the heart of men.

The language of the gospel is, "He that believeth shall be saved."

An infinite favor is here promised, on a certain condition. The condition is that we renounce all dependence on our own strength, acknowledge ourselves to be in a helpless condition, and that we embrace with our hearts the all-perfect righteousness of Jesus Christ.

Without that faith which implies all this, what benefit are we to expect from the gospel?

None at all; for the gospel is considered as an overture of God to fallen man.

Therefore it is added, "he that believeth not shall be damned."

A preached gospel misimproved, will leave men in a state an hundred fold more to be dreaded than that of the heathen.

The gospel is represented by its divine Author to be a test of character. Men are to know themselves by coming into the light of it. Therefore, it is written, "Every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved. But, he that doeth truth, cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wro't in God."

"Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only doeth wondrous things.

And blessed be his glorious name forever, and let the whole earth be filled with his glory." Amen and Amen.

Charlestown.

Interior Life.

No. III.

Extract from T. Upham.

The relation of consecration to a full assurance of faith.

Concluded.

Perhaps it should be added further, in order to meet an inquiry naturally arising in the minds of some, that faith, in the highest degree, or assurance of faith, although we have reason to think it never fails to follow the act of consecration sooner or later in the case of minds not unfavorably affected by some physical or mental disorder, does not always immediately follow such consecrating act.

There are various incidental causes, which sometimes operate to check and diminish the exercise of assurance of faith for a time, notwithstanding the consecrating act; such as a general ignorance on the subject of faith, and particularly previous habits of unbelief, the unfavorable influence of which does not always cease at once.

And it is not irrational to suppose, that there may also be reasons existing in the mind of God, but unknown to us, why he should see fit to delay temporarily the bestowment of this great gift, especially in that particular, which relates to our personal acceptance and safety.

Accordingly it is said in Heb. 10 : 36, 37, "Ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise; for yet a little while, and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry."

But God does not delay, even for the "yet a little while" arbitrarily and without reason, although we may be ignorant of what that reason is.

I believe it is a common and correct opinion, that the delay exists only so long as God sees best for the person himself; in other words he delays, in order to wean him more effectually from all reliance upon anything but simple, child-like trust in the divine word; and thus to prepare him for the reception of the blessing under the most favorable circumstances.

There is perhaps, some hidden tendency, which is scarcely known to the individual himself, such as a disposition to look for some specific sign or manifestation, or something of that nature, which remains to be smitten and crucified: and which, there is no doubt, will be crucified and taken out of the way, as soon as the person himself learns, in connection with God's continued dealings with him, where and what it is.

But I do not suppose that God will thus withhold himself, even for a moment, from one who is fully prepared for him in all respects; and who in connection with the fact of entire consecration, is truly willing irrespective of joys and sorrows, of human aid and opposition, of the light of vision, and of the terrors of darkness, to live in that simple and mysterious way of faith alone.

"Come ye out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing and I will receive you and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and my daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

And permit me here to inquire of the individual who has had the patience and kindness to follow me thus far, whether you have been able to apply the truths and principles, which have been brought to notice, to your own self?

Do you believe that God requires you to be holy? that he has made provisions for your sanctification in the present life; and that there is any reasonable prospect, with divine assistance, of attaining to this desirable state?

Have you felt, with the sincerity and depth of feeling appropriate to the case, the obligation to be holy?

Relying upon the sanctifying results of that same great expiation on the cross, which is the foundation of your hope of pardon for past sins, have you deliberately and decidedly brought all and laid all upon the altar of God, as a sacrifice offered and consecrated to him?

Have you believed in God, that he is true to his word, which declares him to have an open arm for the returning sinner; and that, from the moment of your laying all upon his altar, you have been and are now accepted?

Is your faith not only of that personal or appropriating character which applies God's word and promise to yourself, but is it a strong faith?

Is it, as the faith of every Christian ought to be, the assurance of faith or faith of assurance? like that of the hundreds, who have sealed the truth of their hope by saying in the fire at the stake, [illegible]

Permit me to say, my brother, in the [illegible]

[illegible] spirit of sincere humility and [illegible], that the way, in which you are called to walk, is what it is represented to be in the scriptures, "a straight and narrow one;" but it is obvious, also, that it must be a way which differs from every other way.

I appeal to you to say, under the guidance of an enlightened christian conscience, whether it is not in the direction, or very nearly in the direction, indicated by these questions?

Most solemnly and deliberately do we affirm our conviction, that, in order to know God by an inward communion with him, all must be laid upon the divine altar with a renunciation without limits; and that he who brings the offering, must believe with a faith unwavering, that God accepts it.

Is it in your power, relying either upon scripture or upon reason, to indicate any better way?—if not, then delay no longer; cease to feed on husks that you may eat spiritual bread; renounce the life of self, that you may possess the life of universal love; be all to God, that he may be all to you.

I sat me down in earth's benighted vale,
And had no courage, and no strength to rise;
Sad to the passing breeze I told my tale,
And bowed my head and drained my weeping eyes.
But faith came by, and took me by the hand;
And now the valleys rise, the mountains fall;
Welcome the stormy sea! the dangerous land!
With faith to aid me, I can conquer all.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 22, 1856.

Questions.

Further answers to the questions of our Sister in Christ.

No. II.

"Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth." Eccl. 3: 21.

Ques. Is the spirit that goeth upward inspired by the Almighty?"

Ans. We are at loss to know the point in this question. If our sister enquires whether the spirit in this Scripture is the same as in Eccl. 12: 7, where we read—"The spirit shall *re*turn to God who gave it;" we answer yes. Both are translated from the same word, ruakh, which is rendered breath in Eccl. 3: 19, where it is said of man and beast, that "they have all one breath."

If the point in the question be to know whether the Lord gave this spirit; we should answer again in the affirmative; and when the Lord takes it away "they die and *re*turn to their dust."

We think a more faithful translation of Eccl. 3: 22, is found in the Septuagint, Vulgate, Chaldee Paraphrase, Syriac, and Arabic, which read instead of—"that goeth upward"—'whether it goeth upward."

The idea is, as expressed in our translation, who knows that the spirit of man goes upward, and the spirit of the beast downward to the earth.

The Septuagint version of verses 19–21 reads—

"Also to them is the event of the sons of man, and the event of the brute; one event befalls them; as is the death of the one, so also the death of the other; and there is one breath to all; and what has the man more than the brute?

Nothing; for all is vanity. All go to one place; all were formed of the dust, and all will return to dust. And who has seen the spirit of the sons of man, whether it goes upward? and the spirit of the beast whether it goes downward to the earth?"

But why does Solomon ask the question—"who knoweth," &c.?

We answer, because of the heathen philosophy then prevalent, which he is endeavoring to overthrow.

Says Wm. Tyndale, who first translated the Bible into the English language—"The heathen philosophers did put that the souls did even live." Hear them.

Herodotus, the oldest historian whose writings are extant, says,—

"The Egyptians say that Ceres and Bacchus hold the chief sway in the infernal regions; and the Egyptians, also were the first who asserted the doctrine that the soul of man is immortal, and that when the body perishes it enters into some other animal, constantly springing into existence; and when it has passed through the different kinds of terrestrial, marine, and aerial beings, it again enters into the body of a man that is born; and that this revolution is made in three thousand years;" Herodotus, p. 144.

Such was the philosophy of those times.

But the wise man of the Bible declares quite a different sentiment. He affirms that men and beasts are all made of dust; that they have all one breath, or spirit, and that they all turn to dust again; so that, as Paul says; if there is no resurrection of the dead, "then they also which have fallen asleep in Christ are PERISHED."

This cannot be true if the spirit is the man and goes to heaven at death. Solomon says (Eccl. 12: 7) the spirit returns to God. As God is in heaven, if the spirit or breath is the man, then it follows that man came from heaven, and at dealh returns again; but the Bible declares that man was made of the dust of the ground, and that at death he returns to dust.

This truth is very plainly taught in the Scriptures. Notice one text. Gen. 3: 19. "In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground, (not heaven) for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.

We would enquire if the Lord is not addressing the conscious part of man, when he says—"thou?" Well, that which he addresses as the intelligent part or being, is to *re*turn to dust again, and wait for life till the resurrection of the dead "at the last day."

Special Notice.

To the subscribers of the Prophetic Messenger:—Dear brethren, we have now sent sixteen numbers of the Crisis, besides the fourteen sent by request of brother Morgan in the place of the Messenger.

We are sorry to be under the necessity of discontinuing the Crisis to those from whom we have not heard; but will say if there are any who wish the paper continued who are not ablo to pay now, if they will signify it by writing, we will gladly send it; or if any are poor and wish it, if we can be apprised of the fact, they shall have the paper so long as we are able to furnish it.

We hope to hear a more hearty response from the West.

Notice.

It will be observed that our whole No. from the commencement of the Crisis as marked on the last paper is 13; but, for our convenience, hereafter, we shall give the whole No. from the time it was changed to a subscription paper, which is now 60.

The New Book.

LIFE OF BRO. MUNGER,—published by H. L. Hastings.

This book has been read by us and others, that think the attention of our brethren ought to be called to it in particular, as it is calculated to do sinners and backsliders good, as well as the children of God. The nature of this narative will secure the reading of the whole book, when once commenced, as but few books will; and a number have already been led to review their past lives and experience and have commenced anew to serve the Lord; some that had been in spiritualism.

We hope the brethren and sisters will send in their orders immediately to this office as we have a supply. Your 50 cts., will be well laid out and help brother Hastings pay the debt he has accumulated in bringing this book before the public.

An Appeal to My Brethren.

DEARLY BELOVED IN THE LORD:—I wish to settle up my book accounts and pay some borrowed money I owe; and I now make the following proposition to those owing me for books. If you will deduct ten per cent from the wholesale price for all you have on hand now unsold and forward the amount of what you have sold to me, you will do me a very great favor. Brethren help me in this matter.

Address—S. S. Brewer, No. 54 Wilson st., Providence, R. I.

A SPECIAL APPEAL.

Do read this appeal and HEED it. I wish to publish another edition of my "GOSPEL VINDICATOR," (a work of 167 pages,) for gratuitous distribution in Minnesota. It will cost comparatively but little to do it, as it is already stereotyped. It is just the work needed to follow up the "Key of Truth," as it removes the many objections to our faith. How much will you now pledge for the object to be paid January 1st 1857?

Send your pledges to the Crisis immediately, that I may arrange accordingly. Who will pledge $1, $5, or $10?

Remember that this is missionary ground, and GOD has a claim upon your dollars!

Friends, you must help. Do not refuse.—If more than enough should be pledged, it will be used to issue the fifth edition of the "Key of truth." "Let us not be weary in well doing." W. SHELDON.

Vermillion, Dakota Co., Minnesota,

Request.

The church in Springfield, Mass., request, for their accommodation, that brethren sending them appointments will direct to R. E. Ladd, Corresponding Secretary.

E. WHITNEY.

Try to be Useful.

Yes, try to be useful, and be useful at all times and in all places, on all occasions and under all circumstances.

Time is passing, moments are precious, and the present is all we can call our own. Millions around us are perishing for the want of light, labor, and a holy influence.

And shall we sit quietly in the enjoyment of earthly pleasure, the allurements of time and sense, regardless of the demand upon our energies and labors of love?

Shall we shrink from toil, care, obligation and responsibility, or the self-denial and sacrifices requisite to a life-time spent in doing good? Shall we consult our own ease, and comfort, and convenience, rather than the woes and wants of the suffering and benighted around us?

Are there not sufficient inducements in the Bible for all christians to go forward in the discharge of every duty, the performance of every good word and work? Do any doubt or hesitate?—go to the book—God's Book—examine it, pray over it; see if it does not require our time, talents, property, affections, all— the entire consecration of our whole being!

God's people are left to fill up the measure of Christ's sufferings by imitating his example, by a life spent in his cause, promoting his glory on earth.

Shrink not, beloved, from following the footsteps of your divine Master, even though as a result, poverty, loss of friends, persecution and death should mark your pathway, or a crown of thorns be your chaplet, yet let such ever pursue, indefatigably and resolutely, cheered by the glorious prospect of a blessed immortality with Christ at his coming, when the mysterious warfare of earth will be joyfully explained and sweetly made to harmonize with your salvation and the glory of God.—[Golden Rule.

Eor the Crisis.

Jews.

Reasons for not believing in the restoration of the CARNAL Jews, either before or after the second advent.

BY F. H. BERICK.

No. III.

(Continued.)

The only ground upon which the Jews can claim a right to participate in the promises made to Abraham is by virtue of their being the children of Abraham.

They did undoubtedly suppose, that by being Abraham's descendants by natural generation, constituted them heirs to the promises; thereby losing sight of the most important feature in the plan of God, which required implicit faith in, and obedience to the requisitions of Jehovah in order to constitute their claim valid.

That they were the children of Abraham according to the flesh was admitted by the Savior, John 8: 37; but at the same time he gave them to understand that if they would be Abraham's children in that higher and more perfect sense; i. e., his by faith, they must do the works of Abraham.

To be Abraham's seed in the abstract was not sufficient, they must have the faith of Abraham.

That there were promises made to the Jews by virtue of their connection with Abraham, through Isaac and Jacob, we do not question: otherwise, the children of Hagar and Keturah would have shared in the promises. But while they were the seed to whom the promises related, and for whom they were made, yet, being destitute of that religious character for which Abraham was so highly distinguished, they failed to sustain their claim, and hence were rejected.

To show this fact more fully we must have recourse to the Scriptures.

We may remark that the Lord in all of the promises which he has made to the children of men, in which their moral agency is involved, has either specified or implied certain conditions which if complied with, secures the blessings specified; but if not complied with, they lose whatever blessings are involved.

They invalidate their claim by their acts of disobedience or non-compliance.

Abraham was required to walk before God in a perfect manner; and the very reason why the Lord favored him with so many promises, was because he was faithful in all things.

Whatever the Lord required of him he was ready to perform. It was on account of his obedience that he received that faithful testimony from Jehovah,—"Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws." It is said of him that he "believed God and it was counted unto him for righteousness."

The same fact is clearly developed in the history of his numerous progeny.—"Now therefore" says Moses, "if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people; for all the earth is mine. And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and an holy nation."

Again, "But if thou shalt indeed obey his voice, and do all that I speak; then I will be an enemy unto thine enemies, and an adversary unto thine adversaries."

The conditions on which they were to inherit the promised blessings, are, if possible, still more explicit.

The Lord informs them that if they will walk in his statutes, that he will give them rain in due season, the land shall yield her increase, and in a word that five of them shall chase a hundred, and an hundred shall put ten thousand to flight.

But if they did not walk after his commandments and keep his precepts, he would bring upon them "terror, consumption, pestilence, blasting, mildew, blindness, madness, fever, and the sword," and that they should become a "by-word among all nations;" all of which has, as we shall endeavor to show, come upon them, which they admit themselves is in consequence of their transgressions.

If we were destitute of all the facts which go to make up their history as a people for the last two thousand years, the fact of their present condition, being, as they most certainly are, dispossessed of their land, and scattered among the nations of the earth with the curse of God heavily resting upon them; we should know that they, by their repeated transgressions, had forfeited all claim to the promises made to Abraham.

In order to see the faithfulness of God, we have only to cast our eye to the history of the Jews, a history which shows how the Lord has rewarded both the obedience of his friends, and the disobedience of his enemies.

In the Pentateuch, in which we have the history of the Israelites from their descent into Egypt to the death of Moses, we learn that when the time of the promise drew nigh when God was to deliver his people from servitude, that he sent Moses to lead his people out of Egypt.

Moses encouraged them with the fact that God was about to give them the land of Canaan, "the lot of their inheritance." They came out of Egypt according to the promise which God made to Abraham, with "a mighty hand, and an out-stretched arm;" all was expectation and joy. But what a sequel!

Those very persons who had seen the wonders which were wrought by the power of God, and had received the promise of entering the land of Canaan, were called upon to listen to the awful declaration of Jehovah, "Your carcases shall fall in the wilderness; and all that were numbered of you, according to your whole number, from twenty years old and upward, which have murmured against me, doubtless ye shall not come into the land concerning which I sware to make you dwell therein, save Caleb the son of Jephunneh, and Joshua the son of Nun."

The apostle in his comment on this gives us the reason why the Lord deprived them of going into the land. He says: "So we see they could not enter in because of unbelief."

This teaches us that the fact of their being the natural descendants of Abraham was not a sufficient title to the land of promise. Faith, the great characteristic, was wanting, hence their expectations were blasted.

After the death of the great multitude, Joshua brought the remnant of the Israelites into the land; drove out the nations in part, and gave direction in relation to the division of the land among the tribes. Just before his death he charged them to serve the Lord faithfully, for on the conditions viz: faith and obedience, depended their prosperity; but if they forsook the Lord and served strange gods, then, said he, will the Lord "turn and do you hurt, and consume you after that he hath done you good."

In the subsequent history of this people we have a verification of the words of Joshua.

We read in Judges that "the children of Israel did evil in the sight of the Lord, and he sold them into the hand of the King of Mesopotamia and they served him eight years.

But the Lord, who is as faithful in fulfilling his promises as his threatenings, did, when they repented and "cried unto the Lord," send a deliverer. Again they sinned and he gave them into the hand of the king of Moab for eighteen years, then they repented and he delivered them again.

Thus during the Judges the Israelites were in servitude to the surrounding nations no less than six times. This evil was brought upon them because they sinned against the Lord and broke the covenant. And in no instance did the Lord ever deliver them until they heartily repented and confessed their sins.

But the instances to which we have referred do not compare with the subsequent part of their history. In order, therefore, to understand more fully the circumstances in the case, we must examine more critically.

In the examination of this subject one fact is worthy of our consideration, i. e. Amos, Hosea, and Isaiah were cotemporary prophets. This being the case, it is reasonable to suppose that many of their predictions relate to the same events; and, inasmuch as the majority of the Israelites did, during the lives of these prophets, depart from the Lord and serve other gods, the denunciations uttered by them must, as a general thing, apply to the Jews previous to their separation from the Babylonish captivity. Let us then notice some of the predictions of Amos.

"Thus saith the Lord, for three transgressions of Judah, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because they have despised the law of the Lord, and have not kept his commandments, and their lies caused them to err, after the which their fathers have walked: but I will send a fire upon Judah, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem.

Thus saith the Lord, for three transgressions of Israel, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because they sold the righteous for silver, and the poor for a pair of shoes; that pant after the dust of the earth on the head of the poor, and turn aside the way of the meek," etc. Amos 2: 4—7.

In the above passages both the people of Judah and Israel are involved.

Again, "Hear this word, ye kine of Bashan, that are in the mountain of Samaria, which oppress the poor, which crush the needy, which say to their masters, bring, and let us drink.

The Lord God hath sworn by his holiness, that, lo, the days shall come upon you, that he will take you away with hooks, and your posterity with fish hooks." chap. 4: 1, 5.

"Therefore will I cause you to go into captivity beyond Damascus, saith the Lord, whose name is the God of hosts." Chap. 5: 27.

In chap. 8, he declares the end is come upon my people of Israel, and after setting forth their sins he says ver. 9.—"And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord God, that I will cause the sun to go down at noon, and I will darken the earth in the clear day."

In this last passage which was spoken more particularly against the house of Jeroboam II, two years before "the great earthquake," chap. 1: 1, and which is more fully described by the prophet in chap. 8: 8, he probably referred to the great eclipse which occurred in the last year of Jeroboam's reign.

"According to Usher, there happened a great eclipse of the sun, ten digits in magnitude, (and which, perhaps, in Samaria might have been total.)" (1).

Thus we see how perfectly God fulfilled this last prediction. With regard to Israel being carried captive beyond Damascus or Babylon, for this is rendered Babylon by Stephen in Acts 7: 43, we have a complete fulfillment. For "Tiglath-Pileser, on his return into Assyria, carried with him great numbers of the people, whom he had taken captive in the kingdom of Damascus, and in the land of Israel. Those of Damascus he planted in Kir, and those of Israel in Halah.—(1) Dr. Hales v. 2: p. 414.

Habor, Hard, and on the river Gozan, in the land of the Medes" (2) 1 Chron. 5: 25, 26.

Thus we see how God fulfilled his word. This was the commencement of a series of evils which came upon Israel. Hosea, the prophet, does not stop with a partial carrying away of Israel, but predicts the complete overthrow of their kingdom. He says:

"And the Lord said unto him, Call his name Jezreel; for yet a little while, and I will avenge the blood of Jezreel on the house of Jehu, and will cause to cease the house of Israel; . . . . but I will utterly take them away." Chap. 1: 4—6.

Again, "Samaria shall become desolate; for she hath rebelled against her God; they shall fall by the sword; their infants shall be dashed in pieces" etc. Chap. 13: 16.

Isaiah not only predicts the dissolution of the kingdom of Israel but the time when it shall be done; he says,—"The head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin; and within threescore and five years shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people." Chap. 7: 8.

These prophecies of Hosea and Isaiah were literally accomplished, both in relation to manner and time. For "Shalmanasar, in the beginning of the fourth year of Hezekiah, marched with an army against him (Hoshea), and having subdued all the country round, pent him up in Samaria, and there besieged him three years; at the end of which he took the city, and thereon putting Hoshea in chains, he shut him up in prison all his days, and carried the people into captivity, placing them in Halah, and in Habor, and in the other cities of the Medes, where Tiglath-Pileser had before placed those whom he had carried into captivity out of the same land." (3). And to accomplish more fully the prediction of Isaiah, Esarhaddon, in the twenty-second year of Manasseh's reign marched into the land of Israel; and there taking captive all that remained of the former captivities (excepting only some few, who escaped his hands, and continued still in the land) and carried them into Babylon and Assyria. (4.)

Thus all these prophecies concerning the overthrow of Israel were accomplished and their kingdom fully subverted.

(2) Prid. Vol. 1, p. 68.
(3) ib. p. 71.
(4) ib. p. 79.

[To be continued.]

Extraordinary Power.

A new and surprising phenomenon in magnetism has lately appeared in Paris, baffling every attempt at explanation, and only explaining many of the mysteries of Eastern lore, which we have regarded heretofore as fables. A young man, by name Elexis Baumann, is discovered to possess a power of fascination in the visual organ so powerful that it attracts towards him every object on which he fixes his gaze. Every savant in Paris has been occupied with this wonderful peculiarity, and hundreds of experiments have been tried; but not once has the power of young Baumann been found at a fault. The object on which the experiment is being tried being placed at a distance of about four feet, Baumann fixes his gaze steadfastly upon it, and presently the object, of whatever nature it may be, after quivering slightly for a minute or two, makes a sudden spring exactly towards his heart! This experiment has been repeated many times a day for the last week, and has never failed. Several of the great magnetizing doctors have undertaken to prove the cause of this extraordinary gift, and we are looking forward to a bloodless battle between them and the Academie des Sciences upon the subject.—[Yorkshire (Eng.) Spiritual Telegraph.

Do Something.

Go to work, friend, go to work! Do something for God. Do it now. Run, walk, ride, think, speak, act, for God.

Stir up those stagnant waters of the droning mind, and make them run clear.

Do not be afraid of doing too much.—Put the engine on the track and keep it there, and then put on fire and steam.—Put the ship in the wind and on her course, and then spread every ray of sail, and crowd her for the eternal haven.

Up, up, and work now—this year, this month, this day, THIS HOUR! E. B.

Poetry.

NEVER SAY FAIL.

Keep pushing—'tis wiser
Than sitting aside,
And dreaming and sighing
And waiting the tide.
In life's earliest battle
They only prevail
Who daily march onward
And never say fail!

With an eye ever open,
A tongue that's not dumb,
And a heart that will never
To sorrow succumb,
You'll battle and conquer,
Though thousands assail;
How strong and how mighty
Who never say fail!

In life's rosy morning,
In manhood's fair tide,
Let this be the motto
Your footsteps to guide;
In storm and in sunshine,
Whatever assail,
We'll onward and conquer,
And never say fail!

—Golden Rule.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Br. B. Spaulding.

Bro. Grant:—I wish to give the brethren generally, a little account of my labors, and the state of the cause among the Islands.

Since I last wrote, I have spent several weeks on Deer Isle, giving lectures in several different school-houses, to attentive, candid congregations.

On Little Deer Isle I had a hard time, prejudice and sectarianism reign there. I was well received by several families, and hospitably treated. They at least were not forgetful to entertain strangers. May the blessings of God rest upon those families, is my prayer.

I was there one Sunday, gave three discourses. A few came in but no interest was manifested. Such is the withering effect of prejudice and sectarianism.

I was sent for to attend the funeral of a beloved brother at Bear Island,—Brother Daniel Eaton; who fell asleep the seventh of Sept.

He died full in the faith, not of going beyond the bounds of time and space to an imaginary heaven, but of sleeping in the grave a little while before the trump of God shall sound to wake him up to life and activity, when he should be satisfied, being raised in Christ's likeness.

Praised be the Lord, for this blessed hope of immortality.

On Bear Island, I found three families, all believers in immortality at the coming of Jesus. I preached the literal resurrection of the dead, from Job 14: 14:—"If a man die shall he live again?" People from three islands were present.

Had a prayer meeting in the evening, during which ten or twelve prayed, and spoke. A man from North Haven was there bowed down with conviction for sin; he kneeled down to be prayed for, and some eight or ten prayed for him; and I think he went away rejoicing. I trust he will carry the good news of the Kingdom to come, to North Haven.

I next went to Eagle Island, where there are eight houses and twelve families. Here I gave seven lectures to a candid audience. About every one came out to hear. I had a blessed season. While there I visited every family, and went over to Butter Island and Spruce Head, where there are two families on each island; those I visited, exhorted, and prayed with. There they have no minister and no church; of course there is no sectarianism.

From Eagle Island, I went to Mc Glathering Island, where I found three families, all believers in the peculiar doctrines of the Advent; all, the fruits of the labors of our beloved brother Bragg. The Lord has blessed his labors this summer. He has baptized ten willing converts, most of them members of a Calvinist Baptist church here.

Brother Peter Eaton and wife had been professors forty years, yet, she said she never knew what the Bible taught, altho' she had one, and read it, until she heard the gospel of the kingdom, the resurrection and personal reign of Christ preached. And now they seem like young converts, sitting humbly at Jesus' feet, learning the truths of his word.

Praise the Lord, for the effects of Bible truth.

I staid but one day and evening at Mc Glathering's Island, and went over to Baster's Island, where there is but one house and three families.

Here I gave a lecture in the evening.—Generally there are fishermen lying in the harbor, who come in often to hear my lectures. So I have a good chance of spreading broad cast the truths of the gospel of the kingdom to come, and a great interest is being wakened up all round among these islands.

When I came here last year, there was not an Advent believer on these islands; now, there are a good many who come out and confess it; many more are convinced of the truth, and the inquiry is general, "are these things so?" They see and know this doctrine is everywhere spoken against.

Opposition now begins to reign, as might be expected. Last fall there was neither feeling or interest enough to produce opposition, but, praise the Lord, there is now; and I feel greatly encouraged that many will embrace the truth here.

From Baster's Island I went to Merchant's Island, where there are three families. These I visited and prayed with, then came to the Isle au Haute, where prejudice and sectarianism reign.

I have found one family, William Kimball's, who have treated me very hospitably indeed. May the good Lord bless them exceedingly with both spiritual and temporal blessings, for they have ministered to my wants abundantly.

Your brother in labors and in hope,
Benj. Spaulding.

Isle au Haute, Sept. 1856.

For the Crisis

From Sr. S. P. Green.

Bro. Grant:—When the news came of the Conference and Campmeeting at Wilbraham, I felt in my heart it would be a very good meeting. I had heard and read of many sittings together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, but never had the privilege of going to one. I knew that this was to be a very excellent time from the fact that it was to be free, and independent of all sectarianism, and party spirit.

The next little messenger came with brother Burnham's hearty welcome to all, poor, as well as any others.

Now my dear brethren and sisters, I cannot paint to you my feelings as I read the appointment and invitation. I could but go away and fall down before God, and there give vent to a flood of tears and pour out my whole soul to him who takes care of us, and numbers the very hairs of our head.

Brother Grant, some may think strange, that I should feel so on account of a meeting, but I would say, you that are so highly privileged, cannot judge my feelings. Ah! when the gospel trump is blown to assemble the saints, for the purpose of worshipping and praising the Lord, it is a gladly solemn sound to me; there is music, there is enchantment in it.

But I am blest above what I deserve. I have the paper to peruse—it comes to me, poor and unworthy as I am. I am blest above what many of the primitive christians were, having the privilege of reading "Holy Writ" and praising the Lord according to the dictates of my own conscience; favored in gathering my little family around me now and then, and asking God's blessing upon them; happy in singing hymns of praise to the Lord, and going out into the grove with my Bible in my hand,—my Savior in view. Ah, I have seen by an eye of faith the happy, holy throne, and caught a glimpse of the New Jerusalem.

O the music! Sometimes, most melodious sounds would seem to bear me far away.

I have thought if I was favored like some of God's children here below, it would be all I could ask in this world. I do not mean to walk in luxury and pride; no, I would go short of the common bounties of life, could this place become fully acquainted with the Lord and be prepared for him "who doeth all things well."

Come, let us enter into our closet and ask God to direct our waiting minds in the way of duty.

If it is duty for an evangelist to come this way, I hope he will come in the fear of God. Come armed by faith and winged by prayer.

I watch with anxiety, the list of appointments from week to week, to see if I can find Plymouth, Vt.

But I saw none last week further up than Houghtonville, Vt. I hope the Lord will send them along.

Sometime ago brother H. L. Hastings sent me a bundle of tracts. I have scattered most of them around.

Knowledge has increased, and is increasing still. Light on the Scriptures is gaining. Truth will go abroad, in spite of all there is said and done against it. One that examines the sacred Scriptures with care, and from a desire for light on his pathway, cannot but behold his position in the feet and toes of the great metalic image.

O that something might be done for mortals here. If some one feels like going out into the highways and hedges, let him come into this region.

If brother H. L. Hastings could send me some more of his publications, I would try to dispose of them where some light is needed, and good might be the result.

O my dear brethren and sisters, pray for me. See that your faith fail not. The literal heavens are overcast with gloom, and so also my mind's sky is clouded.

"The night is wearing fast away,
A streak of light is dawning;
Harbinger of that bright day,
The fair millennial morning."

Still, the way is dark and dreary, and the time is most peculiar. Everything gives indication of approaching wrath and woe; but those who seek for a hiding place in the Savior, will be secured in that day.

Now let us all see to it that no more of us turn back, but like ancient pilgrims keep the promised land in view. Let me entreat you not to become entangled again in any yoke of bondage." Amen. Rejoice evermore. Pray without ceasing."

From a lover of Jesus' second appearing, and the restoration of the kingdom to Israel. Amen. Sophronia P. Green

Plymouth, Vt., Sept. 18, '56.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. Page.

Bro. Grant:—I received yours of the 27th ult. with the money for which I return you my sincere thanks. Please say in the Crisis, that I received one dollar from brother Diman, through J. Harlow; one from brother A. Jones, 50 cts. in stamps from a friend, and from brother David, $5.00.

May the good Lord bless you all abundantly for remembering a poor sick sister in Christ. The Advent people are my people. Since 1843 my hope has been with them and the disappointments that I have met with in not seeing Christ have been a test of faith. For ten years have I suffered from a broken limb, because it was not set rightly: and the nervous system has been completely deranged; but until a year, I have been enabled to take care of myself, and as I knew that God's children would not withold help, if they knew my situation, I concluded to make it known through the Crisis.

That paper has always been sent to me gratuitously as one of the Lord's poor; and often, when desponding, is my heart cheered by reading it. O I bless God for the power of religion, which gives the soul such consolation. Continue in the faith,—pray for me, and bless God we shall meet in the kingdom. for Almira Page. S.

Canaan, N. H., Oct. 1, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Letter From Sr. Lucy Spaulding.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—For the first time, I address you through the Crisis. I am glad there is a way by which we can comfort one another in these last days of peril.

I am striving for the kingdom, and by the grace of God, I mean to be there. I feel to thank the Lord that ever I embraced the doctrines of the second coming of Christ; and in order to be ready we must be dead to this world and alive to God, or we shall not gain eternal life. I bid farewell to all earthly joy or pleasure. I have no pleasure in them. If we love God as we ought we shall not want to decorate these bodies with gold, and pearls, and costly apparel, but that which becometh those professing godliness.

I am pained when I see how some try to be like the world and be christians, when the word teaches us we cannot.

Then let us be like christians and not be like the world. When I see those that profess to be christians look so much like the world, I think they are of the world; because we are commanded to come out from the world and be separate and how can we do as they do?

Brethren and sisters, let us walk and talk, and dress like Christians, and then we shall have a better influence in the world. I do believe with all my heart that we are very near the judgment. I feel like bidding farewell to all the vanities of earth. I have no more to do with you.

I wish all could say the same. When I look at the word and see how straight is the way, I think of what our Savior said, "few there be that find it."

Shall I be able to find it? I trust I have found it, and mean by the grace of God to keep in it. We need on the whole armor to stand the fiery darts of the enemy. I think of them that live alone; no one to sympathize in trials and afflictions; but if we have Christ for our friend, he is better than any earthly friend we can have. I have felt I was almost alone but have got nearly through with this world, and if we are faithful we shall have a better one than this, soon.

Lucy Spaulding.

Cavendish, Vt.

Obituary.

One year from the day we left New England for the far West, we followed our little boy—Freeman S. Pratt—to the silent grave. He died Oct. 8th, aged one year and eight months.

He suffered for nine long weeks from dysentery, diarrhoa, lung fever, and congestion of the brain, which terminated his life. When well, he was very fleshy, but when he died he was reduced almost to a skeleton.

Death is an enemy. It has wrung our hearts again, yet we are cheered by the blessed hope.

It would have been a satisfaction even to have laid the little brothers side by side in the cold earth, but distance forbids. One sleeps beside his grandparents in Massachusetts; the other among strangers in the far West.

Well, we must submit to kind Providence and wait the gathering morn, when angels will hunt up all the little ones and bring them to "their own borders." The thought is blessed, and it being the result of a sure hope, gives a strong consolation.

My health is poor—not able to preach. Pray for us in our affliction.

W. Pratt.

Moline, Ill., Oct. 15, 1856.

Domestic Summary.

Crime in New York.—During the last six months, the Police of New York city have made 17 arrests for murder, 133 for passing counterfeit money, 71 for assault with intent to kill, 9 for arson, 153 burglary, 1482 assault and battery, 23 forgery, 23 gambling, 108 bigamy. There were 3,224 offences committed against property; 1,673 violations of Corporation ordinances; 32,454 persons were accommodated with lodgings at the several station houses.

An intelligent friend in this city. juts returned from the State Fair at Watertown, relates the following singular incident which occurred at Evansville, Jefferson county, in his presence.

A gentleman with a very fine, high-spirited, four year old horse, had driven down to the station for the purpose, as he said, of accustoming his horse to the locomotive whistle.

As the train appeared, the engine screamed of course, as an engine only can scream, and at the very first sound of the whistle, the horse fell down dead in his traces, the victim of a mortal fright.—[Buffalo Republic.

Jews in the United States.—The number of Jews in the United States exceeds a quarter of a million, about 35,000 of whom are located in the city of New York, where they have 20 synagogues, besides one at Brooklyn and one at Williamsburg. Abyl-taught schools are attached to several of the synagogues.

The New York express says:

"Observing their Sabbath all the rest of our population is busily engaged in traffic and business, and the synagogues remaining closed upon Sunday, but a small portion of the citizens know anything about their ceremonial practices."

Ample as the synagogue accommodation appears, it has been insufficient for the feast of the Tabernacles, and the great Fast day of the atonement (see Leviticus, 16: 29), which have occurred within the last fortnight.

On Wednesday, "the day of atonement," the bodies of the synagogues were crowded by men, while the galleries on three sides were thronged with the fair daughters of Israel. The services, praying, chanting, reading, &c., were all in Hebrew. Discourses were also preached by the chief and most learned Rabbis.

Foreign News.

Arrival of the Persia.

New York, Oct. 14.

The Royal mail steamship Persia, Capt. Judkins, arrived at her dock at 9 1-2 o'clock. She brings Liverpool dates of Oct. 4.

The principal subjects of interest are three, viz:—

The demonstration against Naples; the Belgrade boundary; and the Right of possession of the Isle of Serpents.

Respecting Naples, the only information comes from the Brussells Nord, which says the Austrian Ministers at Paris and London have urgent orders from their government to entreat France and England to abstain from any demonstration, at least until the return of Gen. Martinis' mediatorial mission to Naples. Further it is said, the Western Powers, in consideration for Austria, assent.

There is considerable letter-writing, but no new facts, respecting the Belgrade boundary.

German papers assert that Britain has addressed a second note to Russia on the subject of the Isle of Serpents, more peremptory than the first. The result is unknown.

Napoleon has returned to Paris.

There are rumors of the [illegible] of Austrian and French troops in Italy.

The Ministerial crisis continues in Denmark.

A Warlike Russian Manifesto.—New York Oct. 14. A diplomatic circular, signed "Nesselrode," has been sent to all the Courts of Europe, setting forth what is to be the foreign policy of the Russian government. To some of the British journals it is in effect, a challenge to England and France, for it says in substance, that if the Western powers attempt to coerce the King of Naples into the adoption of reforms necessary to prevent an outbreak in Italy, or in other words, a general convulsion throughout Europe, Russia will espouse the cause of King Bomba on the principle that he is doing what he likes with his own.

The spirit of this manifesto gives color to the belief which prevails that Russia will send her fleet for this purpose, to the Bay of Naples, to oppose those of England and France, and a collision may arise the consequences of which cannot well be over estimated.

The Circular is addressed to all Russian representatives abroad. It was read by Baron Brunow to the French Minister of Foreign Affairs, but was not otherwise officially communicated to that government.

A distinction is thus sought to be established between a simple dispatch sent to a diplomatic agent, and a formal notification directly addressed to the government. The real question is, however, whether the Circular itself is, or is not, a correct exponent of the policy of Russia.

(From the Daily News.) The text of this manifesto is neither more nor less than a solemn declaration, "haughty in tone, and defiant in language," of the part Russia intends to assume in the political transactions of Europe, and denunciation but thinly veiled under stately courtesies of diplomatic style, against the interference of the two great powers in Naples, and the continued occupation of Greece.

The manifesto contains doctrines of 1856, which are but the echo of the Holy Alliance of 1821, but the madness of the present tyranny is unbearable, and the Western powers will be forever disgraced, if they suffer themselves to be deterred from this great and mighty writ ae lunatico inquirendo, by the miserable fictions of the Holy Allianee, and the haughty menaces of the Czar.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., tha it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

—:o:—

Eld. Miles Grant appoints to preach at Portsmouth N. H., Nov. 2.

—:o:—

Eld. J. Hemenway appoints to preach at Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 26.

—:o:—

Eld. J. Couch appoints to preach at
Portland, Me., Sabbath, Oct. 26.
Boston, in the Free Chapel, Nov. 2.

—:o:—

Eld. R. R. York appoints to preach at Flying Point, Sunday, Oct.26.

—:o:—

Eld. C. Goodrich appoints to preach at
Winsted, Wednesday, 22
Pleasant Valley, Sunday, 26.

—:o:—

Eld. S. W. Bishop appoints to preach at
Providence, R. I., Sunday, Oct. 26.
Worcester, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 2.
Lowell, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 9.

—:o:—

The Lord permitting, Brother Edwin Burnham will preach in Massena, St. Lawrence Co., N. Y., the third and fourth Sabbaths in Oct. He will also hold meetings through the intervening week. James Danforth.

—:o:—

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at
Portland, Me., Sunday, Nov. 2.
Boston, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 9.
Lewiston, Me., Sunday, Nov. 16.
Poland, Me., Sunday, Nov. 23.

—:o:—

Bro. B. P. Manning appoints to preach at
Auburn, N. H., Sunday, Nov. 2.
Manchester, Nov. 9.
Nashua, Nov. 16.
Danbury, Nov. 23, and stop a day or two if desired.
New Boston, Nov. 30.

Eld. D. E. Moulton, appoints to preach at
Lynn, (Dye House vill,) Sunday, Oct. 26.
Lowell, Classic Hall, Nov. 2
Westford, Tuesday eve. Nov. 4.
Clinton, Wednesday eve. 5.
Worcester, Sunday Nov. 9.
Tolland, Conn., Nov. 16,
where Bro. Storrs may appoint.

—:o:—

Bro. C. Goodrich appoints to preach at Chester Factories, Sunday, Nov. 2.

As some of the brethren at Worcester, Lowell and Portsmouth have wished me to visit them, I will say that if the Lord will, I can do so the last of November or the first of December. If the brethren desire my labors at that time, please address me immediately at Westfield, Mass. C. Goodrich.

—:o:—

Bro. O. D. Gibson appoints to preach at Springfield, Mass., Wednesday, eve. Oct. 22.
Jawbuck, Conn., Oct. 23.
Warehouse Point. Oct. 24.
South Windsor, Conn., Sunday, Oct 26.
New Britain, Conn., Oct. 30.
Cheshire St., Conn., Oct. 31.
Wallingford, Nov. 2, as Bro. E. Dudley shall appoint.

—:o:—

Bro. W. M. Ingham appoints to preach at
Kennebunk Port, Thursday eve., 23.
Portland, Me., (Clark's Hall,) Oct. 26.
Orrington, Me., Sunday, Nov. 2,—wish the brethren to appoint a church conference on Saturday, Nov. 1, at 2 o'clock P. M.
Brewer, where the Brn may appoint, Nov. 4.
Woodstock, N. B., Sunday, Nov. 9.

—:o:—

Bro. S. S. Brewer appoints to preach at
Salem, Mass., Sunday, Oct. 26.
Portsmouth, Oct. 29 and 30.
Kennebunk, Sunday Nov. 2.
Concord, N. H., evenings, Nov. 4, 5 and 6.
Roby School House, Sunday, Nov. 9.
New Bedford, Sunday, Nov. 16.
Worcester, Nov. 23.

[illegible]
Bridgeport, [illegible]
[illegible]
Chesham, Sunday, [illegible]
Will Bro. [illegible] at the [illegible] of the road Sunday morning?
Waterbury, [illegible]
Newfield, Tuesday evening, [illegible]
to commence a series of meetings with Br. Mathewson.

—:o:—

The Lord permitting, I will preach as follows:—
Detroit, Wednesday, Oct. 22.
Ripley, 25, and over Sunday.
Freeport, 31 and over Sunday Nov. 2. Bro. Leister, of Buchanan, will meet me there and accompany me to Dubuque, Iowa.

I will visit other places in Ill. if desired, if brethren will address me at Freeport and give the necessary direction. If brethren think it not best for me to visit them as proposed, will they please inform me by letter directed to South Bend, or Logansport, Ind., or Freeport, Ill., as we do not wish to impose ourself by preaching on communities where it is not desired. L. H. Chase.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

—:o:—

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

The following works are published and sold by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.—They are also for sale at the Office of the "World's Crisis," 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.; and by W. Pratt, Moline, Ill.; P. A. Smith, 4 Frank street, Rochester, N. Y.; A. F. Porter, 20 Erie street, Philadelphia, Pa.; S. S. Brewer, 54 Wilson street, Providence, R. I.:—

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 38 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cts.—postage 9 cents.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By I. C. Welcome. 33 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

JUBILEE HARP. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns well adapted to the present wants of the church. Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. Postage 7 cents.

GLAD TIDINGS, or Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to End in the Universe, by a Literal Destruction of Wicked Men and Devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment Collected and Arranged. By Jacob Blain. Price 10 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE. By William Shepherd. Price—four copies, 25 cents; nine copies, 50 cents; eighteen copies, $1; one hundred, $5—post-paid.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and The New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Single copy, 12 cents; $8 per hundred. Postage 1 cent per copy.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions of the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 16 cents per volume.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake somewhere.

J Megginer, J M Allen, J [illegible], W [illegible] Floyd, J Morrison, E S [illegible], W [illegible] M Williams, J M Dodge, $1.00 each.

H Barnard, J Morrison, C Holt, H [illegible], $2 each.

A Streeter, N Fowler, 50 cents each.

For Books.—E H Dennett, $1.25; D B Wyman $1.00.

Books sent—D B Wyman, A Streeter.

To send Tracts to the West.—[illegible] Gibson, $2.00.

Bro. P. Morgan's P. O. address is [illegible], Rock Island Co., Ill.

For Br. [illegible] January 1857, E. C. Cole, $1.00.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

[illegible]

BY VESTA M. [illegible]

Tune—"Do they miss me at home?"

I am weary in watching for morning,
The tired lids unbidden close;
While the prophetic lamp is still burning,
And beams on a pathway of woes,—
[illegible] the perils are thick'ning,
[illegible] should faithfully keep—
While [illegible] arms are inviting,
And [illegible] the weary to sleep.

I am lonely, as onward I journey,
[illegible] sigh for the home of the blest;
While the world's sunny arbors allure me,
To share their refreshment and rest,
[illegible] onward, though feebly, I'm pressing,
The beautiful land to obtain:
A pilgrim, and stranger, confessing
Myself till that kingdom I gain.

When the wearisome journey is ended,
And the last hour of watching is past,
And the toil-worn with glory enshrouded—
My song of redemption shall last.
While ages on ages are rolling,
Eternal, unchangeable, sweet;
While anthems of glory are swelling
Redemption and vict'ry complete.
Charlemont, Mass.

THE LIFE I'D LIVE.

The life I'd live would be of faith
Upon the Son of God,
Would see a "Thus the Lord hath said,"
To guide me on the road.

The life I'd live would be to count
All earthly gain but loss,
Would every day deny myself,
And daily take my cross.

The life I'd live would be to mark
The footsteps Jesus trod,
To walk with care the narrow road,
That leads the soul to God.

The life I'd live would be to seek
More earnestly his face,
Would grow in knowledge of my Lord,
And daily grow in grace.

The life I'd live would be to live
An humble, lowly life,
Far from the world's gay revelry,
And farther from its strife.

The life I'd live would be the life,
That's hidden in the Lord,
Dead to myself and dead to sin,
But living through his word.

—Golden Rule.

NOTHING TO DO.

"Nothing to do?" O pause, and look around
At those oppressed with want, and sorrow too;
Look at the wrongs, the sufferings that abound,
Ere yet thou sayest there's nought for thee to do.

Are there no hungry that thy hand may feed,
No sick to aid, no naked to be clad?
Are there no blind whose footsteps thou may'st lead,
No mourning heart that thou couldst make less sad?

"Nothing to do?" hast thou no store of gold,
No wealth of time, that thou shouldst well employ?
No hidden talent that thou shouldst unfold,
No gift that thou shouldst use for others' joy?

"Nothing to do?" O look without, within,
Be to thyself and to thy duties true:
Look on the world, its troubles, and its sin,
And own that thou hast much indeed to do.

—Golden Rule.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

English Version of the Bible.

BY HENRY W. DANN.

That our version of the Holy Scriptures does not in every instance embody the spirit of the original, I fully admit; nevertheless, I apprehend that a new translation is both needless and uncalled for.—The few inaccuracies that do exist, so far as I can ascertain, are of little importance, and can hardly be said to alter the sense of the sacred text. But as much has been said to the disparagement of our version of Holy Writ, I subjoin the following opinions as expressed by some of the most distinguished biblical scholars.

Dr. Adam Clark, says,—"The English version of the Bible is superior in accuracy and fidelity, to all other European versions. Nor is this its only praise. The translators have seized the very spirit and soul of the original, and expressed this almost everywhere, with pathos and energy."

Professor Stuart remarks—"Ours is, on the whole, a most noble production. The divines of that day were very different Hebrew scholars from what most of their successors have been in England or Scotland."

"With the exception of Bishop Lowth's celebrated work upon Isaiah, no other effort at translation, among the English divines will compare, either with respect to taste, judgment, or sound understanding of the Hebrew, with our authorized version."

Bishop Middleton observes:—"The style of our version is incomparably superior to anything which might be expected from the [illegible], and perverted taste of our own age. It is simple, it is harmonious, it is energetic, and, which is of no small importance, use has made it familiar, and time has made it sacred."

Dr. John Taylor, says:—"You may rest fully satisfied, that as our English translation is, in itself, by far the most excellent book in our language, so it is a pure and plentiful fountain of divine knowledge, giving a true, clear, and full account of the divine dispensation, and of the gospel of our salvation, insomuch that whoever studieth the Bible, the English Bible, is sure of gaining that knowledge and faith which, if duly applied to the heart and conversation, will infallibly guide him to eternal life."

We might add greatly to the above, but it is unnecessary. If men of such intellectual greatness, eminent for their literary attainments, and whose whole lives have been devoted to biblical literature and science, arrive at such a conclusion as this, how can we ask for a change?

Would it not be far better for us to search the Scriptures that are able to make us wise unto salvation, than to spend our hours in endeavoring to remodel the word of God?

Has not the Bible often beguiled the tedious hour? Have we not been comforted while persuing the sacred word? Is not the Bible a chart to guide us on the stream of life?

Then let the saint of God be contented.

"Blessed Bible! how I love it!
How it doth my bosom cheer:
What hath earth like this to covet?
O what stores of wealth are here.
Man was lost and doomed to sorrow,
Not one ray of hope or bliss
Could he from earth's treasure borrow,
Till his way was cheered by this.

Yes, I'll to my bosom press thee,
Precious word, I'll hide thee here;
Sure my very heart will bless thee,
For thou ever sayest—good cheer!
Speak my heart and tell thy ponderings,
Tell how far thy rovings led,
When this book brought back thy wand'rings
Speaking life as from the dead.

Yes, sweet Bible! I will hide thee
Deep, yes, deeper in this heart;
Thou, through all my life wilt guide me
And in death we will not part.
Part in death? No, never! never!
Through death's vale I'll lean on thee;
Then in worlds beyond, forever,
Sweeter still, thy truth shall be."

West Troy, Sept. 24, '56.

For the Crisis.

Maine Conference.

The Conference of Adventists met according to appointment Oct. 2, at 2 o'clock P. M. The few who were present united in a social meeting, and by the blessing of God it was made a refreshing season.

Evening. Brother Smith gave a comforting discourse from Luke 12: 32, which did us good while considering the little flock, and the kingdom to be given soon.

Friday A. M., was spent in a social meeting. The Lord poured out his blessing abundantly upon us and we felt that it was good to be the servants of God.

P. M. A good and stirring discourse was preached by brother T. Smith, from Heb. 12: 1, 2. Could but wish that all christians might be permitted to hear it.

After the sermon the Conference organized by calling Dr. N. Smith to the chair. Conference voted that brother N. Smith should continue to occupy the chair, and S. K. Partridge continue Secretary.

A committe of five were then chosen to prepare business for the Conference, and report the following day, at nine o'clock, A. M.

Said committee were I. C. Welcome, T. Smith, Jesse Partridge, R. Hurley, S. K. Partridge.

Evening, S. K. Partridge preached from 1 Thess. 4: 17–22.

Saturday, A. M., Conference met at nine o'clock, and after prayer, the report of the committee was called for.

On the call for the report of the committee, the following was presented, and after some discussion and appropriate remarks, by a goodly number of brethren, adopted.

REPORT.

To the Brethren in Maine:—Being assembled in General Conference to confer together, it seems good unto us to write you that we are as much as ever convinced that we are living in the last days of the gospel dispensation, and are witnessing the fulfilment of the last items of prophetic declaration prior to the judgment of the great day.

And forasmuch as in the providence of God we are called to act a conspicuous part in promulgating the great and blessed truths of revelation, relative to the christian's hope and the evidence of the near coming of our Lord and Savior to consummate that hope, we feel deep solicitude to know how we may best employ our means and energies to prosecute this work for the salvation of sinners.

Amidst all the discouraging features of the past and present, there are still some omens of good which should encourage our hearts and cause gratitude to God; and while we deplore our errors, and follies of the past, we will seek wisdom from God for the future; and although our number as a distinct people is much smaller than a few years ago, yet we are gratified to see that the great truths which have begotten faith and hope in us, are taking effect in the hearts of many other christians not now identified with us.

We also feel encouraged, while watching the progress of principles, to see that the disposition to neglect and sometimes oppose gospel order, is fast dying out among us, and that it is now generally seen and deplored that a want of system has produced much evil and disunion. While we would encourage every good principle, we wish heartily to respond to the call of that class of brethren who spoke out at the late Wilbraham Campmeeting for help to set things in gospel order; and we hail rhe report of the articles adopted at that meeting to call things by their right names, and labor for order and unity, as an omen of better days among them, and consequently among us all.

These articles meet the point which many of us have long labored to bring about; and we wish cordially to unite in effecting the same.

Furthermore, we think it good to say, that whereas, the cause in which we are engaged required a more efficient plan than is now employed, to prosecute the great work,—we recommend that this Conference appoint a treasurer in each of the several localities in the state, to act as advisory members with the ministry and brethren generally, in regard to sustaining preaching, and holding meetings: and whom we exhort to act a special part in exciting others to be ready to every good work, and receive and collect such means as they can to support preaching, and the distribution of tracts in their various localities, as their united counsel shall deem most proper, and that they correspond with each other in relation to the same.

We wish also to say that while many have done well in giving liberally of their substance to sustain the mission in which we are engaged, yet, much more can, and must be done. And while our ministers find it duty to spend their entire energies and means to preach to others, God has enjoined upon the membership the duty of sustaining the gospel ministers, and we exhort all to take this subject into prayerful consideration, and unitedly and heartily engage in this work, laying by something on the first day of the week as the Lord hath prospered them; to be used in a systematic manner, to send abroad the message of the gospel of the kingdom until the end shall come.

And, forasmuch as the distribution of tracts and other publications, aids much in our work, we advise that the donor and treasurer be allowed to use their discretion, whether their means shall be used for preaching, or for a tract fund, and expend it as they judge best.

After the adoption of the above report, the Conference proceeded to choose the following brethren for said treasurers; to wit:

John Umberhind, Richmond; J. Keene, jr., Hallowell; J. Campbell, Damariscotta; S. Harding, Bristol; M. W. Payson, South Hope; J. Partridge, Whitefield; Amos Row, Madison; J. Brooks, Orrington; H. B. Seavy, East Wilton; A. C. Locke, Lewiston, and in all other places where there are deacons chosen, or are soon to be chosen, they are requested to unite in the above proposed work. All the above officers to continue until others are appointed.

Voted;—that the above proceeding of this Conference be prepared by the Committee and forwarded to the Advent Herald, and the World's Crisis for publication.

Voted;—to adjourn to meet again at such time and place as the Chairman and Secretary shall advise.

At 2 o'clock brother R. B. York preached a good, and deeply practical discourse from 1 Cor. 13: 13. God's blessing attended the word, and our hearts were touched.

Evening, 6 1-2 o'clock. Met for prayer and conference; and at 7 1-2 o'clock, brother Jesse Partridge preached a doctrinal discourse on the offices of Christ from Luke 1: 32, 33.

Sunday A. M. 8 o'clock. Met for prayer and conference, and at 10 1-2, brother Thomas Smith preached from Prov. 3: 5, 6, showing the importance of trust in God, and the path marked out for his children to walk in.

Our hearts were made glad when we heard the word.

2 o'clock P. M. Brother Jesse Partridge preached from Psalms 50: 5, showing from the history of the church, that God's people are a sacrificing people; and the gathering time will soon come for which the church has been so long praying.

Sunday evening. S. K. Partridge preached from Ex. 32: 26,—"Who is on the Lord's side?"

Brethren T. Smith, Dr. N. Smith, J. Partridge, and I. C. Welcome followed with interesting remarks, showing the importance of being on the Lord's side.

The Conference closed with the spirit of God resting upon us. There was a oneness throughout the meeting.

NICHOLAS SMITH.
S. K. PARTRIDGE.

Poetry.

MY MOTHER'S GRAVE.

The relics of departed worth
Lie shrouded here in gloom;
And here, with aching heart I mark
My own dear mother's tomb.

Oh, as upon her peerless grave
I fix my weeping eyes,
How many fond remembrances
In quick succession rise.

Again I see her gentle form,
As when in infant days,
And childhood's early sportive years,
She guarded all my ways.

Again her kind maternal voice
Falls on my listening ear,
As when she taught my youthful soul
The God of love to fear.

Father of heaven! my mother's God!
Before Thy blissful seat,
Among the glorious heirs of light,
May I that mother meet.

—Golden Rule.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. D. Bosworth.

BRO. GRANT:—You and I profess to believe that the great day of the Lord is near, and I certainly believe it is "near and hasteth greatly." And I frequently ask myself the question, "what manner of persons ought ye to be, in all holy conversation, and godliness?"

Now if it be true, that the "great day for which all other days were made," is right upon us, what is the preparation necessary in order to meet it?

Methinks I hear you say we must make a clean breast of it, and be strictly honest before God in all things. In one word, "Do unto others as we would that others should do unto us."

Yes, that is it, I believe it.

I do not expect the watchmen on Zion's walls will see eye to eye till the Lord brings again Zion. But I do expect, and know, they must learn to forbear one another in love, instead of spending their best energies, in the promulgation of questions that "gender strife," if they would dwell on Zion's holy hill, when the faithful watchmen shall be called from their watch-tower, to the blest reward.

Now my brother, that we may all see that you mean to be perfectly honest before God and men, will you the next time you quote "The dead know not anything," add the line that follows,—"neither have they any more a reward," and then tell your readers, that if that Scripture proves the unconsciousness of the dead, it also proves they will never receive a reward?

When next you quote, "His breath goeth forth, in that very day his thoughts perish," will you also add—some of the best critics say thoughts in that passage are simply equivalent to purposes, desires, &c., if so, that proves nothing in favor of the sleep or unconsciousness of the dead.

When next you quote Mal, 4–1 "For behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of Hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch;" to prove the final extinction of the wicked; will you tell them that that Scripture has its application to the wicked living at the coming of Christ, who will have a resurrection a thousand years afterwards, and therefore proves nothing in the case?

When next you print "burned up," in the above passage in large capitals to make it more conspicuous, and italicise "root and branch," please add, that root and branch" mean simply father and son in Scripture. And when you get through with them, if you wish, I will continue the series.

I have heard of a company of slaveholders, who dared not discuss the slavery question even among themselves, but frowned down a proposition of one of their own number, to that effect.

And shall it be said that a paper claiming to be free, and independent, and the AMERICAN ADVENTIST'S paper, par excellence, shall parade in its columns from week to week one side of a question, on which brethren of like precious faith differ, while the other side is ignored, or at least utterly refused a hearing? Justice, conscience, common honesty forbids it. And I can but hope that as you mean to stand in the judgment, such a course will not be pursued in the future, if it has been in the past.

Yours, looking for the kingdom,

D. BOSWORTH.

Bristol, Vt., Sept. 1856.

[Your Editor wishes to say that he has no recollection of rejecting a single article opposed to the sleep of the dead, or the destruction of the wicked; as the foregoing is the first that has been received. Hence he pleads not guilty.

Be assured my brother, the editor is honestly endeavoring to glorify God in his editorial duties. Pray for him that the Lord may give him wisdom to present from week to week in the columns of the Crisis, that which will "feed the flock of God."]

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. W. Harding.

BRO. GRANT:—The Crisis is a welcome messenger to me. I think it is well calculated to stir up the pure mind. I do not feel like giving up or stopping by the way, but more like taking the halting ones by the hand and encouraging them on to the end of the journey. There is no promise but to those who persevere to the end.

Why will men and women forget it? It does appear to me that they did not count the cost.

When I started to serve God, I was well aware the prize was at the end of the race, and thanks be to God, I am not yet tired of running, though trials and afflictions are part of the legacy.

I feel to count it all joy when I fall into divers temptations: for I know through Christ I shall some day come off conqueror through him who hath loved us, and has washed and made us white by his own blood; and has made us priests and kings unto God.

Oh, the cheering promises I find in God's blessed book, such as this,—"he that overcometh will I give to sit with me in my throne as I have overcome and am set down with my Father in his throne." "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life which is in the midst of the Paradise of God."

Now, brethren and sisters, who could not afford to serve such a God as this, who has so many good things laid up for those that love him?

Let us be faithful, and endure, overcoming the world by our faith.

I remain yours, looking for redemption with the rest of God's people.

WM. S. HARDING.

Bigelow's Mills, Ia., Aug. 22, '56.

Choice Selections.

Dialogue on Dress.

MR. AND MRS. GOODALL.

"How proud we are! how fond to show
Our clothes, and call them rich and new."

Mr. G Wife, dear, did you ever, ever see the like? What shall we do? this inordinate love of dress, this intense rush for the gay and fashionable is truly alarming. Many carry their sins in their ears, in their foreheads, openly, unblushingly, in the face of mid day sun. May we not expect fearfully pending judgments?

Mrs. G. Wesley put it down like a thunder CLAP! He poured in the truth like fire!

Mr. G. Mark, too, the discipline,—read section 6th on dress, the question is put:

"Should we insist on the rules concerning dress?" The answer is: "By all means." This is no time to give any countenance to superfluity of apparel. Wear no needless ornaments, such as rings, necklaces, lace or ruffles,—Therefore give no tickets to any who wear high heads, enormous bonnets, ruffles or rings."

Mrs. G. Was Father Wesley too stringent, think you, husband, in these measures?

Mr. G. Not at all; in his day and for years subsequent, spirituality was never higher, deeper, broader—so long as self-denial, gospel simplicity and purity prevailed, the Word had free course, run, and was glorified—prosperity smiled, holiness triumphed, salvation streamed.

Love to the brethren also, was fervent, abiding, soul-kindling, soul-saving. God manifested himself graciously, gloriously sinners were struck to the heart, thousands cried out:—

"Lord save, we perish."

O for a return—a speedy return of the good old times of Wesley!

Mrs. G. Husband, dear, how is it? why is it, the ministers of the present day are mum, almost totally silent, on the prevailing evils of dress? Seldom, if ever, a single word escapes their lips, in the pulpit or out of it!

Mr G. Can they speak out wife? can they reprove consistently when idolatry is in their own house? What says Paul?—

"Thou therefore which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal? thou that abhorest idols, dost thou commit sacrilege?" Rom. 2: 21, 23.

Can a minister consistently preach against the sin of pride, of worldly conformity, while his own house is a picture of pride, extravagance, folly and fashion! "Physician heal thyself," would ring in his ears on every side. Thus the evilrolls on unrebuked—unchecked.

Mrs. G. A minister's wife, you think, should be a pattern of excellence—plain, simple, modest, unassuming in her costume and deportment?

Mr. G. Not the wife only, but every member of the household. She, to be sure, should lead on; her adorning especially, should not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but the hidden man of the heart, in that which is corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is, in the sight of God, of "great price."

Mrs. G. If I am correctly informed, the angel wife of Pres. Edwards was one chief cause of his unparalelled success in the gospel ministry; was it so, husband?

Mr. G. It was, wife, glory to God, she held up his hands to heaven continually.

Mrs. G. O that females would, one and all, (especially those who name the name of Christ,) "adorn themselves in modest apparel; not with gold or pearls, or costly array, but (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works."

Mr. G. No command of inspiration is more positive than the one which says, "be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God."

Mrs. G. Nothing on earth appears to me so amiable, so beautiful, so exquisitely lovely and praiseworthy, as virtuous modesty, clad in plain, simple, neat attire, adorned with the christian graces, humility, meekness and love. Angels look down upon an object so charmingly, exquisitely beautiful, with smiling complacency! Yes, God himself, is well pleased!

Mr. G. True, dearest, true, it is more precious than rubies and ornaments.

Mrs. G. All the things that can be desired are not comparable to it. "There is only one robe that will never fade, nor wear out, the robe of Christ's righteousness:"

"It never fades, it ne'er grows old,
Nor fears the rain, nor moth, nor cold,
It takes no spot, but still refines,
The more 'tis worn, the more it shines."

—Golden Rule.

HORRORS OF WAR.—"In heaven," said a minister whom we recently heard preach, "there will be no quarterage to pay nor paid; there will be no dead disciples, no formal christians, no blight of intemperance or poverty, no slavery, no war there."

Wending our way home the last words like an echo, kept ringing in our ears, "No war there, no war there!"

There are great evils and great curses in the earth, but none, reader, so great as the curse of war.

Opening one of our exchanges recently we saw the statement that in France, to help carry on the Crimean war, one hundred and sixty thousand young men were annually impressed—that is, caught and driven from home into the army. And so horrible is the war in the eyes of even French mothers, that many of them have permanently put out the eyes of their children, and have hewed off the toes, and broken the fingers and arms of their sons, in the hope of so doing, to keep them at home.

But notwithstanding these maimings, many of these fingerless and toeless young men have been compelled to go and fight and die on the battle-field.

As we write the bones of how many young men lie blanching or rotting in the Crimea. How many a home in England, and Ireland, and Scotland, and Turkey, and Russia, and France, has been made desolate by the violence of war.

THOUGHT.—As the kaleidoscope, at every turn, forms new figures, so does thought change; taking every possible hue and shape, so that no two can think exactly alike.

Speak to that orphan child; see the pearl drop from her cheeks.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

FFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE. | PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | NUMBER 107, HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1856. WHOLE NO. 61. VOL. IV. NO. 9

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

The Providence of God.

BY LEONARD PLUMER.

The Providence of God as brought to view in the Scriptures is one of the greatest sources of comfort to the christian when understood and trusted in, that can be presented to his mind.

Who that has learned by experience that "the eyes of the Lord run to and fro thro' the whole earth to show himself strong towards them whose heart is perfect toward him," and "many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth them out of them all," and "they that wait upon the Lord shall not want any good thing," but finds a comfort in the Providence of God, that this world with all its possessions never gave to any that trusted in it.

The world speaks of luck, of fortune, of skill and management, and, like Nebuchadnezzar, boasts of great Babylon that I have builded; but the christian, well instructed in the ways of God by precept and experience, knows, that not a sparrow falls without his Father's notice, and all things work together for his good; and the reason why there is so much discontent among the disciples of our Lord is, because the providence of God is so little understood.

"It is the Lord, let him do that which seemeth him good," is the language of those only who have been subjected to the severer part of the discipline that is to prove and fit them for the world to come.

The widow who has learned that the Lord will provide, and has given her last morsel to her children, can see quarts of milk and loaves of bread, in a single half dollar presented to her, while the rich man may see poverty and want staring him in the face, by the daily consumption of his goods in his family.

"It is in vain for you to rise up early and sit up late, and eat the bread of carefulness, for he giveth his beloved sleeping," is a Scripture sentiment which those only understand who have learned to be content in whatsoever situation they are placed.

The one hundred and seventh Psalm is an exhibition of God's manner of dealing with the children of men, and concludes with this beautiful passage;—"Whoso is wise and will observe these things, even they shall understand the loving kindness of the Lord."

The history of Joseph is a striking example of God's dealings with those, who through faith and patience will inherit the promises.

Sold by his own brothers for a slave—falsehood robbing him of a spotless character—the prison door closing upon him as a felon, and a number of his years spent with criminals as though he was one of them.

But God's providence now changes its course, takes him from his dungeon, disrobes him of his prison dress, clothes him in garments of royalty, gives him the second place in the kingdom of Egypt, and makes him the instrument in saving much people alive.

David is another from the great "cloud of witnesses" to illustrate the providence of God.

Chosen to be king over Israel, and assured that he should sit upon the throne, yet the disciplinary steps in the providence of God, necessary to bring him there and fit him for it, were sometimes so afflictive and discouraging, he declared, with the anointing oil yet on his head, that there was but a step between him and death.

So was it with all God's servants whose history is given in the book of God.

The foot-prints of his providence can be traced from their cradle to their grave.—So is it with all his children now, and happy are they who observe these things; even they "shall understand the loving-kindness of the Lord."

The history of our Savior is full of providential incidents.

Take for example the giving of sight to the man born blind.

The disciples ask, who was the sinner, the man or his parents, that he was born blind?

Jesus, in answering them, discovers to us a fact in the arrangement of God's providence which runs through his entire dealings with his people; a fact full of comfort and encouragement to all that trust in him;—"Neither hath this man sinned nor his parents, but that the works of God should be made manifest in him.

Was the man born blind, and did he continue in that condition till of age to answer for himself, especially that Jesus might show forth his divinity and Mesiahship to the world by dispelling the darkness that has ever brooded over him, and let him into the light of day, and by that means open to his mind a light by which he might behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world?

It seems so to me. Many of us can remember some embarrassing circumstance in our early youth, which led to a train of events that finally brought us to the Savior, and from him we obtained the pardon for our sins, and the earnest of eternal life.

Yet, while enduring the discipline of it, we might think all these things were against us.

Take one more example. Jesus, on one occasion, was standing in the midst of a great crowd who pressed upon him. With them stood a humble, but afflicted woman, who for twelve years had been trying every means to obtain relief,—had spent all her living upon physicians, and yet grew worse.

As she stood there she thought, if I may but touch his clothes I shall be made whole. So she comes behind him and touched the hem of his garment only, and she knew in herself that she was made whole.

Immediately her sickness fled; but as she stood with the multitude, supposing all ignorant but herself of what had transpired, Jesus enquires, "who touched me?"

The disciples are astonished at such a question, and remind him that the crowd throng him.

He replies, "Somebody has touched me for virtue has gone out of me."

When the woman saw that she was not hid, she came trembling, and before all the people told him all the truth.

O it seems to me that there could not be a heart so hard in that great congregation, as not to be touched with sympathy for her as she related her afflictions and sorrows for twelve years, and love for him when they heard her declare how he had made her whole.

Now did all the things in the history of that woman happen in the providence of God that in the end there might be an exhibition of the Savior's object in coming into the world? And do we never get a blessing from Christ without his knowing it?

It seems to me that this narrative answers both questions plainly, and every action of the Savior's life seems to echo back the song of the angels who announced his birth,—"Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth and good will toward men."

Let us take courage then from a knowledge of God's way with us, and if in sorrow and affliction, by God's grace take care of our characters, and see to it that they are those to whom the promises are made, and God will bring us out of great tribulation, put a palm of victory in our hand, and a crown of glory on our head, and give us eternal life in which to enjoy them.

Roxbury, Mass.

For the Crisis.

The Sabbath of the Lord; and the Lord's Sabbath.

BY D. P. HILDRETH.

Many honest and well-disposed people are utterly at a loss to understand how, or why the seventh day Sabbath was changed to the first day of the week; and are anxious to know by what authority the first day of the week becomes the christian's Sabbath. They fear the alteration was made by that wicked power, who should "think to change times and laws," with whom they have no sympathy; and therefore, still think that the seventh day is the Sabbuth of the Lord.

To all such, I would say; God has not left us without a witness, if we are willing to know and do his will; and that we may know what it is, he tells us in Matt. 11: 13, "All the prophets and the law, prophesied until John."

Now if the law prophesied anything by types or shadows relative to the first day of the week, we can find it there. But, before we refer to the law, we will go back to the original seventh day in which God "rested from all his work which he had made." "And God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it."

Why?

"Because that in it he rested from all his work."

Here is no command to Adam, to keep that day, as there was to abstain from the fruit of the tree of knowledge; though probably by his sanctifying the day he intended they should observe it. But man fell immediately after; and the succeeding generations became so corrupt, that it is probable the seventh day was soon lost sight of, unless, perhaps, in the patriarch's time; and even there we find no command for the observance of the seventh day, nor an intimation that it was anything more than any other day.

Nothing was enjoined on the early patriarchs, till their posterity left Egypt, and then it became a special covenant, embodied in the decalogue, and called for the first time "the Sabbath-day." Ex. 20: 8.

Here is over two thousand and five hundred years, from the time that God rested the seventh day; and there is not one word recorded about the seventh day to enforce the observance of it, or as though it was hallowed by one living being. But the institution for observance was made on Mt. Sinai; and it was to be like all their institutions—"a perpetual covenant throughout their generations;" (Ex. 31: 16;) that is, while the Jewish state and polity continued; and we have the reasons why it was enjoined at that time.

"In six days God created the heavens and the earth, and on the seventh he rested, and was refreshed." (The day is evidently a type of that "rest which remaineth for the people of the Lord." Acts iii. When "he shall send Jesus Christ, which was before preached; whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things."

We will for the present leave the moral and judicial parts of the law, and come to the ceremonial or typical part, which the Savior says "prophesied until John."

In Lev. iii., we find a command for the observance of several feasts, called holy convocations; and the very first among these ceremonies is the Sabbath; "six days shall work be done, but the seventh is the Sabbath of rest; an holy convocation; ye shall do no work therein: it is the Sabbath of the Lord in all your dwellings." We find that the passover was to be observed or the fourteenth day of the first month. On the fifteenth was the feast of unleavened bread. ver. 10. "And ye shall bring a sheaf of the first fruits of your harvest unto the high priest, and he shall wave the sheaf before the Lord, to be accepted for you: on the morrow after the Sabbath the priest shall wave it."—"And ye shall count unto you, from the morrow after the Sabbath, from the day that ye brought the sheaf of the wave-offering, seven Sabbaths shall be complete; even unto the morrow after the seventh Sabbath shall ye number fifty days: and ye shall offer a new meat offering unto the Lord. And ye shall bring out of your habitations the wave-loaves; they shall be of fine flour; they shall be baken with leaven; they are the first fruits unto the soul. . . . . And ye shall proclaim on that day that it may be an holy convocation: and it shall be a statute forever throughout your generations."

Nothing could be more perfectly fulfilled than all this part of the law was, when Christ became "our Passover" and was "sacrificed for us," on the 14th day of the first month; and on the morrow after the sabbath he rose from the dead, "the first fruits of them that slept." 1 Cor. 15: 20. And on the morrow after the seventh Sabbath, or fiftieth day, was the feast of Pentecost, when the Holy Ghost fell on the apostles, and three thousand were converted in one day; and that, even the first day of the week by the preaching of the apostles.

Now these offerings being commanded to be made on the first day of the week, their being so perfectly fulfilled by the resurrection of Christ, and descent of the Holy Ghost, I cannot but regard them both as types, not only of what was fulfilled on those days, but of the days themselves; for they were always to be offered on the first day of the week, the morrow after the Sabbath, and no other feast was ever commanded to be kept on any particular week day, but the Sabbath itself.

Let it be understood that the wave sheef was not always offered on the third day after the Passover, as it was when our Lord suffered; for sometimes the Passover was kept on Monday. But the sheaf could not be offered till the morrow after the next Sabbath in which case it would be a week, nearly, after the Passover, before it would be offered; and the Pentecost was always governed by that day, which, being an "holy convocation," must, I think, be a perfect prototype of the Lord's Sabbath.

We read Luke 24: 44, "These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you; that all things must be fulfilled which are written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms concerning me."

Says John, "Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled, for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, peace be unto you. And when he had so said, he showed unto them his hands and his side. Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord. Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you. As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you. And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, receive ye the Holy Ghost. Whosesoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whososoever sins ye retain, they are retained. . . . . And after eight days, (or the eighth) again his disciples were within and Thomas with them. Then came Jesus, the door being shut, and stood in the midst and said, Peace be unto you." John 20: 19-26.

Here we find that on the first Lord's day, after the resurrection he met with his disciples. Is not their example of meeting together on those morrows after the Sabbath, a demonstration that the Lord's sabbath had taken the place of the Sabbath of the Lord? That is, was not the first day of the week ever after to be honored and hallowed, even as the seventh day had been after their deliverance from Egypt?

This, I fully believe, and think these things are enough to convince the most skeptical that the change was made on his resurrection day, and not till then; so that it was the imperative duty of those women who "prepared the spices and ointment" (which is so often quoted,) to do as they did, when they "rested on the Sabbath day, according to the commandment, for the first fruits of them that slept," had not at that time "risen from the dead;" nor did he, till the next day, the very morning that the sheaf of first fruits was waved in the temple.

Here redemption was completed; that is, the earnest of it was seen and felt by his disciples. And is not the work of redemption as great as the work of creation? It took six natural days only to do the work of creation; but it takes six tropical days, of one thousand years each, to accomplish that of redemption.

It is customary for the nations of the earth to celebrate the birth day of distinguished warriors and princes of the earth, and shall we fail to celebrate the day in which our most blessed King became the "first born from the dead, that in all things he might have the pre-eminence?" His blood sealed the new covenant, and his resurrection from the dead proved that it was sealed; and had he not risen from the dead, then it would have been good for us all if we had not been born." But glory to God in the highest, "he is risen;" "the man of sorrows" has left the grave in triumph and glory: and soon, yes, very soon, we who have redemption through his blood, shall meet him, who is the image of the invisible God; the first-born of every creature "in the clouds of heaven."

All his chosen ones are brought into the new covenant by baptism, which is the outward sign of the new covenant: and the covenant and the priesthood being changed, Paul says, "there is made a necessity, of a change also of the law." "Here," he says also, "Let no man judge you in respect of a holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is Christ."

Thus we see, that even the Sabbath was a shadow, but Christ the substance of that shadow. And shall we leave the substance, and go back to the shadow? God forbid.

I doubt not that the seventh day was a type of the seven thousand years, and I am as fully persuaded that the first day is a type of the great Jubilee of Jubilees, which will follow the thousand years; for that will be the morrow after the Sabbatical millenium, as the Jubilee of the Jews, was the morrow after their seven Sabbatic years, (viz.) the fiftieth year.

It may be said, if so, the type did not reach the antetype, as the Passover lamb reached the day of the slaughter of the Lamb of God, and the Passover supper reached to the supper of the Lord. This is true. There were three feasts in the seventh month, which did not reach by their observance to the antetypes, neither did their Sabbatic or seventh years reach to the antetype; but the substance of them all, had made his appearance. He had come "again from the dead," and that was pledge enough that every one would be exactly fulfilled when their specific time arrived. The Holy Ghost could not be given till the day of Pentecost, because that descent was to fulfill the offering of the two wave loaves; and so the seventh month feasts cannot be fulfilled till the Lord of the harvest shall gather in all his elect. He nailed the typicals to his cross, and what was not fulfilled would be, when the time for them should be fulfilled.

From the moral, judicial, and spiritual laws of the old covenant Christ enacted a code of laws exactly adapted to the gospel; hence, Paul says, "We are not under the law but under grace; and being not without law to God, but under the law to Christ." He is "the end of the law." Every part of it begins, centres, and ends in him, and he is Lord even of the Sabbath day."

"Love is the fulfilling of the law." The first commandment is, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment." "And the second is like unto it. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." On these two commandments hang all the law and prophets." Matt. 22: 37-40.

Again, the Savior says, Mark 10: 19, "Thou knowest the commandments; do not commit adultery; do not kill; do not steal; do not bear false witness; defraud not. Honor thy father and thy mother." In another place he says, "swear not at all."

Here we find the spirit and import of nine of the commandments, out of ten, which were delivered to Moses, and not one word about the Sabbath. The sermon on the mount contains the spirit of the whole law, and yet not one word about the Sabbath.

Paul says, Heb. 8: 7, "If the first covenant had been faultless, there should no place have been sought for a second." But finding fault with that, he made a new covenant, the laws of which were written on the heart. "In that he saith a new covenant, he hath made the first old." "Now that which decayeth, and waxeth old, is ready to vanish away."

These, dear brethren, are some of the evidences that the Sabbath day has been superseded by our Lord's resurrection day; that we have not been left to embrace popish customs in this, for the day was observed from the day he rose; and I think the disciples knew when he rose from the dead, that the day was changed agreeably to the types, by their observing the first day of the week ever after; only, as they had to conform to Jewish prejudices in order to save them, and consequently they must meet them on their Sabbaths. "The law made nothing perfect," but Jesus did; by whom let us all "draw nigh unto God."

For the Crisis.

Incidents by the Way.

No. IV.

BY S. S. BREWER.

Sunday morning, Sept. 21.—The sun is just peering forth from the East. The clouds are dispersing, and we hail the new day with joy and gladness of heart. Although nature appears veiled in autumn's gloom, there is eloquence in the sere and yellow leaf, and from the vast arcana of the universe it speaks in all its varied strains.

While I listen to the deep, hoarse breathings of the mountain billows as they break upon the shore—the wind murmuring in plaintive strains as it careers among the ripened corn, and the branches o'er my head in the forest, and gently bends the stalks around,—the few songsters that remain warble their notes of praise; and the myriad of insects on their tiny wing, hid amid the trees, the grass, the leaves around, all, all contribute in their thousand tongues their hymns of praise to God, —I feel just like singing that almost incomparable song of praise on the sixty-second page of the Jubilee Harp. Read it.

We had the blessing of the Lord while round the family altar this morning. And now the hour for preaching has come, and but few come with it. Several have been compelled by necessity to be absent; some are braving the dangers of the deep. The stranded vessel has been got off the beach, water-logged, and put off at the mercy of the winds and waves for New York, a distance by water, of one hundred and thirty miles.

Preached twice, had the blessing and good will of him who dwelt in the bush. In the afternoon, we trust some lasting impressions were made on the minds of some.

In the evening we came together and partook of the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of our injured King, and parted in the faith of soon seeing the Lord, and being made like him.

On Monday we were [illegible]

pattering of the rain against the window glass, close beside our bed, as storms fiercely from the south-east. Spent the day in writing, and contending for the truth, in opposition to the foggy mysticisms of an immortal soul, or a deathless spirit flying away into a mysterious locality; with neither time, bounds, centre, or circle —an unrevealed, bottomless nonentity for the righteous, and the undefinable regions of hell, horrors, brimstone, fire, conscious misery and woe for the wicked.

Should the weather permit, with the blessing of God, we purpose to-morrow morning to bid farewell to this out-of-the-way and sea-side place. The very few who tarry here, speak in grateful recollection of brethren E. Burnham and Berick, brother and sister Grant.

I now bid farewell to the little flock, and may God bless them for their kindness to me; and if never permitted to see each other here, may we meet in the land where the sun never sets.

Tuesday morning, Sept. 23 —Early in the morning we took leave of the few waiting ones at Shinneck, and by private and public conveyance reached the railroad at Greenport, L. I., where we took passage for the city of New York, and reached brother Green's early in the evening, tired and weary in our pilgrimage for the better land, but not of it.

During the week I visited many of my old acquaintances; some have fallen asleep, others fallen out by the way, and some continue unto the present day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which Moses and the prophets did say should come.

I will mention two instances that afforded me some painful consolation. The first, is the case of brother Joseph Rusher. It seems but as yesterday, that brother Rusher joined my class when I was in the M. E. church, although twenty years since, then young, healthy, and devoted to God. O what a change that wasting disease consumption has made. Pale, and emaciated, wasting away, yet strong in the Lord and the power of his might. While awaiting his change he penned the following in answer to the popular theology of this popular, world-church people:

"Why do you say the dead doth know?
The Bible says it is not so;
But all who in the grave doth go,
They nothing do, and nothing know."

He also transposed that popular hymn so often sung,—

"I'll praise my Maker while I've breath;
And when my voice is lost in death,
Praise shall employ my nobler powers.
My days of praise shall ne'er be past,
While life, and thought, and being last,
Or immortality endures."

Here is brother Rusher's view of the dead:

"I'll praise my Maker while I've breath;
But should my voice be lost in death,
We cannot praise him then we know—
The blessed Bible tells us so.
Our days of praise with nobler powers
Will be, when life eternal's ours.

Happy the man whose hope remains
On Israel's God, for he's the same.
When Zion's children shall come forth
From east and west and north and south,
Then all God's host shall praise his name,
And earth made new shall bloom again.

The Lord who opens the blind eyes
Will shortly bid his saints arise;
Then from their graves in joyful lays
They'll sing their great Redeemer's praise.
O blessed Hope! then Death shall cease,
And Christ will reign the Prince of peace.

And is it so, and shall I gain
A part in that immortal train,
To rise and meet him in mid air,
And with his people have a share?
O yes, if faithful a few days,
We'll in his kingdom sing his praise."

How perfectly harmonious is the above sentiment with divine testimony. Note the following strain of one of our most gifted poets, that we clipped from a paper a few days since. In the last illness of the poetess she wrote for a little friend these lines:

"I am going through the eternal gates
Ere June's sweet roses blow,
Death's lovely angel leads me there,
And it is sweet to go."

Such sentiments as the last, so at variance with holy writ, reminds me of the following item:

After I had left brother Rusher at his home in Morrisiana, ten miles from the city of New York, I took my seat in the cars. Shortly the news-boy came along with the papers. In perusing one I came across the following item. Speaking of the perversion of truth, the editor relates the following:

"The pertinacity of these fanatics in insisting that the subject they have snatched is alive, as well as kicking, puts all former delusions of this kind to the blush. It reminds me of what a sailor I heard the other day said, who had wandered into a churchyard, and was amusing himself by reading the inscriptions on the gravestones. Presently he came to one on which the defunct stonily addressed the pausing traveler in this wise:

'Weep not for me, my dearest dear;
I am not dead, though I lie here!'

This was too much for Jack. Shifting his quid, he ejaculated: 'Well! I've heard say that there are cases in which a man may lie; but, I s—r, if I was dead, I'd own it!'"

The other case of an afflictive nature referred to above, is this. About the time that brother R. joined my class, I visited an absentee who had not attended class since it had fallen under my superintendence. When I enquired the cause of absence, I found it was owing to the care of her child, about eight months old, then creeping on the floor. On my visit to Brooklyn on Sat. Sept. 27, my mind was deeply impressed with the desire to see the above family. Having obtained through the Directory their street and number, I knocked at the door. Soon it was responded to by sister C. We stood gazing at each other for some time. When she recognized me, the first salutation was, "O, how you have altered." And in retnrn, I exclaimed in the same manner.

"O," replied the mother, "I am glad you have come. John is about to die."

Oh, what a change! The mother's head whitened with the frost of twenty winters since first we met, and the little creeping infant, just budding into childhood, now a young man, nipped by death's untimely frost, withering under a slow, wasting consumption.

I immediately commenced presenting the true source of immortality, showing that the dead sleep till the resurrection. After answering the objections presented, I showed the glory to be revealed at the appearing of the Life-Giver.

Never shall I forget, while a sojourner in this land of the sick and dying, the interest that mother and son took in the presentation of Bible truths, respecting the saints' inheritance UNDER the whole heaven. O, what a season of joy and sorrow, cloud and sunshine, weeping and sadness. Eyes beaming with joy though swimming in tears.

I left that grief-stricken mother and son, I trust with the blessing of God, in the possession of a more perfect and glorious knowledge of the true source of immortality, the saints' inheritance, and the second coming of the Savior as the crowning desire and hope of all the prophets, apostles, saints and holy confessors.

On Sunday, Sept. 28, we tried to preach to the brethren corner of Elizabeth and Grand streets, N. Y. The Lord was present to own and bless the waiting ones. But I missed some of the old veterans. Peace to their dust. I shall soon greet them in our Father's house, to go no more out for ever. Amen.

Yesterday afternoon we took passage for home, and after a rough one over the Long Island sound, we arrived at Stonington, quarter past three in the morning. We took cars and reached my own hired house by six o'clock, in time for breakfast. Praise the Lord, O my soul.

Providence, R. I., 54 Wilson St.

Request.

The church in Springfield, Mass., request, for their accommodation, that brethren sending them appointments will direct to R. E. Ladd, Corresponding Secretary.

E. WHITNEY.

"Could we with ink the ocean fill,
Was all the earth of parchment made;
Was every stick thereon a quill,
And every man a scribe by trade—
To write the love of God to man,
Would drain the ocean dry;
Nor would the scroll contain the span,
Though stretched from sky to sky."

God finds ability for those who will rightly use it.

God takes from those who take from his interests. E. B.

Be frank with the world. Frankness is the child of honesty and courage.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 29, 1856

Questions.

Further answers to the questions of our Sister in Christ.

No. XIII.

"His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Ps. 146: 4.

Ques. 1. "Are the thoughts of man the fullness of his soul?"

2. "Can life die?"

Ans. 1. The thoughts of man are the result of an organization having the breath of life; and when the "breath goeth forth . . . . his thoughts perish," or in other words, the man stops thinking; hence it is said of man when dead,—there is no work nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest." Eccl 9: 10.

2. In answer to the question—"Can life die?" we would say that properly speaking, nothing can die but an organized being; and as life is not an entity, it cannot be said to die. Life represents a state of a being in opposition to death. We may as well say that death dies, as that life lives; which is true only when they are personified, or addressed as imaginary beings.

No. XIV.

"To me to live is Christ, and to die is gain; but if I live in the flesh this is the fruit of my labor; yet what I shall choose I wot not, for I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart and be with Christ which is far better. Nevrtheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you." Phil. 1: 21–24.

Ques. 1. "Would not the spirit of Paul get the gain that would accrue to him, to die? 2. Was it the spirit that desired to depart?"

Ans. The Spirit of Paul cannot be himself. The sound of a bell, is not the bell. The steam of the engine, is not the engine.

We have shown again and again, that, according to the Bible, philosophy, and facts, the spirit or breath of life in the nostrils of men and animals, is not the man, nor the animal; and that when this breath or spirit departs, the whole man is dead, and will soon return to dust, dependent on a resurrection for a future existence.

2. In answering the second part of the question—"Was it the spirit that desired to depart?" we remark, it seems plain that it was not; for Paul says—I desire to depart, (not my spirit desires &c.) Now whatever constitutes Paul, "desires," and as the spirit is not him, it must be Paul himself.

In Phil. 2: 11, we have this same "I" speaking again. Hear him. "If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead," or moreliterally rendered—"out from among the dead"

How can he be raised from the dead unless he dies first?

This same "I" speaks in 1 Cor. 15: 32 and says, "If after the manner of men I have fought with the beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me if the dead rise not?"

Again; in 1 Cor. 15: 17–18 he says —"and if Christ be not raised your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished."

What can be plainer expressed than the fact that our only hope of a future existence depends upon a resurrection of the dead?

Paul is in harmony with himself. Then he cannot mean in Phil. 1: 21–24 that he expected to go to his reward before the coming of the Lord and the resurrection at the last day.

I learn that an old translation of Phil. 1: 23 reads,—'having an earnest desire for the returning and being with Christ," ie., he earnestly desires to have Christ return so that he can be with him, which would be far better than to live in this present world, or die and be free from whippings, bonds, imprisonments, stonings, &c.

Job once said,—"O that thou wouldst hide me in the grave." Paul and Job are not the only ones who have felt that it would be gain to die, and rest from their toils and sufferings.

In Phil. he hardly knows which he would choose, either life or death; but the coming of Christ and being with him would be "far better."

Meetings in Boston.

Brother Hastings has been with us the last two Lord's days and the intervening week most of the time.

His faithful labors have been blessed in the comforting and edification of the saints, and we have felt quickened to duty and more earnestness in our efforts for the welfare of our fellow men, whom we must soon meet at the judgment.

Some strangers to the blessed hope are becoming deeply interested in our meetings, and seem resolved to be among those who will inherit the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world.

Our meetings hereafter will be at Chapman Hall.

A New Tract.

Of very great value will shortly be issued, entitled Plain Truths by H. L. Hastings.

The plan is this: First a plain statement is made of some of the plain truths which we teach; then this is followed by proof from the word of God, and finally this is succeeded by quotations from the writings of noted men who endorse the same positions. This is continued till it comprehends some of the most important points of revealed truth, embracing the doctrines of the inheritance, new creation, reward,—kingdom, advent &c. The whole is a closely printed 12mo. of about 30 pages.

Price $3.00 per 100—5 cts. single. Address H. L. Haftings, Peacedale, R. I.

Removal.

The church in Boston worshipping at the Free Chapel, corner of Causeway and Lowell streets, has concluded to return to Chapman Hall, Chapman Place, out of School street, opposite the City Hall.

Brother J. Couch is expected to preach there the first Lord's day in Nov., and brother E. Burnham the second.

Friends visiting the city are invited to meet with us.

Sabbath Works.

Please read and remember. I buy all old or new Sabbath and Lord's day books, whether large or small, far or near. And the older the books the better. No matter if unbound and some torn, I will accept them. Especially do I want the old works put forth in the seventeenth century. Many such are scattered around the country almost worthless to their owners. Send them to me and get the money for them. Show this to your neighbors and if any have such to spare, send me by letter the title, date, number of pages, price of the book, and author's name. Cut this out and keep it in mind.

Direct to Daniel T. Taylor, Worcester, Mass.

Papers.

On account of some unknown mistake we did not have papers enough to supply our subscribers last week.

We sent a few damaged ones, thinking they would be better than none. We are very sorry it has so happened, but trust that we shall be pardoned.

BACK NUMBERS.—If any of our subscribers have Nos. 1, 3, 4, 7 and 8 of the present Vol. which they can spare, if they will send them to us, at our expense, we shall be very thankful, as we are not able to supply new subscribers with those numbers.

The following extract is from an article published in The Independent, delivered at the late anniversary of Andover Theological Seminary, by D. M. Epstein, a convert from Judaism.

Subject:—"The Doctrine of an Atonement in the Theology of Modern Judaism."

He states that the Rabbins say:—"That the day of death atones for all the sins of the dying individual; his repentance and good works are all necessary, still the day of death, by which is meant the pains of dissolution, is required by Jehovah as an atonement for his sins. Here at least it would seem that the Rabbins would stop, and in consistency with their doctrines of the atonements for sin, would introduce the forgiven Israelite into the blessedness of heaven. But no, hear what they discourse about the state of a Jew after his death.

First, they say, he suffers for four weeks the "buffetings of the grave." Then come eleven months of purgatory, during which the prayers of relatives, especially those of the children of the deceased, and also their studying of the traditions, for the particular benefit of the deceased, are all required to bring him out of it. But still the mind of the Rabbins was not satisfied, and therefore last of all, as if feeling the desperateness of their cause, and determined not to yield to the truth at any price, they arrogantly affirm in a summary way; that Abraham sits at the gate of hell, and sees that no circumcised Jew enters ever therein.

These false doctrines which I enumerate, are commonly received by all orthodox Jews, as the truth of God."

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Jews.

Reasons for not believing in the restoration of the CARNAL Jews, either before or after the second advent.

BY F. H. BERICK.

No. IV.

The declarations of the prophets Isaiah, Jeremiah &c., concerning the desolations of Jerusalem and the cities of Judah, began to be fulfilled in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, B. C. 606.

We learn from Prideaux (1) that Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, became master of Jerusalem in Nov. B. C. 605; when he caused great numbers of the people to be sent into captivity to Babylon, among whom were Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah. Dan. 1: 6.

Having brought the country into subjection, the king of Babylon permitted Jehoiakim to reign as his tributary. But seven years afterward, Jehoiakim rebelled; B. C. 599—but being (as is supposed) killed, his son Jehoiachin succeeded him, B. C. 598, when the city was taken by Nebuchadnezzar a second time, when "he carried out thence all of the treasures of the house of the Lord, and the treasures of the king's house. * * * * And he carried away all Jerusalem, and all the princes, and all the mighty men of valor, even ten thousand captives, and all of the craftsmen and smiths: none remained, save the poorest sort of the people of the land.— And he carried away Jehoiachin to Babylon, and the king's mother, and the king's wives, and his officers, and the mighty of the land: those carried he into captivity from Jerusalem to Babylon. 2 Kings, 24: 3—15.

The king of Babylon now committed the government into the hands of Zedekiah, but he, as his predecessor had done, did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord. "And it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he and all his army, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it, and built forts against it round about. So the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah" when it was taken a third time. This occurred B. C. 588. At this time the temple was burnt, and all the people carried into captivity excepting a few who who were left for "vine-dressers and for husbandmen." Thus the wrath of God was poured out and his fury accomplished.

Having traced in a very brief manner the captivities of the tribes of Israel, it may do well to enquire with regard to the fulfillment of those predictions which were accomplished in or during their subjection. To notice all of the prophecies relative to the overthrow of the Jews, would swell this article altogether to some of the most prominent predictions and then dismiss this part of our subject.

Some of the most important prophecies are to be found in the writings of Moses. He, as the leader of Israel, was aware of the fact that the people under his charge were a "stig-necked and uncircumcised" nation: God had revealed to him that the Israelites would, after his death, turn, and do evil, and that the judgments of God would overtrke them; this he declared in the hearing of all the congregation.

The first thing in the writings of Moses worthy of our consideration is the prediction that evil shall befall the Israelites in the latter days.

Many have and still do suppose from the phraseology—"latter days"—that this prophecy must refer to the gospel dispensation, and consequently, the evils predicted refer the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, and subsequent to that time. But this is a hasty conclusion as will appear from the facts in the case. The phraie—"in the latter days"—says Newton, "in the Old Testament signiges any time that is yet to come, though sometimes it may relate to the times of the Messiah in particular, as it comprehends all future time in general; and hence it is used in prophecies that respect different times and periods.

"I will advertise thee," (saith Balaam to Balak, Num. 24: 14,) "what this people shall do to thy people in the latter days;' but what the Israelites did to the Moabites, was done long before the times of the Messiah. 'I know' (saith Moses, Deut. 31: 29,) that after my death ye will utterly corrupt yourselves, and turn aside from the way which I have commanded you, and evil will befall you in the latter days;' where the latter days are much the same as the time after the death of Moses. 'There is a God in heaven,' (Dan. 2: 28,) 'that revealeth secrets, and maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar, what shall be in the latter days;' but several particulars are there foretold of the four great Monarchies of the earth, which were fulfilled before the coming of the Messiah."

And in like manner these prophecies of Moses were, the most of them, accomplished under the Mosaic economy several ages before the birth of Christ. The phrase—'latter days"—as it occurs in Dan. 2: 28, shows conclusively that the prophet refers in part to the time which preceded the advent of Christ. The events to take place in the latter days were; (1) The overthrow of Babylon; (2) The rise and fall of Medo-Persia; (3) The rise of the Grecian Monarchy; (4) Its subsequent divisions; (5) The subversion of those divisions by the Bromans; (6) The establishment of the kingdom of God. All, with the exception of the last that we have specified, occurred before the first advent of Christ. From the foregoing considerations we conclude that the phrase does not necessarily have reference to the gospel dispensation, but may and should apply to the time when the events specified are accomplished.

All of those expressions which indicate that the Jews should be visited with pestilence, sword, &c., were so literally fulfilled in their overthrow by Assyria and Babylon, that we need not attempt to present the evidence of their fulfillment on this occasion, but proceed at once to examine some of the more prominent. The first that we wish to notice is in Deut. 28: 36, 37.

"The Lord shall bring thee, and thy king which thou shalt set over thee, unto a nation which neither thou nor thy fathers have known; and there shalt thou serve other gods, wood and stone. And thou shalt become an astonishment, a proverb, and a by-word, among all nations whither the Lord shall lead thee."

In relation to this prediction two things must, we think, be evident to every person. (1). When this prophecy is fulfilled the Israelites have a king over them, otherwise, he could not be carried into captivity, and (2), as the Jews did not have any king of their own when Titus overthrew their city, it follows as a matter of certainty that the prophecy has no reference to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, but must have been fulfilled previously.

We know that Jehoahaz was carried captive to Egypt, and Hashea was taken captive and imprisoned by Stalmaneser, king of Assyria, &c.

Again, "The Lord shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flieth; a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand; a nation of fierce countenance, which shall not regard the person of the old, nor show favor to the young. Deut. 28: 49, 50.— Jeremiah prophesying of the same event says,—"Lo, I will bring a nation upon you from far, O house of Israel, saith the Lord; it is a mighty nation, it is an ancient nation, a nation whose language thou knowest not, neither understandest what they say." Jer. 5: 15. Both Moses and Jeremiah evidently refer to the Chaldeans or Assyrians, for to no other nation could the phrase "ancient nation" so well apply. The Jews did not understand their language, hence the remark,—"a nation whose language thou canst not understand." Moses compares them to eagles, and Jeremiah says,—"Our persecutors are swifter than the eagles of heaven." Lam. 4: 19. To make the matter thrice more positive, Jeremiah says,—"Israel is a scattered sheep, the lions have driven him away; first the king of Assyria hath devoured him, and last this Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon hath broken his bones." Chap. 50: 17.

Again:—"And thou shalt eat the fruit of thine own body, the flesh of thy sons and of thy daughters, which the Lord thy God hath given thee, in the siege, and in the straitness wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee." Ver. 43.

This is likewise referred by commentators to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans. But I believe that they never have been able to refer to but one case in which this was done; ie. the case of Mary, the daughter of Eleazar; whereas, to say nothing of the instance recorded in 2 Kings: 28, we have a much better fulfillment in the overthrow of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. Jeremiah says, when speaking of the destruction of Jerusalem by the king of Babylon,—"The hands of the pitiful women have sodden (boiled) their own children; they were their meat in the destruction of the daughter of my people." Lam. 4: 10.

Again, "Therefore the Lord hath made good his word, which he pronounced against us, and against our Judges that judged Israel, and against our kings, and against our princes, and against the men of Israel and Judah, to bring upon us great plagues, such as never happened under the whole heaven, as it came to pass in Jerusalem, according to the things that were written in the law of Moses; that a man should eat the flesh of his own son, and the flesh of his own daughter." Baruch 2: 1—3.

The above testimony locates the prediction of Moses in such a way, that we cannot be mistaken. It belongs to Jerusalem at the time it was destroyed by the Babylonians. Not only was there one instance, but many. Fathers and mothers boiled and eat their own children, and thus God fulfilled his word. The instance which occurred at the time Titus besieged Jerusalem could not in the nature of the case fulfill the prediction of Moses, it being altogether too limited.

Again, "Then shall the land enjoy her Sabbaths so long as it lieth desolate, and ye be in your enemies' land: even then shall the land rest, and enjoy her Sabbaths." Lev. 26: 34. Jeremiah declared that the land should be desolate, and that the Jews should serve the king of Babylon seventy years. This was the time when the land enjoyed her sabbaths, as we learn from Chron. 36: 20, 21. We read, —"And them that had escaped from the sword carried he (Nebuchadnezzar) away to Babylon, where they were servants to him and to his sons, until the reign of the kingdom of Persia: to fulfill the word of the Lord by the mouth of Jeremiah, until the land had enjoyed her Sabbaths: for as long as she lay desolate she kept Sabbath, to fulfill threescore and ten years." What a perfect fulfillment!

Again, "And the Lord shall bring thee into Egypt again with ships, by the way whereof I spake unto thee, thou shalt see it no more again; and there ye shall be sold unto your enemies for bond-men and bond-women, and no man shall buy you.' Deut. 28: 68.

It is true, that when the Romans took possession of Jerusalem in the year of our Lord seventy, that many of the Jews were transported to Egypt. But previous to the ascendency of Rome this scripture was evidently fulfilled. Mark the expression —"ye shall be sold for bondmen and bond-women," &c. Josephus informs us that Ptolemy Philadelphus, king of Egypt, "Set free those that were come from Jerusalem into Egypt, and were in slavery there, who were a hundred and twenty thousand." Ant. B. 12. chap. 2.

Again; We learn from the testimony of scripture that Ephraim, i. e. the ten tribes of Israel, were to be no more a people, Isa. 7: 8; and Hosea declared that the Lord would "cause to cease the kingdom of Israel." 1: 4. All of the efforts put forth by the wise men of latter times to ascertain the whereabouts of the ten tribes have proved a failure.

(1) Vol. 11. 99.

For the Crisis.

New Hampshire Conference.

Holden at Lake Village, Oct. 9, 10, 11, 12.

According to previous notice, the Conference convened at the Chapel, Oct. 9th, at one o'clock, P. M., and the time was spent in singing, prayer, and appropriate remarks by brethren and sisters, a goodly number being present. The season was refreshing and encouraging. At six o'clock, P. M., the ministering brethren held an interesting and profitable conference for about one hour.

EVENING. Preaching by brother J. Harvey. Text, Mark 16: 15. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," &c. In this meeting was verified the promise, "Lo, I am with you."

FRIDAY MORNING, Oct. 10th, at nine o'clock, brethren met, and after appropriate exercises, the Conference was organized by choosing Elds. John Knowles, Moderator, and T. M. Preble, Clerk. The following ministers, gave in their names as members of the Conference, viz.:

Elds. John Knowles, Lake Village; O. G. Smith, East Sanbornton; J. Morse, Londonderry; I. H. Shipman, Lisbon; S. S. Mooney, Gilmanton; J. Harvey Pittsfield; D. F. Leavitt, London Ridge; B. Locke, East Weare; T. M. Preble, do.

On motion, agreed that all brethren present be invited to take part in the deliberations of the Conference.

Heard and accepted the report of the committee appointed at the last conference to take the supervision of the tract distribution. Heard the report from last year's committee appointed to supply destitute churches, &c., which was quite interesting and encouraging considering the circumstances.

On motion, agreed that Brn. I. H. Shipman, O. G Smith, B. Locke, J. Knowles and T. M. Preble be a Committee to prepare business for the Conference. The following brethren, viz.: J. H. Shipman, T. M. Preble, J. Harvey, J. Morse, O. G. Smith and B. Locke now reported the state of the brethren in different parts of the State.

While listening to the reports, we felt encouraged to continue our labor, knowing it is not in vain in the Lord; as quite a number had been converted and been baptized during the past year, and brethren generally were steadfast in the "faith once delivered to the saints." Conference now adjourned to meet at the close of the afternoon meeting of worship.

AFTERNOON. Preaching by brother I. H. Shipman. Text, Rev. 2: 4. "Nevertheless, I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love." This was a timely and profitable discourse, as many, no doubt, could bear witness.

At the close of the meeting of worship, the Conference commenced business according to adjournment. Heard the report of the business committee, and on the recommendation it was agreed that a committee of six be oppointed, with whom brethren in New Hampshire in destitute places may correspond; and it shall be the duty of said Committee to assist in supplying with preaching such destitute places; and if the committee cannot visit such places themselves, they are to do what they can to send some one else to preach the gospel to the destitute.

Agreed, that Elds. J. Knowles, O. G. Smith, J. Harvey, J. Couch, J. Morse, and T. M. Preble be said committee.

On recommendation of the Committee, agreed, that we send a delegate to the General Convention to be holden at Providence, R. I., to commence Nov. 11th. On motion, agreed to lay this subject over, to be called up at an adjourned meeting. On motion, agreed that the same brethren, as last year, T. M. Preble, J. Morse, and J. Harvey, be a committee to take the supervision of the tract distribution within the bounds of the Conference for the ensuing year. Adjourned till 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

EVENING. Preaching by T. M. Preble. Text Matt. 24: 31. "And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other."

SATURDAY MORNING Oct. 11. At 9 o'clock, Conference met according to adjournment; and after devotional exercises, on motion, the following resolution wase unanimously adopted.

Resolved: That the Conference still hold their views on church order as embodied in a resolution adopted by the Conference last year, and we still recommend to the brethren to carry out the resolution as far as consistent with circumstances, which reads as follows:

Resolved; "That this Conference believe that the time has come for decided and immediate action to be taken for the purpose of bringing about the observance of gospel order in the churches and societies of Adventists in New Hampshire, by which, we only mean such order as is plainly taught by Christ and his apostles, according to the literal reading of the New Testament."

On motion, called up the subject of sending a delegate to the General Convention; and it was agreed that T. M. Preble be said delegate. Conference then adjourned to meet at the call of the clerk, at such time and place as he might think best.

In consequence of ill health the clerk left the Conference Saturday noon. But the following extract of a letter from brother Shipman will give an account of the meeting.

Sugar Hill, Oct. 15, 1856.

DEAR BRO. PREBLE:—I write a short account of the Conference after you left. Saturday P. M., brother B. Locke preached from Luke 12: 32. "Fear not little flock," &c. Considering 1. The kingdom. 2. The flock. 3. The inquiry necessary, —am I one of the flock? It was a timely discourse and made a good impression on the hearers.

I preached Saturday evening and three times on the Sabbath. The attention was good and I think a lasting impression was made on some, and I hope, many minds.

On Saturday the church (at Lake Village) came into gospel order by making a record of their names and acknowledging the Scriptures as their rule of faith and practice; and the appointment of necessary officers.

Upon the whole, I think the Conference was one of much interest, and I think the influence will be good on many who were present from other portions of the State.

A few rose for prayers and some confessed their wanderings from God.

Yours in love, I. H. SHIPMAN.

East Weare, N. H., Oct. 21, 1856.

JOHN KNOWLES, Moderator.
T. M. PREBLE Clerk.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

I'M WAITING.

BY MARIA.

I'm waiting Savior, O how long
I've gazed into you sky;
And watched to hail some token there
That speaks thy coming nigh.

I'm waiting, Lord, how long? too slow
The tedious hours move on;
When will the last lone watch be past
And earth's long night be gone?

I'm waiting, and my heart grows sicks
And faint with Hope's delay;
I'm listening 'till thy voice I hear
Call me from earth away.

I'm waiting, and my eyes are wet
With tears that still will flow;
Till from my soul thy hand shall lift,
Its load of grief and woe.

I'm waiting, and I hear the scoffs
Oft of the haughty foe;
Who, mocking ask—"Where is thy God?
Where is the promise now?"

I'm waiting, but one hope is mine—
A star-beam on life's way;
Thou wilt return again—not long
Thy chariot wheels shall stay.

I'm waiting, but my faith grows strong
In thy eternal word;
A little while and I shall be
"Forever with the Lord!"

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. Jas. Crawford.

BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—Permit me to say a few words. It is clear that the Word of God is truth. Those of us who take the name of christians, look upon the Bible as the christian's chart, or compass, and I shall only be able to look at one or two points. Heb. 10: 24, 25. We are not to be unmindful of each other, we are not to be careless in reference to where our affections are in these trying times; we are not to say to the little flock,—do good or do evil as seemeth good in thy sight, but rather by all of the power of grace we have in us, "to provoke unto love and good works." Who ever heard of any one accomplishing any great, or small amount of work without effort? Some labor so hard for the "meat that perisheth," that when the time comes to gather together, they have no strength left for the service of the Lord.

The man of God is disheartened in the absence of the flock, the few who do attend feel isolated, and a burden is accumulated not at all times so easy to be borne,—notwithstanding the chart declares, "bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." When in such a state, it is quite easy to multiply excuses, and if the little flock who bear the burden in the heat of the day are so blessed as to have the gospel preached to them, it seems almost a miracle if some excuse is not heard like this, "his preaching is all argument, there is no spirituality to it," and most likely in such a state of mind their judgment of spirituality may be as true as a blind man's of color.

Again, it may be a point of doctrine or experience, in which the individual has been enlightened, and he wishes to learn no more about it, as if self was all to learn the word of God.

May we all be refreshed with the spirit of Christ. JAMES CRAWFORD.

Roxbury, Mass.

Choice Selections.

Condition of Europe.

To any one who really see Europe as it actually is at this hour, the spectacle is a sad one. To him who forgets that God rules all, from evil still evoking good, it is a hopeless one. Are we really at the close of war, or only at the beginning of one still greater? Take up the newspapers—those Arguses whose eyes travel to and fro on the face of the earth—and what do we read of?

First come voices of trouble from the East. Troubles in Arabia—fifty thousand rebels at Mecca swearing that the Sultan has forsworn the Prophet; troubles in Syria—wild men at Nabulous rising because there is no one to keep them down; troubles in Bagdad, smouldering troubles in Smyrna and other places in Anatolia, where the charter we wrung from the Porte is only setting Turk and Christian the faster by the ears; perfect anarchy in Greece —neither men nor goods safe beyond three miles from the coast, where French troops patrol—and the people fiercer than ever against the Ottomans, and more than ever frantic to kiss the feet of the Czar and subject themselves to an iron despotism which is probably marked out by Providence as the sole effectual cure of Hellenic madness. So much for Turkey, which, our rulers tell us, we have rescued and made strong. Is there a single whole place in it from head to foot?

But "we have checked the southward progress of Russia."

For a moment. But why those cries for help from the Caucasus, that marshaling of Chruleff's host, those plans now preparing in the bureaus of St. Petersburgh for new forts on the east side of the Black Sea, and a war-navy on the Caspian?

Turkey disintegrating, and Russia adhering to her "hereditary policy"—this is but one scene of the diorama. Take another phase of the troubles. Were there ever before so many "armies of occupation" in Europe? Austrians in the Principalities, British and French in Turkey and Greece, French and Austrians in Italy, all most generously keeping the peace in other people's territories—the wrong men in the right place!

The sight of those various white, blue, and red-coated soldiers in alien countries is a significant proof of the disjointed state of affairs. It is like the sight of dragoons in a mob, telling of troubles. Italy is specially the seat of troubles and the object of apprehensions. Geologically the most volcanic of European countries, she is so now also politically. The damp dungeons of Naples teem with victims, and King Bomba overawes his people by means of brigands and lazzaroni. French bayonets around the Vatican alone ward off a new Roman Republic and a second flight of the Pope to Gaeta. Austria overpassing her own frontiers, has corps of occupation, alike in Parma and the Legations, where they rule like demons—and in her own Italian territories there prevails only a milder form of the same reign of terror. Radetzky writes to Vienna that either his master must say No at once to the Remonstrances of the Western Powers and Sardinia, or he will resign. Indeed, in the present combustible state of the peninsula, can Austria recede without evoking the flames? It is a duel between Austria and Sardinia, contesting the supremacy of Italy. Sardinia demands—publicly in the face of Europe demands—that the cords which bind Italy shall be slackened. If Austria yield, the Star of Piedmont rises higher on the horizon, and all eyes turn to it. The light of hope will grow stronger all over the peninsula, and the slackening of her chords will only make galled Italy pant more furiously to be free.

But what a spectacle for modern Europe! Italy and Greece, the heirs of the classic empires, the descendants of the ancient world—both mad and miserable—raving and chafing with a fury unintelligible to Northern races! Why, the very soldiers of our Italian Legion at Malta are growing delirious—have been shouting and stabbing "for liberty" in a place where there is nothing but batteries and oranges —and would doubtless throw themselves into the sea to swim for Sicily, if they could carry their arms with them.

Is this peace? Cross the Alps and look northward. Poland groaning, and at times hoping, but securely manacled, and perhaps about to be offered by her master a political sop. Hungary, bleeding at the heart, but with no hope on the earth, save in the utter crumbling of the Hapsburgh throne, which would only bring a Muscovite instead of an Austrian bondage.— These we count not at present. They figure largely in the speculations of superficial observers, but it is not by them that the troubled sleep of Europe will first be broken; indeed it seems to us their day cannot come at all until Germany and Italy have first gone through the fire, and come out greatly changed. But Germany is troubled, and will probably be into the furnace sooner than most people imagine.

Destitute of the mad impulses of the South, less demonstrative even than the French, the Germans do not give tongue much before they act—but there are symptoms that the tranquillity of Central Europe is anything but secure. The policy of the governments towards the people has become most reactionary—in many respects there is less freedom now than there was before 1848—and even in the free republic of Hamburg, the most cruel measures of oppression are put in force against the press.

The Germans are a slow moving race, and if they had even a promise of better things coming, they would wait on, smoking their pipes and drinking their beer with true Teutonic phlegm, for another generation. But at present they have not even a promise of better things—the nobility, worse than the throne, seem only bent upon pushing things backward toward feudalism; and the consequence is, that were revolution to commence in serious form, either at Paris, or in Italy, Germany would speedily catch the flame.

In France itself tranquillity is only secure so long as the firm hand of Napoleon III holds the reins. While he lives France will not throw its rider. But his death would resolve all into chaos; and Bourbonists, Republicans and Socialists would be struggling together in the dread maelstrom. For such a convulsion there can be but one issue. Order must be re-established; but around whom is the nation to rally?

Suppose Napoleon III gone, what Saul is there overtopping all the rest by head and shoulders? What name is there but one that is known beyond the limits of Paris and a few leading towns?

Such, it appears to us, is the essential condition of the leading States of the Continent. Troubled they are all of them. Never was the political state of Europe so full of quicksands. "Distress of nations and perplexity"—such is the exact aspect of the times. One cannot take a bold step any way without plunging into abysses which the future only can fathom. Not to speak of the evidently tansition state of the Spanish peninsula, Turkey is disintegrating. Italy is on the eve of exploding; even Germany is not safe; and a crisis in any one of these quarters may set Europe by the ears. Liberalism and Despotism are for the moment strangely interwoven. France threatens the press of Belgium—Austria similarly threatens Sardinia, and crushes Italy. Sardinia menaces despotic Austria—England sympathizes with freedom everywhere, but does not act. France dreads an outbreak in Italy, and stands balancing between Austria and Sardinia, yet at the same time is not disinclined to intervene to check Espartero and democracy in Spain.—Blackwood.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., tha it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

—:o:—

Eld. MILES GRANT appoints to preach at Portsmouth N. H., Nov. 2.

—:o:—

Eld. J. COUCH appoints to preach at Boston, in the Free Chapel, Nov. 2.

—:o:—

Bro. EDWIN BURNHAM appoints to preach at
Portland, Me., Sunday, Nov. 2.
Boston, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 9.
Lewiston, Me., Sunday, Nov. 16.
Poland, Me., Sunday, Nov. 23.

—:o:—

Bro. B. P. MANNING appoints to preach at
Auburn, N. H., Sunday, Nov. 2.
Manchester, Nov. 9.
Nashua, Nov. 16.
Danbury, Nov. 23, and stop a day or two if desired.
N— Boston, Nov. 30.

Eld. D. E. MOULTON, appoints to preach at
Lowell, Classic Hall, Nov. 2
Westford, Tuesday eve. Nov. 4.
Clinton, Wednesday eve. 5.
Worcester, Sunday Nov. 9.
Tolland, Conn., Nov. 16,
where Bro. Storrs may appoint.

—:o:—

Bro. C. GOODRICH appoints to preach at Chester Factories, Sunday, Nov. 2.

As some of the brethren at Worcester, Lowell and Portsmouth have wished me to visit them, I will say that if the Lord will, I can do so the last of November or the first of December. If the brethren desire my labors at that time, please address me immediately at Westfield, Mass. C. GOODRICH.

—:o:—

Bro. O. D. GIBSON appoints to preach at
New Britain, Conn., Oct. 30.
Cheshire St., Conn., Oct. 31.
Wallingford, Nov. 2, as Bro. E. Dudley shall appoint.
Athol, Mass. Sunday, Nov. 9.

—:o:—

Bro. W. M. INGHAM appoints to preach at Orrington, Me., Sunday, Nov. 2,—wish the brethren to appoint a church conference on Saturday, Nov. 1, at 2 o'clock P. M.
Brewer, where the Brn may appoint, Nov. 4.
Woodstock, N. B., Sunday, Nov. 9.

—:o:—

Bro. S. S. BREWER appoints to preach at
Portsmouth, Oct 29 and 30.
Kennebunk, Sunday Nov. 2.
Concord, N. H., evenings, Nov. 4, 5 and 6.
Roby School House, Sunday, Nov. 9.
New Bedford, Sunday, Nov. 16.
Worcester, Nov. 23.

—:o:—

The Lord permitting, I will preach as follows:—

Freeport, 31 and over Sunday Nov. 2 Bro. Leister, of Buchanan, will meet me there and accompany me to Dubuque, Iowa.

I will visit other places in Ill., if desired, if brethren will address me at Freeport and give the necessary direction. If brethren think it not best for me to visit them as proposed, will they please inform me by letter directed to South Bend, or Laporte, Ind., or Freeport, Ill., as we do not wish to impose ourself by preaching on communities where it is not desired. L. H. CHASE.

—:o:—

Bro. W. S. CAMPBELL appoints to preach at Windsor, (Bro. Cooper's,(Oct. 30.
Warehouse Point, 31.
Bristol, Conn., Sunday, Nov. 2.
Plymouth Hollow, 4.
Waterbury, Nov. 5.
Prospect, 6.
New Britain, Sunday, 9.
River Point, 10.
Clarksville, 12.
Lafayette, Nov. 13.
Lowell, Sunday, 16.
Lowell, Sunday, 23.
Bristol, Conn., Sunday, 30.
Collinsville, Dec. 7.

If these appointments conflict with others, please inform me, to save expense and trouble. W. S. C.

Bro. F. H. Berrick appoints to preach at Kingsbury, Ind., Sunday, Nov. [illegible]

—:o:—

Bro. A. Ross appoints to preach at Portsmouth, N. H., Sunday, Nov. [illegible]

—:o:—

Eld. S. W. Bishop appoints to preach at
Worcester, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 2.
Lowell, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 9.
Lawrence, Sunday, Nov. 16.
Boston, Sunday, Nov. 23.

—:o:—

If the Lord will, Elders L. L. Howard, J. Partridge, and such other ministering brethren as think it best to attend, will hold a conference at Brunswick, Me; in the School House near Bro. T. M. Store's, commencing Thursday evening, Nov. 6, at 6 1-2 o'clock, and continuing over the Sabbath.

Brethren and sisters from Topsham, Woolwich, Bowdoinham, Richmond and other towns in the vicinity, are invited to be there to work for the Lord. Now is the time for united action: soon will come the time for a glorious and eternal reward.

In behalf of all interested,
R. R. YORK.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

F. H. Berrick's P. O. address is Union Mills, Laporte, Co., Ind.

Bro. D. T. Taylor, books all right.

D. R. Mansfield's P. O. address is Kingsbury, Ind.

O. D. Gibson's P. O. address is Houghtonville, Vt.

BRO. LEE—We are not able to supply all of the back numbers of this Vol.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise, it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

B Tuttle, J C Pease, W Howard, J Wait, J B Paine, J G Putnam, B P Ravel D Bunn, A Williams, C Keesler, B Wheelock, E M Lee, V Truell, S P Goodsell, F Ferandes S Braley, $1.00 each.

T S Pepper, S. Waller, T J Bickmore. M M Dinsmore, $2.00 each.

M Austin, G W Smith, M E Hamilton, M-E L Jones 50 cents each.

L H Priest 84 cents.

FOR BOOKS.—T J Bickmore, $1; Alice B Draper, $1.00

BOOKS SENT.—J Pinkham, S C Lord, T J Bickmore, Alice B Draper.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

—:o:—

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

The following works are published and sold by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I., and are also for sale at the Office of the "World's Crisis," 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.; and by W. Pratt, Moline, Ill.; P. A. Smith, 4 Frank street, Rochester, N. Y.; A. F. Porter, 20 Erie street, Philadelphia, Pa.; S. S. Brewer, 54 Wilson street, Providence, R. I.:—

GLAD TIDINGS, or Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to End in the Universe, by a Literal Destruction of Wicked Men and Devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment Collected and Arranged. By Jacob Blain. Price 10 cents; postage 1 cent.

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 38 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cts.—postage 9 cents.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings, Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By I. C. Welcome. 33 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

JUBILEE HARP. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns well adapted to the present wants of the church. Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50; per hundred, $20. Postage 7 cents.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—by D. T. Taylor. Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—by John Cumming. State of the Dead, by Milton. Intermediate State, by Grew. Each 24 pages. Price 5 cents single; $3 per hundred. [illegible] —The Great [illegible] price 3 cents single, $1.50 [illegible] —Future Punishment [illegible] The Night Cometh—price 2 cents [illegible] $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

"MY PEACE I LEAVE WITH THEE."

BY VESTA E. CUDWORTH.

When o'er the bright and variegated earth
　Shadows are creeping;
And flowers bend to kiss the dewy turf,
　Like angels weeping;
A chord oft vibrates in my lonely breast,
Touched by an unknown hand, which breathes of rest,—
　I'm sure 'tis Jesus.

And when the sad and mournful autumn winds
　Are round me sighing;
And yellow leaves are borne upon its wings
　All sere and dying:
Methinks I hear a whisper soft and sweet,
"[illegible] loved ones fade, but soon in glory meet,"—
　I'm sure 't is Jesus.

When in the fairy realms of sleep I roam
　Weary and toiling,
All burdened with life's bitter cares I moan
　While tears are falling;
An angel being beckons me so mild—
"Come to my bosom tired and homesick child,"—
　I'm sure 'tis Jesus.

And I have seen my precious blossom fade,
　Daily d caying;
And to my heavenly friend I sought for aid,
　In anguish praying;
A soothing charm dispelled my anguish wild,
'Twas Gilead's balm, and O it saved my child.
　And this was Jesus.

O blessed One, wilt thou not quickly come?
　almost alone
I've waited for thee patiently and long,
　I would go home.
And like a mateless bird I'd quickly flee,
Nor fold my wings till I could rest with thee,
　My blessed Jesus.

Charlemont, Mass.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Unity of the Spirit.

BY R. ROBBINS.

"Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." Eph. 4 : 3.

All men are taught by experience, that in every department of human affairs where copartnership exists, unity of mind is necessary to a successful transaction of business. Unless there is unity of mind, there is not that unity of purpose requisite, although the several individuals connected aim at the same object.

If unity of mind is necessary in the transaction of human affairs, of how much more importance is "the unity of the spirit" in transacting business for God.

We find this principle inculcated not only in the new testament, but also in the old. We go back to the days of David, and we hear him exclaim,—"Behold how [illegible] pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"

"It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard: that went down to the skirts of his garments. As the dew of Hermon, and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion; for there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life forevermore."

But why is it good and pleasant for brethren to dwell together in unity?—"Keep the unity of the spirit?"

1. It is like the ointment upon the head of Aaron.

As, by the use of the ointment, Aaron was sanctified, and consecrated to God: so by "the unity of the spirit," are men sanctified, and set apart for the service of God. And, as by the anointing it was understood that Aaron was chosen of God to be his priest; so, by the unity of the spirit, it is understood, that those with whom it dwells are "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, and a peculiar people."

2. It is as the dew of Hermon upon the mountains.

As the dew, descending upon the mountains, preserves their life, vigor and health, and causes them to send forth their fragrance, and bring forth their fruit: so, the unity of the spirit, enables that people with whom it dwells, to offer unto God a sweet smelling savor, and bring forth fruit unto righteousness.

As the descent of dew upon mountains that for a long time have been in a dry and barren condition restores them to their wonted state of health and fruitfulness; so the unity of the spirit when reproduced in a body, rent and torn by some disgusting element, restores that love, union, peace and harmony, which ever characterize the body of Christ.

[illegible] For there the Lord commanded the blessing, even life for evermore."

How important it is then "for brethren to dwell together in unity." If unity [illegible] is where eternal life is commanded, unity among brethren is where, and only where, eternal life can be obtained.

Let us, then, "endeavor to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace."—For we see that it is both "good and pleasant," for brethren to dwell together in unity."

But how can "the unity of the spirit" be kept where it is, or produced where it is not?

Here is a rock over which many stumble, in consequence of not rightly understanding what the unity of the spirit consists in; and while they are striving for "the unity of the spirit," they are only cultivating a spirit of error and confusion, which leads us to inquire:—

In what does "the unity of the spirit" consist?

A correct answer to this inquiry will enable us to find a correct answer to the first inquiry.

But in the first place, we will answer this question in the negative; and show in what the unity of the spirit does not consist.

1. "The unity of the spirit does not consist in collecting, and binding together in the same bundle, a mass of different and conflicting elements. Notwithstanding the parts containing those elements may be fastened together with outward bands, those elements are conflicting still. If they are, for a time smothered, it is only that, by and by, they may break out with redoubled fury, and confusion dire will be the result; and that confusion will be more terrible, in consequence of the constituent parts of this body being fastened together by exterior bands.

A number of individuals entertaining different and antagonistic views, may form themselves into a body and agree to love one another in spite of different sentiments; that they will respect each other's sentiments; that they will have no controversy; that they will assemble themselves together, and worship God with one heart and one mind; each speak his own peculiar sentiments with freedom, without contradiction from others; establish order, love, peace and union, and thus be brethren. But this is not the result of "the unity of the spirit."

2. "The unity of the spirit" does not consist in confusion of any sort whatever. For "God is not the author of confusion, but of peace."

Let us for a moment anticipate an assembly of several antagonistic sentiments. The first, preaches definite time. A second—"Ye know not when the time is."—A third—"the seventh day must be observed, and the sabbath kept. A fourth—the sabbath institution is abrogated. A fifth—age to come. A sixth—no probation after the Lord comes. A seventh—door of mercy closed. An eighth—Christ still on the mercy-seat, inviting sinners to turn unto him and live.

There may be no personal contradiction in this; but it is controversy direct! and in it there is not "the unity of the spirit."

It looks more like an individual doing a piece of work with one hand, and at the same time rending it in pieces with the other; and going in one direction with one foot, and at the same time going in the opposite direction with the other; speaking a particular sentiment with one corner of his mouth, and at the same time speaking a contrary sentiment with the other, and all the time vociferating in the ears of an astonished company of beholders,—"No schism in my body! but perfect harmony, love, peace and union!"

This does not represent the body of Christ. This is not the result of "the unity of the spirit."

Finally. "The unity of the spirit" does not consist in a suffusion of conflicting elements nor in an effusion of animal feelings, or in any mere external, of whatsoever name or nature. But it consists in the infusion of those principles which produce perfect oneness: that same oneness that exists with the Father and Son. And that oneness extends from the Father, through the Son, to the least individual member of Christ's body—the church. John 17 : 21—23.

"That they all may be one, as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou hast given me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one; I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast loved me."

This entire oneness, consists in sameness in sentiment and purpose, and a hearty cooperation in the same thing.

This looks like "the unity of the spirit." And, it is by this alone that the world is convinced that the Father has sent the Son.

Again; "the unity of the spirit" consists in minding "the same thing" in each attainment of the church. Phi. 3: 16; also in being "like minded; having the same love," (loving the same thing,) "being of one accord, of one mind," And thus fulfilling. Paul's joy. Phil. 2 : 2; Ro. 12: 16; 15: 5; 1 Pet. 3: 8; 2 Cor. 13; 11 We have, thus briefly, noticed the principle internal elements which constitute "the unity of the spirit."

How, then, can "the unity of the spirit" be kept where it exists?

Ans.—By receiving into the heart all the internal elements, and by an external improvement of all the external elements, of which it is constituted; as, "speaking the same thing," 1 Cor. 1: 10; and "standing fast in one spirit, with one mind, striving together for the (one) faith of the gospel." Phil. 1 : 27.

"The unity of the spirit" can only be produced where it does not exist, by being "perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in she same judgment," 1 Cor. 1: 10; and being "established in the present truth.". Peter.

Yours, waiting for the consolation of Israel. R. ROBBINS.

Willington, Sept. 17, '56.

For the Crisis.

"A BETTER COUNTRY,"

HEB. XI: XVI.

BY JOHN LYLE.

Tune—"The Watcher."

I long to see the morning dawn, when Christ the Son shall rise,
Transforming this sad world of ours, to a blest Paradise;
When all the family of God, shall stand on holy ground,
Enabled to endure the weight of glory shining round.

I long to see the marriage feast, where pilgrim guests shall meet,
Who once were scorned by sons of earth, and trampled 'neath their feet;
Where Jesus will come forth to serve, and call them all his own,
Inviting them in tones of love, to share his royal throne.

I long to see the angel hosts, that stand before the Lord
To execute His righteous will, as they receive the word.
O 'twill be sweet to hear the choir, that sang o'er Bethlehem's plain—
"Glory to God, Peace on the earth, and good will toward men."

I long to see the Patriarchs and Prophets in that land,
Together with Apostles, in beauteous order stand;
When far around, on every side, Behold a multitude,
"Who've washed their robes, and made them white in Jesus' precious blood.

I long to see Jerusalem—O City free from night!
Illumined with Jehovah's rays of uncreated light!
No death is there—hunger nor thirst—nor sorrow ever known,
But life's fair tree stands by the stream, that issues from the throne.

O Jesus, hear me cry to Thee—I crave thy spirit's might,
That I may overcome all sin, and gain mount Zion's hight;
Then, when I'm changed from this vile clay, to immortality,
"Glory to God, and to the Lamb," I'll sing eternally.

Newark, N. J., Aug. '56.

For the Crisis.

A Reliable Communication.

The following which is published in the "Spiritual Telegraph," as having been received from spirit-spheres, contains, perhaps, some approach to truth. We think it more reliable than many of their communications; and though we object to their "great plainness of speech," yet we think the truth presented may possibly counterbalance the disadvantages of its uncouth vehicle. We think it gives us quite a significant intimation of the character of the operators at both ends of the wires—when the disguise of an "angel of light" is taken from one and the jargon of an unintelligible philosophy is removed from the other. The extract is as follows:—

"One of Prof. Hare's correspondents, when interrogated whether he was happy, replied, 'Yes, damned happy!' And a friend of ours, a most earnest believer in spiritual communion, related to us, that in the midst of the most serious intercourse with departed friends through the disc and alphabet, a vagrant spirit broke in upon the solemn colloquy with the profane and shocking message, 'You are all a set of damned fools!'"

For further developments of the true character of these "vagrant spirits," we refer to Dr. Ramsey's work—"Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times," published by H. L. Hastings, and for sale at the Crisis office. Price 50 cts. Paper covers 38. H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

Joy.

Man is capable of possessing several kinds of joy; the joy of earthly prosperity; the joy of selfish triumph; the joy of human benevolence; and the joy of the Lord. The joy of earthly prosperity perishes with earthly things; the joy of selfish triumph ends in disappointment and bitterness: the joy of human benevolence ends with human life; but the joy of the Lord is eternal! E. B.

For the Crisis.

Right Sayings.

Pride plumes her wings over the abyss of destruction.

No act is done in vain which is done for God.

That man must go right who goes at God's bidding.

The way of righteousness becomes the more interesting the farther we walk in it.

Temperate living makes temperate feeling.

Good words bring good echoes.

He that awakes to righteousness shall sleep in peace.

Wisdom loves the habitations of prudence. E. B.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

From Br. J. J. Cook.

DEAR BRO.—The grand, central subject of our faith, never seemed so certain and so near, as it does now.

Nothing, aside from direct Divine interposition at the sound of the "last trump," can be more clear and reliable, than the word of God, in its progressive fulfillment before our eyes.

The word of God is the only proper ground of faith as to the future. No eye but God's can pierce the mists and clouds and darkness that shroud the events that are about to open on the world. This foresight is unerring—this prophecy is absolutely accurate. Amen!

God's word fulfilled is the basis of our best, and most positive knowledge, as it is written "When ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

Mark! If the Frog-Power of Revelation is France, then none but "Le grand nation"—France—can take the lead in gathering the nations to "the battle of the great day of God Almighty!" Rev. 16 : 13, 14.

Mark again! If France, that bore the military ensign of "three frogs" is the one so designated, then the last sovereign of France must be the last "head"—the seventh revived—the "eighth of the seven;" because the kings of the Roman earth do give their powers to him! Rev. 17: 13.

Rome is the Geographical centre of this vision It is "the city of seven hills."—Rev. 17 : 9—18.

And France is the first and chief Roman power.

No counter view can bring forward such facts to sustain itself.

The Napoleon dynasty, has come up at the right time—"the time of the end."

Its history answers the description—"Was, is not, and yet is." Napoleon I, II, III.

It occupies the right place. It is at the head of the Frog-power—it is supreme in Rome—it sustains "the woman"—the Romish church; and is sustained by the "ten kings"—or the leading fragments of the old Roman world.

Now, as God's word and providence harmonize, no theory is worth one fig, that ignores such facts. None should be sustained for a moment that opposes the Bible description as to geography and history.

Russia's history, geography, civil and Ecclesiastical polity, are palpably opposed to the prophecy.

The imagery and history embraced by Rev. 16, 13—14; 17; 1—18, are Roman, and only Roman. They cannot be fulfilled by Russia; because that nation is out of the range of the geography and imagery of that prophecy.

This being so, we have no other great national event—no other sign to look for—till "the sign of the son of man" appears. "Peace and safety" is the cry that precedes "destruction."

Yours, J. B. COOK.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 7.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. Munger.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel like giving a short sketch of my late tour, and the state of the cause in different places.

At Lowell I found the brethren rather low—some trials, but holding on.

Lawrence,—some trials, but a good appetite generally, for practical preaching.

Salem, a good, united company. Had a good time speaking.

Kennebunkport, doing well, and are strong in the Lord.

Great Falls, in an unsettled state, but some good christians there. Some have been warped by strange influences, which are calculated to scatter, rather than gather. I found brother Moulton there trying to gather up the fragments, and left him there still trying. Lord help him.

On returning, I found a large congregation at Portsmouth, ready to hear and work. We had a good meeting. I trust it will prove a lasting blessing to some who do not usually witness for God in public.

One spiritualist undertook to claim some relation, but he had no salt, or meal in the bell, and the sheep would not follow. For fear the meeting would be turned out of its channel, I felt it duty to say that those who considered themselves well, needed no physician; the meeting was designed for those that felt the need of something being done for their spiritual health; and the meeting was open for such as felt sick of the state they were then in, in consequence of fearing the people, which had always been a snare to God's people ever since the first king of Israel fell on this very account. See Sam. 15 : 24.

This remark set the sheep a bleating and we had a blessed good meeting our own way, without any further attempt from the spiritualist to cousin or claim relationship to us.

The next meeting was at Newburyport. Here, brother Pearson has got a new church, and all goes on in good order. There is good interest and attendance; the truth is taking effect in the hearts of many, and some sinners have lately been converted.

Marblehead, only a few, but strong; rather choosing to suffer reproach with this people than to enjoy the pleasures of a fashionable religion and lose the reward of the kingdom they value so highly. Some of these have made great sacrifices of a worldly nature, both in friends and fashion; and their names have been erased from a popular church-book for their faith in God's word. Their character is without spot, for this I hope and expect their names will be found in God's great ledger which is the book of life—opened when eternal life is given.

Salem, found a good company, well united and in good working order. Spake three times on Sabbath—house full. There was some nestling when I spoke of the rappers as being a sign of the last days, but the congregation was very quiet for so many, and remained while brother Ingham and a number of others followed in exhortation.

Lynn Dye house, as usual a small company present, but determined to hold on and contend more for the vitality of religion, letting disputations alone. This is the only way to gather with Christ at present.

I called on brother Roney, and found that his speaking organs had failed instead of his faith, as has been reported.

Came to the capital of the Bay State. Found brother Grant at his post selecting such things for food as will keep the flock healthy, and watching well against having wild gourds put into the pot at this time. Tuesday eve, I spoke a short time to an attentive congregation. I see nothing to hinder the work going on here except a backwardness in doing duty, which is getting so fashionable, especially in cities.

God has only one way to work, and that is by his church; and if they will not deny themselves and take up the cross, they cannot be his disciples. They may talk about religion until doom's day; if they have not got it they cannot work in the vineyard of the Lord.

God has given all a talent suitable to give them an identity in this church, which, if improved, will make them living members. This fear of fanaticism that has prevailed of late, has been the father of scepticism now prevailing in many places. The truth is between these two extremes.

I hope those brethren that know these facts will arise and commence working for God and the salvation of sinners as in former days; and if a counterfeit arises in consequence, we shall then have wisdom and grace enough to detect it.

I am glad to see such a disposition to come into gospel order and go to work understandingly. Lord help.

The more I travel and reflect, the more I am convinced we need as a people regulations among ourselves, to secure the object we desire.

When we first came out in the great truth we profess, we enjoyed a greater amount of religion than at the present time, and it was much easier to get along when all were under the divine influence, and disposed to do right: but since it is in the order of Providence that we should be tried, to bring out the pure christian character, many influences develope themselves which were only in the bud then; and as they only need time and opportunity to bring forth their legitimate fruits, they are now being known.

Much has been said and written on church order, and organization. I shall not contend for a strong, old-fashioned sectarian creed, which, when we get into it, we become like so many rats in a box-trap that cannot get out without gnawing out; but I do declare it my solemn conviction that we need something to give us an identity, and a body that can be addressed, reasoned with, and dealt with, and have some little reference and choice who comes among us as teachers.

In many places, instead of finding a religious body, you will find a sort of a religious row, or mob. Their doors are thrown open for any, and everything, and there is a class of religious rowdies that take advantage of this, and go from place to place stirring up strife, with a pretended new message of some kind.

I have come in contact with some that wanted no man teachers—God was their teacher,—and so on, and would talk until they got a real Jehu spirit, and drove all the spirit of Christ out of the meeting, and opened the door for all of Jehu's family to present their views.

One would dab at the minister, and then at some remark others had made,—establish their position and defy any one to tear it down, for it was the word of God, and would stand.

Another would get up and take exceptions to the last remarks, and if any one went out they thought it was because they feared the power of truth about to be felt.

This, I call a religious row, instead of a religious meeting where the object is to benefit sinners by melting them down to see themselves in their true light.

I am glad that there is a disposition among some to come into christian order and claim their right to choose those things that make for peace.

Such already feel the approval of heaven and are already coming up into higher ground. I hope those that preach, or labor in any way in the gospel, will do what they can to bring about a better state of things, and be found gathering with Christ instead of scattering; and let those that are determined to make points of doctrine a test of christianity, and drive Jehu's chariot, go on, until they stave up.

It is expected in a heavy storm, or hurricane, that some will be wrecked; but some see the storm coming and are putting for the harbor where there is safety.

Brother Z. Campbell's article has done much good, and God will bless him and all others that will take the same position.

Yours, yet in battle,

HIRAM MUNGER.

A Special Appeal.

Do read this appeal and HEED it. I wish to publish another edition of my "GOSPEL VINDICATOR," (a work of 187 pages,) for gratuitous distribution in Minnesota. It will cost comparatively but little to do it, as it is already stereotyped. It is just the work needed to follow up the "Key of Truth," as it removes the many objections to our faith How much will you now pledge for this object to be paid January 1st 1857!

Send your pledges to the Crisis immediately that I may arrange accordingly. Who will pledge $1, $5, or $10?

Remember that this is missionary ground and God has a claim upon your dollars!

Friends, you must help. Do not refuse.—If more than enough should be pledged, it will be used to issue the fifth edition of the "Key of truth." "Let us not be weary in well doing." W. SHELDON.

Vermillion, Dakota Co., Minnesota.

He that will not do the work of to-day in today shall find no opportunity to do it to-morrow.

Those who will do right shall find strength to do so. E. B.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

[illegible]FICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER [illegible]O. T. ADAMS' STORE.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. | BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1856. | WHOLE NO. [illegible] VOL. IV. [illegible]

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	6.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	16.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Our Present Residence.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

This is the Enemy's land. It is polluted by man, and cursed by God. The dire effects of man's rebellion are above, below, and all around us. Were it not that God is continually showering blessings, both of a temporal and spiritual nature upon us, our stay here, for the time being, would not be tolerable.

Here the good must ever be mixed with the evil. The sun shines delightfully, but there are spots on its disc—we are sometimes scorched with its burning heat—frozen by the absence of its more direct rays, or forbidden to contemplate its full beauty and splendor by hovering, unhealthy mists. The moon and stars fill the heavens with their silvery beauty, but the moon wanes as well as waxes, and often both moon and stars are clouded from our sight. The dews of the evening refresh the beginnings of the morning, but they often brood chilling death upon the nocturnal traveler, and the unsheltered sleeper. The winds of heaven, changing as they do to different points, purify the elements of respiratory life, but they often bear on their wings the hidden odor of death. The rivers roll in majestic loveliness to subserve a thousand purposes of good, but they become the toombs of multitudes of travelers and adventurers, and often carry death and destruction afar in their overflow. The showers that water the earth, mingle their refreshing effects with inundations and waste: and the clouds that contain the showers, are the dwelling-place of the fiery bolts of death, by which we are smitten to the earth: and these showers must come to us attended with whirlwinds and hurricanes.

Our days of sunshine and beauty, must be exchanged for days of damps, and chills, and storms. The very earth must now be the place of deserts, quags, and desolate regions. Our thriving fields of grain must grow with the useless tares. The flowers must bloom among poisonous plants. The rose must blush by the side of the pricking thorn. Throughout many of the animal tribes, animal devours animal, in order that their races may be perpetuated for our use and comfort.

The beautiful forms of those we love, are often strangely marred and wasted by disease, and they drop into the grave. All is change, change, change. Everything is comparatively out of order. "All the fountains of the earth are out of course."

The beauties of Spring pass away before the burning heats of summer; the ripenings of Summer waste before the frosts and wet of Autumn, and the comparative mildness of Autumn is exchanged for the rigor of stormy Winter.

Smiling infancy passes away for sportive youth; youth is exchanged for manhood, and on comes old age, infirmity, and death.

O for immortality! We are among the most deadly enemies, who seek the life of our souls. We are on Satan's battle-ground. We walk amidst perils and deaths.

We move among the haters of God, and the blasphemers of the Redeemer of men. This land is deeded to the Gentile kingdoms, until the time of Immanuel's land be come. Here we must be the minority, and the enemies of God and man must be the majority. Here Death, the Devil, and Hell must riot their set time; and our souls must be bowed down for their legions to pass over. Tears, groans, pains, sighings and agonies, must mark our struggling footsteps at every turn. But it will not last forever. Hope is joyful and bright! We shall at last go home!

For the Crisis.

The Law and the Gospel.

BY W. G. DAVISON.

No. II.

By earnest prayer to God for aid, and searching his word for truth, I have come to the conclusion from the divine testimony, that the Law in which is included the ten commandments, and the Gospel, are two distinct governments under which the children of God have lived in this world; that the one preceded the other just as much as the Babylonian preceded the Medo-Persian, and the Medo-Persian the Grecian, and the Grecian the Roman Kingdom; and that the Law is not binding upon those living under the Gospel.—Now to the Law and the testimony; "if any man speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in him."—Gal. 3: 24.

"Wherefore, the Law was our school-master to bring us unto Christ." But, say some, there are thousands now in our day that have not come unto Christ that they might be saved. Do not they need the Law now to bring them to Christ? I think that such ones do not understand the text. The margin of the family Bible reads thus, "The law was our school-master until Christ." I understand from this that the law is not binding since Christ, for the Gospel takes its place as we read in Gal. 3: 25. "But after faith is come we are no longer under a school-master." What was the school-master? The Law. When did faith come? At the establishment of the Gospel. Romans 6: 14. "For ye are not under the law but under grace." 3: 28 "Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith, without the deeds of the law. 1 Cor. 9; 21. Being not without law to God, but under the law to Christ;" that is, under the Gospel.

There are some who say we are bound to keep the seventh day Sabbath of the 4th commandment. I would say so too, if it were enjoined upon us under the Gospel But I must confess that I have not found it so enjoined, either by Christ, or the Apostles. The Jews frequently accused Christ of Sabbath-breaking, and he told them simply that the Son of Man was Lord of the Sabbath day, but never told them, nor his disciples, that they were bound to keep it under the Gospel dispensation. We read in Daniel, 9: 27, "And he (Christ) shall confirm the covenant with many for one week; and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease." Now I understand from this, that the law there ceased to be binding on men; that the Gospel was from that time in full force, and at the crucifixion the law was nailed to the cross, and ceased to be enforced as a matter of course.

We read in Deut. 18: 15, "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken." Ver. 18. "I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him." And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him."

The above personage is Jesus Christ, the great Law-giver, the establisher of the gospel, who said he came to do the will of his Father, and of whom it is said 2 Tim. 4: 1. "Who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom."

Now, the grand object is to obey God so that we may have an inheritance in that kingdom that Christ is coming to set up, and to be at the marriage supper of the Lamb. Christ has given a perfect rule or law, for christians.

Peter has given us a train of duties, with an assurance if we do them, we shall have an abundant entrance into the kingdom. 2 Peter 1: 5—11. "And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith, virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity. For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." Amen.

Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., Sept 20, '56.

For the Crisis.

Incidents by the Way.

No. V.

BY S. S. BREWER.

"What a splendid triumph of art and mechanism that engine presents," I remarked to a gentleman the other day as I took a seat beside him in the cars,—"how it moves like a thing of life!" Although it is not gilded and set in jewels like many of our beautiful duplex and lever watches, yet it possesses all the precision of the above in its structure. The least inaccuracy would produce a clattering or a straining of the machinery. With what perfect ease it moves that ponderous train now attached to it.

Well, what is the great motive power that produces the action? The breath—if you please, the soul. There, do you see that man opening its mouth, (the door of the furnace) and feeding it with wood? There, now the engineer has changed its position and placed it under the supply pipe, and now he is giving it a drink of water. Ah, thought I, how useless would that splendid machine be, if it did not eat and drink. It would be a dead engine, like man before God breathed into him the breath of life; and precisely as man is without it. We are fearfully and wonderfully made as the son of Jesse observes in Ps. 139: 14, and incapable of thought when nature sinks under the paralyzing hand of death. Ps. 146: 3, 4.

After permitting myself to ruminate for some time, I remarked to the stranger that quite an accident had transpired in the early part of the day: that by some means one of the engines had got away from the engineer, and had done considerable damage. At the same time, I pointed to the effect of the disaster.

"Ah, those and similar accidents that so frequently occur will soon be remedied. This country is only in its infancy. Progression will soon effect a perfect revolution in all the evils that afflict humanity," was his reply.

"I suppose you have studied that law, my friend?"

"Yes, I have been an observer of things in general, both at home and abroad."

"Well, sir, what is your opinion of the Bible?"

"Some portions of it are exceptionable."

"Do you think, sir, admitting there may be some very slight errors in the translation, that you do well to reject any part of it?"

"I do not feel a disposition to reject anything consistent with reason."

"Well, sir, will you please be kind enough to tell me whether you believe the book of Genesis consistent with reason?"

"Yes, friend, I have no objections to admit that."

"Now then, let us try the laws of progression by that consistent book of reason. God saw everything that he had made, and behold it was very good. Now then, let us turn to the following verses of the sixth chapter:

'The earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence. And God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth. And God said unto Noah, the end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them; and, behold, I will destroy them with the earth.'"

"But the laws of geology contradict the idea that the world was made in six days."

"O, the laws of geology then, are more consistent than the Mosaic account of the creation, in your estimation. What consistent account does geology furnish, I ask, for the sub-marine remains now found in many parts of the earth?"

"Why it is very clear that they were deposited there by some mighty upheaving."

"Have you any account of such an upheaving?"

"No, not directly; but we infer it from facts."

"Well, friend, I will give you an account from that same book, that looks more like truth, than inference. "In the six-hundredth year of Noah's life, the second month, the seventeenth day of the month, the same day were all the fountains of the great deep broken up, and the windows of heaven were opened."

"There, friend, in the breaking up of the GREAT DEEP, they were thrown there."

"I must confess that looks very consistent."

"But let us waive that, and confine ourselves to the laws of progression. It was a downward proclivity in Noah's time, and we will start again on the track of progression in the days of Lot. Gen. 19.

'For we will destroy this place, because the cry of them is waxen great before the face of the Lord; and the Lord hath sent us to destroy it. . . . . The sun was risen upon the earth when Lot entered into Zoar. Then the Lord rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah, brimstone and fire from the Lord out of heaven; and he overthrew those cities, and all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and that which grew upon the ground.'

But let us come to a more modern age, without prying into dim distant ages unexplored by the light of science. We will now confine our remarks to the last century, or within its limits.

Just one hundred years since, 1756, the seven years war commenced between Austria and Prussia, with some skirmishes between different nations; and if we date progression from this point we shall see by examining history whether society has improved. In 1793 the reign of terror commenced in France, which kept the guillotine reeking with the blood of its King, Queen, nobles, and thousands of its best citizens.

Progression! The revolutionary torrent which was set in motion destroyed law, government and religion in France, and laid waste the Roman church both there and in neighboring countries. Her Priests were massacred, from the Atlantic to the Adriatic she presented but one appalling spectacle. No tongue can tell the woes of the nation.

Progression! Said Chaumette, taking a female by the hand and introducing her to the assembly in the TEMPLE OF REASON;—'Mortals! cease to tremble before the powerless thunders of a God whom your fears have created! Henceforth, acknowledge no divinity but REASON! I offer you its noblest and purest image! If you must have idols, sacrifice only to such as this!' While letting fall the vail, he exclaimed,—'Fall before the august senate of freedom, Oh, vail of reason!' At the same time the goddess appeared personified by a celebrated beauty, the wife of Momoro, a printer, known in more characters than one, by most of the convention.

Progression!!! Here is an extract from a late paper, stating the progress of the goddess of reason:—

'The female who during the French Revolution was seated on a throne, and hailed as the Goddess of Reason and of Liberty, having been taught publicly to dishonor her sex, recently died in the hospital of pauper lunatics, where for many years she had lived unpitied and unknown, subject to the greatest of human calamities, the loss of reason. She repented bitterly of her horrid crimes, and her few lucid intervals were filled up with the most heart-rending lamentations.' Progression again.

Time would fail to speak of all the workings of the law of progression among the different nations."

"Well, to be candid with you, it does seem as though there was a downward tendency."

"Yes, dear friend, man has become penny wise and pound foolish; pigmies in christian virtue, and giants in vice and infidelity."

"But, then, I don't think as you do about the punishment of the finally impenitent."

"Well, come, give me your opinion on that subject."

"I have been taught to believe that man is a part of God, therefore a part of man lives forever, either happy in heaven or miserable in hell."

"Well, let us look at the subject, either in the light of revelation or in any sense you please."

"I must acknowledge that I am not sufficiently acquainted with the Bible to do justice to the subject. But it does seem to me that our teachers are greatly at fault if the latter is not the truth, for it is almost universally taught."

"Well friend, it is a subject of vast importance, and man is a singular being; and how any one believing the Bible can look at man as a part of God in any other sense than that taught in the Bible, is a mystery to me. Look at the subject for one moment.

Six thousand years are now expiring since God formed man from the dust of the earth, 'and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul.' Since that time according to popular opinion, millions of one part of God, have been perplexing, oppressing, injuring, torturing, and murdering another part of God in the most cruel manner.

Go to the plains of Waterloo, or anywhere on the peninsula of Italy, or if you please, stand on the battle ground of the Crimea and for one day study the law of progression. Contemplate the tens of thousands of mutilated carcasses now festering in their gore; yea, follow those parts of God (according to theology) to those doleful regions of the damned, and there God is tormenting a part of himself until the judgment. Then he will bring them forth to try them, and remand them back again to torture and torment them to all eternity. As the poet has it:—

'Count all the sparkling glories of the sky,
And all the drops that in the ocean lie—
O'er all the world its atoms count,
Eternal years its numbers still surmount;
Millions of tedious lingering ages gone,
Their misery, their hell is just begun.'

Men may imagine, talk, write and sing about such a place, but do they in reality believe it? If they can form such a character of that being who has declared GOD IS LOVE, they may continue to ransack an imaginary hell to find horrors to frighten—as they call them, immortal souls into heaven. But, for one, I shall beseech men by the 'mercies of God to be reconciled to him,' 'and to love God because he first loved us.'"

BE TEMPERATE.—Yes, be temperate in everything—in eating, drinking, sleeping, working, talking, walking, riding, visiting, staying at home, reading, singing, preaching, and I would add praying; but I do not think it possible to pray too much, though we may pray too long at a time, [illegible], and too loud under some [illegible] stances.

For the Crisis.

Dedication and Conference, in Poland, Maine.

[illegible]

The brethren in Poland [illegible] for the Lord [illegible] the christian's hope, have [illegible] some trials, [illegible] faith. But the Lord has [illegible] united, and enabled them, [illegible] to battle for the cause of truth [illegible] not without imperfections, [illegible] to push forward [illegible] coming [illegible] their [illegible] from the meeting-house where they have long worshipped, and of which they owned a larger share, in an [illegible], and illegal manner, they finally effected a peaceful compromise [illegible] small share of the property so unrighteously wrenched from them. They then proceeded to erect a neat and commodious chapel, well located, planned, and finished.

Friday Oct. 17th, was set to dedicate it for the worship of God; and a conference to follow. A goodly number having arrived from other places, on Thursday evening we met at the old school-house where they have recently worshipped, for a prayer-meeting which was [illegible] to those who took part in it. Friday, at half past ten o'clock A. M., we met in the Chapel, and listened to a good discourse by Bro. Couch.

No formal ceremony [illegible] act of dedication, yet we hope the house was built for God and freely given him, to be used by his people, to worship him, and to declare the truth—the gospel of the kingdom of him who is soon to make all things new.

P. M. Br. Couch preached again, to the edification of many. The weather was fine, and a large number of brethren and sisters from the surrounding country were in attendance, who seemed joyous in hope, united in spirit, loving the Lord and believing his word.

Saturday A. M. met at nine o'clock, and enjoyed a blessed season in conference.

At half past ten o'clock, Bro. N. Smith preached an argumentative and deeply instructive discourse from Ps. 67: 5, 7, which was listened to with marked attention.

At two P. M., Bro. Couch preached a Bible discourse from 2 Tim, 2: 19. It was a valuable sermon, on "God's foundation." I think it must have done good to all who heard it. Great attention was paid to the word, and the WORD was preached.

In the evening, Bro. L. L. Howard preached an instructive discourse on the covenants, founded on Jer. 31: 31. The day was very rainy, which probably prevented many from attending, who expected to be there.

Lord's day, one was baptized in the morning. Bro. Couch preached A. M. and P. M., on "this gospel of the kingdom," to a very crowded house of as attentive hearers as I ever witnessed; many of whom were not much acquainted with our hope, and some, I doubt not, heard for the first time. The word was preached with the spirit, and in power. God attended it with his blessing on the people. It was good to be there. I should like to see those sermons in print. It was gratifying to learn that Bro. Couch occupies the same position on this great leading subject of the Advent faith which has characterized us as a people; believing the gospel of the kingdom to be a special message of the gospel, having its type in the message of John the Baptist, of the first seventy, the first twelve, and the Lord himself to the Jews; and that the [illegible] in the preaching of [illegible] came prominent in the [illegible] midnight cry [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] which is to come when the Lord [illegible] return.

[illegible] people of God, and [illegible] At six o'clock P. M. [illegible] of the [illegible] sat down at the [illegible] of the Lord, to partake of the emblems of that broken body and shed blood, which [illegible] [illegible] of immortality and eternal life, at the appearing of our Lord and Savior. We then had a social meeting, which was shared by many who gave in a [illegible] testimony for the Lord, and made some instructive remarks on the importance of diligent, careful, and constant study of the scriptures.

[illegible] who attended as worshippers during [illegible] seemed united, and determined [illegible] as brethren, and work on in the [illegible] of the great work of extending the knowledge of the coming of the Lord still wider, and seek to be in union with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ. The meetings were deeply interesting, throughout, and I judge they never enjoyed a more profitable meeting for the cause of truth in that place.

The hearts and houses of the brethren who reside there, were, as usual, wide open for all who came. I trust the Lord will reward them for their labor of love for his cause and people. Although my health was too poor to do much, yet it was a very pleasant interview to me, and I hope I may benefit by it. Truly, the communion of Saints is sweet to me. But we parted to go to our several spheres of labor, not all to meet again in this world, nor can it be expected that all that company will meet in the world to come. But who will neglect the path that leads there?

I hope to be one to meet all of God's people in the kingdom. Let us all be ready, then wait and watch; so, when Jesus comes, we shall have an abundant entrance administered unto us into his everlasting kingdom. I. C. Welcome.

Hallowell, Me., Oct. 24, '56.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, NOVEMBER 5, 1856.

Questions.

Further answers to the questions of our Sister in Christ.

No. XV.

"We are always confident, knowing that whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord. For we walk by faith and not by sight. We are confident I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord." 2 Cor. 5: 6–8.

Ques. Was it Paul's faith, that if his spirit was released from the body, it would be present with the Lord?

Ans. If it be claimed that by Paul's spirit is meant himself, and that at death he would return to God, we answer, by no means. As shown in our last, or No. 14, Paul would contradict himself should he teach in one place that his reward is at death, and in another that it is received at the resurrection; but we do find him declaring in Cor. 15: 32,—"if after the manner of men I have fought with the beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not?" And verses 17–18, that if Christ is not raised, "then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." These Scriptures can never be harmonized with the idea that men go to heaven at death.

But let us examine more carefully 2 Cor. 5: 1–8. Ver. 1. "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

The question naturally arises, what does Paul mean in this passage by "house" "tabernacle," and "building?"

It will be noticed that he carries the idea in his language, that all the church is one house or tabernacle; or, that all are in one building.

This verse is introduced by the word "for" in the sense of because, implying a connection with something before stated. The two preceding verses read—"For our light affliction which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen; but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal;" (or except for a time) "but the things which are not seen are eternal." In verses one [illegible] of chap. 5, Paul continues the [illegible] between the present state of things and that which is to come, when the Life-Giver returns.

[illegible] we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens [illegible] dissolved [illegible] not made with hands, which is eternal and in the heavens.

It is commonly believed that by "tabernacle" and "earthly house," Paul meant the christian's body which is "dissolved" after death; the soul being represented by "we" and "our."

Let us look again. Please observe that if we and our represent the souls of christians, that they are all represented as being in one tabernacle.

Again, if earthly house means the earthly body; the "building of God—an house not made with hands," must be the heavenly body, if so, there has been an eternal body in the heavens reserved for the reception of the man when he leaves his earthly body.

This being true, what becomes of the earthly body? Paul declares in 1 Cor. 15: 42–44, "that it is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption. It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body."

The question arises,—what becomes of "our house (or body) which is from heaven," when the one comes up from the grave? We leave those to answer who can.

We think it clear that Paul does not mean our bodies when he speaks of "our house" and the tabernacle."

Then what does he mean. Let us see if the apostle will not explain himself. Heb. 8: 1 2. "Now of the things which we have spoken this is the sum; we have such an high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the majesty in the heavens; a minister of the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man."

Is not this tabernacle "our house which is from heaven,"—and the one of which our Savior speaks when he says—"in my Father's house are many mansions?"

Again, says Paul in Heb. 9: 11, "But Christ being come an high priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building."

Here is a tabernacle more perfect than some other one, and it is not made with hands,—it is not of this building. We ask again,—is not this the tabernacle, house, or building, which we have in the heavens instead of a body for the soul to enter at death?

Please read Rev. 21: 2—3. "And I John saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God, out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, behold the tabernacle of God is with men."

We think it clear that this is the building or house to which Paul refers in 2 Cor. 5: 1—2.

We understand him to mean by earthly house, the world and church in their present condition, and that when this arrangement is broken up, we are to enter our heavenly house, tabernacle, or building.

We now pass to ver. 6. "Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body we are absent from the Lord."

The question arises, what does Paul mean by body in this verse?

We think he will make the matter plain. He evidently uses some figures in the preceding verses. When he speaks of being clothed and unclothed he cannot refer to his outer garments; neither can he mean that our bodies are used as clothing for the soul, according to the popular view, which would be unclothed at death; for he expressly declares that he would not "be unclothed, but clothed upon with our house which is from heaven." That is, as clothing shelters us here, so our house or tabernacle, will shelter us there.

Let us now compare Paul with Paul, and see if "body" in ver. 6 is not used in a figurative sense.

"So we (soul and body) being many are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another." Rom. 12: 5. "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." 1 Cor. 12: 27.

"And he is the head of the body, the church." Col. 1: 18.

These passages are so plain, that comments can hardly make them more so. He tells us that Christ is the head, and the whole church the body. As Christ is absent from the body, so long as this present tabernacle arrangement continues, we must be absent from the Lord; i.e., whilst we are here in the "body we the church, are absent from the "Head," which is Christ.

Prospect [illegible]

BY J. MERRIAM.

Bro. and Sr. Dearly Beloved:—I[illegible] this world were not only the first but also the last stage of our existence, it would be a gloomy and comfortless world. "Darkness would indeed cover the earth, and gross darkness the people," were it not for the few rays of divine light that shine thro' the vista of the tomb. But, thank God, there are some of the prelusive sunbeams of a glorious immortality that reach us in this vale of tears: enough to reveal its unutterable glories, its triumphant joys.—Praise God that he has not left us without a witness that He is good—that He has permitted us to "taste the powers of the world to come."

As after a storm we can feel and realize the influence of the sun's rays ere from the opening clouds he breaks, to the saint before the storms of life are o'er, and before the light of everlasting day breaks upon his ravished vision, can see by the eye of faith the bursting glories of heaven in prospective; and as after a long and tedious storm the condensed vapors begin to dissipate, and the calorific beams struggling through the intervening clouds warm the system with a gentle glow, so the bolts of celestial light that come struggling through the fog of the present evil world, excite a glowing, warming, thrilling emotion that pervades the spiritual frame, causing the current of vitality to pulsate with increased vigor throughout the system. Now, as the sensation we experience from the natural light while yet the sun is invisible, proves to our minds that those rays of light and heat proceed from a luminous body, so the illuminating, sanctifying, cheering beams of divine light demonstrate the existence of the original fountain whence all our blessings flow. Thus every ray of light from the celestial world is in itself a proof of the existence of that world, and inspires our hearts with faith to rely on the promise. As we doubt not the reality of those objects that are revealed to us thro' the space-penetrating powers of the telescope, though indiscoverable to the naked eye, so we may exercise implicit confidence in the divine reality of those things which are revealed by the telescope of faith.

Well, what are the revelations of this powerful instrument to scan the heavens and earth designed for the saints' ultimate abode? Take now the spiritual glass and hearing-trumpet, and let us "view the landscape o'er," and listen to the sounds that proceed from the heavenly Canaan. Do you not perceive in the distant horizon an eminence rising in grandeur and Eden beauty? This is not a mount whose "touch" brings the condemnation of death; (turn to Heb. 12: 18—24) for life eternal issues therefrom. It "burneth" not with consuming "fire," but with the blaze of unquenchable love. It is a fire lighted up from the altar of heaven that will never go out. It is a holy, divine influence, that draws forth the affections of the soul in the fervor of praise and adoration. Thank God, it is not the terrific fire that will devour the wicked; but it will burn as in the bush of Moses merely to symbolize the divine presence, or like the pillar that shone on the camp of Israel. It will make the place holy ground; and those who stand on Zion's hill will have clean hands and a pure heart. It is not enshrouded in the "blackness" of the gathering storm that will break in "pain upon the head of the wicked;" but its radiant brow is emblazoned with the bursting glories of celestial light. It is not enveloped in the shades of Egyptian night; but the morn of Zion's glory beams from its beauteous acclivity, and drives spiritual darkness into eternal oblivion. The roaring of the "tempest" of wrath—the howling of the final storm, is not heard here; but the severity of heaven reigns—the peace of God flows like a river. It is the haven of rest. "The voice of words" that spake in tones of thunder to the terror-stricken tribes, is not heard from Zion's sacred mount; but the tender accents of a Father's love, in sweet and melting tones, ravish the ears of spiritual Israel. The sound of that mighty "trumpet" which shook the mountains so that is not heard in thunder peals here; for all opposing powers and principalities, thrones and dominions, being shaken down, the saints receive a "kingdom that cannot be moved." Yes, praise God, this is the most glorious consideration of the whole. It is a "dominion that shall not pass away." It is a "kingdom that shall not be left to other people." There are no other Lions, Rams, or He-Goats, or Wild Beasts, with [illegible] ultimate [illegible] reign. No [illegible] [illegible] the everlasting kingdom of God; for the saints shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever." There is no subsequent order of succession to arise—no higher line of kings to inherit the crown; for in Him who will then reign is vested the supreme and original right of dominion. He claims sovereign authority, from the fact that He is the legitimate proprietor by virtue of creating power. His title runs back of all other grants, charters, deeds, conveyances, precepts, or titles in the universe. He claims supreme homage from the fact, that He is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of Kings and Lord of Lords"—the primeval source of all government authority—the strength of whose conquering arm has prostrated every foe—whose infinite energy has demolished the strongholds of Satan, and scattered the powers of darkness like chaff before the whirlwind. He claims superlative and universal love from the fact, that the unsearchable riches of His grace have been put in requisition to redeem the captive, restore the wanderer, and bring the dead to life.

"Not Sinai on her base could stand,"

It is not, then, the mount perilous to approach, reeling with the earthquake, and blackened with the pall of night, and howling with the storm. No, bless Jehovah, it is Sion's peaceful mount, smiling with Eden's lovely bowers, resplendent with a corona of light, with a rainbow of celestial glory.

The cities of the heathen are destroyed and their gods perish with them; but this is "the city of the living God." The presiding Genii of those cities could not protect and deliver them in the day of retribution; for they wanted life and consequently power, to defend. But "Jerusalem shall be a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down," for her Protector ever lives; and "because I live," said Jesus, "ye shall live also." The Almighty Founder and Sovereign Architect will be a battlement of strength around the beloved city, as the hills are round about Jerusalem. "As birds flying," as on the swift wings of love, "so will the Lord come to defend Jerusalem; defending also, He will deliver it, and passing over, He will preserve it." "Like as the lion roaring on his prey, so shall the Lord of hosts come down to fight for Mount Zion, and for the hill thereof."

Jerusalem was adorned with all the glory of Solomon, and there the Temple of Solomon rose in the magnificence of marble and the splendor of gold. But, after all, it was an earthly city; but this is an heavenly city, as far surpassing earthly splendor as the heavens are higher than the earth.

Now direct your telescope along the avenues resplendent with gold—the gates radiant with pearl—the foundations garnished with all manner of precious stones—the walls towering in beauty and glory—the golden palaces of the grand metropolis, and see if aught on earth can compare with such princely magnificence and heavenly graces.

In the present evil world we associate with fallen, polluted, degraded humanity: but in the world to come we shall form acquaintance with the "angels" that are greater in power and might—that pure and holy society that stand in the presence of God.

In this life the professed people of God grow cold in their affections, and not unfrequently iniquity abounds, but "the church of the first-born which are written in heaven," will be "without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing."

In the present world justice is often perverted, and equity falls in the streets; but in the beloved city "the Judge of all" will surely do right. The saints having been acquitted at His bar, they cannot be put in jeopardy again; for He being the sovereign Arbiter, there is no higher bench or judicial tribunal that can overrule the decisions of the court of heaven.

Under the old covenant there was a remembrance made of sins every year; but the "Mediator of the new covenant" "makes an end of sins and brings in everlasting righteousness." Thank God, their sins are buried in the depths of the sea; they are far from them as the east is from the west. They are expunged from the sacred record.

And now, beloved, what would we have more? Can heart desire or imagination conceive a more glorious abode?

Lift your telescope once more and overlook the golden battlements and survey the entire city. Where are the repositories of the dead? where are the marble monuments that tell of departed [illegible]? are "the mourners [illegible] streets" in the habitations [illegible] the [illegible] ed? where are the asylums for the oppressed and the afflicted? where the hospitals for the lunatic, the diseased, and the dying? Listen to hear the accents of woe—the sighing of the prisoner—the groans of the sufferer—the noise of strife, or the clangor of war. No, thank God, this is indeed an unearthly place, a "heavenly Jerusalem;" for here sackcloth and the pall, the house of refuge and the cemetery, are unknown! Bless the divine "Maker and Builder," all is peace and joy here; "for behold I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy." "And the voice of weeping shall be heard no more in her, nor the voice of crying." Thank the Lord, we, if faithful, are soon to enter into those abodes of life where immortal vigor reigns—where tears shall cease to flow—death itself shall die, and the grave be buried in eternal oblivion.

Look again and see that innumerable company "that have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." "These be they that have come out of great tribulation." See their glittering crowns flashing in the sunlight of heaven, and their harps of gold that ring out on the soft air of heaven, in mellifluous and spirit-stirring tones. See them marching along the interminable avenues and wheeling in heavy columns, but with elastic tread, around the mighty squares of the celestial metropolis, and concentrating around the sacred hill of Zion. As "the army of the Lord," the ransomed hosts of Israel congregate for the first time and unfurl the flag of the kingdom to the breeze and raise the victorious standard of freedom on the mountain of His holiness; amid waving banners—sparkling diadems, golden lyres, and enchanting melodies; there will be spontaneous outbursts of joy—triumphant songs of victory—irrepressible shouts of thanksgiving and praise! O it is enough to stir our inmost souls and tune our voices to exalted harmonies in this life, just to contemplate the blessed, glorious, indescribable scenes of the final gathering of God's elect!

When I get my eyes on those opening glories and transcendent joys, I know not how to withdraw from the scene; and certain I am that, delusion or no delusion, there is a heavenly, blissful reality in the antepast of the banquet, which, as Payson said, makes the delusion better than the reality of the world. Yes, the tongue is inadequate to portray—the power of numbers is insufficient to compute the value of "an inheritance among the saints in light." I am unable to describe my own imperfect visions of the glory to be revealed. It seems as though I had some emotions struggling for vent—some thoughts seeking utterance and finding none. May the Lord comfort your hearts and reveal these things by His Spirit, and prepare you to receive an inheritance among them that are sanctified.

Ere long we trust the trumpet will sound; and the moment its echoing blast shall be heard in the vaults of the charnel house, the chains will fall from the slumbering captives as from Peter of old—the massive bolts of the tomb will be sundered—the iron gate will open of its own accord, and the prisoners go forth into the glorious liberty of the sons of God. We trust many whose loss we now deplore will come forth, robed in immortal vestments and crowned with laurels of victory.

Many an eye that once sparkled with intelligence, is now faded in death, or rather in temporary sleep; but with the opening dawn of a brighter era, its lustre will be re-kindled; and sparkling amid the splendors of everlasting day, its brilliancy will never fade, nor its electric fire can go out. Though sown in weakness, the saints will be raised in power, transformed into the image of the Son of God's love, a companion of angels and an associate of the spirits of the just made perfect. May we all so live as to dwell together in the blessed, peaceful, everlasting kingdom of God; and there amid salutations and congratulations, we will hail each other happy in the New Jerusalem.

From your brother in affliction,

J. Merriam.

Concord, N. H., Oct. 27, '56.

P. S.—My eyes and health are somewhat improved. J. M.

It is not what people eat, but what they digest, that makes them strong. It is not what they gain, but what they save, that makes them rich. It is not what they read, but what they remember, that makes them learned. It is not what they profess, but what they practice, that makes them righteous. These are very plain and important truths, too little heeded by gluttons, bookworms, spendthrifts and hypocrites.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. S. Dwight.

Bro. Grant:—It has been a long time since I have written [illegible] the Crisis. The reason is obvious. I have been destitute of the spirit. My harp has been upon the willow, my tongue silent. I have been through trials and afflictions deep and now am alone in the world. My companion sleeps in the arms of him she loved and in whom she trusted. She awaits the sound of the last trump which awakes the dead.

My children are scattered. How sad, gloomy and dreary this world looks to me; it has lost its charms.

My companion fell asleep, Aug. 5th, She went down with glory on her lips. O blissful thought! Methinks I behold her rising from the tomb, her countenance radiated with immortal beauty, shouting victory over death. O, glory to God, it will soon be a reality. Praise his name forever! These things are not a cunningly devised fable. I thank the good Lord that this day I have hope through his death.

He found me afar off, but when I yielded he blessed me, bound up my wounds, and poured the oil of consolation into my heart; unloosed my tongue, put a new song into my mouth, and said to me, "go, and sin no more,"—which, by the help of God I intend to do. Truly, "the goodness of God endureth forever." This is my comfort in my affliction;—"thou art my portion, O Lord." I thank God that I have once more become a companion of them that fear God and work righteousness. O the resurrection, what glory hangs on that word; surely may it be called the hope of the church. It is a theme upon which I love to dwell, for I have an interest in it. Blessed day, when the dead in Christ shall live again; even now my soul says, praise the Lord!

"But our light afflictions which are but for a moment, shall work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal WEIGHT of glory." Then let us exercise patience in all things, remembering that God does nothing for our hurt, but seeks our good. Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth.

Well, Bro. and Sr. Mathewson, you see I have complied with your request; but you know I could not while destitute of the spirit, or in un unreconciled state. The Lord has had mercy, and I am now rejoicing in hope of life beyond this vale of tears. Do remember me at the throne of grace, for I am weak, but my motto is onward, the order from our Captain is FORWARD, and I mean to obey. He has provided me with a sword and shield, a helmet and breastplate, shoes for my feet, and I am sure of a victorious conquest. Our Captain has fought many battles with the enemy, and never lost one. He triumphed over death, hell, and the grave, and so shall we if faithful to his orders.

I want to live when Heaven and earth shall be shaken and when our Captain shall mount his war horse and the armies of heaven shall follow him, when he shall smite the nations of earth and rule them with a rod of iron. These things are but little in the future. O God prepare us all for the solemn event. Incredulity has led me into the dark; it has been my besetment, but I mean to be an overcomer that I may have right to the tree of life which is in the midst of the Paradise of God.

We must be filled with the spirit of God, for except we "have the spirit of Christ we are none of his." Then, how essential that we have it. We must keep ourselves unspotted from the world. Let us have brotherly kindness and charity for one another. We cannot grudge one against another, but must seek to do each other good, as opportunity offers. Our divine Master tells us that "by this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye love one another."

We must bring all our passions into subjection to the will of God. The Lord has done great things for me, whereof I am glad. O Lord "remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." That we may all meet in thy kingdom, is the prayer of the writer.

Yours in hope, S. Dwight.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Bro. H. Twing.

Bro. Grant:—I do wish to write a few lines for the encouragement of the dear saints, as we journey on in this our pilgrimage state. We are fast nearing our eternal home; already doth the morning light beam on our pathway. All in this wicked world is dark and dreary. Men's hearts are beginning [illegible] ready the [illegible] dismal over this boasted land of freedom and liberty. Fighting men, armed with the sword and rifle, stand ready to spill each other's blood. Yea, to murder one another. Already has the professed church of God drank in the same spirit with the world. The deadly rifle is in use in Kansas, sent there by the professed followers of Jesus. Yea, even by the watchmen.

O my God, lead thy faithful ones now in this hour of temptation. Thy word is sure. There are a few scattered ones in this wicked city, who are not ashamed to rally around the blood-stained banner of King Jesus. Their numbers are few but they are brave, and determined to keep on the whole christian armor. The legions of Satan's army are endeavoring to destroy King Jesus' soldiers; but praise the Lord! Jesus is with us, and he has promised us that he will never leave us, but will be with us to the end. O what a promise! Praise the Lord.

Some of us have been wounded by the enemy. I was; I left my work and came home to die, did not think I could live. O how foolish I have been. Master had made an ample provision for the sick ones. O how could I have doubted so long. But, praise the good Lord, my eyes have been opened; and I do believe Bro. James when he told the sick one to send for the elders to pray over him and to anoint "him with oil in the name of the Lord; and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him." Praise the good Lord that the above comes from God. Can his promise fail? No, never.

Friends of Jesus take courage. I can stand before the world, and my dear brethren as a witness for Jesus, and say that he has yet power, as formerly when he was on earth, to heal the sick and forgive sins! O praise the Lord my brethren and sisters for what he has done for me in raising me up to health again. I want to let everybody know what the Lord has done for me. I give all the glory to God for he is worthy to receive it.

From a traveler in this wilderness world, who is journeying toward a city that hath foundations. O, yes;—

"Her gates of pearl we soon shall see,
And her music we soon shall hear;
Joyous and bright our home shall be,
With our Savior forever near."

H. TWING.

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 4, '56.

For the Crisis.

From Bro. L. Lewis.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say a few words through the Crisis to the "little flock.'

"At the end it shall speak and not lie.' Has it spoken once? Yes, but the church and the world, hand in hand say, it was a lie. So it seems to them, but to us it is an infallible evidence of the truth of God's word. How could the Scriptures be fulfilled without a seeming mistake? "Though it tarry wait for it, it will surely come it will not tarry."

It is certain that the sixth seal ushers in the day of wrath; hence the exclamation, —"Who shall be able to stand." When was it opened? I believe in 1780. Compare Matt. 24: 29, with Rev. 6: 12, 13.

That day will be one of weeping and wailing, and of course some events must occur to produce it. What will it be? I answer, the event recorded in Rev. 18th chap.; because, the exclamation—"The marriage of the Lamb is come"—is not heard until after that event, which will also be the fulfillment of what is called in Matt. 24, the shaking of the powers of Heaven; because it produces the same result, "weeping and wailing," which is synonymous with the time of trouble in Dan. 12: 1

And now dear Brn. and Srs., I believe with all the power I possess of believing the simplest problem that might be named, that this is the first event that will enable us to "know that the kingdom of God is at the door."

"The wise shall understand." Who are the wise? "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom."

O faith in God's word! that mighty, and only lever of salvation from death, is thy strength diminishing? "When the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the earth?" Very little, I believe, comparatively speaking.

Now, dear Brn. and Srs., suffer one who feels himself the most unworthy of the little flock, to exhort you to have faith in God's word. Have your loins girt about [illegible] [illegible] Yea, O, yes, we constantly see. What mighty, astounding events are just in advance of us. Events which will cause whatever has been considered great, interesting, and momentous in the annals of all generations since the days of Adam, to sink into nothing. Events big with the decisive fate of millions of this polluted earth's rebellious race.

I will conclude by asking a favor; not for formality's sake, but from a sincere heart. Pray for me, I need your prayers. I feel that the flesh is weak, though the spirit is strong in faith. O may the Lord strengthen us all and bring us to his heavenly kingdom.

"When mountains are on mountains in swift destruction hurled;
O may we stand undaunted, above a burning world."

LEONARD LEWIS.

Newark, Oct. 7, '56.

For the Crisis.

From N. Hornaday.

BRO. GRANT:—I see in the Crisis an account of a Campmeeting held at Wilbraham. I rejoice to see that so large a collection of people can agree to unite on the great platform of the Bible alone; allowing no human laws to be imposed on God's people for their observance, to which you have my hearty Amen. I cordially subscribe to all the grand and noble principles laid down in the Crisis on which to unite in carrying out the great work allotted us in these last days of fables.

If we do not allow men to read the Scriptures and understand them for themselves, we may preach and pray for christian union until doom's day without availing anything. Then let us allow others all the privileges we claim for ourselves, and by this means we will do unto all men as we would that they should do unto us, and so fulfill the law of Christ.

I have been visited by the Crisis for some time, and have never assisted any in bearing the burden of those that are engaged in its publication. My reasons for neglecting to pay for the paper as long as I have are the following:

First, I never subscribed for the Crisis, I subscribed for the Messenger, and when it failed I received the Crisis in its place.

In the second place, I supposed that the Crisis was designed to be a definite time paper. I have now changed my mind with regard to it. I feel that is is a free, liberal paper, and sectarian in no respect. As such, I feel like patronizing it myself and encouraging others to do so. May God bless every lawful effort to promote the cause of truth and preserve us to his heavenly kingdom, is my prayer.

N. HORNADAY.

Sept. 10, '56.

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus, at Ware, Mass., Oct. 13, sister Martha Ann, daughter of Bro. Asa and Sr. Martha Avery, aged 20 years and nine months.

Sister Martha possessed a slender constitution, with a very large and active brain, which finally prostrated her nervous system. But the first development of the disease was owing to her receiving a severe shock in an almost unparalelled thunder storm. She never fully recovered her wonted self-control, but ever after suffered extremely from nervous excitement during similar storms.

Her health gradually declined from that time, yet for six years she remained comparatively comfortable by avoiding all excitement, until about six months previous to her death, during which time she was confined to her bed, her sufferings being intense. While lying perfectly quiet, she would complain of being "so tired," and would often say, "O, I wish I could stop thinking." It seemed that her physical system was consumed by the brain.

Sister M. yielded herself to the service of God in the year 1850, under the immediate labors of the late Bro. K. S, Hastings. She soon went forward in the ordinance of baptism, and as she had put on the Lord Jesus, so she ever endeavored to walk in and exemplify him. Yet she did not realise that enjoyment in the Christian's hope, many do. She was naturally fearful and doubting, but was very conscientious. As she possessed an extreme love of life, she might truly be reckoned among those of whom Paul speaks, in Heb. ii. 15: "Who through fear of death are all their lives subject to bondage." She would often say, "O, mother, I wish Jesus would come to-day, then I should not have to die." She desired to live, yet said she was "willing to die, if it was the Lord's will." And we believe that in answer to prayer she peace- [illegible] acquainted with Martha [illegible] She was [illegible] by those who truly knew her, and were capable of appreciating her virtues.

Her mother, (as well as others,) has lost a valiant friend and companion. We mourn with the bereft, yet with a good hope that Martha "will come again from the land of the enemy."

Her funeral was attended by Bro. A. M. Higgins, who spoke from the text quoted above,—Heb. 2, 15.

While waiting for Jesus, death marked her its prey;
While watching and hoping frail nature gave way;
Though long was the struggle, yet Death victor proved,
And she yielded the life so fervently loved.

Yet quiet the slumber, and short the sweet sleep—
She'll waken to bliss, and the saint's loved retreat,
No more to seek rest, but on Eden's green bowers
Will bask in pure sunlight midst unfading flowers.

We loved her when with us, we mourn for her now,
Yet joy in this prospect—ne'er more her fair brow
Will be tortured with pain, or saddened with care,
But fanned by pure breezes will e'er remain fair.

Then look not at nature, think not of decay,
Rut think of redemption't victorious day:
Yes, we'll watch for the morn that never hath night,
When the songs of redeemed ones triumphant unite.

Aye! we miss her at home—we miss her abroad,—
But we think of the rest long promised of God;
We'll greet her once more in that blest Eden home,
Where pain cannot enter, or death ever come.

Ware, Mass. M. J. H.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

AUTUMN LEAVES.

BY MARIA

Pale Autumn leaves, sere Autumn leaves
Crushed 'neath each restless tread,
How your rustling, to my heart,
Speaks of the early dead.

They that were gathered by my side
Through all youth's summer day;
That budded fair as spring-time flowers,
And passed as soon away.

How bleak and desolate yon boughs,
That waved their leaves so green;
How lone and dark each hall and hearth
Where their bright forms have been.

Oh withered, dying, Autumn leaves,
Or rustling 'neath my tread;
Or stirred by sighing gales, ye bring
Sad memories of the dead.

So darkly in the chill damp earth
Is laid each lovely brow,—
O, all unheeding of the tears
That fall above them now.

Ye waken ever in my heart
A deep and yearning prayer,
For the blest hour that shall restore
Our earth as Eden fair;

And robe it in perennial green
Bedecked with fadeless flowers;
Where changing seasons bring no blight,
To dim the blooming bowers.

There our sad lays breathe forth no more,
"We all fade as the leaf;"
But, "as a tree" man's life shall be,
Nor "few," nor filled with grief.

Domestic Summary.

THE ARREST OF TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY KANSAS EMIGRANTS.—The Chicago papers of Monday, contain the particulars of the arrest of two hundred and fifty emigrants by U. S. troops, as they were entering Kansas, by the way of Iowa, on the 10th of October. The emigrants made the following statement:—

"We left Mount Pleasant, Iowa, on the 20th of September, and after a toilsome journey of some 21 days through Iowa and Nebraska, we reached the Kansas line this morning, Oct. 10, 1856. When we had proceeded about three miles south of the line, and while pursuing our way in a peaceful and quiet manner, we were suddenly stopped by between 600 and 700 United States troops, with six pieces of artillery, under command of Col. Cooke, acting as a posse to United States Deputy Marshal Preston.

After inquiring who we were, and to what place we were going, and being truthfully informed, they announced their intention to subject us to search, in obedience to instructions from Gov. Geary.

The emigrants had a pass from Gov. Geary, which was sent to them by a special messenger while at Nebraska. They also state:—"We protested against any detention or search as a violation of our constitutional rights, and of the spirit of Gov. Geary's letter.

We admitted that we were thoroughly armed, and stated that Gov. Geary had been so informed by the bearer of the letter, and he had distinctly admitted our right to come armed into the Territory. The train was ordered to start, but was immediately forcibly stopped, neither our protest nor Gov. Geary's letter being respected. The wagons were then searched, and all arms found in them taken away. During the search, trunks and valises were thrown out in the rain and tramped in the mud—the ladies being treated with unequalled rudeness. [illegible] the [illegible] This, having neither right nor power to do, they refused; telling them that when they had taken from us all that they wanted, we would take care of ourselves.

We were then informed that we were prisoners of war, our entire train, numbering some 250 men, women and children, being surrounded by United States troops and marched into camp, where we are to-night, under a strong military guard, who have orders to shoot down any man who attempts to leave."

This statement is signed by a large number of persons, among whose names we see but one from New England—Andrew Stark of Connecticut.

ARRIVAL OF THE ILLINOIS.—New York, Oct. 28.—The steamer Illinois, from Aspinwall, arrived at this port at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Business in San Francisco improving.

Dr. Armstrong was murdered near Sacramento by a man named Colebrook. While the latter was being examined before a justice, the citizens broke into Court, disarmed the officers, and, seizing the prisoner, carried him off and hung him upon a tree.

Dr. John Marsh, a graduate of Harvard University, was murdered at his ranch, near Martinez, by a Spaniard.

IMPORTANT FROM NICARAGUA.—New Orleans, Oct. 22.—The steamship Tennesse has arrived here, with later dates from Nicaragua.

Gen. Walker, finding the enemy advancing on Massaya, withdrew the small force there, when the enemy, 4000 strong, occupied the place.

Gen. Walker then left a small force at Grenada, and advanced towards Massaya, with 1000 men, and meeting the enemy, on the 12th inst., near the city, repulsed them, driving them back to Massaya, where a battle was fought, lasting until midnight.

At daylight, a courier arrived from Granada, stating that 1400 Guatemaleans and natives were besieging that place. Gen. Walker, on receiving this information, immediately marched to the relief of Granada, and arrived on the heights surrounding the city on the morning of the 13th, at 10 o'clock, and, finding the city barricaded by the whole force of the enemy, he charged upon them and drove them from their posts, capturing their commanders, and all their field-pieces, and routing them from the city with great slaughter. The total loss of the enemy was 1100. Gen. Walker's loss was 16 killed and 30 wounded.

Gen. Walker would immediately march on Massaya and Leon. His troops were in the highest spirits.

The citizens of Grenada held the government buildings 22 hours against the force of the enemy, and were vigorously defending the place when Gen. Walker arrived.

Messrs. Lawless, Wheeler and Ferguson, American citizens, who have had no connection with Nicaraguan affairs, were murdered by the natives.

Foreign News.

ARRIVAL OF THE ARABIA.—Halifax, Oct. 23. —The Royal Mail steamship, Capt. Stone, from Liverpool 11th inst., arrived at this port this forenoon.

Political affairs remain unchanged.

The Neapolitan question had assumed no new phase, and remained in as unsatisfactory condition as ever.

General News.—The Isle of Serpents' question has not been satisfactorily adjusted yet. The French squadron has been ordered to cooperate with the English fleet.

The Austrian Squadron, consisting of three steamers and six gunboats, has been ordered to Constantinople

Baron Monneheim, the Russian Councillor of State had arrived at Vienna, with despatches from St. Petersburgh, relative to the affairs of Naples and Montenegro.

Russia will not renounce the principle of the Holy Alliance, but will endeavor to procure the co-operation of Austria in Neapolitan policy.

The last accounts from the East states that the difference between England and Persia was very far from being accommodated.

NAPLES.

The latest accounts from Naples state that the King was less disposed than ever to make concessions.

The expedition to Naples was still delayed, although events at that capital seemed to leave them no alternative.

ITALY.

The direct news from Naples to the 29th ult., intimates that the King is still determined to resist all demands and remonstrances.

A strong Russian fleet, commanded by the Grand Duke Constantine, is to go into the Mediterranean, merely as a guard of honor to the Empress mother's tour, in Italy.

The Spanish fleet is on hand, merely as police for the Spanish islands, and the Austrian squadron is to cruise in the Adriatic solely for exercise.

TURKEY.

Uneasiness is felt for the tranquility of Syria.

THE EAST.

Advices from Constantinople of Oct. 1, say "The misunderstanding about the Isle of Serpents is likely to bring the French fleet back again.

Some Austrian ships of war have gone to the Isle of Serpents, and two others are expected here.

ARRIVAL OF THE ATLANTIC.—New York, Oct 28. The steamship Atlantic, from Liverpool 14th inst., arrived at 8 o'clock this evening.

The news is of considerable interest.

Letters from Paris on the financial crisis are less favorable.

A camp of 40,000 men is to be established soon at Chalons Sur Madre.

Prince Mehemet Ali, Pasha of Egypt has arrived in Paris.

It was rumored that the Rothschilds had contracted with the Bank of France to supply gold to the amount of 6,400,000 roubles.

A revolutionary document addressed to the Italian people, and purporting to be signed by a Committee for the people and students of Paris had been secretly posted in various quarters of Paris. It urges them to arms and promises assistance.

PREPARATIONS FOR DEFENCE.

The U. S. ship Supply was at Naples.

The Czar was to make his solemn entrance into St. Petersburg on the 14th inst.

The Paris Journal des Debats, says:

We believe the pretensions raised by Russia [illegible] remain as before. It is also true that 4000 Austrians occupied [illegible] as it was reported.

The Neapolitan affair remains quite unchanged. All thoughts of an expedition are now supposed to be abandoned, and even the French and English Ministers will not be recalled.

Russia is said to have given formal notice to reassemble the Congress of Paris, to which France and Prussia have assented, and now await only England's concurrence.

THE BRITISH FLEET IN THE BLACK SEA.

Letters from the Royal Albert, bearing the flag of Admiral Lyons, to as late as the 2d of Oct., announce that she was making preparations to winter above the South Bridge, and within the Golden Horn, and that in consequence of the non-execution of the treaty of Paris by Russia, Her Majesty's steam frigate Magecclenne, the Lynx, steam corverte, and the Weser, steam gunboat, had re-entered the Black Sea, to be followed forthwith by the Vulture, steam frigate.

APPALLING BURNING OF A SHIP.—The following details of a horrible case of piracy and burning of a ship at Macao have been received at Lloyds: "The Dutch ship Banca, Captain Heymans, 700 tons burthen, with between 300 and 400 emigrants (Coolies) for Havanna, put back to Macao about a month since, (the dispatch is dated Hong Kong, August 10,) with her water casks leaking, and cargo shifted, having encountered boisterous weather, and on reaching the outer roads brought up to an anchor.

There she remained repairing, the officers exercising strict vigilance in preventing the Coolies going ashroe, for fear they should make their escape. For three weeks whatever discontent may have prevailed, no fears of an outbreak would seem to have been entertained, until a Chinese docter warned the captain that mischief was brewing. In preparing for such a contingency as a rising of the Coolies, the small arms were placed on the poop, and two guns were loaded with grape and pointed forward.

About nine o'clock of the night of the 8th, the disturbance commenced, and the crew took refuge on the poop. The captain first fired a shot or two overhead, but as that had no effect and the Coolies advanced towards them, yelling frightfully, armed with belaying pins, bricks torn from the cooking places, &c., the captain gave orders to his men to fire, and immediately a volley was poured into the infuriated mass from the two guns, and also from the small arms.

This had the effect of checking and putting down the riot, and the Coolies were driven below, but they sought revenge by setting fire to the ship, and in a few minutes the captain was appalled by seeing flames issuing up from the fore hatch. A frightful scene of carnage followed; the Coolies rushed up on deck, and no doubt murdered all the officers of the ship. None of them nor the captain were afterwards seen. The ship was soon in a blaze, fore and aft. In about an hour the mainmast fell with a crash, then the fore and mizzen, and about midnight the magazine blew up with a tremendous explosion. The ship was instantly hurled to fragments, and a vast number of poor creatures, who, clinging on the chains, perished with her. Of the number who were on board, including crew and passengers, about five hundred, only one hundred and fifty escaped with their lives; the remainder were either burnt in the ship or drowned. The affair has produced a great sensation at Hong Kong.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., tha it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

—:o:—

Providence permitting, I will preach at Fairhaven, Mass., the second Lord's day in Nov. M. GRANT.

BRO. J. HEMMENWAY appoints to preach at Portsmouth, 4th Lord's day in Nov.

—:o:—

BRO. J. HOWELL appoints to preach at
Salem, 2d Lord's day in Nov.
Boston, 5th. " " " "

—:o:—

Eld. S. W. BISHOP appoints to preach at
Lowell, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 9.
Lawrence, Sunday, Nov. 16.
Boston, Sunday, Nov. 23.

—:o:—

Bro. JOHN COUCH appoints to preach at Portsmouth, N. H. Nov. 16th.
Portland, Me., Nov. 9th.
Lake Village, N. H. Nov. 23.

—:o:—

Bro. EDWIN BURNHAM appoints to preach at
Boston, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 9.
Lewiston, Me., Sunday, Nov. 16.
Poland, Me., Sunday, Nov. 23.
Rye, N H, Sunday Nov 30.
Lowell, Mass, " Dec. 7.

—:o:—

Bro. W. S. CAMPBELL appoints to preach at

Waterbury,	Nov. 5.
Prospect,	6.
New Britain,	Sunday, 9.
River Point,	10.
Clarksville,	12.
Lafayette,	Nov. 13.
Lowell,	Sunday, 16.
Lowell,	Sunday, 23.
Bristol, Conn.,	Sunday, 30.
Collinsville,	Dec. 7.
River Point—the time is changed from the 10th Nov, to	Nov. 11.
Jawbuck,	27.
Hazardville,	28.
Yaugau R I,	14.

If these appointments conflict with others, please inform me, to save expense and trouble. W. S. C.

—:o:—

If the Lord will, Elders L. L. Howard, J. Partridge, and such other ministering brethren as think it best to attend, will hold a conference at Brunswick, Me., in the School House near Bro. T. M. Store's, commencing Thursday evening, Nov. 6, at 6 1-2 o'clock, and continuing over the Sabbath.

Brethren and sisters from Topsham, Woolwich, Bowdoinham, Richmond and other towns in the vicinity, are invited to be there to work for the Lord. Now is the time for united action: soon will come the time for a glorious and eternal reward.

In behalf of all interested, R. R. [illegible]

[illegible]

Bro. [illegible] appoints to preach at Portsmouth, N. H., [illegible]

—:o:—

Eld. D. E. [illegible] appoints to preach at Worcester, [illegible]
Tolland, Conn., [illegible]
where Bro. Storrs may appoint.

—:o:—

Bro. B. P. [illegible] appoints to preach at Manchester, [illegible]
Nashua, [illegible]
Danbury, Nov. 22, and stop a day or two if desired.
New Boston, Nov. 30.

—:o:—

Bro. S. S. [illegible] appoints to preach at Concord, N. H., [illegible]
Roby School House, Sunday, Nov. 9.
New Bedford, Sunday, Nov. 16.
Worcester, Nov. 23.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

J T Ongley's P. O. address is [illegible] Valley Crawford Co., Pa.

Bro. J N Nutter—The dollar you now send pays to No. 104.

H T Miller, T J Philbrook, Mrs. Eliza [illegible]don, Mrs. M Sunderland, E Hamlin, J H Stevens, A Macomber, E Tripp, O Tibbets, M Austin, D B Rogers, W M Lane, H B Sevey, W Robinson, J S Burwell, A P Metcalf, A Kidder, A Hastings, J N Nutter, S H Dyer, D Hutchinson, $1.00 each.

T Harrington, F Flanders, $2.00 each.

J Clifford, L Bills, 50 cents each.

FOR BR. SHELDON'S TRACTS.—A Rider, $1.

FOR BOOKS.—Geo. Whipple, $2.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

—:o:—

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

The following works are published and sold by H. L. Hastings, Peace Dale, R. I.—They are also for sale at the Office of the "World's Crisis," 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.; and by W. Pratt, Moline, Ill.; P. A. Smith, 4 Frank street, Rochester, N. Y.; A. F. Porter, 90 Erie street, Philadelphia, Pa.; S. S. Brewer, 54 Wilson street, Providence, R. I.—

GLAD TIDINGS, or Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to End in the Universe, by a Literal Destruction of Wicked Men and Devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment Collected and Arranged. By Jacob Blain. Price 10 cents; postage 1 cent.

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 38 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cts.—postage 9 cents.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By I. C. Welcome. 33 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

JUBILEE HARP. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns well adapted to the present wants of the church. Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50; per hundred, $20. Postage 7 cents.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—by D. T. Taylor. Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—by John Cumming. State of the Dead, by Milton. Intermediate State, by Grew. Each 24 pages. Price 5 cents single; $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the Coast of Man—Ancient Landmarks—Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Investigation: price 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred.—Future Punishment—The Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE. By William Shepherd. Price—four copies, [illegible] cents; nine copies, 50 cents; eighteen copies, $1; one hundred, $5,—[illegible]

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and The New [illegible] By J. Lenfest. Single copy, 12 [illegible] hundred. Postage 1 [illegible]

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment, as Taught by Paul. 15 [illegible]

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Revelations of the [illegible] Church before the Flood, [illegible] the Apocalypse, [illegible] of the Twelve," "The [illegible] and his Altar," [illegible] [illegible]

Poetry.

[illegible]

In [illegible],
[illegible] Jerusalem, thou city of our God,
We long [illegible] hosts have trod;
We long to see thy radiant domes resplendent scenes unfold,
[illegible] more sublime with amaranth and gold;
To [praise] our God forever, and on Zion's bulwarks stand,
And join the "Alleluiahs" with the blood-washed, spotless band.

[illegible] heaven! break thy wide arch, unfold thy rapt'rous scene—
[illegible] that form its canopy no longer intervene;
Reveal thy glorious majesty, let flaming swords descend,
When this polluted universe with sinners has an end:
Then shall thy glorious kingdom come, and saints forever reign,
Amid the bowers in heavenly climes, on Beulah's happy plain.

Ye sinners, leave the toys of earth, the songs of Zion sing,
Break forth in strains of penitence before th' eternal King.
O, leave this fading, sin-cursed earth, for robes of spotless white,
To join the glorious blood-washed throng, in realms of endless light;
And with the blest redeemed of earth, then prove your sufferings o'er,
And wave the palms of victory, where sighings are no more.

Thy saints are waiting, watching; for thy kingdom, Lord, they yearn,—
Methinks the muttering thunder breaks the western horizon.
Once more the thunder rends the sky, 'mid cries, and groans and tears;
Resounding trumpets rend the air—creation disappears—
Dark night of vengeance shrouds o'er all, probation's reign is o'er,
The saints forever ransomed then shall stand on Canaan's shore.

Mid Eden's fair celestial bowers, the ransomed host shall shout
And strike celestial harps and peal immortal anthems out;
With glittering robes of spotless white, and dazzling crowns untold,
The glories of that blest retreat before the eye unfold.
Then intervening skies depart, and come Thou from above—
We long for thee Jerusalem, thou city of our love.

Scituate, R. I., Sept. 29th, '56

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Will we join Ahab?

BY HENRY F. CARPENTER.

Ahab was reigning in Samaria and Jehoshaphat in Jerusalem.

Ahab did evil in the sight of the Lord, and did more to provoke His anger than all the kings of Israel before him. To his sins, already very many, he added the greater sin of taking to wife that idolatrous woman, Jezebel, through whose influence he was led to serve and worship Baal in an house which he had caused to be built, and at an altar which he himself had reared.

Jehoshaphat was not so. He walked in the first ways of his father David, seeking unto the Lord God of Israel, who prospered him in all that he did and caused him to wax great exceedingly.

Ahab was subtile. He saw the increase of Jehoshaphat's honor and riches—he knew his power—he doubtless knew too that it was the great "I Am" who girded him with strength; that God, whom he had forsaken, though perhaps not wholly forgotten.

Neither could he have been unmindful of the fear of Jehoshaphat which had fallen upon the nations around, for they dared make no war with him.

As he thought of these things, Ahab may have envied, but it was far from his policy to make himself a foe—another matter occupies his mind. He has a wiser end in view. Ramoth-Gilead is in the hand of his enemies; enemies, too many and too powerful to subdue. He needs help, and such an ally as Jehoshaphat would be truly desirable. He is invited to Samaria and when he comes, sheep and oxen in abundance are killed and a great feast is made. He is entertained in all the pomp and luxury of that city of "glorious beauty"—the "crown of pride." [illegible]

[illegible] at Ramoth-Gilead, then he unhesitatingly replies, "I am as thou art, my people are as thy people, and we will be with thee in the war." How debasing were these words! how dishonoring and offensive to God! What! he, the zealous defender of Jehovah and Jehovah's law, become one with the treacherous, Baal-worshipping Ahab and his people one!

But ere they go up to the contest another step must be taken. The "prophets" must be enquired of. This affair must have the semblance at least, of God's service. Four hundred prepared for Ahab's pleasure came forth, and with lying lips prophecy "Go up and prosper."

But Jehoshaphat is not satisfied; something disturbs his mind; perhaps the silent monitor within begins to trouble him. "Is there not here a prophet of the Lord besides, that we may inquire of him?" he asks. We may all imagine Ahab's expression of contempt as he replies; "There is yet one, Micaiah, the son of Imlah, but I hate him, for he does not prophecy good concerning me, but evil." How could Jehoshaphat thus endure to hear the true prophet of God, of that God whom he had hitherto so faithfully served, thus lightly and scornfully spoken of? He may have felt grieved, but he had already gone too far to retreat—he had committed himself to Ahab.

Micaiah is sent for and utters the faithful prophecy—"I saw all Israel scattered upon the hills as sheep that have no shepherd." "The Lord has spoken evil concerning thee." Ahab is enraged, and Micaiah, far from being heeded, was sent away to be fed with the bread of affliction within prison walls.

The two kings go up to battle, and it is sore against them. Disguise is vain. God gives strength to the bow, direction to the arrow, and Ahab's heart is pierced. Faint from loss of blood, at last he falls, and his host is scattered "every man to his own city and every man to his own country."

May we not profit by an application of this narrative? A similar state of things exists to-day. We have the "world" (enemies), professors led away by the gods of this world (Ahab), and the true servant of God, (Jehoshaphat). Kansas answers to Ramoth-Gilead. Ungodly men, ignorant of God's word, are inviting with seducing sentiments the few faithful ones who dare believe "all things written in the law and the prophets" to join the contest for her liberation; a contest carried on in bitterness, by unhallowed strife, by slander, by deceit, by reproach, and by villainy. 'Tis true the end to be accomplished is worthy of christian zeal and appeals to every feeling of humanity. So was it in Ahab's case. The Lord did not desire Ramoth-Gilead to be occupied by his enemies, but why did he not help to deliver it? It was because of the manner in which it was undertaken. It was undertaken by an alliance of his people with idolaters—an abomination in his sight; and will he bless such an alliance to-day, when he commands "be ye separate and touch not the unclean (beastly) thing?

To what power is it proposed to give that territory? Is it to a Christian power? to a power that fears God? a power that will deal justly, love mercy, and walk humbly before God? a power that rejoices in truth and longs for Christ to reign? Is there such a power on earth? Will God then help his children now to enthrone his enemies? will he bless them in so doing? Shall we think to deliver this wicked nation from the "cup" which God has declared she must drink? Is there not a lying spirit in the mouths of those prophets (ministers) who now are prophesying—"go up and prosper?"

Is there not even more than one prophet of the Lord beside, who is now lifting up his voice in faithful admonition—"if thou return at all in peace then hath not God spoken by me?" Shall they be despised and fed with the bread of affliction?

How did Jehoshaphat's course effect him?

1. His heart was led away from God by the friendship of Ahab; and can we to-day unite ourselves with "clubs," give ear to stump speakers, sing unholy songs, swell our voice with Satan's cheers to the praise of men, when God demands our praise alone? can we clap our hands at the lifting to the breeze of partisan flags, the banner of Jesus, our Jesus, being at the same time in the very dust beneath our feet, and still maintain the integrity of our heart before God? [illegible]

2. Jehoshaphat was led to reject the faithful prophet's counsel. Does not meddling with these things have the same effect to-day?

Lastly. He endangered his life, and with difficulty escaped to Jerusalem to be rebuked thus severely,—"Shouldst thou help the ungodly, and love them that hate the Lord?"

O will we not shun the folly of Jehoshaphat? Will we not heed this admonition? Will we still defy all evil, and "go up" to battle? Will we join Ahab?

Peacedale, Oct. 14, '56.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LINES.

BY JULIA F. MARSH.

Tune,—Dying Californian.

Could you view the bleeding Savior,
As he hung upon the tree;
Could you see him as they pierced him,—
Jesus says you'd turn to me.
O backslider, don't be faithless,
Don't be disbelieving now,—
Come, O come, rest on the Savior,
Come, and at his dear feet bow.

Come poor sinner, come this moment,
Do not linger for your friends,
Do not wait the spirit's movement,—
Leave the world with all its charms.
Will you now refuse his warning?
Will you turn your backs to him?
Soon will break the light of morning,
Soon the last great day'll begin.

Now the Judge of earth approaches
Seated on the great white cloud;
Then we'll hail the King with gladness,
Who have trusted in His word.
O ye rich men, ye will wonder
At the plagues this earth receives,
Ye will cry for rocks and mountains
Vain to hide you from his gaze.

Northfield, Mass.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

Letter From Bro. B. Spaulding.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—Yesterday, I received by express a bundle of tracts and papers directed to B. Spaulding, Vinal Haven, Me. I thank the Lord for the favor; yes, and the donor too. I do not know to whom I am indebted for them, but I guess they came from the office of the World's Crisis. Whoever was the giver, receives my very grateful thanks, and the prayer of my heart that God may bless him abundantly, both with temporal and spiritual blessings. Let me remind him, that to him that giveth shall be given good measure, pressed down, shaken together. Yes, and the "Liberal soul shall be made fat, and he that watereth shall be watered."

I had felt the need of these very tracts, on the sleep of the dead, and destruction of the wicked, for a great interest is waked up on these subjects in these islands: and they have never until within a year, heard anything upon the subject. The idea is new to most people here, their minds have been blinded by human traditions,—such as going up to Heaven (or "beyond the bounds of time and space") when they die, and receiving their reward before the Judgment day has decided their cases.

There are but few ministers, and few churches, on these islands, of course, but little sectarianism; therefore, I have the better chance to get access to their minds. I have great opportunities to converse on the subject. I bring it into most of my lectures, and the subject is exciting much inquiry.

The tracts came very opportunely. I had bought several dollars' worth to distribute, but they were but a mite in this large field. It affords me unspeakable pleasure to circulate these little missionaries in this field white for harvest.

It would afford the giver joy, to see how eagerly they receive and read them; how they send them out among their neighbors; and what will be the result time only can tell. One thing they may be assured of, they have done their duty, and the tracts are faithfully distributed in such families as they will be most likely to benefit.

I have visited some ten or more islands, some of them are townships, others are small, having three or four families only. I get these few families together, and give them instruction in Bible doctrines. They have no preaching, have no minister to prejudice their minds.

Often, crews of fishermen are lying in these harbors, who come in and hear my lectures. Then I have a chance to spread broadcast the seeds of gospel truth.

On receiving your papers, [illegible] per, or but one, that I know of on all these islands; so for six weeks I did not hear a word from any brethren, and the very sight of your paper filled my soul with joy, much more the reading of it.

I rejoice to see the success of the cause of truth, and a disposition manifested by brethren and sisters generally, to lay aside the judging, testing spirit, and love as brethren. I have long wished to see this state of things brought about, and have labored for it. Go on, brethren and sisters, cultivating the spirit of love, peace, brotherly kindness, and forbearance, overlooking each others' imperfections, walking together as "heirs of the grace of life."

God, even our God will bless and increase you. Continue to grow in grace and knowledge; don't be satisfied with past attainments, but reach forward to that which is before. It is our privilege to know more of Bible truth than our brethren did twenty years ago. New light is daily breaking forth. Let us have our minds open to conviction, ready to hear, and when convicted, receive all truth; and thus be daily preparing for, as we are hasting to, that glorious kingdom, which awaits God's people.

When I have circulated all these tracts, you will hear from me again. Pray for me, that I may have heavenly wisdom, holy boldness, and the spirit of faithfulness, that I may declare the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

BENJ. SPAULDING.

Vinal Haven, Me., Oct. 11, 1856.

For the Crisis.

From sister M. J. Tyrrell

BRO. GRANT:—Thinking it might rejoice the hearts of the dear brethren and sisters to know how our Campmeeting ended and what the result has been, I write these lines for the Crisis.

Our hearts were made sad by so many of our dear brethren and sisters being obliged to leave before the meeting closed, nevertheless, as we had prayed the Lord to lead the meeting it was not for us to mark out the way, and as the meeting continued the interest increased. A spirit of labor was poured upon the church—backsliders were reclaimed—sinners converted and made to rejoice in a Savior's pardoning love. The good Lord sent our beloved brother Mathewson black to hep us, and we thanked the Lord and took courage.

The last meeting was the crowning one. There were the old soldiers of the cross that have fought through many a battle sore, and some that had laid off the armor and been wounded by the enemy; and there the young soldier that had just enlisted to fight the good fight of faith; and as each brought in their testimony for the Lord, the spirit of God pervaded the entire tent's company, and it seemed as if the angels hovered around us and the spirit of the highest overshadowed us.

Many of our brethren and sisters will remember with gratitude that last meeting in the Litchfield tent. I have often thought since the Camp meeting, of the remark made by an individual while leaving the ground, after a goodly number of our influential brethren and sisters had gone: said he,—"there is nothing left but the emptyings."

Methinks there was more virtue in emptyings than thought for. Perhaps the brother had forgotten that God hath chosen the weak things of this world to confound the mighty. I praise the Lord for the "emptyings." It is the leaven that does the work, and we see the effect of it all around us and more especially is the good Lord to work in the Western part of Litchfield, where brother Mathewson has been laboring. A number have been converted and some backsliders reclaimed. Bro. M. baptized twelve happy souls. Praise the Lord for what he is doing in that place and also for East Litchfield.

Brother M. came to our place according to appointment, and God blessed the word. The little church was strengthened and their hearts encouraged to go on in the strength of Israel's God. After services were ended at the house, they repaired to the water. Brother M. buried four in the Naugatuck river and as they came up out of the water the praises of God echoed and re-echoed across the water. Mine ears caught the sound, and I found in me a hearty response,—glory to God in the highest. One of those baptized was a young woman in the last stages of consumption; some thought that it would kill her, but to the astonishment of many she has been greatly strengthened and is evidently better. The Lord does not require us to do a thing and then kill us for doing it. No, no. [illegible] willing and obedient child. Before they left for their homes they came in to see me, for I was confined to my bed and had been for some time, and they told me how God had blessed them, and their very countenances told that they had Christ within; and as we mingled our praises together the tears of gratitude chased each other down our cheeks; the spirit of the Lord pervaded every heart and the angels seemed to hover around to carry the tidings home.

O how good it is to associate with the dear children of God here; but better far will it be to see all our Father's family in the new earth restored, where sickness and sorrow will never be permitted to enter—where the atmosphere will be so pure and healthy, and every one we meet will be our friend.

Glory to God! I am glad my Brn. and Srs. that you ever found your way to Litchfield and with us ascended the rugged hills to the grove, to pour out our prayers together to that God whose ears are open to the cries of his children. Many a heart to-day is praising God, which, but for that meeting, would have been going on to destruction.

I tell you my Brn., the Lord has got some dear children scattered up and down the mountains, and they are as sheep without a shepherd; but God feedeth them, praise His name,

Once in a great while one of the watchmen comes along to see if the children have any meat, and as they begin to spread out the provisions of the gospel, we open our mouths and are filled, and go in the strength of that meat many days. Glory to God we are of more value than many sparrows. The Lord knoweth them that are his, and I, for one, mean to be among that number that shall be owned and prized of God, for I have a great desire to see the King in his beauty.

From your sister looking for that same Jesus to come again, M. J. TYRRELL

East Litchfield, Oct. 21, 1856.

For the Crisis.

From W. H. Wild.

BRO. GRANT:—I am striving for the kingdom; but He who has been wandering up and down the earth for these six thousand years, means that I shall not get there. By the grace of God assisting me, I mean to snatch all that I can from his hands. We need wisdom from on high to keep him behind us. Pilgrim, remember, if you save one poor soul from death, you shall hide a multitude of sins. Weary pilgrim, art thou afraid sometimes that thy frail bark will be upset? Take courage, be not afraid, for thy Father is at the helm.

You who are troubled, turn and read John 14: 1, 2, 3. The same Jesus that went up into the heavens shall so come in like manner as he went. O glorious hope! it is our only hope.

But if we beleived the common theory that we had an immortal soul within us that when we die flies away, beyond the bounds of time and space, I ask, what should we care if the Lord never did come? But if the Lord should not come, then they that have fallen asleep in him are perished.

Little children, we have a better hope than this,—it is the blessed hope of the gospel. O how I long to see the Chief Shepherd appear, when he shall gather his little flock into one fold.

Brethren and sisters, some of you know what it is to be alone, surrounded by those who fear not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, but glory to God, we have his blessed book. Cheer up, weary pilgrims, for the time is not distant, when thou shalt enter the pearly gates of the new Jerusalem. Cling fast to his word.

From your brother, longing for the wickedness of the wicked to come and to end.

W. H. WILD.

Lenox, Mass.

Choice Selections.

A Christian.

A christian is not a mere nominal being. Far from it. He is a living moral entity—a divinity in vital miniature. An object of the highest interest to God, angels, men and devils. He lives and moves in the elements of virtue, truth and right. His interest is the interest of his Maker, his Redeemer, and all holy beings. He lives for the glory of his God and the welfare of mankind, and not for his own pleasure.

Religion, with him, is something more than going to church, [illegible] and baptism, [illegible] on Sunday, and living a moral life [illegible] the Lord and Master; and thus day by day and hour by hour, he must glorify Him who has saved him, with all the powers and faculties of his body and spirit which are His. The bitter knowledge that he is a sinner before and against Heaven, has become with him a practical matter of unfeigned sorrow and mourning. He has come to the blessed knowledge of that saving truth, that there is with Jesus Christ "forgiveness of sins" and "plenteous redemption" for himself. While contemplating his own unworthiness and willingness of the Savior, he is prepared to say, and feelingly say, too, "thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift."

Look at such a man in all his movements, from day to day. His actions are those of a helper, a friend, a brother; and his words are words of instruction, of kindness, and of truth. Where sickness and sorrow linger, he is a ministering angel there. Where the prisoner sighs and groans, he sighs and groans in sympathy. When the bondman lifts up his voice in anguish and vexation, he is as if bound with him. He weeps with those who weep, and rejoices with those who rejoice. When the poor and needy call at his door for help, they are loaded with plenty, and sent joyfully away. He makes "the widow's heart to sing for" gladness, and the eyes and ears of the fatherless daily load his name with blessings of gratitude. Nor does he wait till want clamors in his ears for favor, and points directly to her miserable abode, but "the cause which" he knows "not" he searches "out." Thus he becomes "eyes to the blind," "feet to the lame," a defence to the innocent, and the succorer of the helpless. He is, to use a strong expression, a second edition of the Redeemer himself!

Such is the man who is not merely, for the time being only, borne on a flood of exciting circumstances in the way of goodness, or drawn temporarily, by the sympathy of society, into the channel of right, but who has counted the cost of giving all for Christ; and who reckons himself crucified with him. Such a one is, indeed, "unknown and yet well known." Wicked men may despise his hope, and deride his faith and devotion, but they are compelled to admire his consistency and benevolence.

And it was, doubtless this view which caused our Lord to say, "let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father in Heaven." For when men behold that which is lovely, it is perfectly natural for them to seek for the cause of its existence, and thus, finally, the grace of God is magnified.

Do you despairingly ask if such a character as I have described, can be found on earth? Yes, blessed be God! I doubt not many such are moving among us, though in comparison with the mass of mankind, or even professing christians among mankind, they are few. You do not know them now, altogether. You cannot know them yet fully. The "sons of God" are not yet manifested. But you recognize a few of them. Your Lord knows them; and in the "great day," when He sits "on the throne of His glory," will say unto them, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."—Independent.

E. B.

The Judicious Parent

Keeps his children at work diligently, orderly, regularly, systematically—no time is lost—every moment is grasped—duly, employed in something useful, profitable, praiseworthy. He gives them no time or opportunity to idle, lounge about, play truant, serve Satan in the streets, by the way side, or at public resorts.

He keeps them busy at their pleasant labor; even the little ones are employed the very moment they are able to use the implements of husbandry, mechanism, horticulture, type-setting, stitching, folding, or kitchen utensils. On they go, lively, cheerfully, happily. They are soon made to love these useful callings—delight in them. It's recreation, amusement, their life—their joy. They are early taught to know God's requirements in opposition to the vain, trifling, wicked things, in which many children spend their precious golden moments, to their own destruction! The wise and judicious parent begins early, at the outset the first dawn of moral accountbility, to inculcate in the minds and hearts of his little ones—habits of virtue, industry, activity, sobriety, economy, and diligent obedience.

The Bible the blessed Bible is the motto, the text book, the guide, the light house, the fountain head.

The Bible! tis a book divine,
Where heavenly truth and mercy shine;
And wisdom speaks in every line.

The Bible! in this book alone,
We find God's holy will made known;
And here his love to man is shown.

These early business-like habits and moral inculcations, watered by the dews of heavenly grace, shield the juveniles from temptation's snare—they grow up to manhood's prime, become useful, benevolent citizens; shine as lights.

O for more parents, fit for such training [illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. | BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1856. | WHOLE NO. 63. VOL. IV. [illegible]

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Unpardonable Sin.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

"There is a sin unto death, I do not say he shall pray for it." 1 John, 5; 16.

What is the sin which is generally denominated the unpardonable sin? Many good, humble, and broken-hearted persons are often tempted with the idea that they may have committed this sin; and therefore it becomes important that we should understand what it is, that we may comfort and help such tempted ones.

The sin in question is first made mention of in Matthew, 12: 31, 32. "Wherefore I say unto you, all manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men; but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come."

The parallel passages are as follows: "Verily I say unto you, 'All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme: but he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation." Mark, 3: 28, 29. "And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven." Luke, 12: 10.

To understand this scripture rightly, we must consider the occasion of it. Mark informs us that the Lord said this "because they said, He hath an unclean spirit," when they, the Scribes, saw Him casting out devils. Mark, 3: 21—30. Matthew gives a more full and particular account of the matter, which is as follows:

"Then was brought unto him one possessed with a devil, blind, and dumb: and he healed him, insomuch that the blind and dumb both spake and saw. And all the people were amazed and said, is not this the Son of David? But when the Pharisees heard it, they said, this fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub the prince of devils.

And Jesus knew their thoughts, and said unto them, every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation: and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand. And if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself; how shall then his kingdom stand?

And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your children cast them out? therefore they shall be your judges. But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you. Or else how can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man? and then he will spoil his house.

He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad." And then follows the passage concerning the "blasphemy against the Holy Ghost.

Thus it will be plainly seen, that for a person to sin this unpardonable sin, he must willfully, deliberately, and maliciously speak against the work, or power of the Holy Spirit, when there is the best of evidence existing that the manifestation, against which he speaks, is the work of the Holy Spirit: and, to commit this sin as the Pharisees did, must ascribe the effect produced by the Holy Spirit to Satanic agency. A person must be most unspeakably wicked to take such an awfully blasphemous position.

Persons may ignorantly, and without malice, or evil motives, speak even against the work of the Spirit, and not be guilty of this sin. People in attempting to distinguish the developments of fanaticism from the genuine work of the Spirit, may misclass the operations of the one with the other, for the time being, without incurring this guilt, provided the intentions of the mind be right.

But there are other scriptures, of a somewhat different form, which also refer to unpardonable sin. "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come if they fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." Heb. 6: 4—6.

Let us take particular notice of two expressions here made use of, in the sixth verse.

1. "If they fall away." The words "fall away," here, do not refer to common backsliding into sin. It is an expression from the original which means utter apostasy. It embraces the idea of total moral and spiritual ruin—the complete overthrow of every principle of faith, hope, and christian character. So the critical ones will tell us. But few persons are to be found who have gone to such lengths.

2. "To renew them again unto repentance," he tells us, is "impossible." "Repentance," means simply, reformation. "Impossible to renew them again unto" reformation. So, if a person will reform, he is not one of these fallen away ones; for they cannot be reformed. They have no desire for reformation; no desire for holiness; no disposition to repent. The heart becomes perfectly hard, and set against God, and all holy things.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

Full Assurance.

BY R. C.

There are three important things spoken of in Scripture, namely:

1. The "Full assurance of Faith." Heb. 10: 22.

2. "Full assurance of Hope." Heb. 6: 11.

3. "Full assurance of Understanding." Col. 2: 2.

The "full assurance of faith," rests on the testimony of God. God tells me—"The blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin," and I rest upon that testimony. I believe and am safe; "complete in Christ," "perfected forever," "having no more conscience of sin." This gives boldness to enter into the holiest, having a merciful and faithful High Priest, ever who liveth to make intercession for us."

Blessed thought! that in my most thot'-less moments, when grieving the Spirit, and ready to fall under the power of Satan, there is one, mighty to save, who loves me, and will love me to the end.—This is the strong consolation of the saints,—that Jesus has not only shed his blood on the cross, and cleansed the believer the instant he casts himself upon that all-sufficient sacrifice, but by His never-failing priesthood He is able to put away the guilt of every sin, infirmity, and ignorance, that we may never lose our happy place in the presence of God.

> "That we are seen, O God, by Thee,
> This is our happy thought;
> Presented faultless to thine eye,
> And all our sins forgot." Eph. 1: 4—12.

Thus, the assurance of faith brings peace to the trembling heart, under the deepest sorrow for conscious failure in the narrow pathway of discipleship. All is done for us; we have only to believe, and obey the teachings of the Spirit, "whereby we are sealed unto the day of redemption."

There is more than this in "the full assurance of hope." Hope has its foundation in faith—"the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things unseen;" but it leads the soul on to confide in one who has made a promise, and a promise implies something yet future; while faith in the blood of Christ rejoices in a present possession, the source of every good that follows. Read Heb 6: 11, to the end. Hence, there is leaning upon God, a different thing from merely believing a testimony; moreover, it penetrates even "within the veil." Heb. 3: 6. It is based upon what is perfectly immutable, not upon any thing of earthly production, and which might be liable to change. Never can this blessed hope fail entering into that within the veil,—God's throne must be shaken, before my hope. Faith and hope are thus sweetly blended while the soul believes and leans on the promises of its portion in Christ.

Faith rests on a testimony which has come out, but it carries me up and Hope reckons on Him "who is there, my surety" the forerunner who has entered for us.

The "full assurance of understanding" goes a step farther. Not only have I an object on which my heart and conscience rest in peace and liberty, but it takes up God's counsels, "to the acknowledgement of the mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ, in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. Col. 2. It enters into the mind of God, who has placed the dispensation of the gospel in blessed contrast with the severity of the law.

Rejoice, O my soul, that the "law of commandments contained in ordinances," is forever abolished. It is no longer "do, and live," but live and do. "The spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made us free from the law of sin and death;" and having received the spirit of adoption, I look for the "manifestation of the Son of God." The full assurance of understanding gathers up the various promises contained in the new covenant, together with the hope of Israel's future glory, when the Deliverer out of Zion shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob and graft them in again to the kingdom of their Messiah and king. It beholds the harmony of the unbroken testimony of Scripture, and rejoices in hope of the glory to come.

We are exhorted to be diligent and not slothful. Does our present diligence increase our faith, hope, and understanding? We have need to examine ourselves at every step, for the Devil is disputing every inch of ground with us, and it will be well if we can stand firm against his wiles.—He cannot touch the new nature; hence, temptations are really siftings, refinings, in which the slothful suffer loss, but the valiant soldier tries his armor, and learns to use it for further conflicts.

Dear brethren and sisters, in this blessed gospel, let us be strong in the Lord and the power of His might. Let patience have her perfect work. Amen.

Boston, Mass., Oct. '56.

For the Crisis.

The Dignity of Prayer.

What sight under heaven on which men or angels can gaze, is more illustrative of true dignity than an intelligent being made in the image of God, on his knees before the Almighty; with streaming eyes and breaking heart, confessing his sins and making supplication for His favor. R. B.

For the Crisis.

Incidents by the Way.

No. VI.

BY S. S. BREWER.

It has been but a few short months since those three great systematic murderers,—Nicholas of Russia—the pope of the Greek religion; the sultan, Abduhl Medjid Khan,—pope of the Mohammedan religion; and Napoleon, the pope, for the time being, of the Roman Catholic religion, sounded a parley, hung out a truce, and then patched up a delusive peace: Peace banquets were given. The bells in the churches throughout the various parts of Russia, France, England, and other places chimed a merry peal. Peace festivals were planned and consummated. Heroes were toasted, feasted, and wine-guzzled. Men whose hands were reeking with the blood of victims they never heard of or saw before they met in deadly combat, were honored with titles, dignities, and wealth. The foreign illustrated periodicals were teeming with grandiloquent descriptions of the various scenes that transpired, both in pictorial and poetic departments.

But what a change has taken place in a few short months. All their joy is departed; and now the tocsin sounds, to arms! The mighty men are waking up! The demon of war begins to shake himself. The few months of slaughter at the Crimea, set a keen edge upon his thirst for blood; his eyes begin to glare in demoniac fury; he pants for the hour, that he may steep his coronal in the blood of fresh victims; that he may riot amid the booming of the cannon, the rattling of the musketry, the shrieks of the wounded, and groans of the dying, and revel in the midst of ghastly corpses and shattered fragments of human beings festering in their gore; while widows and orphans in heart-rending anguish burden the heavens with wailings of lamentation and woe.

But I will stop and let some of the journalists speak:

"THE PEACE IN EUROPE LIKELY TO BE SHORT.—The Liverpool Journal of Oct. 4 says in its 'History of the Week'—The late war does not appear to have given very general satisfaction; it was too brief for England, too long for France, too humiliating for Russia, and too revolutionary for Turkey. We would have liked another tussle, and would not be greatly displeased to have another turn with the Muscovite: the Muscovite himself is eager to tell the world that he is still full of fight, and refuses to abate one jot of his pretensions to assist in regulating the affairs of Europe. The Porte denies that the allies did him any real service, and laments that the intercourse with the infidel disturbed the guarantee given by Heaven in favor of the perpetuity of the true believer. The reforms are delusions, and the pretensions of the Principalities to union and independence an outrage on the hereditary rights of the Sultan. The 'man of destiny,' in the shadow of the Pyrnees, revolves in his mind, like one of Homer's heroes, what may be considered the decrees of fate, but chooses not to be explicit as to his views or intentions. In this state of things it is apprehended that the peace of Europe cannot be permanent. The circumstances all around give notes of discontent. Italy is ripe for revolt, and stands on tiptoe endeavoring to see what France and England is going to do. Will they do anything?"

Hear an American editor speak, as he looks out upon the troubled bosom of the mighty ocean of the old world, whose great deep begins to heave with unwonted throes of approaching wrath and retribution:

EUROPE—ITS CONDITION.—"Every fresh mail from Europe brings us new evidence of its unsettled condition. To use a worn out metaphor, the whole Continent seems to slumber on a volcano. Here and there from the old revolutionary craters smoke is issuing, and there are all the signs of an approaching fearful eruption. Men are anxiously endeavoring to read 'the signs of the times,' to predict the time, the circumstances and the character of the new upheaval. Never before was the mind of Europe so active as it is at the present time. Though despotism resorts to every means of repression, thought cannot be stifled. Men think, speak, and write, in defiance of all terrors and restraints, and the voices of the oppressed nationalities are heard through all Europe. As the patience of the tyrant-ridden wearies, the tyrants increase their vigilance and their severity, and the compression foolishly intended as a measure of safety makes an explosion inevitable.

In Naples, human endurance has well nigh reached its limits. Throughout Italy the cry against Austrian treachery and cruelty is loud and fierce. Austria and Sardinia are only restrained from war by the exertions of France and England. The oppressed petty States of Germany are restless and longing for an escape from their servitude. Even in Prussia there is much discontent. In France a secret revolutionary society has spread its ramifications through Paris and the Provinces, and the peace of that country rests on the slender thread of the Emperor's life—which any day may break. France aroused, all Europe will be up.

We need scarcely notice Spain. She is in a state of chronic revolution, and her troubles, so long as they do not rise to a height to invite foreign intervention, but slightly affect the destinies of other countries. England looks upon the troubled, threatening aspect of the political atmosphere, and perceives, while she dreads, the coming convulsion and storm. Three years ago her rulers deluded the people with the pretence that they were going to war to preserve and assert the liberties of Europe. The war is over, a peace is signed, but the liberties of Europe have not been asserted or guarantied. Despotism is more cruel and relentles than ever; and while England feasts her returned Crimean heroes, she hears the protests of the European people against a peace which has fastened their chains more tightly on their limbs.

A gloomy, portentous stillness pervades Europe at this moment, but no one can tell how soon it can be broken and the roar of war be heard through all its borders. Not only the press but the most acute-minded public men in England believe that mighty events are near at hand.

In a recent speech at Sheffield, Mr. Roebuck expressed by an Americanism his opinion of the present state of things in Europe. With the Yankee descending the river very smoothly and rapidly, because above a cataract, he would say, 'I don't like this almighty stillness.' 'We are,' said Mr. Roebuck, 'far too quiet, and must be on the very precipice of great changes both at home and abroad.' He could not believe that the people could long (with their civilization and education) be subject to the despotism now overshadowing them. He believed and hoped that they would rise up against the despotism that now weighs them down. And he warned the people of England to be prepared for the rising of the great nationalities of Europe. They could not keep without its influence, and they should be prepared and resolved to do their duty when it comes."
—New York Sun.

For the Crisis.

God is Our Helper.

No matter how dark and gloomy the pospect before us may appear, or how thickly difficulties and dangers may be spread around us; for God is our Helper. No darkness is too dark for Him. No gloom is too profound for the glory of His helping grace. No difficulties or dangers can appall or hinder Him.

Take courage, trembling soul! Thy Helper knows all about thee. "Let patience have her perfect work." In due time "thy righteousness shall break forth as the light, and thy glory as the noonday." "Hope in God!" Hope ever. "Thy God is thy glory." He counts the very hairs of thy head! He bottles up thy prayers! He writes all thy tears and groans in the book of His [illegible] He shall count thee [illegible] "He maketh them up." [illegible] R. B.

For the Crisis.

Present Character and Future Reward.

Present character—"Blessed are the poor in spirit:"

Future reward—"Theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

Present character—"Blessed are they that mourn."

Future reward—"They shall be comforted."

Present character—"Blessed are the meek."

Future reward—"They shall inherit the earth."

Present character—"Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness."

Future reward—"They shall be filled."

Present character—"Blessed are the merciful."

Future reward—"They shall obtain mercy."

Present character—"Blessed are the pure in heart."

Future reward—"They shall see God."

Present character—"Blessed are the peacemakers."

Future reward—"They shall be called the children of God."

Present character—"Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake."

Future reward—"Theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

Present character—"Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake."

Future reward—"Great is your reward in heaven." R. B.

What "I am" and what Jesus was.

"I am poor"—so was Jesus.
"I am despised"—so was Jesus.
"I am in sorrow"—so was Jesus.
"I am cast out"—so was Jesus.
"I am tempted"—so was Jesus.
"I am buffeted"—so was Jesus.
"I am weeping"—so was Jesus.
"I am in peril"—so was Jesus.
"I am left of friends"—so was Jesus.
"I am surrounded with foes"—so was Jesus.
"I am criticised"—so was Jesus.
"I am persecuted"—so was Jesus.
But you was never crucified—but so was Jesus. R. B.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

From Bro. David.

BELOVED:—I feel in duty bound, to give a few thoughts by way of mutual interchange, relative to the "blessed hope;" for I do feel thankful that of the fullness of the Son of God have we all received, and grace for grace; and that "the grace of God that bringeth salvation, hath appeared to all men, teaching us, that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

"By grace we are saved." I am sure no Wesleyan could more fully appreciate or heartily embrace this inestimable gift of God, for it has grown in me by obedience to the faith that comes by the word of God, and not after the traditions of men. Should I pay a tithe of that which, thro' the medium of the Crisis, [illegible] for my comfort, I should [illegible] more time and space than [illegible] to me. The more [illegible] of my writing at this time, [illegible] in the form of an [illegible] sister of Christ. [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] N. H. She has [illegible] from [illegible] Canaan, N. H. to Concord N. H., and when Jesus comes you may hear Him say,—"ye did it unto me."

Your Brother,

David.

From Sr. Susan Folsom.

For the Crisis.

[illegible]—I write with a trembling hand, for my age is seventy-eight. I am [illegible] widow, but my trust is in the Lord, and his promises stand sure. He will be the widow's God and friend. Oh, how I do long at times to see Him. I am a weary pilgrim here.

It is more than thirty-two years since God for Christ's sake forgave my sins. Since then I have embraced the Advent faith. We have a blessed hope, if we continue firm to the end. I want to be like a wise one that will be seeking for immortality and eternal life. I can praise the Lord for his goodness to me. Though I feel the infirmity of age, and my strength faileth, I will still trust in the Lord and He will not forsake me. I wish for one, we could again hear the whole gospel preached in Exeter.

Susan Folsom.

Exeter, Sept. 1856.

For the Crisis.

From Sr. L. J. Morrill.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—While we are waiting for the "glorious appearing of the Son of God," I feel it to be our duty to urge on to the better land all who come within the bounds of our influence. We have sufficient reason to render thanks to our Heavenly Father for granting us his fallen children, an understanding of His unerring Word, to guide us on our lonely and homeward way. With its rays so brightly beaming on our pathway, what earthly power can prevail against us? Shall persecution? O, no! and why? Because, at the commencement of our christian experience, we saw in our path those obstacles which ever have, and ever will surround the journeying pilgrim; and "if God should be for us, who can be against us?" May the Lord continue to help us, and, having proved faithful, give us a crown of unfading glory. Truly, these are "perilous times;" and it becomes us to gird on the whole armor of God, that, at the voice of the archangel, we may be prepared to meet our Lord with joy and not with fear.

Lucinda J. Morrill.

Danville, C. E., Oct.

For the Crisis.

From Bro. P. Coon.

Bro. Grant:—For a long time, I have felt it my duty to write a few lines for the Crisis, that by divine assistance I might encourage and strengthen those of like precious faith, who have been looking for that "same Jesus who said, "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again."

Dear friends, although we have had disappointments and trials severe, let us not be discouraged, let us hold on by faith, we shall see the end of our faith if we faint not; remember it is only those that run to the end of the race that get the prize. Let us not expect to get into the kingdom on "flowery beds of ease;" remember, it will be through much tribulation that we shall enter there, through much suffering that we are made perfect. Although friends may forsake us and our numbers are few, remember, it is the "little flock" that have the promise of the kidgdom, it is the many that go down to destruction; let us search the Scriptures, seek for truth as for hidden treasure, see that we have on the whole armor, and our loins girt about with truth.

It was land that was promised to Abraham's seed, although it is at present full of briers, thorns and thistles, much marred and [illegible] up by wicked men and devils; a "little while" and the Lord will come and remove the curse, he will bring again the captivity of Israel, and "they shall plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them," "He will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up."

Yours truly, expecting deliverance when Christ comes.

Peter Coon.

Williamstown, Mass.

For the Crisis.

From S. L. Clark.

[illegible]—I am thankful for the [illegible] reading the Crisis. It is a [illegible] to hear from those of like [illegible] [illegible] it often seems [illegible]

[illegible] a time of trial with me this year. [illegible] excluded from the [illegible] church for no other reason than this: I have embraced the second Advent doctrine.

Brn. and Srs., I rejoice in the christian's hope. O glorious hope, which hope will be consummated at the appearing of our blessed Savior. Let us rejoice that God has power to raise the dead which sleep in him, and give them a glorious body like unto himself. For this belief I am excluded, after having been a member thirty-seven years. It is rather grievous to see such feelings manifested in those who profess to be lovers of truth. Notwithstanding my trials and grief, my faith is strong in the Lord—my trust is in him who is able to keep me in the straight and narrow path that leads to eternal life.

The Bible truths never were so plain as now.

It appears to me that the cup of iniquity is fast filling up; my prayer is, "Lord keep thy children and prepare them so that if they have to pass through the furnace of affliction here, it may purify them for the glorious kingdom. O let us lift up our heads and rejoice, knowing that our redemption draweth nigh.

May the good Lord send some one of the ministering servants this way that he may break to us the bread of life.

Yours in christian bonds, believing we are living in the last days.

B. L. Clark.

Maquoketa, Iowa, Oct.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, NOVEMBER 12, 1856.

Questions.

FURTHER ANSWERS TO THE QUESTIONS OF OUR SISTER IN CHRIST.

NUMBER XVI.

"Did the human spirit of Jesus return to God, when he said,—"Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit; and having said thus he gave up the Ghost?" Luke 23: 46.

Ans. Omitting the word human in the question, we answer in the affirmative.

The parallel passages read,—"He bowed his head, and gave up the Ghost." John 19: 30.

"And Jesus cried with a loud voice and gave up the Ghost." Mark. 15: 37.

"Jesus when he had cried with a loud voice, yielded up the Ghost." Mark 27: 50.

The phrase—"he gave up the Ghost," when literally translated is rendered—"he expired." It is thus rendered by Wakefield and others. The new translation by the American Bible Union gives the same translation.

The Syriac version of Mk. 16: 30 reads,—"And Jesus cried with a loud voice, and expired;" or as the prophet Isaiah says, (chap. 53: 12) "he hath poured out his soul unto death."

We find this to be the uniform teaching of the Bible, hence we conclude that when Jesus died, his spirit returned to God, and Jesus himself was laid in Joseph's new tomb to await a resurrection on the third day after his death.

NUMBER XVII.

Ques. Did not Stephen's spirit return to God who gave it, when he committed it to Jesus, and "fell asleep?" Acts 7: 60.

Ans. Certainly, and observe that Stephen "fell asleep." Stephen cannot be awake and asleep at the same time, consequently, the spirit that returned to God, could not have been Stephen, if so, he was with God before he was in this world, and when he *re*turned, he "fell asleep;" then he cannot be in an active, conscious state.

We read that "David after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption." Acts 13: 36.

We read again in Acts 2: 34,—"David is not ascended into the heavens."

Where is he then? Peter answers,—"Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried," or in other words asleep in the grave like Stephen, there to remain till the last trump shall sound.

Hear David when he was alive, before he fell asleep in death. "I shall be satisfied when I' die? No. "When I awake in thy likeness." Ps. 17: 15.

Says the Savior,—"Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth." John 5: 28.

This scripture proves they will not hear his voice until they come out of the grave. We believe in harmony [illegible] that "the dead know not anything."

NUMBER XVIII.

"One Lord, one faith, one baptism."—Eph. 4: 5.

Ques. "Is this one baptism a threefold ordinance?"

Ans. We cannot conceive how one can be three!

NUMBER XIX.

Ques. "Did the prophet foretell the baptism of the Holy Ghost, when he said—"then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean?" Ezk. 36: 25—27; and were the disciples so baptized on the day of Pentecost?" Acts 1. 5 and 2: 4.

Ans. Certainly not, for clean water is not the Holy Ghost; neither were they sprinkled with clean water on the day of Pentecost to fulfill the Savior's promise in Acts 1: 5. The passage reads,—"For John truly baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence."

Nothing can be plainer than that water baptism is not the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

In Ezk. 36: 25, there is no reference to baptism whatever, neither is sprinkling called baptism anywhere in the Bible.

Westboro.

I would say to the brethren that we have lately fitted a room for worship in the Parkman Building, rear of Union Block, in Westboro, Mass.

Bro. D. E. Moulton appoints to be with us on the 4th Sabbath of this month, that being the 23d: also Bro. James Smith appoints to be with us on the first and second sabbaths in December.

Yours in the Lord,

Isaac Davis.

Our Thanks, to those who have sent us the back numbers of the Crisis.

For the Crisis.

God careth for Us.

BY A. C. J.

"Casting all your care upon him, for he careth for you." 1 Pet. 5: 7.

Upon whom are we to cast our care?—The preceding verse tells us, "Humble yourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time. Casting all your care upon Him," etc. And does the great God, the mighty one who "inhabiteth eternity," care for us, poor, frail, erring mortals? So saith the word. How sweet the assurance!

Is there necessity, then, for any christian to fear about a burden of care and solicitude? to be perplexed, anxious, troubled, and restless? Surely not. If there is faith enough to grasp the assurance, the burden is all cast upon the Lord, and under all circumstances there is sweet peace such as the world can neither give nor take away.

The condition of a truly consecrated soul is just this, "Lord I am not my own, but thine, entirely thine. What wilt thou have me to do? Speak, for thy servant heareth. What will best glorify thee in this thing! Will it please thee that I should be poor? Amen. Sick? Thy will be done. Persecuted, and my name cast out as evil? It is all right. So persecuted they the prophets, and even Christ Jesus my Lord. Only direct my steps in all things, from day to day, from hour to hour; yea, momentarily, and I am content." And now if God our Father is leading, guiding and directing our way continually, what need have we for carefulness?" It is simply, dear brother and sister, a want of faith that causes this restless apprehension, worrying state of mind.

O! let us strive to get the victory over it. Let us believe that God careth for us, and that all things will "work together for our good." Glory be to His name! how rich we are! God's mighty arm to lean upon, and all things working together for our good.

Servant of Christ! Who art preaching the everlasting gospel to a dying world,—art thou tried, tempted, and afflicted in many ways? Sometimes almost deciding that the proclamation of the gospel must be laid aside, and your attention wholly given to secular things, for the maintenance of your family? Remember, your Father careth for you. O, cast your care and solicitude all upon Him, and you will find peace.

Sister in Christ! lone, widowed one, toiling to gain a subsistence for those little ones that are looking to you for support,—does the way seem hard? and do you sigh, and feel burdened with solicitude relative to the morrow? Believe the sweet assurance our Father has given, that he "careth for you." Commit your way to Him, and he will assuredly bless you, filling your soul with peace like a river. The Lord increase our faith that we may realize the blessedness of trusting this precious word he has given us for our consolation, and thereby glorify him.

Victor, Oct. 12, '56.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

From Bro. G L Teeple.

Bro. Grant:—I still sigh for Jesus to come, and I groan the more earnestly because the enemy is again and again taking our loved ones from our embrace, laying them in the grave. He has visited our dwelling and taken our loved one, but I thank the good Lord that the time hastens on when Jesus will come in his glory, and there he will conquer the king of terrors, and release our loved ones and bring them from the land of the enemy unto their own borders; then they will suffer no more, but will be like unto the angels of God. O, joyful day! hasten thy return!

I cannot see how any one that loves Jesus, and longs to have him come, can feel any opposition to the preaching on that subject. I love the coming of Jesus, and the nearer the event the better. Brn. and Srs., live for God; love the appearing of Jesus, and I will strive to meet you in the kingdom of God, which I believe will soon be set up.

Then come, Lord Jesus, quickly come.
And take thy children home;
They sigh, they groan, their Lord to see—
Then come, O come and set them free.

Amen. Even so come Lord Jesus.

Yours in Christ,

George L. Teeple.

Vermillionville, Ill., Oct. 23, '56.

For the Crisis.

From Br. R. E. Ladd.

Bro Grant:—Perhaps a few words from me relative things in this place will be of service to the friends of Jesus. You are aware that for many years there has not been perfect harmony existing among those who professed to be looking for the coming One; and at intervals this disagreement would break out, causing wranglings, divisions, and heart-burnings, that effectually hindered the work of the Holy Spirit, and rendered our blessed hope ineffectual for good.

After the time movement of 1854—55, this breach was widened so much, that many feared it never would be healed; that the "Faith of the church" in this city would become extinct, its members scattered and torn by dissenting views and opinions, would be obliged to give up holding meetings entirely. This state of things continued until the campmeeting at Wilbraham, from which a spirit went out that is manifestly for good. It was not my lot to be at that meeting, but my heart and sympathies were there and I earnestly prayed that something might be done to unite the waiting ones in an indissoluble band, that should show forth to the praise of the Lord the "Faith once delivered to the saints."

Prayer and faith by the grace of God have accomplished the work. The difficulties are all settled—the breach is healed—brethren of different views meet harmoniously together, and solemnly promise each other and the Lord that we will walk together in unity of spirit and in the bonds of love and peace. The result is, the Lord smiles upon us, and gives us such refreshings as we have not experienced before for years. There are no cold shoulders and wry faces now among us, but all is peace, joy, and good will,

Our meetings are increasing in interest, new hearers are coming in, and we are confidently expecting the out-pouring of the spirit copiously. We hope to be able to publish to the church that souls are flocking to the fold of Christ, and that the body is growing mightily in the things of the spirit.

We are endeavoring to pursue gospel order in the church in the appointment of the officers requisite to perform the duties of his House. We are not afraid of becoming sectarian so long as we cleave fast to the word and spirit of the gospel.

If our ministering brethren desire to visit us, and add to our consolation by opening to us the scriptures and building us up in the most holy faith, they will be met with a cordial reception and helped on their way "after a godly sort." But none will be welcomed whose mission is to produce strife and contention.

It is desirable that any Bro. wishing to visit Springfield, should address the writer by mail, so that there may be no collision of appointments.

And now, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may be glorified among us, and that the bride of the Lord may make herself ready for His coming kingdom, now so near at hand.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

Randolph E. Ladd.

Springfield, Oct. 27.

Letter from sister Abagail Mussey.

Bro. Grant: With a sad heart I now seat myself to inform my dear brethren and sisters of the cause of my sorrow. O, ye who weep, I know you will drop a silent tear while I relate my sad tale.

My dear husband, the companion of my youth and my support in life, is no more. O yes, it is even so; my companion, and your brother, Levi Mussey, is dead. He died Oct 18th, aged forty-seven years.

Painful indeed has been the scene I have passed through, and it came in an unexpected hour. His sickness was short, only four weeks, and not thought to be dangerous until the last week; and when I saw that my dear husband must leave me to face the storms of life alone, and be housed away in the cold and silent tomb, it seemed as though my heart would break: but God has supported thus far, and I trust he will be with me to the end. His promise is sure—"Lo, I am with you alway, even to the end of the world;" and he will be the widow's God, and a father to the fatherless. Precious promises! how they comfort me in this trying hour.

My husband's sickness ended in hemorrhage of the bowels, caused by too hard labor through the hot season.

Funeral sermon preached by Bro. Preble. Text Ezk. xxxvii. 12:

"Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel."

My sad heart was truly comforted with the Bible doctrine of the resurrection of life from the dead. Yes, all them that sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. Precious promise! And will God indeed bring his people up out of the graves, and give them immortality, to die no more? Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, his promise is sure—,"the earth shall cast out her dead!" O, then I shall meet my dear husband again; for I believe he sleeps in Jesus, and will arise in the morning of the resurrection, in the likeness of his Lord.

Twenty-five years we have lived together in peace, and shared each other's joys and sorrows. We were converted and baptized together. Eighteen years we have tried to serve God. Oft have we been to the house of God in company, through cold and heat, snow and rain, summer and winter, and at the prayer meeting we have loved to fill our place. I am left lonely in very deed. I go to the house of God alone. I look for my husband, but he is not there; his place is vacant. O, how I miss him, and while the silent tear courses down my cheek, I think "The better land no sorrow knows,

There hushed is every sigh;
The Savior's hand in kindness wipes,
The tear-drop from each eye."

For years we have bowed together around the family altar, and offered up our humble prayers to God that we might be kept from the evils of this last day and generation. He has been a believer in the near coming of the Lord ever since it has been preached, and has looked with bright anticipation to different points of time, when he believed Jesus would come to deliver his people; and although disappointed in his expectation, yet his course has been still onward, believing the promise sure,—"I will come again and receive you to myself, that where I am, there ye may be also."

But he rests. His voice I no more hear. The sound of prayer from his lips is hushed. I miss him at my fireside. I miss him at my table. I miss him when I go out and when I come in. And were it not for the hope of the gospel to buoy up my spirits, I must sink. But the arm of the Lord is thrown around me to support, and thus far I can say with the Psalmist, "Hitherto the Lord hath helped me."

Brethren and sisters, I need your prayers, and I trust I shall have them.

We have taken great comfort together in reading the Crisis, for he has always loved the paper, and many hours has he spent in the evening reading it to me, while I sat by his side at my work. But his charity extended beyond the Crisis, for he believed there were good brethren in the world who did not believe just as he did; and many times in the last two years has he remarked that some of us as Adventists were too uncharitable. All that had the spirit of Christ, he owned as his brethren.

The sound of the gospel was music to his ears, let it come from whence it would. The last sermon he heard was from Bro. Bishop, at Concord.

He has offered his last prayer, and his accounts are sealed up to the judgment of the great day; and my fervent prayer to God is, that I may so live, that I may meet him in the better land where parting will come no more, where death will never divide us, where friends will meet again who have loved.

Your sister in affliction,

Abagail Mussey.

Fisherville, N. H., Nov. 2, 1856.

[Will the Advent Herald please copy?]

Choice Selections.

Object of Salt in the Sea.

"Professor Chapman of University College, Toronto, has published an interesting paper on the object of sea water being salt, and after giving his objections to the usually received opinions, he urges the theory that the object is to regulate evaporation. If any temporary cause renders the amount of saline matter in the sea above its normal value, evaporation goes on more and more slowly. If this value be depreciated by the addition of fresh water in undue excess, the evaporating power is the more and more increased.

He gives the results of various experiments in reference to evaporation on weighed quantities of ordinary rain water, and water holding in solution 2.6 per cent. of salt. The excess of loss of the rain water compared with the salt solution, was, for the first twenty-four hours, 0.54 per cent.; at the close of forty-eight hours, 1.46 per cent.; after seventy-two hours, 2.46 per cent, and so on in an increasing ratio."

Why there is no rain in Peru.

"In Peru, South America, rain is unknown. The coast of Peru is within the region of perpetual south-east tradewinds, Though the Peruvian shores are on the verge of the Great South Sea Boiler, yet it never rains there. The reason is plain. The south-east trade winds of the Atlantic ocean first strike the water on the coast of Africa. Traveling to the north-west, they obliquely cross the ocean until they reach the coast of Brazil. By this time they are heavily laden with vapor, which they continue to bear along across the continent, depositing it as they go, and supplying with it the courses of the Rio de la Platte and the southern tributaries of the Amazon. Finally, they reach the snow-capped Andes, and here is wrung from them the last particle of moisture that very low temperature can extract. Reaching the summit of that range, they now tumble down as cool, dry winds on the Pacific slopes beyond. Meeting with no evaporation surface, and with no temperature colder than that which they were subjected to on the mountain tops, they reach the ocean before they become charged with fresh vapor, and before, therefore, they have any which the Peruvian climate can extract.

Thus we see how the top of the Andes becomes the reservoir from which are supplied the rivers of Chili and Peru."—Lieut. Maury's Geography of the Sea.

A Fast One.—'See that young man coming with a cigar in his mouth, swaggering and amplifying! That is a rich man's son. He feels large. Father, with him, is the 'old man;' and mother is 'the old woman.' He calculates to do as he pleases. He will dress as he likes, ride when he wishes to, and spend his money to suit himself. If father or mother gives advice—'O, the old folks are childish.'

Wide awake! care for nobody! He knows all about the gambling rooms, and something about the tap-rooms too, in all parts of the city. What is religion, or virtue, or God, or eternity to him? He has got but one life to live, and he means to take it as it comes, and have all the pleasure he can obtain, as he goes along. But the time rolls on, and there comes a change. Go look at that young man now. His face is pale and haggard, his flesh is wasted away by disease, his whole frame is weak and trembling, his countenance is dejected and gloomy, his nights are passed in [illegible] days are spent in sighing, his life is a perfect illustration of lingering misery, until, finally, he tumbles into the grave, wretchedly exclaiming, 'How I have hated instruction, and my heart despised reproof; and have not obeyed the voice of my teachers, nor inclined mine ear to them that instructed me!'"—Newburyport Herald.

R. R.

Seven Fools.

"The angry man—who sets his own house on fire that he may burn his neighbor's.

The envious man—who cannot enjoy life because others do.

The robber—who, for the consideration of a few dollars, gives the world liberty to hang him.

The hypochondriac—whose highest happiness consists in rendering himself miserable.

The jealous banqueter—who poisons his own banquet and then eats of it.

The miser—who starves himself to death in order that his heir may feast.

The sl nderer tells tales for the sake of giving his enemies an opportunity of proving him a liar."

SHOULD PARENTS SCOLD?—Some folks are continually scolding their children.—There is no sense in it, however, and we incline to the opinion that it is a wretched practice. It sours the temper of the children: so that one thorough scolding prepares the way for two or three more,

It sours your temper, provided it is sweet, which is a question if you are prone to scold; and thus the more you scold, the more you will have to scold, and because you have become crosser, your children are likewise.

Scolding alienates the hearts of your children. Depend upon it, they cannot love you as well after you have berated them, as they did before. You may approach them with firmness and decision, you may punish with severity adequate to the nature of their offence, and they will feel the justice of your conduct, and love you notwithstanding all.

But they hate scolding. It stirs up the bad blood, while it discloses your weakness, and lowers you in their esteem. Especially at night, when they are about to retire, their hearts should be melted and moulded with voices of kindness, that they may go to their slumbers with thoughts of love stealing around their souls, and whispering peace.

PICTURES OF HAPPINESS.—Look at that beautiful, little, neat, white cottage, so delightfully situated in the midst of those flourishing trees, and surrounded with every mark of a modest taste.

That cottage is the abode of happiness. Look inside. How simple the furniture, and how neat the arrangement! But who are the people that live here? The husband, and father, the wife and mother are christians. Not merely so in name, but so in deed and truth. They are now perfectly contented with their lot. Temporarily they ask no more. The man goes forth to his labor with joy in the morning, and returns at evening, with a glad and thankful heart, to be sweetly greeted by the welcoming smile of a happy companion. The wife, all day long, fills that cottage with sunshine and cheerfulness, and never wants for some interesting matter to fill up the passing hour. How happy are those little ones, gamboling on the green sward, sporting in the shade of the spreading trees, or prattling with their loving mother.

Years pass on. That cottage shows marks of age. The trees still grow there, and the flowers still bloom around. Look within. There sits the aged patriarch, in the great arm-chair, purchased for him by one of his affectionate children, and his infirm but still happy wife is seated by his side. The children, which have all been married off, have now come home to see father and mother. How smiling that old couple look! How blithe and cheerful are those children! A book is brought and laid on the stand. It is "the old family Bible." The father reads—they all bow down before God, and thank Him for all His goodness and favor. Earth has no higher happiness than this. R. R.

—Newburyport Herald.

WORDS.—Words are little things, but they strike hard. We wield them so easily, that we are apt to forget their hidden power. Fitly spoken, they fall like the sunshine, the dew, and fertilizing rain—but when unfitly, like the frost, the hail, and the desolating tempest.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

TO THE DESPONDING.

BY MARIA.

Thy burden's heavy? think again
Of Calvary, e'er thou complain,
Where Jesus died, upon the tree,
A writhing sacrifice for thee.

Thy friends forsake?—ah Jesus knew
How "human nature" proves untrue;—
When Death stood with uplifted spear
He looked for "friends," but none were near.

No morn appears?—go read again,
"The Savior comes, He comes to reign;
Nor tarries He, but, soon He'll come
To take His ransomed people home."

Danville, C. E., Oct.

Obituary.

Fell asleep, Oct. 20, 1855, Velma J. daughter of George L. and Mariette B. Teeple, aged three months and 24 days. She was a little sufferer, and for the last two days could not swallow at all. She died with the thrush, or canker sore mouth. Her sufferings are over, and while we mourn, we do so in hope that soon Jesus will come, and then we shall clasp the little immortal hand, if we are faithful, to part no more forever. Yes, our hope tells us we shall see those same little blue eyes sparkling with immortal beauty never to fade.

She sleeps—our babe we loved so well; but thank God, we shall soon see her again.

Then take thy rest, sweet darling one,
From sin and sorrow free;
The King of glory soon will come,—
Then he will call for thee.

G. L. TEEPLE.

Vermillionville, Ill,

Varieties.

Traits of character which you seek to conceal, you had better seek to reform.

An hypocrite with his mouth destroyeth his neighbor but through knowledge shall the just be delivered.

Scolding never did any body any good. It hurts the child; it hurts the parents; it is evil, and only evil, every where and always.

Though it is not in your power to be a naturalist, a poet, or an orator, or a mathematician, it is in your power to be a true man, which is the best of all.

We ridicule others for their fears and failures, and fail like them in like situations; for many a path that looks smooth at a distance, is found to be rough when we have to travel it.

DEATH BED SUPERSTITIONS.—When a child is dying, people in some parts of Holland are accustomed to shade it by the curtains from the parents' gaze; the soul being supposed to linger in the body as long as a compassionate eye is fixed upon it. Thus, in Germany, he who sheds tears when leaning over the patient's couch, does but wipe them off, enhances, they say, the difficulty of death's last struggle.

PURE AIR.—In about two and a half minutes, all the blood contained in the human system, amounting to nearly three gallons, traverse the respiratory surface. Every one, then, who breathes an impure atmosphere two and a half minutes, has every particle of his blood acted upon by the vitiated air. Every particle has become less vital, less capable of preparing strictures, or of carrying on functions, and the longer such air is respired, the more impure does it become, and the blood necessarily becomes more corrupt.

BOOKS.—In former times, a kind of reed was used to be written upon. That was called a "papyrus." It is from this name that we speak of our "paper." In former times, also, they wrote upon the leaves of trees; it is from this cause that we talk of the "leaves" of a book.

The Romans called a book "liber."—This word made us call a room where books are kept a "library."

In those old times when skins were written upon, they were rolled up. This roll was called "volume." This old word has been kept by us as near as may be. We call a single book a "volume."

The inner bark of trees was used for writing upon. The people who lived in England many hundred years ago, used to write upon the bark of the beech tree; they called this bark "boc." We have not changed the name much; we still talk of a "book."

FOR THE HICCUPS.—Travelling some time since by railroad from Columbus to Baltimore, I took my seat immediately in front of a gentleman who was suffering under a paroxysm of hiccups, to a degree that I had never before witnessed. In a few minutes a person appeared from the end of the car and took a seat beside him when he said:

"Sir, can you tell me what is good for the hiccups? I have been afflicted in this way you see me since yesterday noon, and had no rest or relief from any physician to whom I applied for assistance; I am worn out with suffering."

[illegible] will cure you in less than two minutes by the watch. Have confidence, for I am sure I can do it. Hold up high above your head two fingers of your hand; lean back in your seat, open your mouth and throat so as to give a free passage to your lungs; breathe very long and softly, and look very steadily at your fingers."

In less than the time specified the cure was performed, one hiccup only occurring during the trial.

The patient could not express his gratitude, while the practitioner only extracted from as a fee the promise that he would extend the knowledge which he had imparted as freely as he had received it, assuring him that he would never be disappointed in the result.

We were all struck with the fact. Since then I have often had occasion to practice upon patients in the same disorder, and never without the most signal success.—Water Cure Journal.

THE BIBLE.—The following is an account of the number of books, chapters, verses, words and letters contained in the Old and New Testament:

OLD TESTAMENT.

Number of Books,	39
" Chapters,	929
" Verses,	23,214
" Words,	592.439
" Letters,	2,728,100

The middle Book is Proverbs.
The middle Chapter is Job 29.
The middle Verse would be II Chronicles, 20: 17, if there were a verse more, and verse 18 if there were a verse less.
The word "and" occurs 35,543 times.
The word "Jehovah" occurs 6,855 times.
The shortest verse is I Chron. 1: 25.
The 21st verse of the 7th chapter of Ezra contains all the letters of the alphabet.
The 19th of the II Kings, and the 37th chapter of Isaiah are alike.

NEW TESTAMENT.

Number of Books,	27
" Chapters,	260
" Verses,	7,959
" Words,	181,259
" Letters,	338,580

The middle Book is II Thessalonians.
The middle Chapter is Romans 13, if there were a chapter less; and 16, if there were a chapter more.
The middle Verse is Acts 17: 17.
The shortest Verse is John 11; 35.

OLD AND NEW TESTAMENT.

Number of Books,	66
" Chapters,	1,189
" Verses,	31,173
" Words,	773,697
" Letters,	3,566,680

The middle Chapter and least in the Bible, is Psalms 117.
The middle verse is Psalms 118: 3.
The calculator is said to have occupied three years of his life in forming this table.

Domestic Summary.

HURRICANE.—New York, Nov. 4.—A letter from Mexico, of Oct. 19, says the town of La Paz, Lower California, was almost totally destroyed by a hurricane on the 16th inst. All the vessels lying in the port at the time were driven ashore and wrecked. Few lives were lost. The wind was accompanied by heavy rain and lasted 30 hours, blowing during that time from all points of the compass. The houses spared by the wind were swept away by the tide.

FIGHTING IN MEXICO.—According to the New Orleans Picayune, Vidaurri is pushing forward his rebellious designs in Northern Mexico with good prospect of success. He took possession of Mier without resistance, and with it secured much needed "sinews of war." At last accounts he was engaged in an attempt to capture Camargo, and would probably succeed.

FROM KANSAS.—St. Louis, Nov. 1.—A letter to the Republican, dated Westport, Oct. 28, states that Gov. Geary had arrested several of the ringleaders of the maurauding parties in the vicinity of Ossawattomie. The Grand Jury had found true bills against over 90 persons for murder in the first degree. The Kansas legislature is to meet at Lecompton on the second Monday in January.

THE ELECTION RIOTS IN BALTIMORE.—We find in the Baltimore Patriot of Wednesday, the following additional particulars of the terrible election riots in that city on Tuesday last.

In several of the wards of the city the most disgraceful and desperate rioting took place yesterday. Regularly organized associations of both political parties participated in the various affrays. The principal fighting took place in that section of the city known as the East of the Falls. In the second, sixth and eighth wards all kinds of deadly weapons were used with the greatest ferocity, daring and recklessness. In each of these wards a large number of persons were severely wounded—some of them quiet spectators—and several shot dead, while it is reasonable to suppose that many of the injured cannot survive, their wounds being of the most serious nature.

In the second ward, a foreigner attempted to vote with the papers of another man, and being refused by the judges, a furious fight ensued. The Democrats and foreigners, headed by the notorious George Konig, drove the Americans from the polls and up High street. The alarm was carried to the fourth ward polls, and a strong body of Americans started from there. In the vicinity of the second ward polls they were met and driven back. Further reinforcements were then received and the war renewed. A good proportion of both parties by this time were provided with muskets, whilst others used pistols, and others skirmished with knives and clubs.

As either party gained a temporary advantage, men would be seen running, with others shooting at them; the wounded were limping off and being carried away by their companions, whilst others, begrimed with smoke and powder, and in some cases covered with blood, still kept up the fight, now firing singly, and then again in volleys. The greatest excitement and consternation prevailed throughout the neighborhood.

Dwellings were hastily closed, the occupants, in some instances, taking shelter in their garrets, while others retreated to their cellars. The [illegible] were finally overpowered, driven away from the polls, and retreated, still fighting, down Eastern Avenue.

[illegible] warfare, carried on from the alleys and street corners, continued for more than an hour.—Konig, the leader, sought to gain shelter in the public house of Mr. Lloyd, but that gentleman having promptly refused him admittance, he retreated down towards the water, and it is said made his escape across the basin.

Mr. Richard Pryor, President of the Ashland Club, was shot by a custom house officer named Harrigan.

After the shooting of Mr. Pryor, the voting went on quietly until about 3 o'clock, when an Irishman named Moran, came from the eighth ward to the sixth ward, and endeavored to vote illegally. He was rather roughly treated, and driven off. He shortly after returned with a crowd of four or five hundred, principally Irish, fifty or sixty of whom were armed with muskets. The Americans, overpowered by arms and numbers, were driven away from the polls of the sixth ward, and retreated down Orleans street, towards Canal. Here they received large reinforcements from the seventh ward, and a most desperate fight ensued. Bricks, pistols, muskets and swivels were freely used on both sides.—The eighth ward rowdies were driven back, and a running fight was kept up through Orleans street to the Bel-Air market, where, at the Empire House, the Democrats took up their position, and the contest was maintained until dark. A great number of persons were wounded on both sides, and others whose indiscreet curiosity drew them into the way of danger.

While the fight was raging hottest, Capt. Mitchell, with a posse of special officers, started for the scene, and on reaching Bel-Air market they suddenly found themselves in warm quarters; they were attacked by an overwhelming force of Democrats, and several of them wounded. High Constable Herring, accompanied by Deputy High Constable Brashers, took the route across Hillen street bridge; and on reaching Bel-Air market, seeing a crowd of men in possession of a swivel which was planted, loaded, at the head of Bel-Air market on Hillen street, Capt. Herring, assisted by Captain Brashers and Sergeant Tayman, advanced and seized it, unshipped it, and was about to carry it off when some twenty muskets were pointed at them; and notwithstanding Capt. Herring's attempting to bring the rioters to reason, they were forced to retire.

They were threatened with instant death if they attempted to remove it. Being entirely unsupported, they were compelled to retire. The muskets used by the foreigners from the eighth ward were taken from a Dutch lager beer shop on the corner of Mott and Ensor streets in broad day light, and in the presence of those living in the vicinity. The number of injured in this fearful riot it is impossible to ascertain with full correctness.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.

The Baltimore papers give a list of the killed and wounded in the election riot of Tuesday. There were four killed, fourteen fatally wounded, and sixty-nine wounded, some dangerously. Among the wounded are three women and four boys.

Foreign News.

ARRIVAL OF THE VIGO.—New York, Nov. 3.—The steamer Vigo, from Havre 19th ult., arrived here to-day. She brings three days later news from the continent of Europe.

A German paper states that the King of Naples has urged the Cabinets of St. Petersburg, Vienna and Berlin to conclude in favor of the integrity of the kingdom of the Two Sicilies, a treaty analogous to that guanteeing the Ottoman Empire.

The Paris Conference was to re-assemble on the 15th of November.

The latest advices state that the preparations for the defence of Naples are redoubled.

No modification of the ministry had taken place.

All are anxiously looking for the Allied fleets.

The French squadron was anchored in the Roads at Toulon, ready to depart.

Four Sardinian ships are also ready at Genoa.

An English steamer arrived at Ajaccio, Oct. 12, with orders to Admiral Dundas to sail on the 13th, Accordingly two steam frigates put to sea the next morning, and the remainder of the squadron sailed in the evening.

ARRIVAL OF THE CANADIAN.—Quebec Nov. 3,—The screw steamship Canadian, Capt. Ballantine, from Liverpool, Oct. 22, arrived at this port this morning.

A terrible accident occurred in London; the Rev. Mr. Spurgeon, Baptist preacher, was speaking in Concert Hall, Surrey Gardens when some thieves raised the cry of fire, causing the audience to rush towards the doors, and several persons were trampled to death.

The Neapolitan affair progresses in the channel previously indicated. Diplomatic intercourse is suspended by France and England, but no act of hostility is to be taken.

A ministerial crisis, and increasing financial difficulties exist at Constantinople.

Austrian influence is on the increase in Turkish Councils.

The sending of troops against Montenegro is discontinued.

The Ministerial crisis in Denmark has resulted in the re-installation of the old Ministry.

The French commercial crisis presents slightly a more favorable aspect, but anxiety is still manifested.

Persia solicits the mediation of France in the difficulties with Great Britain.

ARRIVAL OF THE CANADA.—Halifax, Nov. 5.—The Royal Mail steamship Canada, Capt. Lang, from Liverpool, Saturday 25th ult., 8.30 A. M., arrived at this port about 5 this afternoon.

The British fleet is somewhere in the Mediterranean. The French ships continue to be at Toulon ready for sea. Meantime despatches are contradictory. While one statement says the Ministers will not leave Naples for some months, another asserts that Baron Brenier, the French Envoy, announces to the Neapolitan government that if he did not receive satisfactory communications within two hours, he would present his last instructions, said instructions being, doubtless, to demand his passports.

FRANCE.—Numerous arrests have recently taken place in the department of the Deux Zones, where a secret society of a dangerous description has been discovered. The society was organized by tens and hundreds, all trained to obey orders for the destruction of the rich. [illegible] persons were apprehended, but the [illegible] attacked the [illegible]. New arrests have also been made in the Faubourg St. Antoine within a few days.

[illegible] his people, by [illegible] tions, the Constitution of 1848.

The Paris Constitutionnel asserts, as if from a sure source, that, in consequence of the negotiations between Austria and Rome, the Austrian troops are about to withdraw, and will retain only two points, Ancona and Bologna.

A treaty has been concluded between Russia and Naples, placing the ships of the latter in Russian ports on the footing of the most highly favored nations.

DEFEAT OF THE RUSSIANS IN CIRCASSIA.—The following is the narrative given by the Journal de Constantinople of the reported victory of the Circassians, a brief account of which reached us a few days ago by telegraph:

SOUJAK KALEH, Sept. 24.—The Russians having passed the Leba for the purpose of constructing fortifications in Absech, Sefer Pacha immediately dispatched an interpreter to the Russian commander, in order to know the object of the expedition. The Russian commander replied:

"By the treaty of Paris, Circassia is conceded to Russia, and I have come to take possession of it."

Sefer Pacha sent a second messenger to the Russian commander, to inform him that Circassia was an independent country: that no one could dispose of it without the consent of its inhabitants, and that if the Russians did not retire from it forthwith the Circassians would take prompt measures to compel them. The next day Sefer Pacha advanced with 80-000 men against the Russians, who had taken up a position on the slopes of a ravine with 15 cannon.

The combat lasted three hours and a half; the Circassians remained masters of the field, made 800 prisoners, and took all the guns. Another affair took place 20 days ago in the Tchap-Sou, after the passage of the Kouban by the Russians, who were obliged to retire with a considerable loss of men, leaving five guns behind. The Russian troops were composed of recruits and did not stand their ground. The prisoners taken by the Circassians are no longer reduced to slavery. They are admitted into the ranks, or are at liberty to establish themselves upon the land, under the administration of a naib. The Circassian deputation which was sent to Constantinople has not returned; but it is thought certain that the Porte and the Western Powers will not support us.

THE NEAPOLITAN QUESTION.—At the date of the last advices from Europe the Neapolitan question still wore a threatening aspect. Armed intervention on the part of England and France was not anticipated, but it was difficult to decide what would be the political effect of the contemplated naval expedition, ostensibly for the protection of the British and French subjects. If the feelings of the people of Naples and Sicily are as much exasperated against their government as we have reason to suppose, advantage will be taken of this demonstration to instigate another revolution, that will spread through Italy. The whole peninsula is one vast tinder-box, which a spark would instantly inflame.

The last accounts state that fleets from England, France, Russia, Spain and Austria, have been ordered to the Mediterranean, but all with the usual assurances of the most pacific purposes. All parties would doubtless be glad to be rid of the question, except the liberals. whose hopes for the regeneration of States now hangs upon the complications which may grow out of the Neapolitan question.

RUSSIAN BLACK SEA STEAM LINES.—The last advices from Europe state that the Russian government has granted subsidies amounting to two and a half million dollars annually, for the formation of steam packet lines in the Black Sea and elsewhere. The line to Alexandria also receives $250,000 a year, besides other privileges. The total capital to be employed is ten million dollars, and the shares, which were all taken up immediately, now command a premium, The vessels are all to be built to carry guns, if necessary.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., tha it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

—:o:—

Bro. M. GRANT appoints to preach at Springfield, Mass., Wednesday eve. Nov. 19. Bridgeport, Ct., Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, and during the Lord's day, Nov. 23, where Bro. Osborne may appoint.

—:o:—

THOMAS SMITH and S. K. PARTRIDGE appoint to preach at South Hope, Me., Friday eve Nov. 21, and hold over the Sabbath.

—:o:—

Bro. IRA MORGAN appoints to preach at
Newfield Ct., Nov. 22.
Collinsville, Nov. 30.
Bridgeport, Dec 7, at the new chapel.

:o:—

Bro. J. HIGGINS appoints to preach at
Salem, Nov. 16.

—:o:—

Bro. J. HOWELL appoints to preach at
Salem, Nov. 23.
Boston, at Chapman Hall, Nov. 30.
Salem, Dec. 7.

—:o:—

Bro. J. HARVEY appoints to preach at Lowell, Kirk St. chapel, Nov. 16. Bro. W. S. Campbell, Nov. 23. Bro. E. Burnham Dec. 7.

—:o:—

Eld. D. B. MOULTON, appoints to preach at
Tolland, Conn., Nov. 16,
where Bro. Storrs may appoint.

—:o:—

Bro. B. P. MANNING appoints to preach at
Nashua, Nov. 16.
Danbury, Nov. 23, and stop a day or two if desired.
New Boston, Nov. 30.

—:o:—

Bro. S. S. BROWN appoints to preach at
New Bedford, Sunday, Nov. 16.
Worcester, Nov. [illegible]

—:o:—

Bro. JOHN COUCH appoints to preach at
Portsmouth, N. H. Nov. [illegible]
Portland, Me., Nov. [illegible]
Lake Village, N. H. Nov. 2[illegible]

[illegible]
Boston, [illegible]

Eld. S. W. [illegible]
Lawrence, [illegible]
Boston, [illegible]

—:o:—

Bro. EDWIN BURNHAM appoints to preach at Lewiston, Me., [illegible]
Poland, Me., [illegible]
Rye, N H, [illegible]
Lowell, Mass, Dec. 7.

—:o:—

Bro. W. S. CAMPBELL appoints to preach at
Clarksville, 12.
Lafayette, Nov. 13.
Lowell, Sunday, 23.
Bristol, Conn., Sunday, 30.
Collinsville, Dec. 7.
River Point—the time is changed from the 10th Nov, to Nov. 11.
Jawbuck, 27.
Hazardville, 28.
Yaugan R I, 14.

If these appointments conflict with others, please inform me, to save expense and trouble. W. S. C.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

Joseph Kimball's P. O. address is Unity, N. H.

S. P. Goodsell—Fifty cents was credited on our books to W. Slade.

J T Ongley's P. O. address is Blooming Valley Crawford Co., Pa.

Sr. V. N. Cudworth's P. O. address is Zoar, Mass. She has not changed her residence, but a new Post Office is established in the place, by the name of Zoar.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

E Dennett, G Young, B Matthias, J Fletcher, Sr Sweat, N C Locke, T B Potter, W Albro, C P Thorn, B Wilson, W Shaw, E Babbett, E Groves, H Meeker, J B Healey, $1 each.

F Flanders, Mary Brown, $2 each.

R R York, $1.43.

FOR BOOKS.—E M Haggett, $1. G. Bliss, 41 cents.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

—:o:—

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and The New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Single copy, 12 cents; $8 per hundred. Postage 1 cent per copy.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

GLAD TIDINGS, or Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to End in the Universe, by a Literal Destruction of Wicked Men and Devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment Collected and Arranged. By Jacob Blain. Price 10 cents; postage 1 cent.

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 38 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cts.—postage 9 cents.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By I. C. Welcome. 33 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

JUBILEE HARP. By S. S. Brown. A good selection of hymns well adapted to the present wants of the church. Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50; per hundred, $20. Postage 7 cents.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions of the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The [illegible] and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. [illegible] cents per volume.

TRACTS.—The [illegible] —The Three Worlds— [illegible] by H. L. Hastings. [illegible] Earth—A Voice of W[illegible] [illegible] $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

WE'VE ALL OUR ANGEL SIDE.

Despair not of the better part
  That lies in human kind—
A gleam of light still flickereth,
  In e'en the darkest mind;
The savage with his club of war,
  The sage so mild and good,
Are linked in firm eternal bonds
  Of common brotherhood.
Despair not! Oh! despair not then,
  For though this world be wide,
No nature is so demon-like,
  But there's an angel side.

The huge rough stones from out the mine,
  Unsightly and unfair,
Have veins of purest metal hid
  Beneath the surface there;
Few rocks so bare but to their hearts
  Some tiny moss-plant clings,
And round the peaks so desolate,
  The sea-bird sits and sings.
Believe me, too, that rugged souls
  Beneath their rudeness hide
Much that is beautiful and good—
  We've all our angel side.

In all there is an inner depth—
  A far off, secret way,
Where, through dim windows of the soul,
  God sends his smiling ray;
In every humanheart there is
  A faithful sounding chord,
That may be struck unknown to us,
  By some sweet loving word;
The wayward heart in vain may try
  Its softer thoughts to hide.
Some unexpected tone reveals
  It has its angel side.

Despised and low, and trodden down,
  Dark with the shades of sin;
Deciphering not those holy lights,
  Which God hath lit within;
Groping about in utmost night,
  Poor prisoned souls there are,
Who guess not what life's meaning is,
  Nor dream of heaven afar;
Oh! that some gentle hand of love
  Their stumbling steps would guide,
And show them that amidst it all,
  Life has its angel side.

Brutal and mean, and dark enough,
  God knows some natures are,
But he, compassionate, comes near—
  And shall we stand afar?
Our cruise of oil will not grow less,
  If shared with hearty hand,
And words of peace and looks of love
  Few natures can withstand.
Love is the mighty conqueror—
  Love is the beauteous guide—
Love with her beaming eye can see
  We've all our angel side.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Freedom.

BY C. B. DENSMORE.

There is a freedom which the children of God may enjoy which is unlike the freedom that is sought for in this day by many. Even this is the most desirable of all to be gained of a sublunary nature, to have a right to speak and act for one's self—the right to retain property that hard toil has earned.

How many a crushed spirit and worn out frame would arise and rejoice at the sound of freedom, and the hope that they should be the owners of their own flesh and blood. Would to God that this boon even, might be attained by the groaning millions of our land. Their cries have reached the ears of the God of Sabbaoth, and he will speedily strike off the strong fetters that oppression's hand has bound round them.

But the freedom of the gospel is more than this. It is freedom from sin, which is the source of all oppression both of body and spirit. "For whom the Son makes free, is free indeed." There is a pure and sweet intercourse opened between heaven and that soul. Angels minister to us and give strength in the keenest mental anguish, or the most torturing bodily suffering.

By faith in Christ we may rest, even amid a life of toil. No cruel tyrant on earth can hedge up the way that leads from earth to heaven. It is unseen by those "who make earth their home. But the child of faith walks above. The path is cast up for the ransomed to walk in. They that walk there will not walk in darkness, but will have the light of life; for Christ is "the way, and the truth, and the life." None need be weary, for he has said, "I will give you rest."

This path is guarded by a divine hand; and the hope of one day reaching the mansions prepared for all who love God, stimulates us to press our way on. This hope is sure; it reaches within the veil. Jesus said, "if I go away I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also." O what a hope is ours, who walk by faith through this world of shadows; a hope of a bright immortal existence beyond the reach of the blighting influence of sin, where—

"The glory of God like a molten sea,
Will bathe that immortal company."

C. B. DENSMORE.

For the Crisis.

From Bro. Josiah Kellogg.

BRO. GRANT:—I have had the privilege of reading the Crisis over two years, and can say of a truth I consider it a good, useful paper. Its correspondents manifest a spirit of love and devotion to the cause of truth, which they endeavor to maintain. Their communications strengthen and encourage the body to action and new engagedness in the great work of saving souls. I love the Crisis because it is so free from unkindness and reproachful epithets

There are many, who, like myself, want the paper, but cannot pay for it; I would willingly give up mine for the sake of letting some one else have it whom it would benefit. I love the truth so well myself, I want all to share in the glory of these Bible truths.

I do hope I may have a share in your prayers, and by the help of my blessed Heavenly Father, put in practice the following resolutions:

1. I have resolved to love God with my whole soul, might, mind, and strength.
2. To love my neighbor as myself.
3. Never to give up my faith in God and his word.
4. To hold on whereunto I have attained.
5. To try and live expecting the judgment at hand.
6. To pray for all God's children and try and convince others of the glorious truths of the Bible.

With these before me, I subscribe myself your unworthy brother,

JOSIAH KELLOGG.

Vergennes, Sept. 2, '56.

For the Crisis.

From Sr. Ann Payne.

With the help of the Lord, I now for the first time take up my pen to write a few lines for the Crisis, that I may testify to the power, faithfulness, and mercy of the Lord in the fulfillment of his promises to any who can come by simple faith relying wholly upon them.

For five years and a half have I suffered from a bodily infirmity, attended with great prostration of the nervous system, through which at times, I have been fearful of losing my senses. During this time I have placed myself under the care of the most skillful physicians, whose remedies all failed eventually. I at length felt discouraged, thinking my case was incurable, and I must remain in that condition through life, a burden to myself and those around me. But blessed be the Lord who did not leave me in this afflicted, disconsolate condition. but led me to feel that however difficult my case was, it was well understood by Him and all I needed was faith in his willingness, as well as power to heal me, soul and body. For some time I pondered over Jas. 5: 14, 15, having a desire to come in a gospel way and seek for the healing power of God, but seemed to be waiting for some divine impulse to move upon my heart; till at length, He who knoweth the desire of them that fear Him, in much love and mercy to me, saw fit to appear in my behalf.

At the Wilbraham Campmeeting, Bro. Whitney had it laid powerfully on his mind to visit Springfield. He came and preached the word in demonstration of the spirit and power; for God was with him of a truth and confirmed the word with signs following.

I was present at one of the meetings at the close of which, brother W. announced that a sick Bro. then present wished to be healed, and requested all who felt an interest in the prayer of faith to resort to the house of a sister close at hand, and have a season of prayer together. I went in with them, and truly the power of the Lord was present with them to heal. The blessing of restoration fell upon the brother while being anointed with oil in the name of the Lord; and while heaven's windows still stood open, my own heart yearned for another manifestation of the power and faithfulness of Israel's God; and down the blessing came, full and free; joy, praise, and thanksgiving came with it, and so for the comfort and encouragement of all poor sin-sick, self-sick, physician-sick, souls I give in this my humble testimony that they may early resort to this best of Physicians, though sad to say, always last sought unto; but thanks unto His precious name, it was the lost ones he came to seek and to save—those who have exhausted every source to obtain relief and can find none—those who have got to the end of the creature and creature help, and thus fitted to come in God's own way, which is, "look and live." Oh yes, these are the ones for whose benefit heaven's storehouse is so well filled. Then come and exchange misery for mercy, sorrow and sighing for joy and gladness of heart.

I now feel under renewed obligations to consecrate myself more fully to the service of Him who has done so much for me, and although, in myself, I feel weak and unable to surmount the difficulties of the way, I know that the Lord is ever ready to furnish all needful grace and strength. It is therefore my desire and determination by the grace of God, to live henceforth, a life of faith upon the Son of God.

I do feel thankful that I was ever placed under the sound of the gospel as preached amongst the Adventists. I know that the truths advocated by them are Bible truths, and I believe them with all my heart; and it is my prayer that I may be accounted worthy through the blood of the Lamb to be a participant with them, in the realization of those joys which the Lord hath in reserve for them that fear Him. I feel thankful in being able to say that the spirit of love and unity which seemed to prevail amongst us when our Bro. Whitney was here, still continues. May it increase more and more until the coming of the Lord that we may individually be found faithful, living witnesses for Him, who has done so much for us.

May the Lord direct, comfort, sustain and bless his tried and tempted children, is the prayer of your unworthy sister in the faith,

ANN PAYNE.

Springfield, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sister Jane E. Stevens.

BRO. GRANT.—Believing the dear children of God scattered abroad would like to hear from any of like precious faith, I sit down for the first time to write for the Crisis, our excellent medium of communication. I have often felt it duty, and know I ought to esteem it a privilege, in this way to testify for Jesus, who has said, "ye are my witnesses." I feel I ought to delay no longer.

I have been a reader of the Crisis nearly a year and a half, and have always found it to contain spiritual, wholesome, and profitable food; and such a paper is needed for the encouragement of those that are determined to keep the faith and gain the Kingdom. May God enable us all to profit by its preaching and give it to others when we have read it, and thus help each other on our pilgrimage journey.

Dear children of my Father;—let us constantly remember that it is our privilege to know we have almost reached the end of our journey, and be encouraged to patiently continue on in well doing, knowing that "in due season we shall reap if we faint not." May God bless you, my dear Brother in serving the household with good things, and all that feel interested in sustaining the paper and trying to make it useful, both editor and all its readers, and give us all an abundant entrance into the peaceful everlasting kingdom, where we expect to meet the first time with those who have spoken with the pen, from the fullness and abundance of the heart, comforting things pertaining to our happy Eden home.

There are a few in this great city of sinners, who profess to be looking for and loving the appearing of our blessed Savior, perhaps one to a thousand, of 30,000. O let us walk by faith and not by sight, laying hold of eternal life, for we read that "the just—shall live by faith," but if any of us turn back to the world God will have no pleasure in us. But, dear children, let us live constantly with our own wills all subdued by grace, and be of that number that believe to the serving of the soul. I would gratefully thank all those who have written communications for the Crisis for the benefit I have gained; and also ask those who feel it duty, to obey God and continue to write. I will close for the present, hoping also to hear from some with whom we are personally acquainted in the East.

Your sister, striving to keep separate from the world midst these last day perils, and hoping through grace to be ready to meet our Lord with joy at his return.

JANE C. STEVENS.

Syracuse, N. Y.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH.—"Here is a fresh contribution to the Millenarian literature of the day. The design of the work is to show that the prevailing doctrine of the conversion of the world is not only of recent origin but is utterly fabulous, and it summons a great cloud of witnesses from various ages, to render their testimony on the subject. It holds Dr. Whitby chiefly responsible for having led the world astray by his adventurous speculations."—Puritan Recorder, Boston.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. P. Blood.

BRO. GRANT:—We read that he that confesseth his sins shall find mercy, if he also forsaketh them. Now I must acknowledge that I have long received your valuable paper, and I desire to render unto the Lord thanksgiving, and unto his servants remuneration, but I will acknowledge my deficiency in both, and that the trials of these last days have almost unmanned me for any thing; still I can assure you that all my sympathies are concentrated in the blessed theory of the Lord's speedy return. I hail it with joy, and go heart and hand with all who are loving his appearing. The cause of Zion lies near my heart. I rejoice in its prosperity and mourn over its desolations, which, alas! are many and great at this day; the truth of which proves the certainty of our position, that we are near the final crisis. "God setteth the solitary in families," is a text which I could never understand, but lately I have in my own mind applied it to those who seem to stand alone in their faith, surrounded by those who reject the blessed truth, the coming of the Lord, and have no sympathy with us. Such must sometimes feel lone and solitary as I do myself, but this is not perhaps without its salutary influence for it teaches us to withhold all confidence from creature dependencies, and lean wholly on the Lord. Now if you can find a better solution of that text, I will thank you for it.

I am now seventy-three years of age, and find that my powers of body and mind are fast on the wane; still I may live to see the Lord come; but be that as it may, I hope and trust I shall meet you all in the kingdom. Let us hold fast the hope which is set before us, without wavering, says your sister in the Lord,

P. BLOOD.

Manlius, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

From Sr. M. M. Markham.

BRO. GRANT:—We had expected ere this, to have laid by our armor and been at rest in the Kingdom of our God; but we find ourselves still in the enemy's land. Our warfare has not ceased. We need to buckle on the armor still firmer, as all the influences around us are calculated to lull us to sleep.

It is a time of imminent danger, "for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." These words are continually before me.

The prophet Elijah seems to stand as a representative of those that are to be translated; if so, we can gather instruction from the manner of God's dealing with him. We learn from the sacred word that there was a seeming delay of his translation to Heaven.

So it is with us, but, if we are in the way of our duty, doing what the Lord commands us, "We shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, when the last trump shall sound." The question is, are we about our Master's business?

Shall we cease to sound the alarm which warns this world of its approaching doom? If we do, will the Lord hold us guiltless in the day of accounts? Verily, he will not.

One word to the Watchmen on the walls of Zion. Do I hear you say, "my lot is hard?" "I do not get enough to bear my expenses?" Has the bank of heaven failed, or does the Lord withhold your due? Verily not. He will not leave thee while thou art working for him. He may bring you into trials to prove you, to see if you are willing to forsake all for Christ and follow him. Then be encouraged, press on, gain the victory, be partakers of Christ's sufferings, so that when he is revealed ye shall also be partakers of his glory.

Your sister in Christ,

M. M. MARKHAM.

Middle Haddam, Ct.

For the Crisis

Letter from Bro. M'Culloch.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say to the brethren in New Lebanon, Savoy, and Charlemont, that circumstances will not permit me to meet with them until about the first of December. The Lord permitting, I shall then give up my time, for awhile at least, to preaching the truth as I understand it, independent of sects, parties, or creeds, dependent on God alone; believing in a crucified, risen and coming Savior; the resurrection from the dead and the restitution; also a religion that condemns all wrong and justifies all right. If there are others who desire my labors among them, direct your letters to North Adams, Mass.

Notice of appointments in the Crisis in due time.

HARRISON M'CULLOCK.

North Adams, Mass.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

WELCOME, BRIGHT MORN.

BY MARIA.

Thrice welcome bright morning, by prophets predicted;
  Thy first glowing radiance with rapture we greet,
As wide it proclaimeth the day long expected,—
  King Jesus descending in triumph complete.

Long, long have we struggled and urged our way forward,
  Though snares and thick dangers encompass us round;
Though dark on our pathway fierce tempest-clouds lowered:
  And cold-hearted worldlings in bitterness frowned.

Yes, long we've been waiting and oft weary-hearted,
  We've sighed for that home where the pilgrims find rest;
We love not to stay where the loving are parted,
  Where man wanders friendless, unpitied, unblest.

We care not to mingle in earth's passing glory,
  We seek not a name 'mong her proud ones to win,
We weep when we think of her battle-fields gory,
  And sigh for that country untarnished by sin.

That land where in Eden-like loveliness growing,
  See Life's tree unfading, its verdure unfold:
Its branches o'ershadow the crystal stream flowing,
  While Nature is blooming in beauty untold.

The pilgrims are there, but no longer they wander,
  The victor's crown radiant in triumph they wear.
No more shall Death part that loved circle asunder,
  We think of their glory and long to be there.

Oh, hasten dear Savior, thy loved ones are sighing,
  And fast fall their tears as in exile they roam;
While low 'neath the turf thy bright jewels are lying,—
  Oh hasten and give them their long-promised home.

Greenland, N. H.

Choice Selections.

To Promote Harmony in a Family.

1. We may be quite sure our will is likely to be crossed in the day; so prepare for it.
2. Everybody in the house has an evil nature as ourselves, and therefore we are not to expect too much.
3. To learn the different temper of each individual.
4. To look upon each member of the family as one for whom Christ died.
5. When any good happens to any one, to rejoice at it.
6. When inclined to give an angry answer, to lift the heart in prayer.
7. If from sickness, pain, or infirmity, we feel irritable, to keep a very strict watch over ourselves.
8. To observe when others are so suffering, and drop a word of kindness and sympathy suited to their taste.
9. To watch for little opportunities of pleasing, and to put little annoyances out of the way.
10. To take a cheerful view of everything, and encourage hope.
11. To speak kindly to the servants, and praise them for little things when you can.
12. In all little pleasures which may occur to put self last.
13. To try for "the soft answer that turneth away wrath."
14. When we have been pained by an unkind word or deed, to ask ourselves, "Have I not often done the same, and been forgiven?"
15. In conversation, not to exalt ourselves, but bring others forward.
16. To be very gentle with the younger ones, and treat them with respect, remembering that we were once young too.
17. Never to judge another, but to attribute a good motive when we can.
18. To compare our manifold blessings with the trifling annoyances of the day.—The Myrtle.

No Gloom at Home.

Above all things, there should be no gloom in the home. The shadows of dark discontent and wasting fretfulness should never cross the threshold, throwing their large black shapes, like funeral palls, over the happy young spirits gathered there. If you will, your home shall be heaven, and every inmate an angel there. If you will, you shall sit on a throne and be the presiding household deity. O! faithful wife, what privileges, what treasures, greater or purer than thine?

And let the husband strive to forget his cares as he winds around the long narrow street and beholds the soft light illuming his little parlor, spreading its precious beams on the red pavement before it.

The night is cold and cheerless, perhaps, and the December gust battles with the worn skirts of his old overcoat, and snatches, with a rude hand and wailing cry, at the rusty hat that has served him many a year. He has been harrassed, perplexed, persecuted. He has borne with a cruel tone, many a cold word, and nerved himself up to an energy so desperate that his frame and spirits are weakened and depressed, and his limbs ache with weariness; his temples throb with the pain-heat caused by a too constant application,—he scarcely knows how to meet his wife with a pleasant smile, or sit down cheerfully to their little meal which she has provided with so much care.

But the door is opened, the overcoat thrown hastily off. A sweet voice falls upon his ear, and the tones are so soft and glad, that hope, like a winged angel, flies into his bosom and nestles against his heart.

The latch is lifted, and the smiling face of his wife gives an earnest welcome.—The shining hair is smoothed over her fair brow; indeed she stole a little coquetish glance at the mirror, hanging in its narrow frame, just to see if it looked neat and pretty before she came out. Her eyes beam with love, her dress is tasteful—and—what? Why, he forgets all the trials of that long, long day, as he folds her in his arms and imprints a kiss upon her brow.

A home where gloom is banished, presided over by one who has learned to rule herself and her household, Christianity!—oh, he is thrice consoled for all his trials. He cannot be unhappy; that sweetest, best, dearest solace is his—a cheerful home.—Do you wonder that the man is strengthened anew for to-morrow's cares?

For the Children.

School Dialogues.

EYE SERVICE.

Hugh.—Why did you and George stop so short when the teacher came by?

Theodore.—Because we did not wish him to hear what we were saying. George was using some words which he would not have liked Mr. Sanford to know.

H.—It is a much better plan to utter no words which we are ashamed of.

T.—O, that is your way, Hugh; but you are not like other boys. For our part, we like a little more freedom.

H.—Freedom, indeed! Don't call it freedom. It is surely much more like the conduct of a slave, who trembles for fear of the lash.

T.—Why, you don't think we were afraid of punishment!

H.—I think you were both afraid and ashamed. Now I feel better here, within my breast, when I so talk and so act that I do not care if all the world should know it. I am afraid, Theodore, you also pursue the same course with regard to your parents.

T.—Why so? I hardly understand you.

H.—You remember the letter which your little brother Frank wrote to your mother?

T.—O yes! I made him leave out what he said about our being to the nine-pin alley. It was because my father thinks it wrong.

H.—Ah! Then you are willing to do what your parents disapprove?

T.—If they never hear of it, our conduct will give them no pain.

H.—That is what I meant. That is mean eye-service—to obey in their presence, and disobey in their absence. Do you call that honoring father and mother? A good son will obey from conscience and love, and will never allow himself to do anything which his parents disapprove, even if they were on the other side of the globe.

T.—Pshaw! There is not a boy in the world that lives so!

H.—Then there is not a boy in the world who keeps the fifth commandment. And, moreover, let me tell you, there is an Eye that observed all your misconduct, when you thought little about it.

T.—When? Where? Who observed me?

H.—I mean the all-seeing eye of God, our Father in heaven. You cannot escape his observation; and we should be more desirous to please him, than to please either teachers or parents. This is the thought which I try to carry with me everywhere, both by day and night;—Thou, God, seest me!—The Myrtle.

When I appeared like the world, in Babylonish garments, I had esteem, and knew not how to part with it. But when I showed by my appearance, that I considered myself as a stranger and foreigner, none can know, but by trying it, what an influence it has on the whole conduct, and what a fence it is to keep us from sinking into the spirit of the world. For there is no medium; they who are conformed to the fashions, customs and maxims of the world, must embrace its spirit also.—Mrs. Fletcher.

MONADS.—It is stated that monads, the smallest of all creatures, swim by myriads in a drop of water; for it has been computed that within this small space five hundred millions could be comprised. The monad is never found to attain a length greater than the twelfth thousand part of an inch. In a cubic inch, of a certain kind of mould, consisting enterely of animalculæ, more than forty-one millions of distinct beings were estimated, by Ehrenberg, to exist.

Christians keep Sunday, Greeks Monday, Persians Tuesday, Assyrians Wednesday, Egyptians Thursday, Turks Friday, Jews Saturday.

There are 248 bones in the human frame—24 in the face, 32 teeth, 24 make up the ribs, 16 in the wrists, 32 in the hands, 14 in the ankles, 38 in the feet, and the rest are distributed in other parts of the body.

A wise man's heart is at his right hand; but a fool's heart at his left.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 107, HANOVER [illegible] BOSTON, [illegible]

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1856. WHOLE NO. 64. VOL. IV. NO. [illegible]

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
HENRY V. DAVIS, MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Incidents by the Way.

No. VII.

BY S. S. BREWER.

"Well, dear friend, I am very thankful to you for the information you have inparted to me as it regards the idea of the entire man being a living soul while in possession of respiration and inspiration, and a dead soul without it.

And it does seem to me more consistent with the attributes of love, justice, and mercy, to let them sleep in their graves until the resurrection, else, some would have near six thousand years more punishment than others. In fact, it looks more like truth than anything I have heard heretofore.

Well, I see we are getting near the end of our journey. I shall ask our minister the meaning of that text,—"The soul that sinneth it shall die" and ask him if it does not seem more consistent with the character of God, in the infliction of punishment upon the poor sinner, to put him to sleep in the dust of the earth instead of torturing and tormenting him with devils and damned spirits throughout never ending years. I must confess, I see an entirely different meaning in the declaration:—'And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire.'

And those declarations of Malachi—'For behold the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble, and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall. And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of hosts.'

O, how plain it is to me now! I see clearly the import of the language of the Savior:

'Whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire.'

One question more before we part.—What do you think of the doctrine of universal salvation? The Universalists do not believe in endless misery, and they seem to have some argument on their side. They believe that all go to heaven at death, and all will finally be happy."

"All I have to say on that question is this:—if all men are to be translated to heaven at death, the apostle evidently did not understand the plan of salvation, or he never would have been seen crying night and day. Read his own language in Acts xx:

'Therefore watch, and remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears.'

Only think of his language to the church at Corinth. 1 Cor. xv. 18: 'They also that have fallen asleep in Christ are perished.' Perished, and yet in heaven!

Again: His letter to the church in Thessalonica. Thess. iv. 13–16. I will quote the 16th verse:

'For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first.'

There, dear friend, you see the apostle's faith in relation to the dead.

Job, (xiv. 10–15,) declares: 'Man dieth and wasteth away, yea man giveth up the ghost and where is he? As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up; so man lieth down' and riseth not till the heavens be no more' they shall not awake nor be raised out of their sleep.' "

"According to your view, then, the dead must all remain in their graves until the Savior's return."

"Most certainly, for the scripture declares it. Then there will be a resurrection of the dead. Read the 28th and 29th verses of the fifth chapter of John:

'Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming in which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth: they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation.'

Then the Lord Jesus will reward every man according to his work. The reward, or 'wages," as the apostle calls it in Romans vi. 23, of one class is DEATH: those who by patient continuance in well doing, have sought for glory, and honor, and immortality, will obtain eternal life."

"I must leave you here. Good bye.

Your ideas on the subject are entirely new to me, but I shall examine them."

Soon the bell rings—the conductor sings out in a stentorian manner, "All aboard!" and off we go, the chariots jostling one against another in the broad ways, running like lightning. Here comes the conductor recounting his worthies, stumbling in his walk, making haste to the wall, (to the end of the car.) O how strictly those railroad establishments correspond with Nahum's chariots.

But here comes the newsboy with the papers. "Stop, my little man, let me have the news." What does that word news mean? N, for North; E, for East; W, for West; S, for South. Well, truly that is it. So we have it—fresh "news from Europe." "Startling news from Kansas." "Tremendous political excitement," &c., &c. Truly we have news from the East, West, North, South, and all around us.

Let me see, first of all, the condition of the old world, and if there is any additional signs of land; for we passed the last lighthouse, Dec. 13th, 1833, when the author of the Apocalypse hung out the flaming signals laid down on the chart, and recorded by John, Rev. vi. 13; concerning which, one celebrated professor has said: "This generation may congratulate themselves as having witnessed the most splendid exhibition of falling stars that has ever been seen since God spoke the world into existence."

What is the news? Here are the feelings of men's hearts as they have transcribed them by the aid of pen and ink on the pages of foreign and home journals. Let them speak.

"Our last European files are more than usually full of the doings of Czars, and Emperors, and Kings. Urged on by that demon of madness by which those are said to be possessed whom the gods desire to destroy, the crowned heads of the old world have of late given themselves up to all kind and manner of festivities and jollifications, evidently for no other purpose than to make free with the dearly bought labor of the people, as recklessly and extravagantly in times of peace as for the last two years they have done in times of war. After the monstrous sacrifice of life and property imposed by the Crimean war, it might have been supposed that the termination of this bloody business would usher in a period of retrenchment, industry and economy. At all events, no one supposed that the awful liabilities incurred for the saturnalia of war would be followed by other awful responsibilities for the orgies of peace. Yet the money squandered of late by the Czar, Louis Napoleon, Francis Joseph, William of Prussia, and Victoria of England, on coronations, pleasure-trips, and wedding gifts will, according to a pretty correct estimate, amount to the rather respectable figure of twenty millions of dollars, enough to dot Europe over with universities and common schools. But it is obvious that the cancer at the heart of Europe is only to be covered by such fiendish artifices. The eyes of the people, to be diverted from the real horrors of their position, have to be perpetually dazzled and bamboozled. Wo! to thrones and aristocracies when the hour comes for quiet reflection and sober reasoning. Look at the Pagan display at Kremlin, while the Russian people are starving. Look at Louis Napoleon delighting himself with bull-fights at San Sebastian, while France is in the throes of momentary revolution."

Yea, wo! to thrones when the hour comes, and that hour visibly approaches. "Coming events cast their shadows before." Thinking men anticipate the struggle, and come it must—come it will. Then, in the language of the poet:

"Wo to the men on earth who dwell,—
Nor dread the Almighty's frown,
When God doth all his wrath reveal
And shower his judgments down.

Sinners, expect those awful showers—
To meet your God prepare!
For, lo! the seventh angel pours,
His vial in the air."

For the Crisis.

"The Lord's Day."

An Exposition of Rev. i. 10.

BY WILLIAM SHEPHERD.

BELOVED OF GOD:—We should aim to be exact in our application of Holy Scripture to men and things. There is a beauty and power in being appropriate in our comparisons of scripture with scripture, which give instruction, life and animation to otherwise dead matter. Our "line upon line," and "here a little, and there a little" should be selected with a particular care and regard to their appropriateness of application to the object or subject discussed.

If the premises herein laid down are correct—which indeed seems undeniable—we are obliged to dissent from popular opinion, i. e. the sentiment of the professedly religious world in respect to "the Lord's Day."

The Lord helping us, we shall endeavor to give on this occasion, a brief and lucid exposition of this familiar phrase. There are many terrific, grand, glorious, and sublime events associated therewith, clustering around the same, agreeable to the unerring teachings of God's blessed word. With these few prefatory remarks we proceed at once to the elucidation of the subject; and in order to arrive at the same we shall

1 Examine the connection of our text.

2. The numerous phrases in Scripture importing the same.

3. Their respective associations and events inseperably connected.

In the first place then, we remark, that this wonderful book—the Apocalypse—wherein is delineated a history of the Church from the earliest ages down to her final triumph and consummated blessedness, is introduced with the following exordium:—

"The Revelations of Jesus the Messiah, which God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass; and he sent and signified it by his angel, unto his servant John; who bare record of the word of God, and of the testimony of Jesus the Messiah, and of all things that he saw. Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy and keep the things that are written therein; for the time is at hand. John to the seven churches which are in Asia; grace be unto you, and peace, from him which is, and which was, and which is to come; and from the seven Spirits which are before his throne, and from Jesus the Messiah, the witness, the faithful, the first born of the dead, and the Prince of the Kings of the earth; who hath loved us, and released us from our sins by his own blood, and hath made us (prospectively) a kingdom sacerdotal to God and his Father; to whom be glory and power, for ever and ever, Amen.

Behold, he cometh with clouds; and all eyes shall see him, and they also who speared him; and all the tribes of the earth shall mourn on account of him—even so, Amen. I am Alpha, and also Omega, saith the Lord God, who is, and was, and is to come, the Omnipotent.

I John, your brother, and partaker with you in the affliction and suffering that are in Jesus the Messiah, was in the island called Patmos, because of the word of God, and because of the testimony of Jesus the Messiah. I was in the Spirit on (now comes in our text) the Lord's day (then follows) and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet, saying, I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last. What thou seest write in a book."

Thus we find that the text is prefaced with the commencement of the glorious advent of the Messiah, and subsequent to this is heard by the prophet in deep and astounding detonations "a great voice as of a trumpet." May this not have been the voice of the seventh angel, the dead-awakening tones of that trumpet which shall arouse a sleeping World and Church to the important fact, that this present dispensation of Gentile rule has terminated, and the new era or reign of God commenced? May it not have been that mighty voice (in anticipation) which shall reverberate through universal space, and ultimately raise the dead myriads entombed—those who "sleep in Jesus"—to their reward? He heard this great voice, and afterwards followed the instruction that he "write in a book" what was there unfolded to his rapturous gaze in relation to the future of God's "eternal purpose."

We have not had opportunity to have this passage of Scripture under discussion critically examined in the original Greek text; but do not hesitate to say, that our common English version is not a correct rendering. The adverb "on" may be translated "in," "within," "as to," "in respect to," "about," "concerning," "in reference to." Greenfield. "in sight of," "in the presence of." Analytical Greek Lexicon. And if this be the case, you see the impropriety of the generally received application at a glance. Let us read it as we suggest it should be "I was in the Spirit concerning the Lord's day."

We shall here take the liberty to paraphrase for a moment. "I was in the Spirit (or as we read in another place) carried away in the Spirit, i. e., caught away, wrapt in glorious vision of futurity—in the great day of the Lord; and had unfolded to me in sublime and grand panoramic review eventful scenes which are to transpire in their predetermined succession on that day. They passed before his then divinely illuminated, interior vision, in resplendent and glorious aspect, and while "in the Spirit" he beheld the Son of God in all that ineffable glory and royal splendor which will surround him at his second appearing, now impending. No wonder that the Revelator "fell at his feet as dead;" but the blessed one "laid his right hand upon him," gently admonishing him to "fear not," saying, "I am the first and the last; I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and possess the Keys of Hell (hades, the grave,) and of death."

The state of this holy exile, is not unlike that of the learned Apostle when he was "caught up into paradise," and in this divine trance, beheld "visions and revelations of the Lord." While in this celestial state, we are informed, that he "heard unspeakable things which it was not lawful for a man to utter," 2 Cor. 12: 2—4. What Paul saw and heard we have tenable ground to believe had special reference to the future—"the Lord's day," or "day of the Lord." Then, the time (which "the Father hath put in his own power") had not yet come for those "visions and revelations" to be made known. Ecc. 3: 1; Acts 1: 7. Hence, the Apostle declares as to their unlawfulness as to publication. But those very things no doubt which he saw and heard, the Revelator also saw and heard, and was instructed to make them known, or "to write (them) in a book;" as he was instructed, Rev. 1: 11, that they might be disseminated throughout the world for the benefit of all who have "ears to hear," even until the end of time.

We observe also a striking analogy in the visions of the beloved Exile, and those of the prophet Ezekiel. For instance, Ezekiel informs us,—"I was among the captives by the river Chebar, and the heavens were opened, and I saw visions of God." Ezek. 1: 1. John was a captive on the Isle of Patmos, for the word of God. Rev. 1: 9.

"The word of the Lord came expressly unto Ezekiel, the priest, the son of Buzi, in the land of the Chaldeans; and the hand of the Lord was there upon him, and the heavens were opened unto him," Ezek. 1: 3. The word of the Lord came "expressly" to John on Patmos, and he was commanded to "write the things which thou hast seen, and the things which are, and the things which shall be hereafter;" while he affirms, "I saw heaven opened." Rev. 19: 11.

Observe, when these divine manifestations were presented to the prophet, he was immediately deprived of his strength. The brightness of the glory, and the splendor of the personage appearing to him completely overcame him, and he sank exhausted. "This was the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord. And when I saw it I fell upon my face, and heard a voice of one that spake. And he said unto me, son of man, stand upon thy feet, and I will speak unto thee. And the Spirit entered into me," Ezek. 1: 28. 2: 1, 2.

When the Revelator beheld him, "as the sun shineth in his strength," he "fell at his feet as dead," Rev. 1: 16, 17.

Again, Ezekiel, had a view of the resurrection. "The hand of the Lord" he says, "was upon me, and carried me out in the Spirit of the Lord (please mark that expression particularly in connection with our text,) and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones." Ezek. 3: 7. Here he had portrayed before him a scenic representation of the restoration of the righteous dead or "whole house of Israel."

Thus it was with the noble Exile.—"The hand of the Lord," was also upon him; the phrase—"And he laid his right hand upon me" is synonymous. "And I saw the dead, small and great stand before God, and the sea gave up the dead which were in it, and death and Hell (hades) delivered up the dead which were in them, Rev. 20: 12, 13.

Lastly. Ezekiel had a vision of the glorious temple and restituted state of things. "Afterward he brought me to the gate, even the gate which looketh toward the East. And, behold, the glory of the God of Israel came from the way of the East, and his voice was like a noise of MANY WATERS; and the EARTH SHINED with his glory. And the glory of the Lord came into the house by the way of the gate whose prospect is toward the East; so the Spirit took me up and brought me into the inner Court, and behold the glory of the Lord filled the house," Ezek. 43: 1, 2, 4, and 40: compare Rev. 1: 15; 15: 8, 18.

John saw "another angel come down from heaven, having great power, and the earth was lightened with his glory," and in addition to this, "a new heaven" and a new earth; also the "holy Jerusalem descending out of heaven from God." Rev. 21: 1, 10.

Finally, by way of comparison, in Ezekiel we read: "Moreover, I will make a covenant of peace with them, (the children of Zion) and I will place them and multiply them, and I will set my sanctuary in the midst of them forever more, my tabernacle also shall be with them; yea, I will be their God, and they shall be my people," Ezek. 37: 26, 27.

The banished one says,—"I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God." Rev. 21: 3.

Thus, we discover that there exists a beautiful similarity and harmony between the prophecies of Ezekiel and the beloved John; their style, however, varies somewhat, yet many of their expressions possess a striking likeness, such for example as those we have just quoted.

Ezekiel has reference in those no doubt to "the Lord's day," as well as the Revelator. And this we may safely infer in regard to St. Paul's being "caught up into paradise," wherein he heard such "unspeakable words," which, he affirms, "it was not lawful for a man to utter." He was permitted to behold a glimpse of that bright glory, and those ravishing scenes of grandeur which shall be made manifest in "the day of Christ (which) is at hand;" for the requickening of his courage, and a more firm establishment of his assurance and faith, (if we may be allowed so to say,) that he might continue steadfast, "always abounding in the work of the Lord," unto the end.

Does this not look a great deal like truth, and is this not chiefly what we want? For most assuredly there is nothing short of this that (the truth) will afford us any real substantial good.

Examine those three unimpeachable witnesses for yourselves, and learn if these things whereof we affirm, be not so. Observe the judicial rule, it is not by the mouth of one, but by the "mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established."

Again, we would not have it inferred, that the strength of our argument rests solely upon the supposed mistranslation, which we previously suggested, not in the least; for, let the text stand first as it is, we have sufficient evidence from the parallel passages to which we have referred, to fully convince us of the truth of our position. We pass to notice briefly, and 2ndly, The numerous phrases in Scripture importing the same.

We commence with the Psalms of David. "Thou shalt arise, and have mercy upon Zion; for the time to favor her, yea the set time is come," Ps. 102: 13. This may appear foreign to the subject at first, but be patient and let us proceed. In the book of the prophet Isaiah, we frequently meet with such expressions as the following:—"The day of the Lord of hosts"—"The day of the Lord's vengeance"—"The year of recompenses," See Isa. 2: 12; 22: 25; 24: 21; 26: 1; 27: 1, 13; 34: 8. In Jeremiah, we find it marked in the plural; "The days"—"his days"—which expressions denote the same thing, however, as we shall find. "Behold the days come saith the Lord." Jer. 23: 5. We find the phrase here also, "at that day;" and "the day of the Lord God of hosts, (or armies,) a day of vengeance." Jer. 25: 33; 46: 10.

God names it thus,—"a day of darkness, and of gloominess, a day of clouds, and of thick darkness;" and "the great and terrible day of the Lord." Joel 2: 2, 31. While it is darkness, however, to one class—the wicked, of course, it is a day of light and blessedness to the righteous, in harmony with the teachings of Isaiah, "For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth and gross darkness the people; but the Lord shall arise upon thee, and his glory shall be seen upon thee." [illegible]

But we pass on. [illegible]

[illegible] "that day"—several times in his writings; also, "the day of the Lord." Zech. 14. Malachi, calls it "the day" and "the great and dreadful day of the Lord". Mal. 4. In the New Testament it is called by Luke, "the day when the Son of Man is revealed." Luke, 17: 24, 30. In John, we have it, "the last day." John, 6: 39. A day which God hath appointed, and "the great and notable day of the Lord." Acts, 2: 20. In Paul's letter to the Romans he calls it "the day of wrath, and revelation of the righteous judgment of God." Rom. 2: 5. "The day of our Lord." Cor. 1: 8. "Day of redemption" and "dispensation of the fullness of times." Eph. 1: 10. "Day of Christ." Phil. 1: 6. By our coming King himself, it is designated "that day"—"The day of Judgment." Math. 7: 22. John, 16: 23, 26. Matt. 12: 36.

(To be continued.)

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, NOVEMBER 19, 1856.

Questions.

FURTHER ANSWERS TO THE QUESTIONS OF OUR SISTER IN CHRIST.

[Concluded.]

NUMBER XX.

"I have a baptism to be baptized with, and how am I straitened till it be accomplished." Luke 12: 50.

Q. 1. "Was this the baptism of blood, in the garden and on the cross?"

A. 1. Baptism necessarily implies that the object baptized be immersed in the element employed. We have yet to learn that our Savior was baptized, or immersed, in blood!

Q. 2. "Are we made partakers of this baptism?"

A. 2. We have never learned that Christians are to be baptized in blood."

Q. 3. (a) "Are we buried into the baptism of his death and sufferings when the heart is made new? (b) Do we then 'awake and arise from the dead,' when Christ gives 'light?' (c) Are we then 'sprinkled with the blood of Jesus Christ from an evil conscience?"

A. 3. (a) Conversion, or making the heart new, is no where called baptism. When we are "buried with Him in baptism," we understand the apostle means a water and not a blood baptism, the object of which is to show our faith in the burial and resurrection of Christ.

When we are buried beneath the yielding wave, our future existence in this world depends upon our being raised out of the water; and we show by baptism that we believe our future existence in the world to come depends upon our being raised from the dead; and that this hope is centered in Christ. But if Christ is not raised, then there is no meaning to baptism. As Paul says in 1 Cor. 15: 29,—"Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?"

This passage shows plainly that Paul understood baptism is designed to show our faith in the resurrection of Christ, and consequently, that our hope of a future existence is certain, but only through the resurrection of the dead, or by translation, if alive, at the coming of Christ.

(b) When we are converted, by a figure of speech it may be said we "arise from the dead," ie. from a state in which we have been literally dead to righteousness, into one where we are literally alive in holiness.

(c) When converted, we are "sprinkled from an evil conscience," and receive pardon because Jesus has shed his blood for us; "and without shedding of blood, is no remission."

Q. 4. (a) "Is the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and the baptism of the blood of Christ, each represented by sprinkling?

(b) Are these two inward baptisms, together with water baptism, the three that bear witness in earth: viz. "the spirit and the water and the blood," of which the apostle says, "these three agree in one?" 1 John 5: 8.

A. 4. (a) We do not understand that any baptism can be represented by sprinkling, because baptism implies immersion, or burial, and sprinkling has no such signification.

(b) We do not read in John that the three witnesses are three baptisms, neither do we find baptism called a witness any where in the Bible. We find nothing in the Bible about one or two inward baptisms; hence we answer, baptisms are not the witnesses.

Q. 5. "If water baptism be administered by immersion, will it agree in one with the others?"

A. 5. As we have remarked before, we do not understand baptisms to be witnesses, consequently this question needs no further answer.

"But ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God."

Q. 6. "Is the one baptism, I ask again, a threefold ordinance?"

A. 6. The Bible says—one, not three.

"An insertion of the above, and answers to the same in the Crisis, is earnestly solicited; and I hope and trust we may all be led into the whole truth of God, and be built up in the most holy faith; all ready and waiting for the coming King.

"Respectfully yours,

B. P. Hildreth."

"Westford, Aug. 6, 1856."

Providence Conference.

An interesting conference has been in session in Providence, at New Market Hall, during the past week, at which we spent a few days pleasantly and profitably. The meetings of the conference were characterized by christian kindness and forbearance, and we think much good will result in consequence of the free interchange of thought and feeling relative to differences of opinion on some points of doctrine, and as to the best plan of action to forward the cause of the Lord. We were obliged to leave before the close of the conference, and hence forbear giving any further report until we may have one official and correct.

Notice.—All letters, orders for tracts, communications, remittances, &c., &c., for H, L. Hastings, must be directed to Rochester, N. Y.

European Affairs.

European Affairs appear quite as complicated as they were before the breaking out of the Eastern war, and it is only because our attention is engrossed in the Presidential election, that all eyes are not turned to Europe, and that all voices, upon the arrival of each steamer, do not now enquire what news? There could be no more uneasy state than what exists today. Peace has been made: treaties have been signed; one congress of the nations held, and another is talked of; but as yet there is no abiding quiet—there is no assurance for the future: and in this day of intellectual activity, when questions of right and morals and justice are everywhere being discussed, and when all the people are brought together by railroads and telegraphs, and can no longer be kept ignorant of their own conditions or the agitations of the world, there can be no abiding peace upon the false and rotten foundations that lie at the bottom of European monarchies. We may talk of reaction—we may tell of the incapacity of the people: but the truth is, that Europe has outgrown the present institutions, and is too big for the clothes that former generations made for it; and there will be "bubble, bubble; toil and trouble," till a new and better state comes to her. It is impossible that the excitable Frenchmen shall be kept in a straight jacket, without one effort to stretch the limbs whose strength they have tried before; that the liberty-loving and reflective Germans, studying on and plodding on for mentel development, should be bought and sold by petty princes forever; or that the reappearing spirit of the old Romans should not awaken action such as made Italy glorious of old.

Within the last two or three months, Spain has presented three administrations, and is yet uneasy for another. Three years ago, Spain took a long step forward in the expulsion of Maria Christina, the Queen mother, one of the most vicious and debauched women, whose name will stand in history; whose vices, robberies and crimes rendered her justly obnoxious to the whole world. Released from this load of sin, Spain sprung forward with new life; and reforms in state, reforms in church, liberty to the press, and liberty to the people were given. Maria Christina repaired to Paris, and with Marshal Navaez, fit minister to such a woman, and Louis Napoleon, who followed in the footsteps of former rulers of France, in his intrigues, arranged a programme for reaction. The first step of it came, when Espartero's government fell by the treachery of O'Donnell: and the last step when O'Donnell's, in one short month, gave way to Navaez, as was announced by a late steamer. Now, backward and backward move the wheels. The sale of church property stops, and the conscience of the young queen is quieted, and harmony restored with Rome; and Protestant persecutions, like those of inquisitorial days, follow. The silence of death is upon the press; actual death is decreed to the patriots who have loved liberty too well, and hoped too much for their country; the constitutions, back to that of '45, are swept away; and absolutism is triumphant. Evidently, however, it is the work of a day, and for a day only. There can be no person more odious than Maria Christina, nor a minister more odious than Navaez; and instead of making the monarchy stronger, their re-appearance upon the stage will but swell the tide to swallow all in the Republican sentiment everywhere growing in Spain.

Some of the other governments are much threatened by their financial embarrassments. The money pressure that commenced early in the season in Germany, moved on to France, and has had its effects in England. Louis Napoleon, like many men coming suddenly to fortune, has dashed on in reckless extravagance, till his imperial power seems doomed to end in bankruptcy. For the last five years he has been blowing bubbles upon credit, to amuse Paris, which is France, but at last these bubbles are bursting. He would make the city magnificent, and for that purpose old houses were razed, and new ones went up, and workmen came flocking from all parts for the employment: but all the time rents were growing high, so that they have quadrupled, and as the work diminished there came a pressure. The people were hungry; and as hungry men are always ripe for revolution, and pancakes were better to keep the peace than powder, he gave them bread at the public expense. The government turned corn merchants and sold bread for less than it cost; and now, when money can not be had, nor work, and rents are high, and bread higher, an English journal speaking of the present state of things in Paris, says:

"There is discontent in Paris, and it has assumed an ominous expression. The first revolution was preceded by the cry of 'Bread,' and now the walls of Paris are placarded with the words, 'Cheap Bread, or——.' With these are mingled others denouncing 'Death to the house owners!' and some were inscribed, 'Kill your landlord; I will kill mine!' Numerous arrests have taken place of persons supposed to have taken part in posting these threatening proclamations, but still fresh placards are revealed, at the dawn of each succeeding day. The artizans of the faubourgs, we learn, make no secret of their dissatisfaction to the Government, and deputations have waited on the Emperor, with what effect we have not yet learned. The increase of the working classes in Paris for the last five years is said to be very great, and now that there are no other public works, the Government will find it difficult to dispose of them."

In the midst of this, those terrible secret societies, pledged to bloodshed, are in active operation, increasing in numbers and increasing in boldness, and the Emperor looks with dread to the signs of the times.

"The Paris correspondent of the New York Commercial Advertiser says, that "arrests continue to be made in Paris of individuals suspected of conspiring against the life of the Emperor. The conduct of His Majesty on the occasion of his return to Paris, and since, gives the impression to the public that these arrests are based upon facts which fully warrant the utmost rigor of the police. His entry into Paris was private, unannounced as regards the hour, and made under the most cautious circumstances. His carriage, which was closed, was surrounded by mounted men, and instead of passing over the usual route, they passed rapidly through the city by the river quays. The same precautions were observed on Monday evening when he went to the opera."

England is urging a war upon Persia that will bring her to the line of Russian action, and may add new dominions to her already extensive territory in the east.—Italy is boiling over with troubles; and Austria trembles from the effects it may have upon her. War in Italy will be the signal for war in France; trouble in France from external causes or the death of the Emperor, would destroy the peace of the world. Of all the European nations, Russia is the most secure, the most peaceable, the most prosperous.—Newburyport Herald.

A Friend.

We desire to call some one in particular our friend. We wish to confide in some one with whom we can be familiar, and to whom we can tell all our wants, woes and joys, without fear or embarrassment. Jesus Christ is that very friend. He will always listen to us, will never betray us, and will ever help us. E. B.

For the Crisis.

The Sabbath.

NUMBER ONE.

Bro. Grant:—For a few weeks past, we have noticed some articles on the seventh day Sabbath question, and having examined that question to our entire satisfaction during the last eight years, we would in all humility, by the blessing of God, give the result of our investigation to the readers of the Crisis.

Our object in this examination is the truth; and we will, the Lord helping, abide by it whatever sacrifice it may cost.

Now then to the investigation of the subject. We will begin where revelation introduces the matter. Gen. 2; 2, 3, "And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made. And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it: because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made." Why did God bless and sanctify the seventh day? "Because that in it he had rested from all his work." This is the only reason anywhere given for its being blessed. We read nothing more of it for 2500 years, until the Exode from Egypt. During that interval there is no command of God to any man, to observe it as a rest day, nor is there any example of its observance, though good men, yea, even Abraham, one of the most faithful of men, lived one hundred and seventy five years and died in that age. Neither is there any reproof for its violation, notwithstanding the Sodomites, and antedeluvians, were notoriously corrupt.

While the four hundred years bondage of the seed of Abraham was expiring in the land of Egypt (see Gen. 15: 13, 16,) God through Moses, by his own miraculous interposition, brought the Hebrews out of Pharoah's dominions, through the Red Sea, on their journey to the land of promise; and on the fifteenth day of the second month they came to the wilderness of Sin; and here they murmured for the want of bread, and lusted after the flesh pots of Egypt. But the Lord made provision for them, by raining bread from heaven. (see Ex.16:) When this was done, the Israelites beholding it on the ground for the first time, wondered what it could be. Moses beholding their astonishment, exclaims, "This is the bread which the Lord hath given you to eat, this is the thing which the Lord hath commanded, gather of it every man according to his eating." They did so until the sixth day, then, as Moses commanded, they gathered on the sixth day enough for two days.

Now, why gather manna sufficient on Friday for two days? For, 'this is that which the Lord hath said, to-morrow is the rest of the holy sabbath unto the Lord; bake that which ye will bake to-day, and seethe that ye will seeth.' This is the first instance where God's chosen people were required to cease from their labors on the seventh day; and, amid all their sufferings, and deprivations, of which they complain during four hundred years of hard bondage, they do not murmur because they could not keep a sabbath holy unto the Lord. This would have been one of the bitterest dregs in their cup of affliction, had this day been given to them as a holy day before their enslavement. Would not they have talked as some men do in these days:—"The sabbath is the seal of the living God—that we must do no work therein, and it is the memorial of the creation: by it we are distinguished from those who worship Idols, but now, the enemy hath made a breach in our law, we are compelled to transgress it by toiling all the live-long day, year in and out, till our lives become extinct." As oft as the prophets have referred to their trials in bondage, and God's interposing by his mighty hand to bring them out, and the reason why he did it, they never give it as a reason, that while there they were compelled to break the sabbath of the law.

In view of all the circumstances and history given in Gen. and the first sixteen chapters of Ex., the fact comes home to us, undeniably, that no man, nation, or people had any knowledge of the sabbath commandment. The truth is, that the law embracing the sabbath was not given to any prior to the Exode. For proof of this we call your attention to Ex. 24: 12, 15, 18.

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Come up to me into the mount, and be there; and I will give thee tables of stone, and a law, and commandments which I have written; that thou mayest teach them.

And Moses went up into the mount, and a cloud covered the mount.

And the glory of the Lord abode upon mount Sinai; and the cloud covered it six days: and the seventh day he called unto Moses out of the midst of the cloud."

Why all this exceeding great display on Mount Sinai, if the law was given at creation? Why not have the same exhibition at the beginning, as at the Exode, if the law embracing the sabbath was then given as some would have us believe? Can any one answer? Nothing of the kind was witnessed at creation; but at Mount Sinai it was made a glorious reality. For further proof that the law was given at this period, and not before, as some affirm, we quote Gal. 3: 17. "And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God, in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect." What is the truth taught here? That the law was not given till four hundred and thirty years after the covenant made with Abraham. See Gen. 15: 12—16, and 17: 7—10.

"And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not their's, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years;

And I will establish my covenant between me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee.

And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, and all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God.

And God said unto Abraham, Thou shalt keep my covenant therefore, thou, and thy seed after thee in their generations.

This is my covenant, which ye shall keep between me and you and thy seed after thee; Every man child among you shall be circumcised."

This testimony witnesseth to this fact, that the covenant was made with Abram before the Egyptain bondage, and that this was to continue four hundred years, and after that, the law says Paul, was added. To what? To Abraham's covenant, because of transgression, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made. The testimony last quoted, together with Acts 7: 1—8; Ps. 105: 8—11; 1 Chron. 16: 15, 18, show what the covenant was that was made with Abraham; namely, circumcision on his part, and the inheritiance on God's part.

"Then said the high priest, Are these things so?

And he said, Men, brethren, and fathers, hearken: The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Charran.

And said unto him, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall shew thee.

Then came he out of the land of the Chaldæans, and dwelt in Charran: and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell.

And he gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on: yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child.

And God spake on this wise, That his seed should sojourn in a strange land; and that they should bring them into bondage, and entreat them evil four hundred years.

And the nation to whom they shall be in bondage will I judge, said God: and after that shall they come forth, and serve me in this place.

And he gave him the covenant of circumcision: and so Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day; and Isaac begat Jacob; and Jacob begat the twelve patriarchs.

Be ye mindful always of his covenant; the word which he commanded to a thousand generations;

Even of the covenant which he made with Abraham, and of his oath unto Isaac;

And hath confirmed the same to Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant,

Saying, Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance;

He hath remembered his covenant for ever, the word which he commanded to a thousand generations.

Which covenant he made with Abraham, and his oath unto Isaac;

And confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant:

Saying, Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance."

This inheritance cometh not, says Paul, by obedience to the law, but it comes by submission to the Abrahamic covenant, see Rom. 4: 13, 14, and Gal. 3: 18. "For the promise that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith; for if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void and the promise made of none effect."—"For if the inheritance be of the law it is no more of promise, but God gave it to Abraham by promise." Now let us learn what the law covenant was, that was made with the children of Israel after the Exode. See Deut. 4: 11, 13.

"And ye came near and stood under the mountain; and the mountain burned with fire unto the midst of heaven, with darkness, clouds, and thick darkness.

And the Lord spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: ye heard the voice of the words, but saw no similitude; only ye heard a voice.

And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone."

Here, then, the ten commandments are expressly called a covenant; in connexion with this we quote the four first verses of chap. 5:

"And Moses called all Israel, and said unto them, Hear, O Israel, the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and keep, and do them.

The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb.

The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day.

The Lord talked with you face to face in the mount out of the midst of the fire."

Now let it be distinctly understood, that this covenant was not made in the garden of Eden, with Adam, neither with Noah, nor yet with Abraham; but with Moses and the people which he governed. Here the light from God's immutable word shines out as conspicuously as the sun shining in its meridian glory, declaring in language that cannot be misunderstood or evaded, that this mount Sinai covenant and the entire law, of which the ten commandments are only a small fraction, was given to the children of Israel at the Exode, and not before.

But notwithstanding all this, God has given us other additional lighthouses, so as to safely guide the christian mariner into the harbor of eternal truth, and ultimately to the kingdom of God. We will furnish some of the increasing light. See Neh. 9: 13—15.

"Thou camest down also upon mount Sinai, and speakest with them from heaven, and gavest them right judgments, and true laws, good statutes and commandments:

And madest known unto them thy holy sabbeth, and commandedst them precepts, statutes, and laws, by the hand of Moses thy servant:

And gavest them bread from heaven for their hunger, and broughtest forth water for them out of the rock for their thirst, and promised them that they should go in to possess the land which thou hadst sworn to give them.

In this testimony we have positive proof that the sabbath of the Lord was not known, even to his own dear people, till after their deliverance from bondage. In the light of such testimony how dare any one say the sabbath was enjoined upon Adam and all his posterity? Oh, "cease from man whose breath is in his nostrils for wherein is he to be accounted of?"—Truly, he has sought out many inventions. We hope this, and succeeding articles will be faithfully read by all lovers of truth, and the papers preserved for future reference.

Investigators.

For the Crisis.

What will the World Say?

No matter what the world may say as to your singularity or unlikeness to them, when you are engaged in the service of God. What good or harm will all the world can say do you? One saying of the Son of God, when he comes in his glory, "Come, ye blessed of my Father,"—will drown all that the world ever did say, will say, or can say. Stop your ears, and cry, "Life eternal!" E. B.

The Voice of the Church.—"Here is a fresh contribution to the Millenarian literature of the day. The design of the work is to show that the prevailing doctrine of the conversion of the world is not only of recent origin but is utterly fabulous, and it summons a great cloud of witnesses from various ages, to render their testimony on the subject. It holds Dr. Whitby chiefly responsible for having led the world astray by his adventurous speculations."—Puritan Recorder, Boston.

For the Crisis.

The Sufferer.

Our Redeemer was, emphatically, The Sufferer. The Scriptures represent Him as "despised," "rejected," "stricken," "smitten," "afflicted," "wounded," "bruised," "stripped," "oppressed," "chastised," "put to grief," "a man of sorrows," in "travail of soul," "in agony," and dying an "ignominious death." And, O my soul, all this suffering was for thee, that thou mightest be saved! Awake, then, to thy Savior's love and praise!

E. B.

For the Crisis.

What Jesus is, and What I Hope to Be.

Jesus is immortal—I hope to be.

Jesus is holy—I hope to be.

Jesus is glorious—I hope to be.

Jesus is perfect—I hope to be.

Jesus is with God—I hope to be.

Jesus is free from temptation—I hope to be.

Jesus is triumphant—I hope to be.

Jesus is away from the wicked—I hope to be.

Jesus is coming—and I hope to be ready. E. B.

Poetry.

SABBATH EVE.

BY CLARENCE CARLETON.

Silence reigns; no voices speak
Save the chiming evening bells,
Which the holy quiet break;
And their tone sweet music tells—
Of home and heaven!

Pleasing thoughts of friends most dear
Flit across the tranquil heart,
And sweet memories bring near,
Joys and hopes which ne'er can part—
With home and heaven!

Scenes of other days return,
When in family prayer we joined
Round the altar, which doth burn
With the incense which reminds—
Of home and heaven!

Mass. Aug. 16th, 1856.

For the Children.

Uncle Ames' Story.

"One cold moonlight evening, in winter, a little after eight o'clock, my mother sat at the table, sealing a letter she had just written to father, who had been away from home for several weeks. I was getting quite drowsy before the warm fire, and I believe George and little Johnny were fast asleep. Eight o'clock was our invariable bed time; but mother's letter had kept us up.

"This letter ought to be mailed to-night," said mother, looking up at the clock, 'Come, Ames, put on your coat and comforter, and run to the Post Office with it. That's a good boy."

"I can't go to-night, mother," said I "I am sleepy and tired, and it's cold and dark, and besides it is a good ways."

"Father will be looking for this letter, and will be disappointed if he does not get it. The mail closes in the morning before you get up. Come Bub, the moon is shining. You'll soon be back, and I'll keep a good fire for you."

"I can't go to-night mother, said, I, sullenly, determined not to go out in the cold unless commanded to. She coaxed me a few moments, and then took up the candle, and called the other children to come to bed, I followed. She undressed me with the rest, after our prayers were said, and I thought she never tucked me in so comfortably. nor said 'Good night, my child,' more kindly.

"I could not sleep, try as I would; father's disappointment, and mother's reproachful kindness troubled me. I should have called her, and told her I would go, but it was now too late, and finally it occurred to me, I might perhaps do the errand in the morning.

"Very early it was, and frosty cold, and no one was up in the house. when I started with the letter for the office. I ran all the way. When almost there, and I was crossing the street near the City Hotel, a bit of brownish paper caught my eye, lying near the curbstone. I picked it up, and lo! it was a three dollar bill! Of course I was wild with joy, and ran all the way back, after depositing the letter, to wake mother, and display my good fortune.

"Let my boy remember that he was trying to please his parents when he found this," said my mother, after she had assured me that it was a good bill. And now you can have the pantaloons you wanted, Ames."

The pantaloons were purchased and made up, and a very happy circumstance my late obedience proved to be.

Well, now listen, my boys, to the most singular part of it. Years after that, when I was a tall, slim boy of fifteen or sixteen, and a clerk in a store, the letter and the bill and the lesson I had learned, were strangely called to mind and fixed in my memory.

About the middle of the forenoon, one day, as I stood behind the counter attending to my usual duties, one of my little brothers came in, with a large basket, and coming up close, whispered to me that "there were no potatoes for dinner, and mother wanted to know if I could not go to the grocery and buy some!"

"What! I leave the store, and carry that big basket full of potatoes through the streets! No! go and tell mother I am too busy to run on errands for the house." The little fellow started off in a hurry.

It instantly, afterwards struck me that there must be some peculiar reason for such a request being sent. It was many months since I had been asked to attend to home matters; and hence the sudden rebelling of my pride and clerkly dignity. I had long felt that I was a man of business. But now there must be uncommon cause for it, for mother was never unreasonable.

So hurrying to the door, I called back my little brother, and stood a few minutes on the stoop, debating with myself the propriety of going. A good mother always gains the day with a boy that stops to think. Mine did, and very soon I was returning from the family grocery, tugging the big brown basket full of potatoes.

Taking the shortest way home, I turned into a back street, and had hardly rounded the corner, when again, behold! right before me, and this time spead open straight and smooth, lay another bank-note, and a three-dollar bill too!

The coincidence was so strange that I could hardly, for a moment, pick the treasure up. The long forgotten letter, disobedience, repentance, and final tho' tardy compliance, and providential reward, flashed upon my remembrance; and conscience again perused the old lesson, and this time to be never forgotten again.

I have ever since set it down that mothers and providential favors were somehow closely connected. And it has passed into a general principle with me, that has been tested many times since, in my own experience, and observed in the history of others, that Good Luck must be looked for in the strict path of duty.—Cross and Crown.

A New Key.—A few days since we found a piece in an exchange paper about a "New Key" which is said to unlock wonderful treasures. We hope the little girls and boys who read the paper will find this key, and use it often, and be happy. Here it is—

"Aunty," said a little girl, "I believe I have found a new key to unlock people's hearts, and make them so willing; for you know, aunty, God took my father and mother and they wanted people to be good to their poor little daughter."

"What is the key?" asked aunty.

"It is only one little word—guess what. But aunty was no guesser.

"It is please," said the child: "aunty, it is please. If I ask one of the great girls in school, "please show me my parsing lesson?" she says, "O yes," and helps me. If I ask "Sarah, please do this for me?—no matter she'll take her hands out of the suds. If I ask uncle, "Please," he says "Yes, puss, if I can;" and if I say, "Please Aunty"—

"What does auty do?" asked aunty herself.

"O, you look and smile just like mother, and that is best of all," cried the little girl, throwing her arms round aunty's neck, with a tear in her eye.

Perhaps other children will like to know about this key, and I hope they will use it also, for there is great power in the small kind courtesies of life.

Domestic Summary.

Kansas.—Mr. W. F. M. Arny, of Chicago, general agent of the National Kansas Committee, has recently visited Kansas for the purpose of ascertaining the actual condition of affairs there, and published the result of his investigations in the Chicago Tribune.—He says the Free State prisoners, about one hundred in number, are confined in a shanty, dirty, filthy, and without a change of clothing—several sick, and there were one or two deaths from emigrant fever during his stay. We copy his statement in regard to the suffering among Free State settlers in several of the districts of Kansas, as illustrative of the sacrifices which they are making for the cause of freedom.

DISTRICTS NO. ONE, TWO, THREE AND FOUR.

In First Senatorial District Topeka is located, and in these four districts clothing, shoes and groceries are wanted. Numbers of families are entirely destitute. Half the families in these districts must suffer much during the winter if not assisted. In the First District, near Indianola, a family of five motherless children, the eldest seven years old, was found in a state of starvation, their father a prisoner at Lecompton.

DISTRICT FIVE.

Ossawatomie, near the Missouri line, have suffered much, have lost their crops, and will require much assistance in clothing and provisions.

DISTRICT SIXTH.

Council City, on the Santa Fe road, is a settlement of three or four hundred, in six miles square. They have suffered from sickness growing out of want of proper provisions, having lived on pumpkins and green corn, without bread or meat. On Dragoon, Walker and Swifler Creeks, whole families are completely prostrated with sickness, scarcely able to help each other.

On Elm Creek, Neosho River, and other neighborhoods, from Council Grove down to Camden, nearly every person is sick. A physician on that creek who went to the territory two years ago, in good circumstances, is now entirely destitute. One hundred families are located on the head waters of Neosho, many of whom are naked below their knees, bare-headed and bare-footed, and women so destitute of clothing that they are ashamed to be seen.

From Council Grove down to Dow's settlement, about sixty families nearly destitute—forty families entirely destitute. Forty sacks of flour would have prevented forty families from leaving one neighborhood, who lived while there on corn grated by hand.

DISTRICT NINTH.

Grasshopper Falls, Muddy, Soldier, and Slough Creeks; about forty families in this district entirely destitute. The fathers of two families are confined at Lecompton. One of these families consists of five motherless children, the oldest eleven years of age, who has taken care of the others. They lived on green pumpkins, green corn, &c.

Foreign News.

New York, Nov. 15. The Collins steamship Baltic, from Liverpool morning of 29th ult., arrived at this port this morning.

The feature of the news which has attracted most attention. is an official paragraph in the Moniteur, complaining that the English press publishes calumnies against the French government, and holding out a menace that a continuance of such conduct will break up the Anglo French alliance. This paragraph has caused excitement, both in England and France, having even affected the Bourse; and it is reported that the British government will ask an explanation of the threat to dissolve the alliance.

Respecting the Neapolitan difficulty, the only additional progress is that the French Embassy, as also probably the British, left Naples on the 26th.

The English fleet is at Malta, and the French at Toulon.

A German paper says the squadron will go to Naples in three weeks, if matters are not settled.

It is denied from Vienna, but reasserted by France, that the Porte has summoned the Austrians to quit. In this connection are two reports, viz: 1st, That the Congress of Paris is not likely to meet soon, owing to the non-assent of England. 2d—That Russia, inspired by suspicion of a secret understanding between England and Austria, respecting the Principalities, demands a Russian squadron to enter the Black Sea on the same terms as the English fleet won in those waters.

The entire Turkish ministry has resigned. The event is attributed to the intrigues of Lord Stratford to bring in Redschild Pacha as Vizier.

Mutterings of a Coming Storm.—The Paris correspondent of the New York Herald, writes:—

Yesterday morning (Oct. 22d) when the police began their rounds, Faubourgs, St. Denis and St. Antoine were found to be placarded with the old cries, to which some additions, however, were appended. "The luxuries of Compiegne would afford the working men of Paris bread for three weeks;" "Murder the proprietors or they will murder us;" Down with "Bon-trash." Bon-trash meaning no less a person than His Majesty Napoleon III, whose "sobriquet" is derived from the towns Boulogne and Strasburg, where his abortive attempts were made to obtain that empire which the folly of Louis Phillippe subsequently threw into his lap. The authorities are on the alert, and their instructions are to create no sensation, to make no disturbance, or attempt any interference with the disaffected, but simply to remove the offensive placards. But these are awkward signs in the body politic, and if the state rides through without an explosion it will have reason to congratulate itself.

Italy. The relations between England and France and Naples continue in an abnormal state. The New York Evening Post learns from a private letter that this state is not to last long, England and France having entered into a secret engagement to allow but three weeks to King Bomba for making up his mind whether he will accept their proposals or not; after which time they propose to resort to more serious and potent arguments. What degree of credit can be attached to this letter we are unable to judge.

From the Mediterranean—Earthquake. According to recent dispatches, received at Marseilles, a severe earthquake had been felt throughout nearly the whole of Egypt. At Cairo two hundred houses were thrown down. Most of the inhabitants were encamped outside the walls. There had been little loss of life. Shocks had been felt at Smyrna and in the Archipelago. Rhodes was entirely devastated.

Accounts continue to come to hand respecting the recent earthquake in Italy, At Brindisi, the people were so alarmed that numbers put to sea in boats, and others remained for days encamped in the open fields. On the night of the 16th, another shock was felt at Sessa, near Naples.

Robert Owen—now 85 years old—who is a very ardent Spiritualist as well as Socialist, and who issues in London a Millenuial Gazette, devoted to his own hobbies, says:

"My impression is that Spiritualism and Socialism united, when understood and fully comprehended for practice, are to be the future destiny of our race. They are well calculated to remove evils, and to make the population of the world good, wise and happy, and to establish peace and good-will forever among our race of every color and creed. • •

"To stimulate the population of the world to attain this new phase in its existence, I am impelled to call a Congress of Delegates of the advanced minds of the world, to be held in London on the 14th of May next, to consider the best mode by which to commence the change from the system of falsehood and repulsion to that of truth and attraction, and thus in peace, with order and wise foresight, beneficial for all, create the revolution of revolution, which shall secure the well-being, well-doing and permanent progress, without retrogression, of the family of man, and establish forever the true brotherhood of the human race, and terminate evil among men."

European Intelligence. By the arrival at New York of the Cunard Steamer Europa, we have our files of English papers to the 1st of November, from which we make the following extracts:

The Times Paris correspondent says:—"Whether well founded or not, the opinion is very general that not only does there exist a serious difference between France and England, on more than one point, but also that the latter has been completely reconciled to Austria, and that the former is now on more than friendly terms with Russia; and that Austrians in Paris boast that it is not possible for two cabinets to be on more amicable terms than those of Vienna and London.

At the risk (says the Daily News correspondent) of uttering what the Moniteur may perhaps denounce as an "odious calumny," I feel it an imperative duty to say emphatically that, instead of being in harmonious relations, the cabinets of London and Paris are at this moment almost at daggers drawn. The difference between them on the question of the execution of the treaty of Paris is most serious, and, as to what is to be done with Naples, they are obsoluteiy at sixes and sevens. The French government, I learn from a good source, is apprehensive that England may be driven to occupy the island of Sicily, in order, in case of a convulsion in Europe to give point d'appui equal to that which France and Austria, having acquired for themselves by their respective occupation of Rome and Lombardy.

Paris, Oct. 30.—The rumors to-day ar more positive on the subject of a political antagonism, in which France and Russia are on one side and England and Austria on the other. It appears certain that Count de Morny is to remain at St. Petersburg for several months, though his mission was at first confined to attendance at the Czar's coronation.

Calais, Oct. 30.—Four steamers of the Russian fleet have been signalled. They will be in harbor to-morrow morning. The official order has arrived by telegraph to have a supply of coal ready for them. These steamers are a portion of the Russian Mediterranean squadron, so long talked of.

Accounts have been received here that the Russian squadron in the Mediterranean is to consist of 11 vessels, and that the Western Allies are narrowly watching their destination and force.

Italy,—A letter from Naples dated the 19th inst., says:

"The political horizon is cloudy and sombre. Jupiter is preparing to hurl his thunderbolts at the accursed fleets whenever they make their appearance. Every precaution is taken to secure the fidelity of the army.—Officers whose opinions are at all doubtful are quickly removed to the unattached list, and replaced by others whose devotion to the government of the day is most certain. Nine lieutenant-colonels of the right sort have suddenly promoted to coloneciles. Great quantities of provisions and ammunition have been sent to Gaeta lately, and it is boasted that the place has been transformed into a second and impregnable Troy. Public opinion is very marked. The police no longer succeed in frightening people. On the contrary, it is very plain they are themselves in a state of alarm. I have good reason for thinking that the information received by the government as to the state of public feeling in the Calabrias, the provinces of Lecce and Bari, and in various other districts of the kingdom, is anything but reassnring."

Progress in Russia.—The Emperor of Russia, it is said, has resolved to introduce the Gregorian calendar in Russia, and thus to do away with the difference of twelve days between the old style and the new. This change will greatly aid the development of commerce between Russia and the rest of the Christian world.

The Mosque of Omar.—The Journal de'l Instruction Publique publishes a report addressed by M. Ludovic Castelnau to the Minister of Public Instruction, containing an account of a visit which he made to the Mosque of Omar at Jerusalem, on the fourth of February last. The visit was not accomplished without some precautions taken by the Pacha and by the High Priest of the Mosque, in order to insure the safety of the traveler, who claims to be the first Christian who has been allowed to enter the sacred spot.

The mosque is an octagonal building crowned with a lofty cupola, and has a basement of white marble about six feet in height, the wall between this basement and the cornice being covered with arabesques executed in porcelain. The roof of the cupola is covered with lead, and terminates in a crescent. Massive gates of metal give access to the interior of the building. A portico nine feet wide runs all round the columns which support its arches inclosing an octagon concentric with that formed by the main walls. Within this second octagon is a circular space inclosed by the columns which support the cupola; the distance between this circumference and the sides of the second octagon is about twelve feet—The lower part of the cupola is painted in imitation of mosaic; the ornaments of the upper part are profusely gilt. In the centre of the edifice stands an enormous rock, nearly sixty feet in diameter; it is crowned with a seat surrounded with beautiful carpets. It is from this rock, the stone of the prophets, that Mahomet was wafted to Heaven. The rock, they say, is suspended in the air, and defended by ten thousand angels, whom Saints only can see. At one of the corners of the stone is a small turret, painted red and gilt, to which true believers hang some fragments of their garments. It is a kind of reliquary where the hair of Mahomet is preserved. Continuing to go round the rock, the votary meets with a low door, through which, on descending a staircase, he reaches a subterranean space about 30 feet by 27, under the stone of the prophets. It is inclosed by a common whitewashed wall; the high priest knocked against it to prove that it was a mere thin partition; he said it had been erected in order to prevent women being frightened at seeing the rock hanging over their heads; but it is more likely that the object is to conceal the base of the rock. There is a well in the corner of this under croft: a woman once having been drowned in it, it is now covered up. The place is lighted by coarse wooden chandeliers.

After this, the travelers returned to the Pacha's residence; such had been the uneasiness and jealousy of their guides, that the tourists had not been allowed to stop an instant in any part or take any notes.

Religion in Germany.--Rev. Thomas Holmes formerly settled as a pastor in Portsmouth, and now a Prof. in Antioch College, writes an interesting letter to the Herald of Gospel Liberty, from which we extract the following:

Christianity has here indeed 'a name to live but is dead.' The Catholic churches are crowded so that we can scarcely find standing room, while Protestant congregations are few and thinly attended. Everything is in fact in a most deplorable condition. Many of the Protestants look on not only with toleration, but approbation. I had not been here three weeks before a Protestant lady told me she did not think it proper to put the Scriptures into the hands of children. She thought they contained much that was calculated to do harm.

They have no prayer-meeting, no Sunday-schools: and private labor, for the conversion of souls is not known. A theological student told me only three days since that if any one should speak to another on that subject, he would be told that was none of his business, and he who would go from house to house, for that purpose would be turned out of doors.

The Sabbath, especially afternoon, is spent in visiting, and walking, and riding for pleasure! and the evening by the young people in dancing. The fact is, there is as much need of a Luther, as there was three hundred years ago, and may God in mercy hasten his appearance.

Decline of Spain.

Spain, whose vice roys ruled at Milan and Naples for so many years, and which, even in the middle of the last century, was a firstrate State, is now of no more account in Europe than a small German kingdom. Its decline within the present century has been the most rapid in the history of the world. We can hardly realize that this kingdom, which now has only a few frigates and corvettes, was, in the memory of men still living, a great naval Power. Jarvis fought the battle of Cape St. Vincent, in 1797, against twenty seven Spanish sail-of-the line—a force equal to the combined armaments of France and England in the Black Sea. After eight years more of warfare, the monarchy was still able to put to sea fifteen sail-of-the-line at the battle of the Trafalgar. Since then every thing has gone—army, fleet, reputation, colonies, ships, and commerce.

The so-called Indies, from Texas to Patagonia, have become independent republics, or passed under the dominion of the Anglo-Saxon race. The poverty of the land is now as proverbial as its former wealth. The grandees of the kingdom have fallen from their high place among the aristocracies of Europe. We are now accustomed to look only with pity or contempt on what is passing at Madrid. If this has been the fate of the greatest of despotic kingdoms, we may well have hope for the future.

Spain was, during a long period of European history, the dread of all who had the cause of liberty at heart. The reformed religion, popular institutions, the independence of all second-rate States, were supposed to be endangered by the preponderance of a monarchy which cared for nothing but to spread its unscrupulous and crushing away. Spaniards were supposed to possess above all men the genius for conquest, and to be inspired by a fanaticism which made them certain of success in war. They ruled Italy with a rod of iron; they held all that was seemingly valuable in the New World; they were great in the Indian seas, and at the Philippines established the most flourishing colony of those regions. They were the most formidable enemies England or France had ever met, and to resist them manfully was looked upon as the highest and boldest of all achievements. Yet they have passed away, and an invasion from another planet is not more improbable than that a Spanish army should ever again summon the fortress of Alexandria to surrender.—London Times.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., tha it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

—:o:—

Providence permitting, I will preach in New Bedford, Nov. 30. M. Grant.

—:o:—

Eld. S. W. Bishop appoints to preach at
Boston, Sunday, Nov. 23.
Portsmouth, N. H., Nov. 30.
Concord, Dec. 7.

—:o:—

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at
Poland, Me., Sunday, Nov. 23.
Rye, N H, Sunday Nov 30.
Lowell, Mass, " Dec. 7.

—:o:—

Bro. W. S. Campbell appoints to preach at
Jawbuck, 27.
Hazardville, 28.
Yaugau R I, 14.

If these appointments conflict with others, please inform me, to save expense and trouble. W. S. C.

—:o:—

Bro. M. Grant appoints to preach at Springfield, Mass., Wednesday eve. Nov. 19. Bridgeport, Ct., Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, and during the Lord's day, Nov. 23, where Bro. Osborne may appoint.

—:o:—

Thomas Smith and S. K. Partridge appoint to preach at South Hope, Me., Friday eve Nov. 21, and hold over the Sabbath.

—:o:—

Bro. Ira Morgvn appoints to preach at
Newfield Ct., Nov. 22.
Collinsville, Nov. 30.
Bridgeport, Dec 7, at the new chapel.

:o:—

Bro. J. Howell appoints to preach at
Salem, Nov. 23.
Boston, at Chapman Hall, Nov. 30.
Salem, Dec. 7.

—:o:—

Bro. J. Harvey appoints to preach at Lowell, Kirk St. chapel, Nov. 16. Bro. W. S. Campbell, Nov. 23. Bro. E. Burnham Dec. 7.

—:o:—

Bro. B. P. Manning appoints to preach at Danbury, Nov. 23, and stop a day or two if desired.
New Boston, Nov. 30.

—:o:—

Bro. S. S. Brewer appoints to preach at Worcester, Nov. 23.

—:o:

Bro. John Couch appoints to preach at
Lake Village, N. H. Nov. 23.

—:o:—

A brother sends us the following appointments:

Roxbury, Mass., Nov. 23.
Sringfield, 25.
Jawbuck, Conn., Nov. 26.
Warehouse Point, 27.
Windsor, 28.
New Britain, 30.
Plymouth Hollow, Dec. 2.
Wolcott Centre, Dec. 3.
Prospect, Dec. 6, also Sunday, Dec. 7, where Bro. Wilson may appoint.
Mansfield, Conn., (at Bro. Abby's) Dec. 14.

[illegible]
Concord, N. H., Sunday, Dec. 7.
J. [illegible]

—:o:—

Bro. C. Goodwin appoints to preach at Cheshire, Mass., [illegible]
West Hawley, [illegible]
Savoy, at the house of Bro. [illegible]
Savoy Tannery, 27.
North Adams, Sunday, 30.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

Eld. J. Howell's P. O. address is Salem, Mass.

Joseph Kimball's P. O. address is Unity, N. H.

S. P. Goodsell—Fifty cents was credited on our books to W. Slade.

J T Ongley's P. O. address is Blooming Valley Crawford Co., Pa.

Sr. V. N. Cudworth's P. O. address is Zoar, Mass. She has not changed her residence, but a new Post Office is established in the place, by the name of Zoar.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

G French, H F Hart, M Walker, H Babcock, M Fisk, J Bracket, G Bracket, G Tapley, D Y Cooper, J S Beers, M Waterhouse, E Bemis, S M Dudley, D Rice, Dr C O Towne, $1 each.

J Ovens, O D Eastman, W Cowdry, F Densmore, $2 each.

N Brooks, N F Nason, 30 cents each.

M Spofford, 93 cents.

For books—S Crockett, $1; F S Sawtell, $1; S M Dudley, 60 cents; M Spofford 43 cents.

Books sent—E Dudley, E M Haggett, S P Green.

For Debt of Watchman.—F J Sawtell, $1; Bro. Sheldon, $1; Eld N F Nason, 50 cts.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

—:o:—

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and The New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Single copy, 12 cents; $8 per hundred. Postage 1 cent per copy.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

GLAD TIDINGS, or Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to End in the Universe, by a Literal Destruction of Wicked Men and Devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment Collected and Arranged. By Jacob Blain. Price 10 cents; postage 1 cent.

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 38 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cts.—postage 9 cents.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE. By William Shepherd. Price—four copies, 25 cents; nine copies, 50 cents; eighteen copies, $1; one hundred, $5—post-paid.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings, Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By L. C. Welcome. 33 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

JUBILEE HARP. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns well adapted to the present wants of the church. Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50; per hundred, $20. Postage 7 cents.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions of the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 18 cents per volume.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Day—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning [illegible] Winds—by D. T. Taylor. [illegible] and Ours—The Desire of all [illegible] Done—by John Cumming. [illegible] Dead, by Milton. [illegible] Grew. Each 24 pages. Price [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE HOUR OF PRAYER.

BY S. L. B.

Away, dull sleep, the morning breaks,
This sacred hour to prayer is given;
Awake, my slumbering soul, awake,
And send thy warm desires to heaven.

Away, each carking, hovering care—
Business and pleasure, all away;
This morning hour I'll spend in prayer,
That I may walk with God all day.

Away, ye worldly thoughts; begone!
Oft have ye stole this hour from me;
Hence! leave me here with Christ alone!
Help, Lord! that I may wait on thee.

Away, ye friends that fill my sight;
Memory take hence those forms so fair;
Wait till the mercy seat grows bright,*
Then bring their names, and lay them there.

Ye clouds that veil my Savior's face,
Ye trembling doubts and fears depart;—
Come, Savior, grant thy mighty grace—
Come, Holy Spirit, warm my heart.

Kindle devotion's dying flame,
Dispel the gloom of sorrow's night;
O, put my wayward heart in frame,
And help to worship God aright.

*Rev. 16: 2.

For the Crisis.

LINES.

BY S. S. BREWER.

"Wo unto us! for the day goeth away, for the shadows of the evening are stretched out."—Jer.

The last beams of light are faintly declining,
And sentinels sleep, in false science reclining.
The day of God's wrath with wo is advancing,
The gloom gathers fast and lightnings are dancing.

The seven-hilled city already is shaking,
And priest-ridden ones for vengeance are waking;
Wo! wo, to the horn with great words now speaking,
He must soon lick the dust with blood of saints reeking.

From far distant lands each breeze is now bringing
The groans of oppressed, while the war-cry is ringing;
The waves of the deep with portents are moaning,
For the fiat of God Creation is groaning.

The demon of war his clarion is sounding
The nations to wake, the echo is bounding;
America shakes with the prophetic motion,
And nations are trembling across the deep ocean.

O! Earth! Earth! Earth! thy sun is declining,
The last beams of hope upon thee are shining;
Thy morning, thy noon, have both passed away,
And twilight—'tis evening, the light fades away.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Order of God.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

All the works of God are done in order. In his arrangement, "every thing is beautiful in its time." We are impressed with this reflection when we "consider the heavens, the work of" His "fingers,"—the sun walking in his glowing brightness, the moon radiating borrowed light from her silvery throne, and the charming order of the twinkling stars; and when contemplating the harmony of the controlling elements of celestial power,—attraction and gravitation, the centripetal and centrifugal forces; and, also, the changes of the seasons, each in its appointed time; the wise and benevolent arrangement of the parts and parcels of earth and ocean; the diversity of continents and islands; the concatenation of mountains; the variety of hills; the extensiveness of plains; the contiguousness of forests; the sinuosity of valleys and ravines; the upleaping of the waters of the multitudes of sparkling fountains; the divers brooks, ponds, pools and rills; the various and peculiar productions of different countries. adapted to the peculiar atmosphere of those different countries, for the sustenance of man; and animals; the rolling rivers; the beautiful lakes; the several seas; the many grades, forms and colors of the human and animal tribes that "live, move, and have a being" here on earth, on and in the air.

And, I may also remark, the order of design is conspicuous in every department of God's arrangement. The "fowl," that fly "in the open firmament of heaven," are fitted for their changing habitations; the fish of the waters are prepared for their element; and man, who must of necessity come in contact with several kinds of elements, is made capable of making those elements, to a greater or less extent, subserve his purposes of life and happiness. And, so too, the very elements themselves, [illegible] earth, and sea, are adapted to each other; and the properties of all, more [illegible] into and blend with each other [illegible] I may remark, order is a position [illegible] of God. It is not [illegible] only where [illegible] permit [illegible] it exists in the very order [illegible] of all created substances, of all kinds, throughout the entire universe of God; for the Word declares, "ALL THY WORKS ARE PERFECT"!

And will our God thus observe the most perfect order in all the physical workmanship of his hands, and not have respect to order in his "spiritual house"? I trow not. But the order of his house must be of his own appointing and accepting. We cannot beautify the heavens, give the sun his glowing brightness. the moon her silvery beams, the stars their enrapturing lustre, pile up the mountains, open the places of the seas, direct the rolling of the rivers, the changing of the winds, and the movements of the tribes of the waters, earth, and sky: we cannot diversify the heavens, the continents and the oceans. So we cannot make order in the house of God for Him. It is enough, physically, that we submit to his arrangement. So, in the church of God, it is enough that we submit to the order he himself has laid down. Throughout the entire physical creation, everything is arranged with wonderful simplicity. So in the church of God, He has designed the existence and manifestation of perfect simplicity. In the physical creation, order is positive. So, in the church of God, the demand for order is positive.

Throughout the physical creation, order is a universal law. So, in the church of God, he abandons no part to confusion.

What then is our duty in these premises? Answer: "BE YE FOLLOWERS OF GOD AS DEAR CHILDREN."

The order of God's house is in the New Testament; let us read it and submit to it, and thus be Christians in all things!

SCRAPS.—Says Geo. Miller, (in 1827,) "I had believed what others told me, without trying it by the word. I thought that things were getting better and better, and that soon the whole world would be converted. But now I found in the word, that we have not the least scriptural warrant to look for the conversion of the world before the return of our Lord.

I found in the Scriptures, that that which will usher in the glory of the Church, and uninterrupted joy to the Saints, is the return of the Lord Jesus, and that, till then, things will be more or less in confusion.

I found in the word, that the return of Jesus and not death was the hope of Apostolic Christians; and that it became me therefore, to look for his appearing."—Muller's Life p. 48.

For the Crisis.

The Praise of God.

Awake, O my soul, to praise thy Maker and thy God! Art thou destitute of a disposition to praise him? What excuse canst thou plead? Has he not done thee good, and that continually? He has blessed thee with the fruits of the earth, and creature comforts. He has brought within thy reach the means of saving grace. He offers thee an eternal life of blessedness in his kingdom. Awake, and praise him!

E. B.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

From Sister Abby G. Perry.

BRO. GRANT: I wish to say a few words to the brethren and sisters, who were at the Wilbraham camp meeting; and to all who "love the appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." I had never been permitted to see but a few of those of like precious faith, previous to that meeting. but the short acquaintance formed with the children of the kingdom in that place, will never be forgotten while life, and thought, and being last. I love them because they are pilgrims and strangers in this world of pain and death.

Dear brethren and sisters, I feel that I am truly a pilgrim and stranger, journeying to the land of promise—that "rest that remaineth for the people of God."

O, how it did cheer my heart to hear others tell of their trials and persecutions, and their determination to press forward in the straight and narrow way, that leadeth unto life. I think mother and myself prised the meeting more than some did, from the fact that we do not have the privilege of attending meeting very often, except where we cannot speak our faith without being reproached for it. We are alone, yet not alone, for God and Christ are with us; and if they are for us, who can be against us? I fear not the reproach of men, nor their revilings, for their time is short, and their destruction is near. I am often led to exclaim, "O that they would be wise!" O that they would listen to the notes of warning that are sounding in their ears, ere it shall be forever too late; but they will not, for we are living in the days spoken of by the apostle, "when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own hearts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." It is even so in these days. Truly, "Darkness covers the earth, and gross darkness the people;" therefore I am looking for the Lord to "arise upon Zion, and his glory shall be seen upon her," "for the Lord hath chosen Zion: he hath desired it for his habitation. This is my rest forever: here will I dwell; for I have desired it." Do we believe what God has spoken, or something else? "Thou shalt arise, and have mercy upon Zion: for the time to favor her, yea, the set time is come. For thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and favor the dust thereof. So the heathen shall fear the name of the Lord, and all kings of the earth thy glory. When the Lord shall build up Zion. he shall appear in his glory!"

Let us who are looking for his appearing. believe he will build up Zion, or I fear he will say to us, as he did to his disciples, after his resurrection,—"O fools! and slow of heart to believe all the prophets have spoken." I am seeking after truth as for hid treasures—searching the scriptures to find out what the prophets have spoken concerning Christ and his work; for he has a work to do when he comes. Listen to the prophet: "Behold the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world, say ye to the daughter of Zion, behold thy salvation cometh; behold his reward is with him, and his work before him."

Again, listen to the beloved John: "The seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever." Again, Dan. 7: 21: "I beheld and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them; until the ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High, and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom." Verse 27: "And the kingdom and dominion and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him," (Christ,) "For he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet." 1 Cor. 15: 25. Isaiah says, "Behold a King shall rule in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." Rev. 20 "And they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years." Jeremiah 23: "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is the name whereby he shall be called, "The Lord Our Righteousness."

It must be plain to every Bible student, that we are near the close of "Gentile times." "And Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Lk. 21: 24.—"Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name. And to this agree the words of the Prophets; as it is written, 'after this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up.'" Acts 15: 14, 16. "God hath not cast away his people which he foreknew." "For I would not brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery; that blindness in part has happened unto Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." Rom. 11: 2, 25.

Brethren and Sisters, let us "search the Scriptures" daily, to see if these things are so. O let us rejoice, that notwithstanding the earth is now filled with oppression and violence, the promise is "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Isa. 11: 9. Glory be to God. I believe it, and my prayer is day by day, "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth, as it is done in heaven." Amen.

Pray for me Brethren and Sisters, that I may be "kept by the power of God, through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time."

Your sister,
ABBY A. PERRY.

SCOTLAND, Windham Co., Conn.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LINES.

BY MARIA

Air.—"All the old folks are gone."

Long, long a pilgrim here I've wandered,
Sadly and lone,
My heart still ever turning heavenward,
I look for my Savior to come;
And after all my weary roaming,
Life's journey done,
With the "ransomed" ones on Zion standing
To gather round his throne.
Now I wander sad and lonely,
But my Lord will come;
And waken all the saints immortal,
And take to a glorious home.

Here I've toiled 'mid pain and weeping—
Gone, gone from me;
All the loved of earth in dust are sleeping,
From care and sorrow free.
Still to my heart is whispering sweetly,
Hope, "blessed Hope,"—
Oh Time, thy moments passing fleetly
Bid me with joy look up.
Here I wander sad and lonely,
Sighing for my home;
The grave has those I loved so fondly,
All, all the dear ones are gone.

O, where Life's tree is gently waving,
There I shall rest;
That shore, the crystal waters laving,
By angel-footsteps prest.
And to that land I know that parting
Never can come,—
O, from my eyes the tears are starting,
I long from this world to be gone.
Though I wander sad and lonely,
Jesus soon will come;
All, all the parted ones uniting
In one eternal home.

Choice Selections.

Sketches of Sermons.

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

NUMBER I.

Christian Stability.

"Believe in the Lord your God, so shall ye be established."—2 Chron. xx. 20.

I. Instability is censured. "Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel. Gen, xlix. 4. "For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed. For let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord. A double minded man in unstable in all his ways." James i. 6, 8.

II. Christians should be stable.

1. IN THEIR FAITH—thus: Acts xvi. 5. "And so were the churches established in the faith, and increased in number daily. That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive." Eph. iv. 14. Thus Paul exhorts: "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong. 1 Cor. xvi. 13.

2. IN THEIR HOPE. "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ." 1 Pet. i. 13. "And you that were sometimes alienated, and enemies in your minds by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled, in the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy, and unblamable. and unreprovable in his sight: if ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard, and which was preached to every creature under heaven: whereof I Paul am made a minister."—Col. i, 21–23.

3. IN THEIR PRACTICE. "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." 1 Cor. xv. 58. "Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, comfort your hearts, and stablish you in every good word and work." 2 Thess. ii. 16, 17.

III. We are dependent on God for stability. "Now he which stablisheth us with you in Christ, and hath anointed us, is God, who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in your hearts." 2 Cor. i, 22, 23. "But the Lord is faithful, who shall establish you, and to comfort you concerning the faith." 2 Thess. iii. 3.

To accomplish the work of establishing his people, he employs his servants. Thus Paul says: "For I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift, to the end ye may be established." Rom. i. 11. And again he says: "Wherefore, when we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone; and sent Timotheus, our brother, and minister of God, and our fellow laborer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you, and to comfort you concerning the faith."

IV. Motives which should cause us to be stable.

1. Because we are forming ourselves for a future state of existence. If we possess an evil disposition or character here, we must possess it while we exist. How important, then, that we form our character correctly. Soon shall it be said, "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he that is filthy, let him be filthy still; and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still." Rev. xxii. 11. Oh, then let us watch, and pray, and be established in the truth. "To the end he may stablish your hearts unblamable in holiness before God even our father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints." 1 Thess. iii. 13.

2. Because the time is short. Our account must soon be rendered up—behold the Judge stands before the door. "Stablish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." James v. 8. The day is at hand when every man's work will be tried, and when God shall stereotype the character of his people! O brethren! "Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines; for it is a good thing that the heart be established in grace; not with meats, which have not profited them that have been occupied therein." Heb. xiii. 9. Let your hearts be fixed, trusting in the Lord—your minds stayed on God, and your hope like an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast.

V. The condition of stability.

This is faith in God. Believe in the Lord God, so shall ye be established—believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper. "If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established." Is. vii. 9. O Lord, increase our faith! "And may the God of grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that we have suffered a while, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you." 1 Pet. v. 10.

Brethren, stand fast; resist the devil; overcome the world; fight the good fight; lay hold on eternal life; keep your passions in subjection; and endure unto the end. Grace be with you. Amen.

"Bearing the Cross."

[BRO. GRANT:—The following article I take from the Expositor of Aug. 1st., copied for that paper from the Bible Examiner of 1849, in which the original article appeared. It is so full of truth that the Church need in this time of trial, I am induced to send it, hoping it may be a help to some pilgrim in the cross-bearing way.—EVELINE J. RIPLEY.]

Much is said among professed christians about "bearing the cross;" but we fear little is understood or really practiced in this matter. Some seem to think speaking in meeting is the cross they must bear; and when they have done that, they think little more about the cross. We apprehend that is a very small item in bearing the cross. Men are all naturally in love with this present world.

To this world we must become crucified. Crucifiixion is a hard death; but few persons are willing to die such a death; there is, however, no other way of entering into the kingdom of God. We must be "crucified unto the world, and the world unto us." Most professed christians, it is to be feared, have made a covenant with the world, not to part with it; and the tempter satisfies them, if they speak in meeting sometimes and give something to support the gospel, they may keep their covenant with the world; but "if any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him." 1 John, 2: 15.

How then are we to be separated from the love of the world, and be crucified unto it? First.—By a believing view of the Lord Jesus Christ, who became poor—was dispised of men—a man of sorrows, acquainted with grief—endured reproach—resisted temptation, though he "suffered, being tempted"—when he was reviled, reviled not again—murmured not, though wounded—bruised—put to grief, and his soul made an offering for sin—scourged—spit upon—his hands and feet pierced with nails—his soul in agony—all this he bore, and no lisp of impatience ever escaped him.

Would you be crucified unto the world? go learn of Him, contemplate his poverty, his life, his sufferings, his resignation, his patience, his loving and forbearing spirit, till the whole mind is humbled within you; and then realize this truth—"If so be that we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified together." Rom. 8: 17.

Do you ask what it is to suffer with him? We answer. To suffer with the same meek, patient, forgiving, resigned spirit that he had.

This leads us to say, secondly, if you would bear your cross and be crucified unto the world—remember, every trial of your life, whether temporal or spiritual, personal or family, from friends or enemies, direct or indirect, great or small, of short continuance or long, or whatever be the nature or character of it, is by the appointment, or permission of that God who willeth not the death of a sinner, but who is seeking by all these trials to crucify you unto the world, and fit you to be glorified with his Son Jesus Christ. How shall this design of our Heavenly Father be accomplished? It cannot be, unless you "bear your cross."

Do you ask again, what is it to bear my cross? It is to suffer all the trials of which we have spoken, patiently. You are not to quarrel with the instrumentality God may employ, nor indulge in fretfulness under it. If you do, you do not "bear the cross." And though you should speak like an angel in meeting, yet if you fret and complain under any of the trials of life, by which God is seeking to crucify you unto the world, it is hypocrisy for you to talk about your "bearing the cross."

You are but deceiving your own souls. God has assured us "all things work together for good to them that love Him." Yet you can murmur, fret, and complain at those things which God has permitted or appointed. Alas! do not dream you are ripening for the kingdom of God while this is the case. No, you are ripening for death, for perdition.

Saith our Savior "In your patience possess ye your souls." We shall learn soon, or when it is too late that these words are words of solemn, awful import. If you indulge in murmuring, complaining, or impatience at any trials, insult, sufferings, or injuries, from whatever instrumentality they may come, and that spirit is increasing upon you, you are just as surely traveling in the road to perdition as God has said,—"The soul that sinneth, it shall die."

We speak not now of one "overtaken in a fault." to which all are liable in the hour of temptation; and it is increasing, except we bear our cross daily, for every day will bring some cross in some form. Happy the soul who is continually looking to God for grace to bear every cross! He may pray to have the cross removed; but we may not pray for it only in submission to the will of God. "If it be possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless not my will, but thine, be done." That is our example, and we cannot safely follow any other. "My grace is sufficient for thee," will often be the answer; and did we know now what we shall know hereafter, we should praise God even now, that he does not leave us to our own way, lest we should be like the children of Israel, whose impatient murmurings were answered by giving them "flesh," but "leanness" was "sent into their souls."

Be patient in all things; that is, bearing thy cross. Then, when Christ appears, you shall have a crown!

Suffering with Christ.

Multitudes of people seem desirous to enjoy the glory of Christ in his future, eternal kingdom, who are unwilling to listen for a moment to the doctrine of suffering with Him. The idea of self-denial, self-sacrafice, or self-crucifixion is quite out of the question with them. Not for a moment will they think of renouncing their pursuit of pleasure, wealth, honor and fame that they may gain an eternal and blessed inheritance. Not for a moment will they think of giving all they have, and are, and ever shall possess, for Christ and his cause, that they may live with Him in glory. They seem to conclude that the Almighty is under some particular obligation to them, to grant them all there is to be enjoyed in life, sinful or otherwise, and then to give them future blessedness, in an equal or more abundant degree with those who have toiled, struggled, and died, that through grace they might obtain the crown of immortality. But these poor dreamers will at length find that they have made a fatal mistake. How is it written? "And if children. then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we SUFFER with him, that we may be also glorified together." Rom. 8: 17. "It is a faithful saying: For if we be dead with him, we shall also live with him. If we SUFFER, we shall also reign with him; if we deny him, he also will deny us." 2 Tim. 2: 11, 12. "Confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God." Acts 14: 22. Who are those that shall wear the white robes, and bear the victorious palms, and triumphantly sing, "Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne. and unto the Lamb." Rev. 7: 10. "These are they which came out of GREAT TRIBULATION, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.—Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple; and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them. They shall hunger no more; neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the thorne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters; and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." Rev. 7: 14–17. "And I saw as it were, a sea of glass mingled with fire: and them that had GOTTEN THE VICTORY over the beast, and over his image, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea of glass, having the harps of God. And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou king of saints." Rev. 15: 2, 3. God has made choice of his people in "a furnace of affliction." He calls upon them to "glorify" Him "in the fires"—that is, in the fires of tribulation, I take it. Patriarchs, prophets, wise men, apostles, martyrs, and adorable Redeemer himself, have suffered, agonized, and labored, in view of the joy set before them, and shall we be made exceptions? Not that I would intimate that we merit the favor of God by suffering. Far from that. But we make manifest our love and attachment to our Lord and His truth, in patiently and joyfully suffering with Him; and also manifest to the world the importance and blessedness of our hope; and prepare more gratefully to enter into our future rest. It "Will make the glory sweeter,

And raise the praises higher,
And we shall be completer
When purified by fire."

We may not suffer as others have done before us, that is, in the same manner.—We may not "sail through bloody seas," or ride on "fiery wheels," or waste under captivity, or writhe under the scourge Nor shall we suffer in the same form with our Master. Ours will not be the Roman cross, the crown of thorns, the vinegar and the gall, and the shameful spitting. But there are mental agonies, unwelcome reproaches for truth's sake, and self-sacrifices for the sake of the cause of righteousness, to be endured by us, and which as Christians we must endure. Let us take up our cross, and eventually wear the crown.—A. B.—[Independent.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE. | PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | NUMBER 107, HANOVER STREET BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1856. WHOLE NO. 65. VOL. IV. NO. 13.

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE

Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ,

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS,	MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH,	GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Incidents by the Way.

No. IX.

BY S. S. BREWER.

We arrived safely at New Bedford, and in company with Eld. J. S. White, put up at Bro Vinal's; was kindly received, and the next morning, Sunday, Oct. 16, was conveyed to Fair Haven, where we spent the day in the presentation of the history of this world, both in the past and present, as it is written by holy men of old. It was good to be there.

Monday, 20th, we took leave of the tried friends of the cause of God, in Fair Haven, and were soon our way to Providence, where we arrived in safety, thankful to God for his preserving care and mercies.

The evening has come. She has drawn her curtain around, and hung her lamps on high. The sound of music is heard in the distance. The political clans are gathering. The huzza for freedom is making the welkin ring. Banner's are borne aloft graven by the art of man's device. Both parties are sanguine with the expectation of victory; one is doomed to chagrin and disappointment. I turned away and exclaimed with gratitude,—"Thanks be to God, the saints are sure to have their candidate, and very, very soon he will be seen in his beauty, seated on his throne in all the glory and grandeur of his Father, swaying a sceptre of righteousness "from the river to the end of the earth," in the kingdom that never shall end.

We left our home on Friday, Oct. 4th, and were soon seated in a railroad car for Boston.

"Well," said an elderly man, "what do you think of this unparalelled excitement in the political world?"

"Why, friend, it is what we have every four years, only this is more so."

"Yes, truly," he replied, "it takes all this time. Even the ministers, yes, and women too, attend the meetings. The fact is, there is a question at issue, and now that it is fairly before this great confederacy, you may depend it will result in a better stare of things very soon."

"Yes, yes, friend: this present state of feverish excitement, not only here among our President-making demagoues, but all over the world, will result in a better state of things very soon.'"

"Ah! do you think so?"

"Why, most certainly I do."

"Well, what is your opinion concerning the matter?"

"Why, sir, I have the most unlimited confidence in all that God has spoken by the mouth of the holy prophets since the world began. Our candidate is an heaven-appointed one; and the youngest hair is evidently within a very few days of age, and then all the heirs that have been kept so long out of their inheritance by the squatter sovereignty, of popes, kings, wicked men, and death, will enter into the peaceable possession of their lawful inheritance."

"You don't mean to say that you believe in the doctrine of the Second Advent?"

"Most certainly I do."

"Why, I thought the doctrine of Millerism was dead long ago. If it is not, I should think it would be, and the poor Millerites give it up."

"My dear friend, instead of being poor, the class of Millerites that have been sanctified and kept by the truth, are richer, and profess more royal dignity than any potentate on earth. Poor! poor!—why, we feel like the dying Ethiopean; let me relate the circumstance. 'An old African Negro, who had long served the Lord, when on his death-bed was visited by his friends, who came around him, lamenting that he was going to die, saying, 'Poor Pompey, poor Pompey is dying!' The old saint, animated with the prospect before him, said to them with much earnestness, 'Don't call me poor Pompey.—I KING Pompey:' referring to that passage in which the saints are spoken of as being made 'kings and priests with God.''—Yes, dear friend, that precious stone, taken out of such a quarry, despised by the rich and great, he will shine in the kingdom when God brings him up out of the grave."

"What did you say?—'when God brings him up out of his grave?'"

"Yes, I did.'

"Don't you believe he has gone to be with Jesus?"

"No; I do not; for Jesus declared to his disciples,—'Whither I go ye cannot come;' and 'I will come again and receive you to myself, that where I am, there ye may be also.'"

"O, I see, you believe in the doctrine of George Storrs."

"No sir; it is not in his doctrine I believe, but in the harmonious testimony of prophets and apostles, as I understand them."

"Did you ever read the Rev. Luther Lee's book?"

"Yes, sir, I have."

"Don't you think it is a powerful argument?"

"To be honest with you, I think it is powerful weak; and if you compare the Bible testimony of a soul, you will think so too. So far as my memory serves me, he defines the immortal soul to be a simple essence, uncompounded, indivisible, without interior or exterior surface, immaterial, intangible, without body or parts, indissoluble, consequently it is immortal. His opinion is entirely different from that of the apostle, Acts 27: 37.—'And we were all in the ship two hundred, threescore and fifteen souls.' Verse 44, 'And the rest, some on boards, and some on broken pieces of the ship. And so it came to pass that they all escaped safe to land.' Who would have ever known of such simple essences, such incomprehensible, invisible substances, arriving safe to land, when in fact, according to such a metaphysical description, there was nothing of them. To give you, in fine, my opinion:

'He was in logic a great critic,
Profoundly skilled in analytic;
He could distinguish and divide
A hair, 'twixt south and south-west side.'"

"What is your faith now as regards the time?

So far as my faith is concerned in this great practical doctrine, I am perfectly satisfied the next event, mapped out on the chart of Revelation, is the coming of the Son of man. If you will examine the matter carefully, I most conscientiously believe you will arrive at the same conclusion. We have all the signs in the past, and the condition of the nations is precisely such as to warrant us a clear conscience in saying we look for him, whom not having seen we love, and whom loving, we rejoice with joy unspeakable, and at times, full of glory. I do not expect any change for the bettes until he comes; and all that do, will meet with a sad disappointment. Evil men and seducers share wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived.' The hirelings will continue to divine for money until the judgment opens. In the language of one,—

'No sign of change appeared; to every man
That day seemed as the past. From noon-day path
The sun looked gloriously on earth, and all
Her scenes of giddy folly smiled secure.
When suddenly, alas, fair earth! the sun
Was wrapt in darkness, and his beams returned
Up to the throne of God; and over all
The earth came night, moonless and starless night.'"

For the Crisis.

The Lord's Day.

BY W. SHEPHERD.

No. II.

Peter called it the "day of the Lord," and "the day of God." 2 Pet. 3: 10, 12. The Revelator styles it, "the great day of his (God's) wrath." Rev. 6: 17. But as there are so many of the like expressions in the writings of the holy prophets, evangelists, and apostles, an ordinary space of time would fail us to advert to them all; hence, let what has already been adduced suffice. No doubt all, or quite all, have allusion to "the Lord's day." They point us to that eventful era, which will positively be introduced under the emptyings of the awful contents of the seventh and last of the series of plague-vials, which is coincident with the more sensible and manifest soundings of the seventh trumpet; when God shall arise in the majesty of his might to judge the wicked nations and kings of the earth; when "he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shell gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven, even to the other;" and when all the tribes of the earth shall mourn, on beholding the sight of that blessed One, who shall then sit upon his spotless throne, even "the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory," who shall come, and raise the sleeping myriads of the sanctified, clothing them with incorruptibility, together with all in waiting, "who remain and are alive,"—destroying those which destroy or corrupt the earth, with an everlasting destruction from his presence,—establishing his glorious kingdom which shall endure forever, and all dominions shall serve and obey him. But this is anticipating the subject.

Let us come at once to the examination of those events which have their accomplishment in "the day of the Lord," which will enable us to determine to a perfect demonstration, what the character of "that day" is, its object and final results, and how we should regard the same; which will be considering the third and last section.

3. Their respective associations and events are inseparably connected.

We find from examination, that the events which are predicted to transpire in the great day, are of a momentous nature; yea, events that are of such a character as will lead us to conclude at once that "that day" is yet in the future; that it has not yet been introduced into the economy of the Almighty. To this end we shall proceed to trace the sacred records for proof.

Observe, at the "set time" for Zion, God is to arise in order to beat down her enemies, to favor her, and to build her up; or, as St. James affirms,—"build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down." Acts 15: 15. What then? why he is to "appear in his glory." How is he to appear? "Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined. Our God shall come (to Zion) and shall not keep silence; a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. He shall call to the heavens from above and to the earth that he may judge his people. Gather my saints together unto me." Ps. 50: 2, 3, 4, 5. But this is not all, for in "that day" he is to send the rod of his strength (the Messiah) out of Zion, to rule in the midst of his enemies; who will strike through kings "at that time," and judge among the heathen, and "fill the places with the dead bodies," and "wound the heads over many countries." Ps. 110.

The Messiah-king, God will establish upon his holy hill—Zion. Then the heathen are to be given unto him for an inheritance, "and the uttermost parts of the earth" for a possession; the same, he will break with a rod of iron, and dash to pieces like a potter's vessel. Ps. 2. It is then the Redeemer shall stand and feed in the strength of the Lord, in the majesty of the name of the Lord his God, and they (his people) shall abide; for now shall he be great unto the ends of the earth;" made "higher than the kings of the earth;" consevuently, fully capacitated to "judge the poor of the people. He shall save the children of the needy," and fail not to exterminate "the oppressor." "In his days shall the righteous flourish, and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth."—The dwellers in the wilderness shall bow before him, and his enemies shall lick the dust;" and "he shall have dominions also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." "His name shall endure forever: * * and men shall be blessed in him; all nations shall call him blessed." God shall increase his greatness and comfort him on every side. And "the glory of the Lord shall endure forever, and the Lord shall rejoice in his works." Ps. 72: 71: 21.

Thus, we find in "that day" God intends to build up Zion, while his anointed One is to set upon the restored throne of David, and sway his righteous sceptre over the renewed earth.

Again. In harmony with this testimony, the prophet informs us,—in "that day of the Lord of hosts," men's stubborn hearts will be subdued, their pride will be stricken down; for "that day" "shall be upon every one that is proud and lofty, and upon every one that is lifted up, and he shall be brought low." "And the loftiness of man shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of men, shall be made low; and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day." And the idols he shall utterly abolish. And they (the wicked) shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth. In that day a man shall cast his idols of silver, and his idols of gold, which they made each one for himself to worship, to the moles and to the bats." Isa. 2: 12—20.

"In that day seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, we will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel; only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach." In that day shall the Branch (the Messiah) of the Lord be (not as it was on his first advent, "as a root out of a dry ground" having "no form nor comeliness," but,) beautiful and glorious, and the fruit of the earth shall be excellent and comely for them that are escaped of Israel." "But the Lord of hosts shall be scattered in judgment, and God that is holy shall be sanctified in righteousness," Isa. 4: 1, 2; 5: 16.

We are also instructed, that while it is a time of joy for the saints, it is not less one of grief and terror to the sinner; yea it is a day of awful retribution to all the ungodly. Observe. Howl ye; for the day of the Lord is at hand; it shall come as a destruction from the Almighty.—Therefore shall all hands be faint, and every man's heart shall melt; and they (the wicked) shall be afraid; pangs and sorrows shall take hold of them; they shall be in pain, as a woman that travaileth; they shall be amazed one at another; their faces shall be as flames. Behold, the day of the Lord cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land desolate: and he shall destroy the sinners thereof out of it. For the stars of heaven and constellations thereof shall not give their light; the sun shall be darkened in his going forth, and I will punish the world for their evil, and the wicked for their iniquity; and I will cause the arrogancy of the proud to cease, and will lay low the haughtiness of the terrible." Isa. 13: 6—11. "For it is the day of the Lord's vengeance, and the year of recompences for the controversy of Zion." Isa. 34: 8.

As we remarked before in connection with the punishment upon the wicked, songs of victory are chanted by the redeemed. For we read, "in that day shall this song be sung in the land of Judah;—we have a strong city; salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks." While in the same chapter it is written, "Behold, the Lord cometh out of his place, to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity." Isa. 26: 21.

Again, it marks that era when the eternal Jehovah "will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off the earth." And when in the mountain of his holiness, he will furnish a "feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow." "And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations." Isa. 25: At this time the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously;" when they shall be gathered together in one, and shall worship the Lord in the holy Mount at Jerusalem, which shall then be rendered the joy of the whole earth. Isa. 24: and 27: 13.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

Letters to a Friend.

BY T. F. SARGENT.

No. III.

MY DEAR SR:—The standard of the world is,—"What will people think?" and it seems by your epistles that you have before your mind the standard—"What will the church think, or that professed Bro. or Sr.?" There is a class of professed christians who are always down on their knees, feeling for the dividing line between Christ and the world. It is a bad sign when one is willing to go so far in a wrong direction as he thinks "it will do" to go. That which would be considered about right, is not a rule of action which is likely to prove satisfactory. One of the great evils of the age, is a willingness to be lost in the mass,—a merging of the sense of individual responsibility—floating along on the current. How is any one to stand against it? Our weapons in this warfare are not carnal; Jesus Christ has pledged his word, to help in every time of need, and to give the kingdom to the little flock who endure to the end. Now as every one has got to give account for himself, it seems to me that it is every one's duty and privilege to think for himself. If we are liable to make mistakes when attempting to think for ourselves, we are sure to do so in permitting others to think for us. The Bible, (not professed christians) is a sufficient rule of faith and practice. The company of professors who stand together to keep each other in countenance, are to be judged one by one. The thought that while here we did as well as others, will afford us no comfort then, nor will the Judge allow it any weight. Why should we allow it any now?

"How much there is self-will would do,
Were it not for the dire dismay,
That bids ye shrink, as ye suddenly think,
Of 'what will my neighbor say?'"

It should be, what will my Lord say? My most earnest prayer is that we may be kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time.

Dear sister, in replying to your "questions of conscience," it appears to me that most of them have reference to the conscience of others, rather than your own. As the great Creator has given each one of us a conscience, there is no occasion for borrowing of our neighbors. It is to be lamented that many who have made shipwreck of their faith in the coming of Jesus, have been thus led, by taking the consciences of others, rather than their own or the Spirit's teachings.

That person who strives to weave an influence around another, so that they will speak as they speak, pray as they pray, and act as they act, is guilty of a sin of the most atrocious character; and such, who have been thus led, invariably, in time of trial and disappointment, backslide, or give up their faith in God. "Alone we stand, or fall to our Master."

I would warn you to beware of the enemy's gaining advantage of you in your trial, of treachery of friends, especially those who profess to be followers of Jesus, for it is a tender spot, and Satan will the more easily snare. David had like trials; he says if it had been an enemy, he would have borne it, but it was his friend, guide, with whom he had walked to the house of God, and taken sweet counsel. Ah,

"The poisoned smile, the broken faith
Of those I fondly deemed sincere,
Have almost taught me how to hate,
And echo back the gibe and jeer;"

But I now feel the Lord keeps me.—Bless His holy name.

To love God with all the heart, is a great profession, but we have a great Savior.—Let us trust him fully. O the bliss in being conquered! My soul thanks my infinite Redeemer for his soul-subduing power.

Your question, "If the love of God triumphs in the heart, will it absorb the natural affections, so that we shall not love our own families and friends better than others? Must I make an effort to take all my sympathies and affections from every body, and let the Lord place them? Most erroneous ideas, contrary to the whole tenor of the Scriptures! Verily this would not be the result. Believing the affirmative of your questions, has led in the past and present, to spiritual wifery, broken friendship, and many evils too numerous to mention.

God from the beginning instituted the family relations, and has given us these natural sympathies and affections. All that he has given is good, provided it be enjoyed as his gift and not separated from him. You recollect Paul mentions as one result of heathenism, that they were without natural affection; and Christ illustrates his love to the church, by husband and wife, (one flesh) mother and child; and it seems that John was the beloved disciple. Our affections sanctified cover the whole ground,—love to God and man. If we are taught by the Spirit we shall learn to look upon all our friends as belonging to God, and shall love them rather for his sake than our own: we shall regard all the duties growing out of the several relations of life, as so many things which God has given us to do for his children, and consequently as so many methods and opportunities of showing our love to Him. We are commanded to obey our parents in the Lord; to marry in the Lord; but where we see family duties discharged in the most perfect manner, where the children bask in the smile of their parents, and the parents live for them and for each other,—this is only self-love refined and expended—God is not there; they live and move and have their being in each other, when they ought to have it in the Lord. Loving God supremely, does not imply that I cannot love relatives and friends. We have the promise if we seek the kingdom first, all things needful shall be added. If we seek or desire the praise of men, it will bring a snare. They that will be rich whether it be in gold, or in golden opinions,—"fall into a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men's souls in perdition." The moment we are given up to God—the Spirit witnesseth with ours—it then is easy to love all of God's creatures for his sake. "We must sweetly take the commands and grace together." We are to love and pray for our enemies, to do good to all, especially to the saints; love more than those who love us; salute more than our brethren, or else, what do we more than the Pharisees, or hypocrites?

Jesus Christ mingled with the wicked and ungodly, to do them good. The Bible definition of pure religion [illegible] is not to shut ourselves up, and [illegible] a very few choice friends and [illegible] others, no, no. What [illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 107, HANOVER STREET BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 26, 1856. WHOLE NO. 65. VOL. IV. NO. 13.

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ,

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS,	MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH,	GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Incidents by the Way.

No. IX.

BY S. S. BREWER.

We arrived safely at New Bedford, and in company with Eld. J. S. White, put up at Bro Vinal's; was kindly received, and the next morning, Sunday, Oct. 16, was conveyed to Fair Haven, where we spent the day in the presentation of the history of this world, both in the past and present, as it is written by holy men of old. It was good to be there.

Monday, 20th, we took leave of the tried friends of the cause of God, in Fair Haven, and were soon our way to Providence, where we arrived in safety, thankful to God for his preserving care and mercies.

The evening has come. She has drawn her curtain around, and hung her lamps on high. The sound of music is heard in the distance. The political clans are gathering. The huzza for freedom is making the welkin ring. Banner's are borne aloft graven by the art of man's device. Both parties are sanguine with the expectation of victory; one is doomed to chagrin and disappointment. I turned away and exclaimed with gratitude,—"Thanks be to God, the saints are sure to have their candidate, and very, very soon he will be seen in his beauty, seated on his throne in all the glory and grandeur of his Father, swaying a sceptre of righteousness "from the river to the end of the earth," in the kingdom that never shall end.

We left our home on Friday, Oct. 4th, and were soon seated in a railroad car for Boston.

"Well," said an elderly man, "what do you think of this unparalelled excitement in the political world?"

"Why, friend, it is what we have every four years, only this is more so."

"Yes, truly," he replied, "it takes all this time. Even the ministers, yes, and women too, attend the meetings. The fact is, there is a question at issue, and now that it is fairly before this great confederacy, you may depend it will result in a better stare of things very soon."

"Yes, yes, friend: this present state of feverish excitement, not only here among our President-making demagoues, but all over the world, will result in a better state of things very soon.'"

"Ah! do you think so?"

"Why, most certainly I do."

"Well, what is your opinion concerning the matter?"

"Why, sir, I have the most unlimited confidence in all that God has spoken by the mouth of the holy prophets since the world began. Our candidate is an heaven-appointed one, and the youngest hair is evidently within a very few days of age, and then all the heirs that have been kept so long out of their inheritance by the squatter sovereignty, of popes, kings, wicked men, and death, will enter into the peaceable possession of their lawful inheritance."

"You don't mean to say that you believe in the doctrine of the Second Advent?"

"Most certainly I do."

"Why, I thought the doctrine of Millerism was dead long ago. If it is not, I should think it would be, and the poor Millerites give it up."

"My dear friend, instead of being poor, the class of Millerites that have been sanctified and kept by the truth, are richer, and profess more royal dignity than any potentate on earth. Poor! poor!—why, we feel like the dying Ethiopean; let me relate the circumstance. 'An old African Negro, who had long served the Lord, when on his death-bed was visited by his friends, who came around him, lamenting that he was going to die, saying, 'Poor Pompey, poor Pompey is dying!' The old saint, animated with the prospect before him, said to them with much earnestness, 'Don't call me poor Pompey.—I KING Pompey:' referring to that passage in which the saints are spoken of as being made 'kings and priests with God.''—Yes, dear friend, that precious stone, taken out of such a quarry, despised by the rich and great, he will shine in the kingdom when God brings him up out of the grave."

"What did you say?—'when God brings him up out of his grave?'"

"Yes, I did.'

"Don't you believe he has gone to be with Jesus?"

"No; I do not; for Jesus declared to his disciples,—'Whither I go ye cannot come;' and 'I will come again and receive you to myself, that where I am, there ye may be also.'"

"O, I see, you believe in the doctrine of George Storrs."

"No sir; it is not in his doctrine I believe, but in the harmonious testimony of prophets and apostles, as I understand them."

"Did you ever read the Rev. Luther Lee's book?"

"Yes, sir, I have."

"Don't you think it is a powerful argument?"

"To be honest with you, I think it is powerful weak; and if you compare the Bible testimony of a soul, you will think so too. So far as my memory serves me, he defines the immortal soul to be a simple essence, uncompounded, indivisible, without interior or exterior surface, immaterial, intangible, without body or parts, indissoluble, consequently it is immortal. His opinion is entirely different from that of the apostle, Acts 27: 37.—'And we were all in the ship two hundred, threescore and fifteen souls.' Verse 44, 'And the rest, some on boards, and some on broken pieces of the ship. And so it came to pass that they all escaped safe to land.' Who would have ever known of such simple essences, such incomprehensible, invisible substances, arriving safe to land, when in fact, according to such a metaphysical description, there was nothing of them. To give you, in fine, my opinion:

'He was in logic a great critic,
Profoundly skilled in analytic;
He could distinguish and divide
A hair, 'twixt south and south-west side.'"

"What is your faith now as regards the time?

So far as my faith is concerned in this great practical doctrine, I am perfectly satisfied the next event, mapped out on the chart of Revelation, is the coming of the Son of man. If you will examine the matter carefully, I most conscientiously believe you will arrive at the same conclusion. We have all the signs in the past, and the condition of the nations is precisely such as to warrant us a clear conscience in saying we look for him, whom not having seen we love, and whom loving, we rejoice with joy unspeakable, and at times, full of glory. I do not expect any change for the bettes until he comes; and all that do, will meet with a sad disappointment. Evil men and seducers share wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived.' The hirelings will continue to divine for money until the judgment opens. In the language of one,—

'No sign of change appeared; to every man
That day seemed as the past. From noon-day path
The sun looked gloriously on earth, and all
Her scenes of giddy folly smiled secure.
When suddenly, alas, fair earth! the sun
Was wrapt in darkness, and his beams returned
Up to the throne of God; and over all
The earth came night, moonless and starless night.'"

For the Crisis.

The Lord's Day.

BY W. SHEPHERD.

No. II.

Peter called it the "day of the Lord," and "the day of God." 2 Pet. 3: 10, 12. The Revelator styles it, "the great day of his (God's) wrath." Rev. 6: 17. But as there are so many of the like expressions in the writings of the holy prophets, evangelists, and apostles, an ordinary space of time would fail us to advert to them all; hence, let what has already been adduced suffice. No doubt all, or quite all, have allusion to "the Lord's day." They point us to that eventful era, which will positively be introduced under the emptyings of the awful contents of the seventh and last of the series of plague-vials, which is coincident with the more sensible and manifest soundings of the seventh trumpet; when God shall arise in the majesty of his might to judge the wicked nations and kings of the earth; when "he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shell gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven, even to the other;" and when all the tribes of the earth shall mourn, on beholding the sight of that blessed One, who shall then sit upon his spotless throne, even "the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory," who shall come, and raise the sleeping myriads of the sanctified, clothing them with incorruptibility, together with all in waiting, "who remain and are alive,"—destroying those which destroy or corrupt the earth, with an everlasting destruction from his presence,—establishing his glorious kingdom which shall endure forever, and all dominions shall serve and obey him. But this is anticipating the subject.

Let us come at once to the examination of those events which have their accomplishment in "the day of the Lord," which will enable us to determine to a perfect demonstration, what the character of "that day" is, its object and final results, and how we should regard the same; which will be considering the third and last section.

3. Their respective associations and events are inseparably connected.

We find from examination, that the events which are predicted to transpire in the great day, are of a momentous nature; yea, events that are of such a character as will lead us to conclude at once that "that day" is yet in the future; that it has not yet been introduced into the economy of the Almighty. To this end we shall proceed to trace the sacred records for proof.

Observe, at the "set time" for Zion, God is to arise in order to beat down her enemies, to favor her, and to build her up; or, as St. James affirms,—"build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down." Acts 15: 15. What then? why he is to "appear in his glory." How is he to appear? "Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined. Our God shall come (to Zion) and shall not keep silence; a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. He shall call to the heavens from above and to the earth that he may judge his people. Gather my saints together unto me." Ps. 50: 2, 3, 4, 5. But this is not all, for in "that day" he is to send the rod of his strength (the Messiah) out of Zion, to rule in the midst of his enemies; who will strike through kings "at that time," and judge among the heathen, and "fill the places with the dead bodies," and "wound the heads over many countries." Ps. 110.

The Messiah-king, God will establish upon his holy hill—Zion. Then the heathen are to be given unto him for an inheritance, "and the uttermost parts of the earth" for a possession; the same, he will break with a rod of iron, and dash to pieces like a potter's vessel. Ps. 2. It is then the Redeemer shall stand and feed in the strength of the Lord, in the majesty of the name of the Lord his God, and they (his people) shall abide; for now shall he be great unto the ends of the earth;" made "higher than the kings of the earth;" consevuently, fully capacitated to "judge the poor of the people. He shall save the children of the needy," and fail not to exterminate "the oppressor." "In his days shall the righteous flourish, and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth."—The dwellers in the wilderness shall bow before him, and his enemies shall lick the dust;" and "he shall have dominions also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." "His name shall endure forever: * * and men shall be blessed in him; all nations shall call him blessed." God shall increase his greatness and comfort him on every side. And "the glory of the Lord shall endure forever, and the Lord shall rejoice in his works." Ps. 72: 71: 21.

Thus, we find in "that day" God intends to build up Zion, while his anointed One is to set upon the restored throne of David, and sway his righteous sceptre over the renewed earth.

Again. In harmony with this testimony, the prophet informs us,—in "that day of the Lord of hosts," men's stubborn hearts will be subdued, their pride will be stricken down; for "that day" "shall be upon every one that is proud and lofty, and upon every one that is lifted up, and he shall be brought low." "And the loftiness of man shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of men, shall be made low; and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day." And the idols he shall utterly abolish. And they (the wicked) shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth. In that day a man shall cast his idols of silver, and his idols of gold, which they made each one for himself to worship, to the moles and to the bats." Isa. 2: 12—20.

"In that day seven women shall take hold of one man, saying, we will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel; only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach." In that day shall the Branch (the Messiah) of the Lord be (not as it was on his first advent, "as a root out of a dry ground" having "no form nor comeliness," but,) beautiful and glorious, and the fruit of the earth shall be excellent and comely for them that are escaped of Israel." "But the Lord of hosts shall be scattered in judgment, and God that is holy shall be sanctified in righteousness," Isa. 4: 1, 2; 5: 16.

We are also instructed, that while it is a time of joy for the saints, it is not less one of grief and terror to the sinner; yea it is a day of awful retribution to all the ungodly. Observe. Howl ye; for the day of the Lord is at hand; it shall come as a destruction from the Almighty.—Therefore shall all hands be faint, and every man's heart shall melt; and they (the wicked) shall be afraid; pangs and sorrows shall take hold of them; they shall be in pain, as a woman that travaileth; they shall be amazed one at another; their faces shall be as flames. Behold, the day of the Lord cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land desolate: and he shall destroy the sinners thereof out of it. For the stars of heaven and constellations thereof shall not give their light; the sun shall be darkened in his going forth, and I will punish the world for their evil, and the wicked for their iniquity; and I will cause the arrogancy of the proud to cease, and will lay low the haughtiness of the terrible." Isa 13: 6—11. "For it is the day of the Lord's vengeance, and the year of recompences for the controversy of Zion." Isa. 34: 8.

As we remarked before in connection with the punishment upon the wicked, songs of victory are chanted by the redeemed. For we read, "in that day shall this song be sung in the land of Judah;—we have a strong city; salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks." While in the same chapter it is written, "Behold, the Lord cometh out of his place, to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity." Isa. 26: 21.

Again, it marks that era when the eternal Jehovah "will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off the earth." And when in the mountain of his holiness, he will furnish a "feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow." "And he will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations." Isa. 25: At this time the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously;" when they shall be gathered together in one, and shall worship the Lord in the holy Mount at Jerusalem, which shall then be rendered the joy of the whole earth. Isa. 24: and 27: 13.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

Letters to a Friend.

BY T. F. SARGENT.

No. III.

MY DEAR SR:—The standard of the world is,—"What will people think?" and it seems by your epistles that you have before your mind the standard—"What will the church think, or that professed Bro. or Sr.?" There is a class of professed christians who are always down on their knees, feeling for the dividing line between Christ and the world. It is a bad sign when one is willing to go so far in a wrong direction as he thinks "it will do" to go. That which would be considered about right, is not a rule of action which is likely to prove satisfactory. One of the great evils of the age, is a willingness to be lost in the mass,—a merging of the sense of individual responsibility—floating along on the current. How is any one to stand against it? Our weapons in this warfare are not carnal; Jesus Christ has pledged his word, to help in every time of need, and to give the kingdom to the little flock who endure to the end. Now as every one has got to give account for himself, it seems to me that it is every one's duty and privilege to think for himself. If we are liable to make mistakes when attempting to think for ourselves, we are sure to do so in permitting others to think for us. The Bible, (not professed christians) is a sufficient rule of faith and practice. The company of professors who stand together to keep each other in countenance, are to be judged one by one. The thought that while here we did as well as others, will afford us no comfort then, nor will the Judge allow it any weight. Why should we allow it any now?

"How much there is self-will would do,
Were it not for the dire dismay,
That bids ye shrink, as ye suddenly think,
Of 'what will my neighbor say?'"

It should be, what will my Lord say? My most earnest prayer is that we may be kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time.

Dear sister, in replying to your "questions of conscience," it appears to me that most of them have reference to the conscience of others, rather than your own. As the great Creator has given each one of us a conscience, there is no occasion for borrowing of our neighbors. It is to be lamented that many who have made shipwreck of their faith in the coming of Jesus, have been thus led, by taking the consciences of others, rather than their own or the Spirit's teachings.

That person who strives to weave an influence around another, so that they will speak as they speak, pray as they pray, and act as they act, is guilty of a sin of the most atrocious character; and such, who have been thus led, invariably, in time of trial and disappointment, backslide, or give up their faith in God. "Alone we stand, or fall to our Master."

I would warn you to beware of the enemy's gaining advantage of you in your trial, of treachery of friends, especially those who profess to be followers of Jesus, for it is a tender spot, and Satan will the more easily snare. David had like trials; he says if it had been an enemy, he would have borne it, but it was his friend, guide, with whom he had walked to the house of God, and taken sweet counsel. Ah,

"The poisoned smile, the broken faith
Of those I fondly deemed sincere,
Have almost taught me how to hate,
And echo back the gibe and jeer;"

But I now feel the Lord keeps me.—Bless His holy name.

To love God with all the heart, is a great profession, but we have a great Savior.—Let us trust him fully. O the bliss in being conquered! My soul thanks my infinite Redeemer for his soul-subduing power.

Your question, "If the love of God triumphs in the heart, will it absorb the natural affections, so that we shall not love our own families and friends better than others? Must I make an effort to take all my sympathies and affections from every body, and let the Lord place them? Most erroneous ideas, contrary to the whole tenor of the Scriptures! Verily this would not be the result. Believing the affirmative of your questions, has led in the past and present, to spiritual wifery, broken friendship, and many evils too numerous to mention.

God from the beginning instituted the family relations, and has given us these natural sympathies and affections. All that he has given is good, provided it be enjoyed as his gift and not separated from him. You recollect Paul mentions as one result of heathenism, that they were without natural affection; and Christ illustrates his love to the church, by husband and wife, (one flesh) mother and child; and it seems that John was the beloved disciple. Our affections sanctified cover the whole ground,—love to God and man. If we are taught by the Spirit we shall learn to look upon all our friends as belonging to God, and shall love them rather for his sake than our own: we shall regard all the duties growing out of the several relations of life, as so many things which God has given us to do for his children, and consequently as so many methods and opportunities of showing our love to Him. We are commanded to obey our parents in the Lord; to marry in the Lord; but where we see family duties discharged in the most perfect manner, where the children bask in the smile of their parents, and the parents live for them and for each other,—this is only self-love refined and expended—God is not there; they live and move and have their being in each other, when they ought to have it in the Lord. Loving God supremely, does not imply that I cannot love relatives and friends. We have the promise if we seek the kingdom first, all things needful shall be added. If we seek or desire the praise of men, it will bring a snare. They that will be rich whether it be in gold, or in golden opinions,—"fall into a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men's souls in perdition." The moment we are given up to God—the Spirit witnesseth with ours—it then is easy to love all of God's creatures for his sake. "We must sweetly take the commands and grace together." We are to love and pray for our enemies, to do good to all, especially to the saints, love more than those who love us, salute more than our brethren, or else, what do we more than the Pharisee, or hypocrite?

Jesus Christ mingled with the wicked and ungodly to do them good. The Bible definition of pure religion and [illegible] is not to shut ourselves up, and [illegible] a very few choice friends [illegible] others, no, no. What [illegible] words of those to whom the King shall say, "Come ye blessed of my Father ?"—Read Matt. 25: 31—46. Yes, we can labor anywhere, and keep ourselves "unspotted from the world," if we put on all the Gospel armor.

Dear sister, may the Lord save you from casting off natural affection, but give you grace to keep it sanctified. The Bible is a whole book. There, are directions to meet every emergency in life with harmony in all its parts. We must not take one idea and run that on but the whole; as I wrote you before, we need to study the word and plant our feet upon the rock — We need to be established in the truth.

We are living in the perils of the last days. We understand by the Word, but little faith will be found on earth, when the Lord comes; and while we see the present confusion, as though the earth was reeling to and fro, politically and spiritually, let us strive to make our calling and election sure, for our case is between us and our Lord.

Yours for God and truth.

T. F. S.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, NOVEMBER 26, 1856.

Chistian Union.

NUMBER ONE.

The Bible is particularly plain and pointed in relation to the subject mentioned in our heading.

But we are convinced that but few realize its importance, and the sad effects of disregarding the instruction of our blessed Master on this point.

Although it stands forth in bold relief in almost every chapter of the New Testament, and was made a prominent theme in the discourses of our Savior, still the arch enemy of man has succeeded in splitting the professed church of Christ into almost a thousand fragments, each claiming to be right, and to be sustained by the Bible; while each says, practically, to the other, "I have no need of thee."

Witness the strife for power, and the selfish efforts to gain the ascendency in the honors of the world, in obtaining numbers and influence in advance of their church neighbor, and we think nothing can be plainer, than that christian union exists only in name, except in a few isolated cases.

We are repeatedly taught in the New Testament that the church is the body of Christ, and that we are members in particular.

Judging from the spirit manifested in the present existing churches, would any one suppose they were but parts or members of the same body, and that, the body of Christ?

It sometimes happens that wild maniacs will bite and pound the members of their own body, thus giving the clearest possible proof of their insanity and madness, but a sane healthy man was never known to commit such an outrageous deed.

The Papal church has been noted for its war upon every member of Christ's body, that would not subscribe to her creed and support her policy; and in this way she has presented to the world the clearest evidence of her moral insanity; but who would have supposed that the Protestant churches would ever imitate such an unholy example?

But when we look about us, how sad the spectacle presented, and how little do we see that is in keeping with the following prayer of our Savior,—"Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." John 17: 20, 21.

Let each inquire of himself, have I done or said anything to destroy or prevent the oneness for which our Savior prays? Have I planted, or nourished a "root of bitterness?"

Have I caused a brother or sister to offend? Have I been courteous and kind, a peace-maker, doing as I would be done by? Or have I aided in sowing discord among brethren? Have I assisted to build sectarian pens, and strengthen party prejudices? The Lord declares by his servant, that, "he that soweth discord among brethten" is "an abomination unto him."

Christian union is a subject of great importance, and one that demands special attention at the present time, because much discord exists, and the responsibility of it must fall somewhere; and let us not forget, that if we are the cause of its commencement or continuation, we are abominable in the sight of the Lord so long as we help to produce such a result.

There can be no genuine prosperity where there is not Christian union. If our course has tended to perpetuate petty party interests by defending and upholding Satan's sectarian walls, let us repent, that we may be forgiven, and from this time "provoke one another to [illegible]." This work has commenced in earnest [illegible] places, and the good Lord has most signally blessed those who have been engaged in the heavenly enterprise.

Well has the poet said when speaking of Satan's wiles;—

"We laugh to scorn his cruel pow'r,
While by our Shepherds side;
The sheep he never can devour
Unless he first divide."

Wherever our great adversary, the Devil, has succeeded in driving a wedge of discord, let us rally to the rescue in the name of the Lord.

Let those, whose eyes are open to the devices of the destroyer, stand firm and quit themselves like soldiers of the cross. Forget not that Jesus has said—"blessed are the peacemakers."

In our next, we purpose to notice the basis of Christian union.

Springfield.

Wednesday evening, Nov. 19th, was pleasantly spent with the church in this city at their usual place of worship. Their meeting was like an oasis in the desert, or cool water to a thirsty traveler. The spirit of the Lord was in our midst to comfort the saint and reprove the sinner.

Satan has tried for years to destroy this church, but has been foiled in all his plans, and they now stand firm in the strength of the Lord, a happy united company of christians.

Bro. Ladd, their pastor, was present, with whom we had a most pleasing interview.

His faithful labors of love are appreciated by the church, and blessed by the Lord, the church and pastor are resolved in the strength of their Redeemer to be guided by the principles of the New Testament, and provoke one another unto love and good works.

Bro. Munger was present also, as well as several others from Chickopee Falls. Our meeting was one of happy remembrance.

The soul-stirring exhortations from Brn. Ladd, Munger and others were truly refreshing to a weary pilgrim. May the peace of God rest upon them.

☞ The Post Office address of Dr. A. M. Higgins is Palmer Depot, Mass., where all letters, orders, telegraph or express matter must be directed.

NOTICE.—All letters, orders for tracts, communications, remittances, &c., &c., for H. L. Hastings, must be directed to Rochester, N. Y.

The Convention at Providence.

Wednesday morning, Nov. 12th.—This Convention assembled agreeably to appointment at New Market Hall, at 9 o'clock A. M., and opened with devotional exercises. The convention then proceeded to organize, and the following officers were appointed:

President, S. Bliss; Vice President, Elder P. Hawks, Providence; Secretaries, Elders F. Gunner, of New York; J. Pearson, Jr., of Newburyport, Mass.; O. R Fassett, of Boston.

Business Committee, Elders Josiah Litch, of Philadelphia. T. M. Preble, of N. H.; J. M. Orrock, of C. E.; John Pearson, jr., of Newburyport, Mass.; E. Crowell, Hartford, Ct.; Miles Grant, of Boston. Mass.; J. S. White of Wrentham, Mass.; L. Osler and S. S. Brewer, of Providence, and Mr. S. Bliss, of Boston, Mass.

The Business Committee presented before the Convention the following preamble and resolution for their consideration:

Whereas, we find ourselves occupying a position distinct from other religious bodies, and in some respects dissimilar; and as in all divinely sanctioned reformations, marked and abundant proofs of divine purpose have ben given; and as we are satisfied that our distinctive position has been brought about by the Providences of God, and is therefore sanctioned by him, therefore,

Resolved, That we will endeavor by divine aid, more fully to understand the duties growing out of this position, and apply ourselves to their faithful performance.

On the motion to adopt the above preamble and resolution, Elder E Crowell said:—"Perhaps the preamble introduced by the business committee for the consideration of the Convention, embraces a sentiment with which we may not all really be lieve, viz.: that there are abunpant evidences in our existence as a people, that we occupy a position designed by Divine Providence. I am desirous that this particular point may receive our notice, and call forth a full expression,"

The remarks of Br. Crowell, elicited a very animated and interesting discussion, in which the following brethren took part: Gunner, Osler, G. W. Burnham, Gates, Litch, Pearson and Preble.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The discussion on the preamble and resolution that claimed the attention of the morning session was resumed. It was amended by erasing the words "direct agency," and the substitution of the term providences. After the amendment, Brn. Brewer, Osler, Parks, Preble, Crowell, Pearson, Gunner, Haswell, G. W. Burnham, Coburn and Hutchinson, offered some exceedingly interesting and profitable reflections, after which, it was unanimously adopted.

The committee on business reported the following:

Whereas, unity of labor, and as far as may be, unity of faith are necessary to the successful prosecution of the work of God; and as there is a diversity of sentiment among us as a people, producing to some extent dissimilar interests; and as we believe, that a candid and Christian interchange of views would remove in a great measure the conflicting interests, if not harmonize the discordant views: therefore,

Resolved, That as co-laborers in the promulgation of the doctrines intimately connected with the near coming of Christ, they hereafter avoid preaching on the subjects relating to the state of the dead, and final destiny of the wicked, in a manner calculated to give offence to those holding opposing sentiments: and that they as far as is practicable, express themselves in the language of Scripture.

This gave rise to an exceedingly lively debate on the true Christian and brotherly policy of holding and proclaiming these doctrines upon which there is a diversity of opinion, and opened a very fruitful and profitable subject of discussion, which occupied the time until the hour of adjournment.

EVENING SESSION.

The evening was set apart to devotional exercises: reading of the Scriptures by Elder B. S. Bachelder, of New Bedford; prayer by Elder J. M. Orrock, of Canada East, and a discourse by Elder F. Gunner, of N. Y., from the following text: "For this is for your health."—Acts 27: 34. Subject, natural and spiritual health.

THURSDAY A. M. SESSION.

President in the chair. The morning devotional exercises were conducted by Elder Grant, of Boston.

The discussion on the policy to be pursued in the preaching of those sentiments touching the state of the dead, and the final end of the wicked was resumed. Elder J. Litch gave an interesting history of the origin and progress of the division caused by the agitation of these and similar questions. He was followed by appropriate remarks on the necessity of mutual forbearance, &c., a judicious manner of promulgating these secondary subjects upon which there is a settled difference of views, by brethren Peck, Bachelder, Crowell, Osler, Gunner, Grant, Brewer, Chapman, G. W. Burnham, Harvey and Parks. The last brother spoke in opposition to the resolution, and gave way for a motion to adjourn.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Elder Parks being entitled to the floor resumed the debate on the preamble and resolution before the Convention. Brother Parks was followed by brethren Grant, Fassett, Gates and Hutchinson. The question being called for, it was adopted with great unanimity of feeling.

The Convention appeared to approach the consideration of this subject with considerable caution, but as the discussion progressed, a feeling of brotherly fellowship and confidence developed itself, until the utmost freedom of expression prevailed, which called forth the strongest desire for a removal of all obstacles for future union of spirit and labor.

The committee next presented the following proposition for the consideration of the Convention:

By what scriptural designations is Jesus Christ known to men before and since his incarnation, and in what sense is He denominated the Son of God?

The subjects involved in the above questions, were ably opened by Elder Litch.—He expressed his deep conviction of the vast importance of the two leading, prominent views cherished by the Christian world; that termed the Orthodox, and that known as the Arian view. He said the subject had caused much controversy, and much bitter feeling, but it seemed to him, that one cause of this dissension was a defect in the views of Christ's sonship—in the time when he sustained, or when this relationship was made known to men, and had been the means of turning the church from the contemplation of the real merits of this question. He then called attention to the simple view of Christ's sonship as given by the evangelist; his genealogy: the account of his miraculous conception, and the designation given to him.

The Vice President was then called to the chair, and brother Bliss said: We should not attempt a discussion of a question of this nature without a profound sense of our inability to comprehend the mode of the Divine existence. I am happy not to disagree with Elder Litch respecting the eternity of Christ's existence, and his pre-existent equality with the Father. We differ only on the point whether he is properly denominated the Son of God before his incarnation. While he is properly called the Son because he was conceived of the Holy Ghost in the womb of the virgin, and thus took upon his pre-existent Divinity our nature, yet I conceive that independent of that he is properly denominated the Son of God because of his eternal relation with the Father—a relationship not dependent on some act in the Divine existence, before which he was not the Son and then became the Son, but a relationship that existed from all eternity. As the Logos, who was with God, who made the worlds, who was before Abraham and before the world was, He was in the form of God and thought it not robbery to be equal with God, before his birth of Mary, but then took on himself the form of a servant and assumed humanity. Now I conceive that this relationship with the Father was such as to make it possible for he second person in the Divine Tri-unity o take upon himself our nature, but impossible for the Father or the Holy Spirit to have been thus incarnated. And this relationship, which made that compatible for him which was incompatible for the Father or Spirit, I conceive properly entitles him to the denominative of the eternal Son of God. An eternal relationship is no more difficult of comprehension than is an eternal existence, and is therefore not contrary to our reason, though it is infinitely beyond our comprehension. But in virtue of this relationship, God covenanted with him from all eternity, that he should, in the garments of humanity, purchase the redemption of fallen man.

Brother Bosworth said, that brother Litch had explained the faith he had entertained for years. If Christ had sustained the relation of Son before his incarnation, then some term, or terms, would have been given in the Old Testament by which he would have been thus recognized. I fully believe that Christ existed before his birth, but not as holding the relation of Son.

Brother Hutchinson said, brother Bliss has given the generally received view of Protestant Christendom, and to which I give my approval. When I entered the Christian ministry, the question was put, "Do you believe in the eternal sonship of Christ?" This I answered in the affirmative, and it seems to me, that this is the clear teaching of the Divine Scriptures.

Remarks of interest were also made by brethren Osler, Gates, Preble and Phelps.

Elder Litch then offered the following resolution which was adopted:

Resolved, that this subject be committed to a committee of three, to be appointed by the chair, to consider and embody answers to the questions proposed, and report to the Convention.

Elders Litch, Pearson and Preble, were appointed.

[To be continued.]

For the Crisis.

The Sabbath.

NUMBER II.

We will proceed to prove that the law of Moses, or the law of God, was given to no other nation, save the Hebrew. "For until the Law sin was in the world; but sin is not imputed whe there is no law," Rom. 5: 13. "For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ," John 1: 17. "For what nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the Lord our God is in all things, that we call upon him for? And what nation is there so great, that hath statutes, and judgments so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day? Duet. 4: 7, 8. "He sheweth his word unto Jacob, his statutes and his judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation; and as for his judgments, they (the other nations) have not known them. Praise ye the Lord." Ps. 147: 19, 20.

"(For the Lord thy God is a merciful God;) he will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers which he sware unto them.

For ask now of the days that are past, which were before thee, since the day that God created man upon the earth, and ask from the one side of heaven unto the other, whether there hath been any such thing as this great thing is, or hath been heard like it?

Did ever people, hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as thou hast heard, and live?

Or hath God assayed to go and take him a nation from the midst of another nation, by temptations, by signs, and by wonders, and by war, and by a mighty hand, and by a stretched out arm, and by great terrors, according to all that the Lord your God did for you in Egypt before your eyes?

Unto thee it was shewed, that thou mightest know that the Lord he is God; there is none else beside him.

Out of heaven he made thee to hear his voice, that he might instruct thee: and upon earth he shewed thee his great fire: and thou heardest his words out of the midst of the fire.

And because he loved thy fathers, therefore he chose their seed after them, and brought thee out in his sight with his mighty power out of Egypt.

To drive out nations from before thee greater and mightier than thou art, to bring thee in, to give thee their land for an inheritance, as it is this day.

Know therefore this day, and consider it in thine heart, that the Lord he is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath: there is none else.

Thou shalt keep therefore his statutes, and his commandments, which I command thee this day, that it may go well with thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days upon the earth, which the Lord thy God giveth thee forever." Deut. 4: 31–40. "What advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumsion? Much every way; chiefly, because that unto them were committed the oracles of God." Rom. 3: 1, 2. Paul says, "I lie not, I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart. For I could wish that myselt were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh; who are Israelites, to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises." Rom. 9: 1, 4. With such testimony before us, we come to the unavoidable conclusion, that the law was given tothe Israelitish nation, at the exode, and to no other nations under the heavens of God.

Now, by further inquiry we ask, what is embraced in this law that God gave to Israel by the hand of Moses? This we cannot answer without quoting sixteen chapters in Ex. and twenty-six in Sev. As this cannot be done, we request all to read that portion of Revelation to satisfy themselves what the Law contains. In concluding these chapters, God says, "these are the statutes, and judgments, and laws, which the Lord made between him, and the children of Israel in Mount Sinai." Lev. 26; 46 and 27: 34. But some say that all this was the law of Moses, save the ten commandments, and these constituted God's Law. Thus they make a distinction, and call one part, the law of God, and the other, the Law of Moses; as though Moses was the originator of one part, and God the other. This is unjust; for the Lord gave the entire code of over forty chapters, as we have shown, and thirty-six times it is said in the book of Lev.—"The Lord said unto Moses." Then a portion of the Law would follow, and then it would be repeated—"The Lord said unto Moses." Then other specificatiens would be added, and so on to the conclusion, when it is said that this sum total was given by the Lord on Mount Sinai.

But some are laboring to sustain a theory on the system of two separate and distinct laws or constitutions in the Old Testament; calling the ten commandments, the law of the Lord or the commandments of God, by way of pre-eminence, and all the rest the law of Moses, as though it (the rest) was of much less importance. But we have proved that the Lord gave it all; and the expressions, "law of Moses" and "law of the Lord" are only used interchangeably. For more proof of this, see Luke 2: 22, 24.

"And when eight days were accomplished for the circumcising of the child, his name was called Jesus, which was so named of the angel before he was conceived in the womb.

And when the days of her purification according to the law of Moses were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord;

(As it is written in the law of the Lord, every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord;)

And to offer a sacrifice according to that which is said in the law of the Lord, a pair of turtle doves, or two young pigeons." Also, Mal. 4: 4, "Remember ye the law of Moses my servant which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments." In connection with this, we quote Deut. 4: 10–18, and 1 Kings 2: 1–4.

"Specially the day that thou stoodest before the Lord thy God in Horeb, when the Lord said unto me, Gather me the people together, and I will make them hear my words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that they shall live upon the earth, and that they may teach their children.

And ye came near and stood under the mountain; and the mountain burned with fire unto the midst of heaven, with darkness, clouds, and thick darkness.

And the Lord spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: ye heard the voice of the words, but saw no similitude; only ye heard a voice.

Annd he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone."

"Now the days of David drew nigh that he should die; and he charged Solomon his son, saying,

I go the way of all the earth: be thou strong therefore, and shew thyself a man;

And keep the charge of the Lord thy God, to walk in his ways, to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgments, and his testimonies, as it is written in the law of Moses, that thou mayest prosper in all that thou doest, and whithersoever thou turnest thyself:

That the Lord may continue his word which he spake concerning me, saying, if thy children take heed to their way, to walk before me in truth with all their heart and with all their soul, there shall not fail thee (said he) a man on the throne of Israel."

But it is argued that the Lord spake only the "ten commandments with an audible voice so that the Hebrews heard him. Admitted. Why did they not hear it all? Is the reason given? It is. What is it? Because they feared and could not endure the night. Proof. Heb. 12: 18, 21.

"For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest,

And the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words: which voice they that heard intreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more:

(For they could not endure that which was commanded, and if so much as a beast touch the mountain, it shall be stoned, or thrust through with a dart:

And so terrible was the sight, that Moses said, I exceedingly fear and quake." Ex. 20: 18–21.

"And all the people saw the thunderings, and the lightnings, and the noise of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking: and when the people saw it, they removed, and stood afar off.

And they said unto Moses, speak thou with us, and we will hear: but let not God speak with us, lest we die.

And Moses said unto the people, fear not: for God has come to prove you, and that his fear may be before your faces, that ye sin not.

And the people stood afar off, and Moses drew near unto the thick darkness where God was."

Again, it is said that the ten commandments were written upon the tables of stone, by way of superiority, and for the sake of preservation. Whether this argument be valid or not, one thing is sure, that those stones are not now extant. We might say the same, of all that was written in the book of the law of Moses; for that also was written upon tables of stone, after a smooth surface was prepared. See Josh. 8: 32. "And he (Joshua) wrote there upon the stones a copy of the law of Moses which he wrote in the presence of the children of Israel." But some say that the tables of stone, on which God wrote the ten commandments, are in the heavenly sanctuary, for they were seen theee by E. G. White, in vision. See her "Christian experience," page 16. It is not for me to say what she has, or has not seen; but one thing is sure, the stones she saw were not such ones as God gave Moses; for, she says they were folded like a book, and Jesus had to open the tables of stone before she could read the commandments. But the ones God gave were written on both their sides. Ex. 32: 15. And Josephus says there were five commandments on each stone, while she says there were four on one, and six on the other.

The Love of God.

O the amazing love of God to man!—Who can begin to tell the height, and depth, and length, and breadth thereof? It is higher than heaven, deeper than hell, and broader than creation. It is an immeasurable, unchangeable, eternal, and almighty love.

E. B.

x Delegate from N. H. Conference.

works, of those to whom the King shall say, "Come ye blessed of my Father ?"—Read Matt. 25: 31—46. Yes, we can labor anywhere, and keep ourselves "unspotted from the world," if we put on all the Gospel armor.

Dear sister, may the Lord save you from casting off natural affection, but give you grace to keep it sanctified. The Bible is a whole book. There, are directions to meet every emergency in life with harmony in all its parts. We must not take one idea and run that on but the whole; as I wrote you before, we need to study the word and plant our feet upon the rock — We need to be established in the truth.

We are living in the perils of the last days. We understand by the Word, but little faith will be found on earth, when the Lord comes; and while we see the present confusion, as though the earth was reeling to and fro, politically and spiritually, let us strive to make our calling and election sure, for our case is between us and our Lord.

Yours for God and truth.

T. F. S.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, NOVEMBER 26, 1856.

Chistian Union.

NUMBER ONE.

The Bible is particularly plain and pointed in relation to the subject mentioned in our heading.

But we are convinced that but few realize its importance, and the sad effects of disregarding the instruction of our blessed Master on this point.

Although it stands forth in bold relief in almost every chapter of the New Testament, and was made a prominent theme in the discourses of our Savior, still the arch enemy of man has succeeded in splitting the professed church of Christ into almost a thousand fragments, each claiming to be right, and to be sustained by the Bible; while each says, practically, to the other, "I have no need of thee."

Witness the strife for power, and the selfish efforts to gain the ascendency in the honors of the world, in obtaining numbers and influence in advance of their church neighbor, and we think nothing can be plainer, than that christian union exists only in name, except in a few isolated cases.

We are repeatedly taught in the New Testament that the church is the body of Christ, and that we are members in particular.

Judging from the spirit manifested in the present existing churches, would any one suppose they were but parts or members of the same body, and that, the body of Christ?

It sometimes happens that wild maniacs will bite and pound the members of their own body, thus giving the clearest possible proof of their insanity and madness, but a sane healthy man was never known to commit such an outrageous deed.

The Papal church has been noted for its war upon every member of Christ's body, that would not subscribe to her creed and support her policy; and in this way she has presented to the world the clearest evidence of her moral insanity; but who would have supposed that the Protestant churches would ever imitate such an unholy example?

But when we look about us, how sad the spectacle presented, and how little do we see that is in keeping with the following prayer of our Savior,—"Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word; that they all may be one; as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." John 17: 20, 21.

Let each inquire of himself, have I done or said anything to destroy or prevent the oneness for which our Savior prays? Have I planted, or nourished a "root of bitterness?"

Have I caused a brother or sister to offend? Have I been courteous and kind, a peacemaker, doing as I would be done by? Or have I aided in sowing discord among brethren? Have I assisted to build sectarian pens, and strengthen party prejudices? The Lord declares by his servant, that, "he that soweth discord among brethten" is "an abomination unto him."

Christian union is a subject of great importance, and one that demands special attention at the present time, because much discord exists, and the responsibility of it must fall somewhere; and let us not forget, that if we are the cause of its commencement or continuation, we are abominable in the sight of the Lord so long as we help to produce such a result.

There can be no genuine prosperity where there is not Christian union. If our course has tended to perpetuate petty party interests by defending and upholding Satan's sectarian walls, let us repent, that we may be forgiven, and from this time "provoke one another to love." This work has commenced in earnest in some places, and the good Lord has most signally blessed those who have been engaged in the heavenly enterprise.

Well has the poet said when speaking of Satan's wiles;—

"We laugh to scorn his cruel pow'r,
While by our Shepherds side;
The sheep he never can devour
Unless he first divide."

Wherever our great adversary, the Devil, has succeeded in driving a wedge of discord, let us rally to the rescue in the name of the Lord.

Let those, whose eyes are open to the devices of the destroyer, stand firm and quit themselves like soldiers of the cross. Forget not that Jesus has said—"blessed are the peacemakers."

In our next, we purpose to notice the basis of Christian union.

Springfield.

Wednesday evening, Nov. 19th, was pleasantly spent with the church in this city at their usual place of worship. Their meeting was like an oasis in the desert, or cool water to a thirsty traveler. The spirit of the Lord was in our midst to comfort the saint and reprove the sinner.

Satan has tried for years to destroy this church, but has been foiled in all his plans, and they now stand firm in the strength of the Lord, a happy united company of christians.

Bro. Ladd, their pastor, was present, with whom we had a most pleasing interview.

His faithful labors of love are appreciated by the church, and blessed by the Lord, the church and pastor are resolved in the strength of their Redeemer to be guided by the principles of the New Testament, and provoke one another unto love and good works.

Bro. Munger was present also, as well as several others from Chickopee Falls. Our meeting was one of happy remembrance.

The soul-stirring exhortations from Brn. Ladd, Munger and others were truly refreshing to a weary pilgrim. May the peace of God rest upon them.

☞ The Post Office address of Dr. A. M. Higgins is Palmer Depot, Mass., where all letters, orders, telegraph or express matter must be directed.

NOTICE.—All letters, orders for tracts, communications, remittances, &c., &c., for H. L. Hastings, must be directed to Rochester, N. Y.

The Convention at Providence.

Wednesday morning, Nov. 12th.—This Convention assembled agreeably to appointment at New Market Hall, at 9 o'clock A. M., and opened with devotional exercises. The convention then proceeded to organize, and the following officers were appointed:

President, S. Bliss; Vice President, Elder P. Hawks, Providence; Secretaries, Elders F. Gunner, of New York; J. Pearson, Jr., of Newburyport, Mass.; O. R Fassett, of Boston.

Business Committee, Elders Josiah Litch, of Philadelphia. T. M. Preble,× of N. H.; J. M. Orrock, of C. E.; John Pearson, jr., of Newburyport, Mass.; E. Crowell, Hartford, Ct.; Miles Grant, of Boston. Mass.; J. S. White of Wrentham, Mass.; L. Osler and S. S. Brewer, of Providence, and Mr. S. Bliss, of Boston, Mass.

The Business Committee presented before the Convention the following preamble and resolution for their consideration:

Whereas, we find ourselves occupying a position distinct from other religious bodies, and in some respects dissimilar; and as in all divinely sanctioned reformations, marked and abundant proofs of divine purpose have ben given; and as we are satisfied that our distinctive position has been brought about by the Providences of God, and is therefore sanctioned by him, therefore,

Resolved, That we will endeavor by divine aid, more fully to understand the duties growing out of this position, and apply ourselves to their faithful performance.

On the motion to adopt the above preamble and resolution, Elder E Crowell said:—"Perhaps the preamble introduced by the business committee for the consideration of the Convention, embraces a sentiment with which we may not all really be lieve, viz.: that there are abunpant evidences in our existence as a people, that we occupy a position designed by Divine Providence. I am desirous that this particular point may receive our notice, and call forth a full expression,"

The remarks of Br. Crowell, elicited a very animated and interesting discussion, in which the following brethren took part: Gunner, Osler, G. W. Burnham, Gates, Litch, Pearson and Preble.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The discussion on the preamble and resolution that claimed the attention of the morning session was resumed. It was amended by erasing the words "direct agency," and the substitution of the term providences. After the amendment, Brn. Brewer, Osler, Parks, Preble, Crowell, Pearson, Gunner, Haswell, G. W. Burnham, Coburn and Hutchinson, offered some exceedingly interesting and profitable reflections, after which, it was unanimously adopted.

The committee on business reported the following:

Whereas, unity of labor, and as far as may be, unity of faith are necessary to the successful prosecution of the work of God; and as there is a diversity of sentiment among us as a people, producing to some extent dissimilar interests; and as we believe, that a candid and Christian interchange of views would remove in a great measure the conflicting interests, if not harmonize the discordant views: therefore,

Resolved, That as co-laborers in the promulgation of the doctrines intimately connected with the near coming of Christ, they hereafter avoid preaching on the subjects relating to the state of the dead, and final destiny of the wicked, in a manner calculated to give offence to those holding opposing sentiments: and that they as far as is practicable, express themselves in the language of Scripture.

This gave rise to an exceedingly lively debate on the true Christian and brotherly policy of holding and proclaiming these doctrines upon which there is a diversity of opinion, and opened a very fruitful and profitable subject of discussion, which occupied the time until the hour of adjournment.

EVENING SESSION.

The evening was set apart to devotional exercises: reading of the Scriptures by Elder B. S. Bachelder, of New Bedford; prayer by Elder J. M. Orrock, of Canada East, and a discourse by Elder F. Gunner, of N. Y., from the following text: "For this is for your health."—Acts 27: 34. Subject, natural and spiritual health.

THURSDAY A. M. SESSION.

President in the chair. The morning devotional exercises were conducted by Elder Grant, of Boston.

The discussion on the policy to be pursued in the preaching of those sentiments touching the state of the dead, and the final end of the wicked was resumed. Elder J. Litch gave an interesting history of the origin and progress of the division caused by the agitation of these and similar questions. He was followed by appropriate remarks on the necessity of mutual forbearance, &c., a judicious manner of promulgating these secondary subjects upon which there is a settled difference of views, by brethren Peck, Bachelder, Crowell, Osler, Gunner, Grant, Brewer, Chapman, G. W. Burnham, Harvey and Parks. The last brother spoke in opposition to the resolution, and gave way for a motion to adjourn.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Elder Parks being entitled to the floor resumed the debate on the preamble and resolution before the Convention. Brother Parks was followed by brethren Grant, Fassett, Gates and Hutchinson. The question being called for, it was adopted with great unanimity of feeling.

The Convention appeared to approach the consideration of this subject with considerable caution, but as the discussion progressed, a feeling of brotherly fellowship and confidence developed itself, until the utmost freedom of expression prevailed, which called forth the strongest desire for a removal of all obstacles for future union of spirit and labor.

The committee next presented the following proposition for the consideration of the Convention:

By what scriptural designations is Jesus Christ known to men before and since his incarnation, and in what sense is He denominated the Son of God?

The subjects involved in the above questions, were ably opened by Elder Litch.—He expressed his deep conviction of the vast importance of the two leading, prominent views cherished by the Christian world; that termed the Orthodox, and that known as the Arian view. He said the subject had caused much controversy, and much bitter feeling, but it seemed to him, that one cause of this dissension was a defect in the views of Christ's sonship—in the time when he sustained. or when this relationship was made known to men, and had been the means of turning the church from the contemplation of the real merits of this question. He then called attention to the simple view of Christ's sonship as given by the evangelist; his genealogy: the account of his miraculous conception, and the designation given to him.

The Vice President was then called to the chair, and brother Bliss said: We should not attempt a discussion of a question of this nature without a profound sense of our inability to comprehend the mode of the Divine existence. I am happy not to disagree with Elder Litch respecting the eternity of Christ's existence, and his pre-existent equality with the Father. We differ only on the point whether he is properly denominated the Son of God before his incarnation. While he is properly called the Son because he was conceived of the Holy Ghost in the womb of the virgin, and thus took upon his pre-existent Divinity our nature, yet I conceive that independent of that he is properly denominated the Son of God because of his eternal relation with the Father—a relationship not dependent on some act in the Divine existence, before which he was not the Son and then became the Son, but a relationship that existed from all eternity. As the Logos, who was with God, who made the worlds, who was before Abraham and before the world was, He was in the form of God and thought it not robbery to be equal with God, before his birth of Mary, but then took on himself the form of a servant and assumed humanity. Now I conceive that this relationship with the Father was such as to make it possible for he second person in the Divine Tri-unity o take upon himself our nature, but impossible for the Father or the Holy Spirit to have been thus incarnated. And this relationship, which made that compatible for him which was incompatible for the Father or Spirit, I conceive properly entitles him to the denominative of the eternal Son of God. An eternal relationship is no more difficult of comprehension than is an eternal existence, and is therefore not contrary to our reason, though it is infinitely beyond our comprehension. But in virtue of this relationship, God covenanted with him from all eternity, that he should, in the garments of humanity, purchase the redemption of fallen man.

Brother Bosworth said, that brother Litch had explained the faith he had entertained for years. If Christ had sustained the relation of Son before his incarnation, then some term, or terms, would have been given in the Old Testament by which he would have been thus recognized. I fully believe that Christ existed before his birth, but not as holding the relation of Son.

Brother Hutchinson said, brother Bliss has given the generally received view of Protestant Christendom, and to which I give my approval. When I entered the Christian ministry, the question was put, "Do you believe in the eternal sonship of Christ?" This I answered in the affirmative, and it seems to me, that this is the clear teaching of the Divine Scriptures.

Remarks of interest were also made by brethren Osler, Gates, Preble and Phelps.

Elder Litch then offered the following resolution which was adopted:

Resolved, that this subject be committed to a committee of three, to be appointed by the chair, to consider and embody answers to the questions proposed, and report to the Convention.

Elders Litch, Pearson and Preble, were appointed.

[To be continued.]

For the Crisis.

The Sabbath.

NUMBER II.

We will proceed to prove that the law of Moses, or the law of God, was given to no other nation, save the Hebrew. "For until the Law sin was in the world; but sin is not imputed whe there is no law," Rom. 5: 13. "For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ," John 1: 17. "For what nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the Lord our God is in all things, that we call upon him for? And what nation is there so great, that hath statutes, and judgments so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day? Duet. 4: 7, 8. "He sheweth his word unto Jacob, his statutes and his judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation; and as for his judgments, they (the other nations) have not known them. Praise ye the Lord." Ps. 147: 19, 20.

"(For the Lord thy God is a merciful God;) he will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers which he sware unto them.

For ask now of the days that are past, which were before thee, since the day that God created man upon the earth, and ask from the one side of heaven unto the other, whether there hath been any such thing as this great thing is, or hath been heard like it?

Did ever people hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as thou hast heard, and live?

Or hath God assayed to go and take him a nation from the midst of another nation, by temptations, by signs, and by wonders, and by war, and by a mighty hand, and by a stretched out arm, and by great terrors, according to all that the Lord your God did for you in Egypt before your eyes?

Unto thee it was shewed, that thou mightest know that the Lord he is God; there is none else beside him.

Out of heaven he made thee to hear his voice, that he might instruct thee: and upon earth he shewed thee his great fire: and thou heardest his words out of the midst of the fire.

And because he loved thy fathers, therefore he chose their seed after them, and brought thee out in his sight with his mighty power out of Egypt.

To drive out nations from before thee greater and mightier than thou art, to bring thee in, to give thee their land for an inheritance, as it is this day.

Know therefore this day, and consider it in thine heart, that the Lord he is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath: there is none else.

Thou shalt keep therefore his statutes, and his commandments, which I command thee this day, that it may go well with thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days upon the earth, which the Lord thy God giveth thee forever." Deut. 4: 31–40. "What advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision? Much every way; chiefly, because that unto them were committed the oracles of God." Rom. 3: 1, 2. Paul says, "I lie not, I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart. For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh; who are Israelites, to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises." Rom. 9: 1, 4. With such testimony before us, we come to the unavoidable conclusion, that the law was given to the Israelitish nation, at the exode, and to no other nations under the heavens of God.

Now, by further inquiry we ask, what is embraced in this law that God gave to Israel by the hand of Moses? This we cannot answer without quoting sixteen chapters in Ex. and twenty-six in Sev. As this cannot be done, we request all to read that portion of Revelation to satisfy themselves what the Law contains. In concluding these chapters, God says, "these are the statutes, and judgments, and laws, which the Lord made between him, and the children of Israel in Mount Sinai." Lev. 26; 46 and 27: 34. But some say that all this was the law of Moses, save the ten commandments, and these constituted God's Law. Thus they make a distinction, and call one part, the law of God, and the other, the Law of Moses; as though Moses was the originator of one part, and God the other. This is unjust; for the Lord gave the entire code of over forty chapters, as we have shown, and thirty-six times it is said in the book of Lev.—"The Lord said unto Moses." Then a portion of the Law would follow, and then it would be repeated—"The Lord said unto Moses." Then other specificatiens would be added, and so on to the conclusion, when it is said that this sum total was given by the Lord on Mount Sinai.

But some are laboring to sustain a theory on the system of two separate and distinct laws or constitutions in the Old Testament; calling the ten commandments, the law of the Lord or the commandments of God, by way of pre-eminence, and all the rest the law of Moses, as though it (the rest) was of much less importance. But we have proved that the Lord gave it all; and the expressions, "law of Moses" and "law of the Lord" are only used interchangeably. For more proof of this, see Luke 2: 22, 24.

"And when eight days were accomplished for the circumcising of the child, his name was called Jesus, which was so named of the angel before he was conceived in the womb.

And when the days of her purification according to the law of Moses were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord;

(As it is written in the law of the Lord, every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord;)

And to offer a sacrifice according to that which is said in the law of the Lord, a pair of turtle doves, or two young pigeons." Also, Mal. 4: 4, "Remember ye the law of Moses my servant which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments." In connection with this, we quote Deut. 4: 10–13, and 1 Kings 2: 1–4.

"Specially the day that thou stoodest before the Lord thy God in Horeb, when the Lord said unto me, Gather me the people together, and I will make them hear my words, that they may learn to fear me all the days that they shall live upon the earth, and that they may teach their children.

And ye came near and stood under the mountain; and the mountain burned with fire unto the midst of heaven, with darkness, clouds, and thick darkness.

And the Lord spake unto you out of the midst of she fire: ye heard the voice of the words, but saw no similitude; only ye heard a voice.

Annd he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone."

"Now the days of David drew nigh that he should die; and he charged Solomon his son, saying,

I go the way of all the earth: be thou strong therefore, and shew thyself a man;

And keep the charge of the Lord thy God, to walk in his ways, to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgments, and his testimonies, as it is written in the law of Moses, that thou mayest prosper in all that thou doest, and whithersoever thou turnest thyself:

That the Lord may continue his word which he spake concerning me, saying, if thy children take heed to their way, to walk before me in truth with all their heart and with all their soul, there shall not fail thee (said he) a man on the throne of Israel."

But it is argued that the Lord spake only the "ten commandments with an audible voice so that the Hebrews heard him. Admitted. Why did they not hear it all? Is the reason given? It is. What is it? Because they feared and could not endure the night. Proof. Heb. 12: 18, 21.

"For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest,

And the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words: which voice they that heard intreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more:

(For they could not endure that which was commanded, and if so much as a beast touch the mountain, it shall be stoned, or thrust through with a dart:

And so terrible was the sight, that Moses said, I exceedingly fear and quake." Ex 20: 18–21.

"And all the people saw the thunderings, and the lightnings, and the noise of the trumpet, and the mountain smoking: and when the people saw it, they removed, and stood afar off.

And they said unto Moses, speak thou with us, and we will hear: but let not God speak with us, lest we die.

And Moses said unto the people, fear not: for God has come to prove you, and that his fear may be before your faces, that ye sin not.

And the people stood afar off, and Moses drew near unto the thick darkness where God was."

Again, it is said that the ten commandments were written upon the tables of stone, by way of superiority, and for the sake of preservation. Whether this argument be valid or not, one thing is sure, that those stones are not now extant. We might say the same, of all that was written in the book of the law of Moses; for that also was written upon tables of stone, after a smooth surface was prepared. See Josh. 8: 32. "And he (Joshua) wrote there upon the stones a copy of the law of Moses which he wrote in the presence of the children of Israel." But some say that the tables of stone, on which God wrote the ten commandments, are in the heavenly sanctuary, for they were seen theee by E. G. White, in vision. See her "Christian experience," page 16. It is not for me to say what she has, or has not seen; but one thing is sure, the stones she saw were not such ones as God gave Moses; for, she says they were folded like a book, and Jesus had to open the tables of stone before she could read the commandments. But the ones God gave were written on both their sides. Ex. 32: 15. And Josephus says there were five commandments on each stone, while she says there were four on one, and six on the other.

The Love of God.

O the amazing love of God to man!—Who can begin to tell the height, and depth, and length, and breadth thereof? It is higher than heaven, deeper than hell, and broader than creation. It is an immeasurable, unchangeable, eternal, and almighty love.

E. B.

× Delegate from N. H. Conference.

Peace Dale, R. I., Nov. 19, 1856.

Bro. Grant:—The Church in this place, request by a unanimous vote that you publish the following in the colums of the Crisis. John T. Dixon.

—

Peace Dale, R. I., Nov 9th, 1856.

Whereas: Bro. H. L. Hastings has this day requested to be released from his charge as spiritual instructor and guide of the Church of God in Peace Dale, that he may labor in other and destitute fields; therefore, we, the before named Church, feel it our duty to comply with his request in this matter.

Bro. Hastings came to this place from New-York City, Feb. 16, 1854, in answer to a call from the Church, which he regarded a call from God, and commenced holding a series of meetings which resulted in a genuine revival of religion; for, notwithstanding some are sickly, and some have backslidden, many continue to this day. To God and his Son be the praise.

The succeeding spring, by invitation of the Church, Bro. Hastings removed to this place and devoted much of his time to ministering to our spiritual wants, establishing an increased number of meetings for prayer and conference, and also class-meetings; thus encouraging the Church by these means of grace, freely circulating tracts aiding him with the means to preach the word in various parts of this region; by a hearty and active co-operation in the same, awakening among them a missionary spirit worthy of imitation; so that the great truths of the speedy coming and kingdom of Jesus, the inheritance of the Saints, life and immortality as brought to light in the Gospel, and other gospel truths, have, through their instrumentalities, been quite generally made known in these and adjacent localities; thus leaving the willingly and wilfully ignorant without excuse, and affording the sincere and faithful an opportunity to understand the truth as it is in Jesus.

While we, therefore, regret the necessity that compels our separation, we feel to acquiesce in the arrangements of providence, believing that our God ruleth all things right, and causeth them to work together for our good.

Bro. H., while with us, though necessarily absent much of the time issuing publications to spread the truth, and preaching the word of Life to the perishing in other localities, has maintained a consistent walk as a christian and able minister of the new Testament: not preaching for filthy lucre, nor by constraint, but of a ready mind, in many instances here and elsewhere not receiving enough to defray necessary expenses.

We can most cheerfully recommend our beloved Bro. to the churches wherever he may be called to labor, as one who, we feel confident, will never bring reproach upon his profession, or upon the cause of his master; but who will prove himself an efficient laborer, and an active co-worker in the cause of truth and righteousness.

That the choicest of heaven's blessings may follow him, and his beloved companion and helpmate; and that he may be successful in winning many precious souls to Christ, that they may be made ready for the coming of the Lord; and that we may be privileged to hear from him again (should time and God's good providence permit) the words of eternal life: and that at last we may all meet in an unbroken circle in that land soon to be given to the waiting church of God, is the unanimous and heartfelt desire of this Church.

At a church meeting held in the Chapel Nov. 9th, 1854, it was unanimously voted that this expression of the feelings of the Church be recorded among the church records by the clerk, and that he be instructed to send a copy for publication to the Editor of the World's Crisis.

By order, and in behalf of the Church of God in Peace Dale, R. I.

Chas. F. Dixon, Clerk.

For the Crisis.

My Journal.

NUMBER TWO

Sept. 11th.—Left Worcester for Westford Camp meeting; heard some new ideas relative to being converted, and that there is a feasibility of getting where we cannot fall. I think we had better take heed lest we fall, keep under our bodies, and bring them into subjection, lest after we have preached to others we should be cast away. 14th.—Lord's day. At Lynn Dye-house ville. Spoke three times. Had a free time, think the brethren and sisters were encouraged to hold on their way.

15th.—At Boston.

16th.—Lowell. Prayer meeting. 17th.—Meeting at the Chapel; nothing special.

18th.—Lawrence. At Chapel Hall; but few attended.

20th and 21st.—Salem, Union Street Chapel. Spoke three times; quite a number present. Some there I think that still feel determined to endure until the end. May the Lord help them. 22nd and 23d.—Visiting. 24th.—At the Chapel.

25th—South Braintree. 26th.—South Weymouth. Called to see Eld. Chase Taylor and family; was kindly received by them and the brethren, as I usually am, although differing in doctrine.

28th.—North Abington. in company with Bro. Billings, divided the day; had rather a good meeting.

29th and 30th—At Salem

Oct. Ist.—Little South Natick, at the school house but few attended. The people there are pretty well decided to stay away. 2nd to 4th.—Visiting relatives.

5th—Fornoon, at Little South Natick; eve., South Natick, Unitarian Meeting House. Had quite a number to hear: paid good attention; hope that some prejudice was removed. 6th.—Visiting.

7th.—Boston, at the Chapel in Lowell St. Had quite a free time speaking. Bro. Grant was present, and took part in the meeting 8th. Roxbury, at Webster Hall. Had a free time. The brethren there are still looking for deliverance, may the Lord help them to be faithful a little longer.

9th. Salem. 10th. Dye-house. But few present, rather discouraging time. 11th. Lynn City. Called to see the Christian Minister, Bro. Miller. He treated me very kindly, and gave me an invitation to preach to his people part of Lord's day, which I accepted.

12th. Forenoon, at Dye-house. But few attended; but little interest. P. M. At the Christian Meeting House in the city. Had a good free time speaking; some hundreds present, who paid good attention and appear- to listen with interest. I think it was not a lost season to them or to me. I spoke of the heirship, the inheritance being the earth made new, the coming of the Lord, and our being made like him when he comes, and the victory over death at that time; and told them that I believed from the fulfillment of prophecy that the coming of the Lord was nigh. Bro. Miller took a part in the meeting, and if that was advent doctrine, he was an Adventist. He gave me an invitation to preach the next Lord's day, but I could not, for I had an appointment. So we see that there are some who are willing to hear about the Lord's speedy coming.

13th. Salem. Visiting. 15th. At Lynn City. Enquiry meeting at the Christian Church. Had quite a good meeting; free for all to relate their feelings. I had a free time relating some of my christian experience.

15th. Salem. Eve. at the Chapel; not a large number present.

16th. New Market.

17th and 18th. Portsmouth. Attended Conference; heard some good preaching. 19th. Rye. Spoke three times at a private house to a few; had quite a free time. 20th. Visiting. 21st. Visiting. Evening meeting at Eld. Philbrick's, but few present: had a good meeting. 22d. Visiting. Evening meeting at Bro. Moses Garland's: had quite a free time: think it was not a lost season: hope there were some present that will decide to be for the the Lord.

At Rye, they were repairing the school house, so we had the meetings at private houses. I hope the Brethren at Rye will soon build a convenient Chapel to meet in. I never felt more than now like going through. Cheer up, pilgrim, the end is nearing: be faithful a little longer, and the prize will be given, and the family gathered home. From a pilgrim and stranger still looking for speedy redemption.

Bangor, Me. Wm. M. Ingham.

Letter from sister L. Boles.

Bro. Grant:—Although I am here as a pilgrim alone, I can tell you truly I have been led to cry the more earnestly for Jesus to come. I rejoice that I ever heard the glad tidings of our soon coming king preached by Bro. E. Whitney. I love the coming kingdom, and it is with delight that I think of the glory to be revealed; and with joyful anticipations I wait for the time to arrive when I shall leave this vale of sin and gloom and dwell with Christ at home. Lift up thy head, poor pilgrim, for thy redemption draweth nigh; soon thy trials will be o'er, and thou shalt bask in the sun beams of God's eternal glory. Some of us are poor in this world's good and are troubled to get along, but I feel determined to pressing away onward and "free the storm, it can't be long—we will anchor by and by."

Bath, N. H. Lois Boles.

For the Crisis.

Letter from sister Julia Dodge.

Brn. and Srs:—I wish to speak through the Crisis to you at this time. Since I saw you, I have been in affliction deep and sore. My only brother, my much loved brother is sleeping the quiet sleep of death. Yet, I have a hope, a consoling hope of meeting him at the resurrection of the just. Now some of you pray that this sore affliction may do us good. Many nights I have passed alone, my husband being with him, for he seemed to like to have him with him better than any one else. Sister M., did you pray for him, or did you not get my letter? I feel to ask, "How long, O Lord our Savior, wilt thou remain away?"

I am weary and sick of the groaning earth, and long for a quiet, peaceful home in the land where the "inhabitants shall not say, I am sick." O that camp-meeting! How good it was to meet the children. Bless the Lord for such a privilege, and for all his mercies and long-suffering to the children of men. Bro. Mills and Sr. Fenn, did you get my short letters? If you did, please write to me.

Yours, waiting for Jesus,

Julia Dodge.

Pawlings, N. Y., Oct, 25, '56.

The Heavenly Measure of Time.—The following extract from Mr. Everett's Albany address is a perfect gem:

"But for the kindreds, and tribes, and tongues of men, each upon their own meridian, from the Arctic pole to the Equator, from the Equator to the Antarctic pole, the eternal sun strikes twelve at noon, and the glorious constellations far up in the everlasting belfries of the skies chime twelve at midnight—twelve for the pale student over his flickering lamp—twelve amid the flaming glories of Orion's belt, if he crosses the meridian at that fatal hour—twelve by the weary couch of languishing humanity—twelve in the star-paved courts of empyrean—twelve for the heaving tides of the ocean—twelve for the weary arm of labor—twelve for the toiling brain—twelve for the watching, waking, broken heart—twelve for the meteor which blazes for a moment and expires—twelve for the comet whose period is measured by centuries—twelve for every substantial, for every imaginary thing which exists in the sense, the intellect, or the fancy, and which the speech or thought of man at the given meridian, refers to the lapse of time."

Poetry.

For the Crisis

LINES,

written on the death of sister Lucina M. Grant, who fell asleep in Jesus at Newfield, Oct. 31, '56.

BY M. J. W. S.

She rests! and in death's sweet and soft repose
That voice is hushed—those beaming eyes are closed
A pallid hue now clothes her cheek,
Her much-loved form lies cold and weak;
No throbbing heart, no heaving breast,
Will e'er disturb her peaceful rest.

Sister, we oft shall miss thy voice so sweet,
When in the house of God, for prayer we meet;
'T was joy to hear thee sing the strain,—
"The Lamb is coming soon to reign!"
But, shall we murmur, shall we weep?
No! for thou dost in Jesus sleep.

Although her tender tones no more will cheer
The partner of her youth—nor daughter dear;
Mourn not dear ones, she only rests
'Till Jesus comes, t' awake the blest.
Be faithful! you with her may be,
Robed in immortality!

Newfield, Nov. 13, '56.

Obituary.

Died, in North Hermon, Sept. 21st, Sister Joan, wife of Bro. Mansil, aged twenty-six. Sister M. was converted, and embraced the hope of the Lord's coming several years ago; and was one that was disappointed in '54, but endured it with patience, hoping to live to behold him without tasting death. In May, she was taken bleeding at the lungs. It was fatal. Death must do its work. We hope soon to see her in the family of the second Adam, immortal. May God sustain Bro. M. under his loss. A discourse by the writer from Isa. 6: 19. "Thy dead men shall live together with my dead body shall they arise."

N. F. Nason.

Died, in North Hermon, Me., Nov 5, Delaine, daughter of Bro. Anthony and Sister Charlotte Kelly, aged thirteen. Our Bro. and Sr. mourn their first-born. God sustain them. A discourse by the writer, from 1 Cor. 15: 26. "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." Oh God speed his destruction.

N. F. Nason.

North Hermon, Me., Nov. 7th, 1856.

Foreign News.

Halifax, Nov. 10—midnight.

The Royal Mail Steamship Niagara, from Liverpool afternoon of the 8th inst., has just arrived en route for Boston.

Great Britain.—Lord Palmerston delivered an address on education before a large assembly in Free Trade Hall, Manchester; he also made two speeches in defence of his foreign policy, and thence went to Liverpool, where an address to him by the President of the Chamber of Commerce, the following passage occurred:—"It would not be doing justice to the commercial community of Liverpool were no mention made of that question which most deeply affects it, the late difficulties, or threatened difference between this country and the United States. There is my lord, but one expression of feeling among us to the manner in which your lordship and her Majesty's adviser disposed of that which threatened at one time to be a question that might involve us in a dispute with America. We feel that by the mode in which your lordship and her Majesty's adviser settle that question, you not only consulted the dignity of this country, but in spirit and in fact satisfied all the interests concerned. My lord, for that we feel deeply indebted to your lordship, and to her Majesty's Government.

To this Lord Palmerston replied with considerable embarrassment of manner:—"I was sure, gentlemen, that the policy which he recently adopted in our differences with the United States must meet with your approbation. We felt that while on the one hand it was necessary to maintain the dignity of the country, that it was necessary to show that even the calamities of war in those neighboring races would be encountered if there was a necessity for it upon adequate grounds: he felt that while it was necessary to show this, we ought to waive all minor and party considerations: that we ought not to take advantage of circumstances which might perhaps have justified the expression of angry feelings: but it was more dignified to look to what we believed to be the friendly feelings of the great mass of the people of the United States, than to take too much notice of circumstances in a narrow sphere that might perhaps have justified feelings of irritation.

The result has fully borne out, I think, the wisdom of this course. I am sure that in proportion as your prosperity increases, in proportion as your enterprise is developed, in the same proportion we may look to cementing permanently those ties of friendship and good which exist, and ought to be perpetuated, between the peoples on the two shores of the Atlantic."

In Lord Palmerston's speech at Manchester, he used the following expression which has been the subject of much remark:—"I hope the peace will be lasting, but its endurance must depend on the fidelity with which its conditions are fulfilled. If that power which provoked hostility faithfully carried out the treaty, then no doubt peace will be long preserved.'

France. Rumors continue of a peaceful modification in the Ministry. M. de Persigny's visit to the Emperor is connected with these rumors.

The Emperor continues the revels at Campeigne, where his third and last batch of guests have arrived, including the Ministers of Russia, Sweden and Holland, Marshals Pellissier and Bauguay, and E'Hilliers.

These protracted country entertainments give offence to the Parisians, and among the placards surreptitiously posted on the walls are some headed "Le Roi Samus."

The event of the week is a semi-official editorial in the Constitutionnel, on the questions at issue between the French and English governments. This article speaks plainly and says—

"The presence of the Naval squadron of England in the Black Sea, and of the Austrian troops in the Principalities, are, henceforth, only an arbitrary and violent means of preventing a solution of the difference which Russia has been the first to propose, in offering to submit the question to its natural judges. Is it desired rather to have recourse to arms? Is war again desired? Does the English ministry itch to enter again upon hostilities without France? Not certainly to assure the execution of the Treaty of Paris, but imprudently to rend it in pieces in the face of the world, with the object of satisfying an ambition that had been for the moment disguised?

We repeat that it now depends upon the Cabinets of London and Vienna to put an end to the pending disputes, and to terminate the anxieties to which the present situation gives rise. Let them consent to the re-assembling of the Plenipotentiaries, without making arbitrary and inadmissible exclusions a condition; exclusions which would completely change the character, and be an additional breach of the treaties. Let us add that if a peaceful solution is desired, this is the only proposal for that purpose, which can decently be made."

Spanish affairs are unchanged, but the accounts of the stability of Narvaez' government are contradictory.

Italy. Respecting the Neapolitan difficulties, we have nothing more definite than the following, from the Paris Patrie:—"The Neapolitan differences, if we may believe reports published by the Belgian journals, are upon the point of entering on a better phase, and, although the King of Naples has, it is said, ordered his representatives in France and England to demand their passports so soon as they should be informed of the return of Baron Bremiere and M. Petre. It is thought an arrangement will be come to through the friendly interference of the Russian Minister at Naples. We shall know what we may expect on this subject, for a manifesto from the Neapolitan government is every day expected, and, if that document should not be of a conciliatory character, it is probable that the Neapolitan envoys will take their passports.

According to recent agreements with the Pope, the Austrians are withdrawing their troops from several of the towns in the Papal dominions, which they have for some time past occupied. At the same time they are making preparations for an overwhelming display of military force in Lombardy, and on the frontier. The posts evacuated are immediately re occupied by Papal and Swiss regiments.

Prussia. Letters say that the relations between France and Prussia are becoming closer, there being talk of but two policies, that of France, Russia, and Prussia, against England and Austria. Such talk however is of little value.

Russia. By a letter from Vienna, in the Cologne Gazette, we learn something about the diplomatic correspondence which resulted from the intention of Russia to erect new fortifications on the Finnish coast, in the Bothnian Gulf. We are told that the matter has come to an amicable understanding, so far as the relations of the French Government to Russia are concerned, but the British Government, it is said, still maintains that in these fortifications there is an evasion of the article of the Treaty of Peace, by which the erection of the fortifications of the Alared Islands is interdicted.

Count Morney is represented as having declared to Prince Gortschakoff, in reply to a direct question, that France had no objection to the erection of the proposed fortresses.

Turkey. The new Turkish Ministry is reported as follows:

Grand Vizier—Reschid Pacha; War—Omar Pasha; Marine—Riza Pacha; Finance—Jaffette Pacha. Faud Pacha will, in the meantime, retain the Portfolio of Foreign affairs, until Ali Pasha, to whom it is offered, consents to accept it.

The French as well as the English Governments, are favorable to the above ministry.

An ultimatum has been sent by England to Persia. The Shah persits in his refusals, and the British expedition against him was about to sail.

The Mormans in Denmark. A foreign paper states that Mormanism is making such progress in Denmark as to cause the religious and reflecting part of the inhabitants to look with dread to the future, as it has a most baneful influence on the peasantry and lower classes, who are exclusively its converts. Several petitions have been sent to the Government, from different parts of the kingdom, praying that a stop may be put to it, and that the Mormons should be prohibited from exercising their religious ceremonies with so much demonstrative ostentation as they are now allowed to do. Jutland is the great hot-bed of Mormon proselytism, and as they eventually make up caravans, or parties of 400 or 500 together, to emigrate to America, to settle on the banks of the Great Salt Lake, it will have the effect of ultimately depopulating the province, and depriving its agriculture of many industrious hands.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

—:o:—

Providence permitting, I will preach in New Bedford, Nov. 30. M. Grant.

—:o:—

Eld. S. W. Bishop appoints to preach at
Portsmouth, N. H., Nov. 30.
Concord, Dec. 7.

—:o:—

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at
Rye, N H, Sunday Nov 30.
Lowell, Mass, " Dec. 7.

—:o:—

Bro. W. S. Campbell appoints to preach at
Jawbuck, 27.
Hazardville, 28.
Yaugau R I, 14.

If these appointments conflict with others, please inform me, to save expense and trouble. W. S. C.

—:o:—

Bro. Ira Morgan appoints to preach at
Collinsville, Nov. 30.
Bridgeport, Dec 7, at the new chapel.

—:o:—

Bro. J. Howell appoints to preach at
Boston, at Chapman Hall, Nov. 30.
Salem, Dec. 7.

—:o:—

Bro. B. P. Manning appoints to preach at
New Boston, Nov. 30.

—:o:—

Bro. Z. Campbell appoints to preach at
Jawbuck, Conn., Nov. 26.
Warehouse Point, " 27.
Windsor, " 28.
New Britain, " 30.
Plymouth Hollow, Dec. 2.
Wolcott Centre, " 3.
Prospect, Dec 6 and Dec. 7, where Bro, Wilson may appoint
Mansfield, Conn., (at Bro Abbys') Dec. 14.

—:o:—

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Lynn, Dye House Village, Sunday, Nov. 30
Concord, N. H., Sunday, Dec. 7.
J. Hemenway.

—:o:—

Bro. C. Goodrich appoints to preach at Savoy, at the house of Bro. Morandvill, 26.
Savoy Tannery, 27.
North Adams, Sunday, 30.

—

Bro. H. Munger appoints to preach at
Waterbury, Ct., Monday eve. Dec. 1.
Camp-Mills, Tuesday eve, " 2.
Litchfield, if there is a conveyance over from the station, Wednesday, " 3.
Newfield, Thursday, " 4.
Winsted, Friday " 5.
Saturday and Sunday, where Providence opens the way.

:o:—

Bro. E. Whitney appoints to preach in Salem, Nov. 30.

Eld. S. S. Brewer appoints to preach at
Springfield, Mass., on the evenings of Nov. 26 and 27.
New Britain, Ct., Sunday, Nov. 30.
Bridgeport, " evenings, Dec. 3 and 4.
Newark, New Jersey, Sunday, " 7.
Boston, " 14.

Bro. J. Howell appoints to preach at
Lowell, Mass., Dec. 14.

A brother sends us the following appoint-
Jawbuck, Conn., Nov. 26.
Warehouse Point, 27.
Windsor, 28.
New Britain, 30.
Plymouth Hollow, Dec. 2
Wolcott Centre, Dec. 3.
Prospect, Dec. 6, also Sunday, Dec. 7, where Bro. Wilson may appoint.
Mansfield, Conn., (at Bro. Abby's) Dec. 14.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

Eld. J. Howell's P. O. address is Salem, Mass.

Joseph Kimball's P. O. address is Unity, N. H.

J T Ongley's P. O. address is Blooming Valley Crawford Co., Pa.

Eld. John Howell's P. O. address is Salem, Mass.

For Books.—C. H. Pilgrim $2.77.

Books Sent.—C H Pilgrim.

A. B. Read—You haae paid to No. 72.

J. Damon—You have paid to No. 104.

H. Babcock—You have paid to No. 95.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

E Macomber, W Berry, M M Leyman, M A Cotton, A Coburn, A B Read, T White, M Cooper, W S Howden, G W Chisman, J Damon, N Cole, J Mc Cracklen, $1 each.

P J Miliken, P C Rodman $2 each.

C Piper, Mrs J Rogers, G Phelps. 50 cents each.

C H Pilgrim, $ 2.23; W G Higgins, $5.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

—:o:—

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By L. C. Welcome. 33 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE THREE COVENANTS. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents; postage 1 cent.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE BOOK OF SEVEN SEALS. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents; postage 1 ct.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE CHRISTIAN'S ONLY HOPE: or, the Faith once Delivered to the Saints. By Z. Campbell. Price 10 cents; postage 1 ct.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE. By William Shepherd. Price—four copies, 25 cents; nine copies, 50 cents; eighteen copies, $1; one hundred, $5—post-paid.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

THE DISCUSSION: Between Prof. H. Mattison, of the Methodist E. Church, and George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price 25 cents; postage 3 cents.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and The New Birth. By J Lenfest. Single copy, 12 cents; $8 per hundred. Postage 1 cent per copy.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

A VIEW OF THE SCRIPTURE REVELATIONS Concerning a Future State. By Richard Whately, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin. Price $1; pastage 18 cents.

THE SEVEN SEALS: with Scriptural Facts concerning the Four Angels, the Four Winds, the Sealing Angel, the Seal of the Living God, &c. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cents.

THE FIRST FRUITS: a Scriptural Inquiry into the Time and Season of the First Resurrection, and Change of Those who are Alive and Remain. Price 10 cents per copy; postage 1 cent.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

JUBILEE HARP. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns well adapted to the present wants of the church. Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. Postage 7 cents.

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 38 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cts.—postage 9 cents.

GLAD TIDINGS, or Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to End in the Universe, by a Literal Destruction of Wicked Men and Devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment Collected and Arranged. By Jacob Blain. Price 10 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

BIBLE vs. TRADITION: in Which the True Teaching of the Bible is Manifested, the Corruptions of Theologians Detected, and the Traditions of Men Exposed. By Aaron Ellis Revised and much enlarged by Thomas Read. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents: postage 6 cents.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions of the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 16 cents per volume.

A REVIEW: Giving the Main Ideas in Dr. E. Beecher's 'Conflict of Ages,' and a Reply to Them, and to his many Reviewers. To which is added the Bible meaning of the word Hell. Also, two hundred texts quoted, to show the Nature of Future Punishment. By Jacob Blain, Baptist minister. Price 8 cents; postage 1 cent.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—by D. T. Taylor. Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—by John Cumming. State of the Dead, by Milton. Intermediate State, by Grew. Each 24 pages. Price [illegible] single; $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the Coast of Man—Ancient Landmarks—Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—price 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. ——Future Punishment—The Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—price [illegible] single; $1 per hundred.

The above named publications can be obtained at the office of the World's Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston; H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y.; W. [illegible]; [illegible] F. Porter, 20 [illegible] street, [illegible]; S. S. Brewer, 54 [illegible], [illegible] R. I.; S. W. Bishop, [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE ABSENT KING'S INQUIRIES.

BY MARIA.

Air.—"Do they miss me at home?"

Do they miss me on earth, do they miss me?
Ah! 'tis an assurance most dear,
To know that the heirs of the kingdom,
Are saying, "when will He appear?"
To know that they long to behold me,
And join th' angelic song;
To know in each heart is awakened
Regret, that I tarry so long.

When the dark shades of fear gather round them,
And the day-star seems never to rise,
Doth Hope in her brightness surround them?
Or Faith look away to the skies,
To view their Redeemer eternal,
Prepared, in his glory to come
To earth, with the sweet invitation—
"Ye bless'd of my Father, come home?"

When loved ones for edification,
Still trusting in Heaven, do meet,
Do they cry as they gaze on their number
"Lord, return to the long-vacant seat!
Return that thy people now weary,
In the homes of the promised land,
By permanent pleasure surrounded,
Redeemed from death e'er may stand?"

When poverty, sin, and temptation,
Oppression, delusion, dismay,—
The terrors of death are before them,
And standing in peaceful array,
Do they patiently bear each affliction,
While under the "chastening rod,"
Assured that a home will be given,
To the down-trodden people of God?

Danville, C. E., Oct., '56.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

A Voice from the West.

Bro. Grant:—I thought I would pen a few lines for you to publish if you think best. And as I wish to write under different heads, I will commence first with our WANTS.

We want preaching, and much of one kind. And if I am to decide, I would say that we want Gospel preaching; I mean, pure, undefiled wholesome truth, the kind that the Apostles preached. There are plenty of preachers here, but their preaching is too much like the traditions of the elders. Paul says, "faith comes by hearing and hearing by the word of God;" then the faith that Paul would recommend is that, that comes by the word of God. If it is that kind, it will be Gospel faith, and not faith in fables and the doctrines of men. If we have bible preaching,

WE WANT BIBLE TEACHERS.

Without they are bible men they will not give us the good news of the kingdom of God. But there are other things to be considered. Men should live right every where, but the preachers that come West need something about them that we are not all blest with; that is, a strong constitution, like Paul's, with their own hands administering to their wants; for a minister has got to work that comes out here, as it is a new field and the people generally poor.

Then, we want self-sacrificing men; those who will hazard their lives, if need be, spend and be spent for the cause of Christ; those who are able to take the bible in their hand and go on foot miles, to spread the light of the Gospel of the Son of God: men, with patience and endurance, who can suffer hardness as good soldiers knowing the reward is ahead.

WE WANT TRACTS.

These we want very much now, whether we get any more ministers or not to help those that are already here. I mean, when I say we want tracts, we want them to give away—spread broad cast throughout the land. And if ever there was a great door opened, it is here in the West. Men will not buy the truth unless they are interested in it; the ear must be reached before we can get money for tracts. And I hope the day is not far distant when I shall have the privilege of giving to all; that there will be funds raised for that purpose, and the sooner the better.

When I look into the past, I see that it has been hard for man to give up what has been taught from infancy: and when I look upon the reformation of Luther's time, I see tradition mingled with the great light which then shone on the bible. Following the history of the Church, we find that a portion are learning and coming to the truth, while others are going back to darkness. Mark one thing; man has not found out all of the truth at one time, but there has been a growth in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Can any one say, I have all the truth; I am right and you are wrong? I think not. Too much has this been the case. One says, this way; another, that way. I have learned, that by giving to man the right of judgment, or in other words giving him liberty, if he has an error it will not be long before he will renounce it and receive the truth.

The best way is to preach our views, then let men look for themselves, and not say they must believe it or be damned. How often this has been the case. O that ministers would study to be more of the mind of Christ! Some have got the spirit of the Apostles at a certain time, when they found some that did not go with them, and commanded them not to do so any more. Men have different gifts.

Let us do to others as we wish others would do to us. Much might be written on this subject, but I forbear by saying I am willing to fellowship men as they will be tested at the judgment, that is, by their works. It will not be,—do you believe this, or that, but have you done so and so? My prospects are good. I have many trials here, but have found that the same foolish preaching, as viewed by the world, is the power of God. I find it takes effect on the minds of the people. One place, I have visited five times every two weeks,—preached one sermon every time; the result altho' small, considering the large field, is that seven have arisen for prayers. The work moves slowly. If I could hold a protracted meeting the result might be much better; but as I have said, a preacher must work, so it of course hinders his labors, if he has not money to do with. I am willing to work, and also to preach, for I know in whom I believe. I hope, brethren, you will pray that God will bless the labors in the West; and while you pray, put your hands in your pockets to buy tracts, that we may have to give away; and so fulfill the law of Christ. We are almost home. How cheering it is to think the chief Shepherd is so near, and we shall soon have the crown of righteousness that fadeth not away.

Peter S. W. Deyo.

Strawberry Point, Iowa, Oct. 26, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Cleanliness.

Cleanliness is intimately connected with religion. Indeed, it is difficult to conceive of an uncleanly christian! Be sure, under some peculiar circumstances, such as sickness, we cannot be so scrupulous, as to the laws of health, as under ordinary circumstances. Cleanliness should be regarded in every department—in person, in the family, in the house, bed, at table, in garments, and throughout the entire connections of physical life. It costs but little to be clean, when once we set ourselves about it, and the gain of health and comfort is incalculable.

E. B.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Sr. S. Wells.

Bro. Grant:—Permit me, although poor and unworthy, to ask the privilege of saying a few words through the Crisis to the dear brethren and sisters scattered abroad.

First, I would desire to thank the dear friend in the Lord, who has been so kind as to send my companion, D. Wells, your much wished for paper, the "World's Crisis." Although poverty and sickness have been our lot in this world for the last five years, yet the good Lord has been a present help in every time of need, and blessed be his holy name for his goodness to such poor unworthy creatures as we are.

Our privileges are very limited, yet it is our delight to serve the Lord. We live in the midst of popular preaching, but it does not satisfy the soul that is longing to be fed with the truths of the Bible. I would say of those who are opposed to such plain truths as we have set forth, they have eyes but they see not, and ears, but they hear not.

Does it not look like the time when "God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie?" 2 Thess. 2: 11. O how can a true child of God help rejoicing at the glorious sound of our Lord and Savior's soon coming to take home his waiting Bride? Long has she been clad in the habiliments of mourning, longing and waiting for her Lord's appearing. How sweetly does she catch each encouraging gale as it wafts her to that sweet heavenly rest, which remains for the children of God. It is the intense desire of her heart to have her lamps trimmed and burning, for she feels her departed Lord cannot be far distant. O, how often is she led to cry out in the language of John while on the isle of Patmos,—"Come, Lord Jesus!"—And she often feels to say—"Come quickly."

O the contrast between the lovers of the present truth, and the popular preachers of the present day. It seems as if nothing gave them so much pain, as to mention the near coming of our dear Savior, in their hearing. But how can we help speaking of that once dying, but now risen Savior of mankind, who is so soon to gather his children home? Soon, I believe, the last message will be given,

"Gabriel, go proclaim the sound,
Awake ye nations under ground."

O my dear brothers and sisters, what a day is about to burst in upon this guilty world! Are we prepared to meet it?—Have we warned every one who has been within our reach? Soon, very soon, we must meet them at the bar of God. What done must be done quickly. I do entreat all who are able to sustain the Crisis to help. Help Bro. Grant—it is a trying time, he needs all the assistance that can be given him, and all the prayers of the church in Christ Jesus.

Do not forget the poor; they often suffer. I, for one, can sympathize with them, and I would say to them, our trials are almost ended, and if we are faithful a few days, we shall all be at home. Bless the Lord. That we all may prove faithful, is the prayer of your unworthy sister,

Sarah S. Wells.

Wells, Me.

From Bro. Latimer.

Bro. Grant:—"While I was musing the fire burned; then spake I with my tongue;" but as I cannot thus speak to those I would, I will pen a few lines to those of like precious faith. Although conscious of coming short many times of doing my duty, yet, I have great reason to thank the Lord that he has kept me thus far in the one hope to which we are called, and am still looking for the final consummation of the same at the soon return of the Son of man; and my prayer still is,—"Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." Oh, how I long to see the bloody scenes of earth exchanged for the blissful reign of peace; when He whose right it is shall take the throne, and reign over the house of David forever.

And how those that profess to have any understanding of the scriptures, can believe that there is to be a reign of peace before the Lord comes, is more than I can conceive; and when there is not a text in the whole bible for it, but many things flatly against it, and wickedness at the same time is continually on the increase. Men are proud, blasphemers, lovers of their own-selves more than of God. What a sad, desolate picture our world now presents! Never, I believe, has religion and politics been so much blended together as now.—Almost every professed preacher of the gospel of Jesus Christ has got "Fremont and Freedom" mixed with their preaching; and never, methinks, has the devil been more subtile, in his schemes to blind and deceive than the one now before the people. Every christian must hate to see his fellow beings enslaved; but while these promise them liberty, they themselves are the servants of sin and corruption, and all are acting from selfish motives, expecting to bring about what God has said cannot be done; and if you talk to them of the Lord's soon coming, they say it cannot be for a thousand years to come, for the world must be converted. Blind, delusive hope! thanks be to the Lord that he has shown me a better way, a more glorious hope, and one that is fully sustained by the word of Divine truth; and by it I have been led to look upon the evil state of things now existing, as a bright harbinger of a better day. When Israel shall dwell safely within his own borders, then no stranger shall pass through Jerusalem any more at all. I will close by desiring the prayers of God's people, that we may be kept until the appearing of our life-giver. Life eternal! what a blessing! how rich! how full! what is this life compared unto it? Lord, help us to consider these things, and work while the day lasts.

N. S. Latimer.

Silver Lake, Wis.

For the Crisis.

A Reformation.

I am thankful to the Lord that there is quite a reformation going on among our brethren and sisters, on the matter of using tobacco. Let the good work go on, until not only this filthy habit shall be entirely abandoned, but also other habits almost as pernicious as this, such as using tea, and coffee, and continually dosing with medicine. "Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word, which is able to save your souls." James 1: 21.

E. B.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

"LET THE STRONG BEAR WITH THE WEAK."

BY MARIA

Love that trav'ler:—dark and dreary,
Long has been his journey here;
Lo! he seeks a "heavenly city,"
Where will come no troubled tear,—
Lonely, weary,
Without love, will all appear.

Ask him, should he cease to languish,
When a Brother standeth by;
Should despondency and anguish,
In divine obedience fly;
Ask, O, ask him,
And he'll quickly tell thee why!

Ask him if a smile e'er gladdened
Him, while on his lonely way,
When by sin and sorrow saddened
And eclipsed each beacon ray,—
If, before him,
Rose the everlasting day?

When the last loud trump has sounded,
From the dead he'll rise again;
Thou shalt see him, clad in beauty,
Stand before the "Judge of men,"—
To his blessing,
Jesus adds a blessing then.

Danville, C. E.

Choice Selections.

God's Kingdom First.

'Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness," is a requirement which never has been abrogated. In the nature of things it cannot be annulled. The kingdom of God, and the righteousness therewith associated, must ever be held by all right minded intelligences as paramount and superior to all other interests. Next after the ascription of honor to God, 'Thy Kingdom come' is the leading petition in the Lord's prayer; and all our desires and all our actions should take this order. Not merely the divine honor but the highest of the whole universe, demands that the supremacy and priority of his kingdom, and the advancement of his righteousness, should be thus sought and thus maintained.

To set any other object before this, is a disorderly proceeding, and breaks the harmony of the universe. Jehovah can-never allow such a course, and prosperity cannot attend it,

As individuals, our truest welfare can be secured only by 'seeking first the kingdom of God and his righteousness.' He in whose heart this kingdom reigns, in its divine sovereignty, and in whose soul this righteousness is supremely loved and cherished, and welcomed, and enshrined, will invariably find his own interest and advantage most effectually subserved and secured. 'All these things shall be added to you.' And if we would labor for the welfare of others—of our friends, of the community, of the State, of the nation—still the rule is, 'Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness,' that is, make true piety, true spirituality, true holiness the object of your highest solicitude. Hold other ends paramount—let other issues constitute your ideal of success, and the result will be a failure. Only as God's kingdom and righteousness are established and promoted in the land, is a true success achieved. Above all the expedients and all the prescriptions of all the body politic, this stands supreme as the antagonist and antidote of all disorder and all wrong.

Let the Christian citizen, then, abide by the divine expediency and the divine philosophy. Whatever be our political preferences or policy, let us be sure and hold the kingdom of God and his righteousness nearest and dearest to our hearts, first and foremost in our desires and in our efforts. He makes a sad mistake, who, professing to seek the good of his country, sinks his allegiance to Christ and his church in the whirlpool of political excitement and enthusiasm. To hold the interests of Zion in abeyance, or to make them a secondary and subordinate consideration, is no true patriotism. This is not to 'let your conversation (your politeuma, politics) be as becometh the gospel of Christ.' Yet this is the type of politics which your country needs—that which is in harmony with the gospel, its spirit, its sanctions, and its claims. Suffer not Cæsar to usurp the place of Chrsst, Exalt the Savior, honor his name, cleave to his standard, identify yourself with his people, his kingdom, and his worship, and be a politician only so far as is clearly consonant with the fulfillment of these duties and these obligations.

The Kingdom of God first—let this be the Christian's motto and rule, always and everywhere.

Prayer

'Prayer is the Christian's staff, with which
To walk with God all day.'

How true this is. How often we have proved its utility, and how often have we found, to our sorrow, the effects of neglecting it. When the morning hour has been given to fervent and earnest wrestling at the throne of grace—when the wakeful moments of the passing night have been consecrated to the same blessed employment—how sweetly speed the passing hours! how quietly and safely we walk with God! But let the morning thanksgiving and morning prayer be omitted, and the whole day goes wrong.

It is said that, on that fatal day in which Cranmer denied his Lord and abjured his faith, he neglected his accustomed morning devotions. Who knows but that, if he had not neglected duty, he might have been spared the bitterness of repentance, and have died without exclaiming as he did, 'That unworthy right hand?'

Peter neglected to watch and pray, and he fell into temptation. So have you done, and so have I, oftentimes. Satan, seeing us at ease, has taken from us, piece by piece, the armor wherein we trusted, and left us nothing but nakedness and shame. Let us watch against his devices, and pray without ceasing.

H. L. H.

Family Unity.

What more interesting and lovely sight can be contemplated on earth than a kind, peaceable and united family? Equally so, whether we refer to a natural family, or to a Christian church family. Said the ancient man of God, "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren (relations) to dwell together in unity! It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard, that went down to the skirts of his garments; as the dew of heaven, and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion; for there the Lord commanded the blessings, even life forevermore."

Many families do not realize what unspeakable happiness they lose by living in the uncongenial and jangling manner they do. They turn the most delightful spots of God's creation into a dreary desert.—They change fountains of almost divine sweetness into loathsome pools of stagnant gall. They blast, and waste, and rample down the fairest gardens that the Almighty has made to bloom. The crime of family jarring is enormous. It takes hold on interests personal, social, physical, moral, spiritual, divine, and eternal. It is a crime, the mischief of which cannot be fully estimated. A united and happy family is a kind of ante-chamber to heaven itself. A kind of vestibule of the kingdom of God. In such soil, virtue, truth, and religion shall flourish. How happy is that husband's and father's heart, when the toils of the day are over, and he turns his footsteps homeward, sure to be greeted by the sweet smiles of a loving wife, and merry welcoming shouts of glad and happy children! Home to that man, is the sweetest, brightest spot on earth. His family will never complain of the want of his society while he lives, and when duty will permit him to remain in their midst. How happy is that affectionate wife, as she moves amidst the duties of her household, feeling confident that a generous husband loves her with all his heart, and obedient children thankfully confide in her watchful care! How happy are those playful, peaceable children, who live in each other's interests and pleasures, and in the pleasure of their devoted parents.—E. B.—Newburyport Herald.

Secret Prayer.

President Edwards in one of his discourses on prayer gives the following solemn advice:

"I would exhort those who have entertained a hope of their being true converts, and yet since their supposed conversion have left off the duty of secret prayer, and do ordinarily allow themselves in the omission of it, to throw away their hope. If you have left off calling upon God, it is time for you to leave off hoping and flattering yourselves with an imagination that you are the children of God. Probably it will be a very difficult thing for you to do this. It is hard for a man to let go a hope of heaven, on which he hath once allowed himself to lay hold, and which he hath retained for a considerable time.—Those things in men which, if known to others, would be sufficient to convince others that they are hypocrites, will not convince themselves."

Here are truths which cannot be gainsayed, and how many professors are there in our churches who probably do not maintain the habit of secret prayer?

In another place the same writer says: "He that prays only when he prays with others, would not pray at all, were it not that the eyes of other men are upon him."

Cyristian, ponder these words, and ask yourself whether they hold true in your own case.—Gen. Evan.

For the Children.

A Good Story.

Henry, the Hero—Or Difficulties Overcome.

Onward! you've no time for dreaming,
Mere resolves, nor standing still;
Time its rapid course is speeding;—
Seek to do thy Master's will.

Onward! though the steep ascending
Makes thy progress hard and slow;
Angel guides, thy steps attending,
Cheer thee greatly as you go.

Beloved readers, are you disposed to deno yourselves, make great sacrifices for great things, glorious things? Well, read the following; it will help you on.

Henry Burgett was not quite twelve years old when his father died; and fast as his tears fell when he knew that his kind papa could be with him no more, he wept, if possible, more violently, when his mother told him they must leave the pretty cottage, the only home they had ever known, and that hereafter he was to live with farmer Howard.

"We are poor, Henry," said she, "very poor, and young as you are, my boy, you must now earn your own support. But keep up a stout heart, you can do it. Fie on those tears!" and she turned hastily that he might not perceive the grief that was piercing her own soul.

Farmer Howard was a hard master, and a sorry time had poor Harry during the long summer days that succeeded this interview with his mother. It was work, with no relaxation, from the earliest dawn till twilight had quite faded. Often did his courage fail, and despondency and indolence urge him to stop, but a stern necessity was upon him, he must do or starve; and hence he kept at it, wearily enough to be sure, until the last apple was in the cellar, the last ear of corn in the crib, and all things secured against the winter, with the most pains taking thoroughness.

The winter, tardy as its approach appeared to Henry, came at last, with its three months privilege of school, and its glorious long evenings that he might spend as he chose, with no spectres of huge heaps of corn to husk, or vast fields of potatoes to dig looming up in the distance.

How well these hours for study were improved, or how highly prized the bright light which the blazing pine splinter shed from the attic window, until long past the hour of twelve might tell. (A pine splinter, because the mistress was a careful soul, and saved the candle-ends to light Henry to bed.) He advanced with surprising rapidity in his studies, and what wonder? Ardent, persevering effort was never unsuccessful. When the spring came he was quite master of the Latin grammar, and was beginning to read in this language with some degree of ease. The summer, with its wearisome round of duties, could not damp his desire for knowledge. Every spare moment was carefully seized and sedulously employed in his favorite study.

The winter came again, and with gleeful heart Henry bounded away to the village school. On the way a classmate overtook him; one who had often jeered him for his bashfulness, and plain, homespun attire, and who, with every advantage had uninterruptedly pursued his studies.

"Ha! ha! how are you, Hal?" said he, "dont you wish you could read all that?", triumphantly holding up a Latin Reader and spreading his palm complacently over the open page. Henry kept his own counsel, and together they proceeded toward the school-house

Soon after the opening of the morning exercises, the class in Latin was called to the recitation bench.

"Henry," said the master, "I think you will not be able to go on with the class you were in last winter; you must fall back with the beginners."

"I should like to enter the Virgil class, Sir."

"Virgil class! Nonsense, boy, you could not read one word, just let me see now," opening the book and placing it in his hand.

"How far shall I read?"

"As far as you can," replied the master, with a sharp twinkle of his grey eye, and an involuntary sarcastic smile.

Henry had commenced unhesitatingly to read, and had turned the first, second, and third leaves before the Master had sufficiently recovered from his surprise to arrest him.

"Stop, sir! Where did you learn all this?"

Henry told him where. Taking him by the arm, the master led him to the centre of the room, and placing his hand upon his head, said:

"Atttention, boys; here is a hero, a greater conqueror than was Cæsar or Napoleon. Give him a round, three times three, now."

Cheerily, heartily, rung out that applause, penetrating the farthest recesses of that time-worn building, making the windows fairly shake again. What a joyful day was that for Harry! How his heart leaped and almost bounded out of his bosom—how the boys shook hands and envied him—how the girls nodded and blinked their pretty eyes at him; he has not yet forgotten, and although at the present time, the laurels of a country's regard are clustering thick around his brow, he often says: "that was the victory of my life. It was at farmer Howard's I learned to labor unflinchingly for a given and."

Children, this is no fancy sketch. Such a lad as I have described really existed, and from his example may we not learn to plant for ourselves elevated standards, and never give over until we have mastered every obstacle and reached our aim.

It is not always lessons to be learned, or wood-piles to be demolished and re-built. There are bad hearts to govern, vicious inclinations to restrain, selfish dispositions to overcome, many, many wrongs to be righted. There is room for a life-long labor in our hearts.

Up, then, my friends, with a strong purpose of life. Shrink not at the sight of difficulty. Remember that "where there's a will, there's a way," and that perseverance is a sure guaranty of success.—Golden Rule.

Philosophers tell us in their speculations that we cannot lift a finger without moving the distant spheres. Solemn is the thought, but no more solemn to the Christian mother than the thought that every word that falls from her lips, every expression of her countenance, even in the sheltered walk and retirement, may leave an indelible impression upon the young souls around her, and form, as it were, the underling strain of that education which peoples heaven with the celestial being, and gives to the white brow of the angel next to the grace of God its crown of glory.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1856. WHOLE NO. 66. VOL. IV. NO. 14

The World's Crisis, is published weekly by believers in the Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months - - - -	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months - - - - -	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months -	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months -	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

The Unpardonable Sin.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

No. II.

If there be in the mind of a person a disposition of penitence, and a desire for the pardon of sin, the Holy Spirit has begotten that disposition and desire. The spirit of evil will not create such a desire. And the Holy Spirit would not create such a disposition and desire in one who is utterly rejected of God! And since the Spirit has wrought "to will," in that one, it is because it can and will, if submitted to, help "to do" what is thus begotten in the will. Let every one, then, who wills to repent, and who desires to live a holy life, know, most assuredly, that such a condition of mind is the most absolute and positive evidence that the person is in a salvable state. O thou desponding, trembling, fearing, doubting one, dismiss all thy gloomy, despairing thoughts, and believe what is written, that thy holy Redeemer is "able to save them to the UTTERMOST that come unto God by him." Dost thou "hunger and thirst after righteousness?" It is written, such "SHALL be filled." Dost thou "mourn" for thy sins? It is written, such "SHALL be comforted." Hope thou in the mercy of God; for "the Lord taketh pleasure in them that hope in his mercy."—Trust him to save you. "Ask, and you SHALL receive." Look, and live!

Again. "For if we sin willfully after that we have received the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries. He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses: of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace." Heb. 10: 26–29.—Sinning "willfully," here mentioned, means more than sinning knowingly, deliberately, or even willingly. It implies a set, malicious and determined will to sin at all hazards, against the whole evidence of the gospel. A person may go, under the power of temptation, knowingly, deliberately, and willingly into sin, and yet while he does not maliciously abuse the Holy Spirit, or reject the holy "covenant" utterly, tho' his case may be dreary it is not hopeless. The "willful" sin is defined by the apostle, in this connection, to consist of three most awfully wicked acts.

1. Trample "under foot the Son of God."
2. Count "the blood of the covenant an unholy thing."
3. Do "despite unto the Spirit of grace."

It is seldom persons are found who have gone such fatal lengths; and when such persons are met with, they are not found to manifest any penitent anxiety about themselves, but "a certain fearful looking for of judgment," such as is peculiar to devils themselves. Trembling soul, you are not of this class. You, in your very heart, adore the Savior; you reverence the thought of "the blood of the covenant;" and you earnestly desire the indwelling of the blessed Spirit, instead of doing despite to it. Once more. "Lest there be any fornicator, or profane person, as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright. For ye know that afterward, when he would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected: for he found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears." Heb., 12: 16, 17.

The "place of repentance," mentioned here, refers to Esau's father's mind, and not the mind of Esau himself: this is conceded by pretty much all Bible students, and, indeed, the circumstances and facts positively show this: and therefore, the sense of the language is as follows: "when he would have inherited the blessing he was rejected: for he found no" disposition to reform or change in his father's mind, "though he" entreated his father "with tears" to change his mind. The whole passage, then, may be paraphrased in the following manner: Be careful that none of you fall into the sin of fornication * or profanity, and thus depart from God, and go on in sin, step by step, until you become so fallen as to give up all desire and disposition to serve the Lord, and thus for simple pleasure sell your heavenly birthright, as Esau sold his family "birthright" "for one morsel of meat:" and, in such a case, you will desire to be saved, in the day of Judgment, when it is too late, just as he desired the blessing when it had been given to his brother, and could not be recalled. One blessed passage of Scripture should silence all our fears of being rejected of God. It is this: "Whosoever cometh unto me I will in nowise cast out. Do you desire to be a christian? will you give yourself up to be one? If so, as sure as God maintains His throne, you cannot be lost!

* Fornication or profanity, in themselves, are not unpardonable sins, but if persons fall into them they will be likely to go farther, and finally commit the fatal sin. Let all, therefore, who have fallen into any such, repent immediately.

For the Crisis.

The Lord's Day.

BY W. SHEPHERD.

No. III.

These are some of the important things which are to transpire in this period under consideration, and glorious things they are for the saint to contemplate.

But we must not omit to mention one other distinguished feature brought to view by this prophet, which in that day will also have its accomplishment. It is this. "One shall say, I am the Lord's; and another shall call himself by the name of Jacob; and another shall subscribe with his hand unto the Lord, and surname himself by the name of Israel." Isa. 44: 5. Which is a synonymy denoting one and the same thing. It will not be as it is now, one saying, I am a Baptist; another subscribing to the Presbyterian creed; another surnaming himself a Methodist, Episcopalian, Dutch Reformed, Quaker, and the almost thousand other names whereby nominal Christians distinguish themselves.

Names and creeds, catechisms and human disciplines, articles of faith, sects and denominations; things, which are now held in such high esteem, will then meet with no commendation.

"Mid thunders of the judgment day,
They'll sink a wreck and pass away."

No names will be acknowledged then, save such as shall be found "written in heaven"—recorded "in the book of life."

Beloved, look to it, that ye fail not to escape all these things and to stand upright [illegible] elled from every human device and system before the Son of Man when he appeareth.

Once more and we hasten from this prophet to the next. "At that day shall a man look to his Maker, and his eyes shall have respect to the Holy One of Israel. He shall not look to the altars, the work of his hands, neither shall respect that which his fingers have made." Isa. 17: 7, 8. It will not be then as now, looking to our, mine, or your preacher, or church. There will not be any unusual regard entertained then for the Rev. Mr. So-and-so, D. D., the Right Rev., or Very Right Rev., or Bishop this one or that one. There will be no crowding around the "Altars, the work of men's hands" in order to get a knowledge of God and his religion; no looking to the pulpits to catch their soft and velvet-spun discourses; there will be none so foolish, weak minded, and deluded as to pin their faith to the flowing surplice of a fellow mortal, a self-made priest.—"Altars, the work of men's hands" shall fail then as a shelter, and hireling priests who make their plants (not God's, as they will never be plucked up, Matt. 15: 13.) to grow, and their seed (not "the seed which the Lord hath blest," Isa. 61: 9.) to flourish,—"But, the harvest shall be a heap, in the day of grief and of desperate sorrow." Isa. 18: 11.

"Some cling to prelates' surplice strings—
We bow to no created things;
ONE God we worship, one alone,
Earth is his footstool—Heaven his throne."

Beloved, let us adopt the above truthful sentiment of the poet, and begin now more intensely, to look to our Maker, and direct our eyes, hearts and minds to the Holy One of Israel. And O, that the deluded and blinded thousands did but understand their true position; that they were sensible of their wretched condition and danger; that they did but know that many of these very individuals whom they look up to with awe and reverence which belongs to the supreme Jehovah alone, regarding them as the true expounders of God's blessed word, confiding in their teachings, relying upon their prayers and intercessions for a hope of salvation; did they but know that many of their teachers were doomed to condemnation in the great day, and that our beloved Messiah and coming King (whom they now hypocritically profess to love and serve) will deny ever knowing them and bid them depart from his spotless presence "where there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. But no, we cannot make them believe the truth; they turn away their ears from the truth, and with avidity grasp at fables. "Many," says Jesus, —not a few,—but, "many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done MANY WONDERFUL WORKS? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity." Matt. 7: 22, 23. O may the Lord give us grace to endure, that we may not be left to mingle with that vast multitude who shall in that day knock for admission—be recognized by the Son of God as hypocrites, and forbidden to enter!

And now, let us notice what Jeremiah affirms in reference to this time. "Thus saith the Lord God of hosts, behold, evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth. And the slain of the Lord, shall be at that day from one end of the earth, even unto the other end of the earth; they shall be dung upon the ground. Howl, ye shepherds, and cry; and wallow yourselves in the ashes ye principal of the flock; for the days of your slaughter and of your dispersions are accomplished, and ye shall fall like a pleasant vessel; and the shepherds shall have no way to flee, nor the principal of the flock to escape. A voice of the cry of the shepherds, and an howling of the principal of the flock shall be heard: for the Lord hath spoiled their pasture; and the peaceable habitations are cut down because of the fierce anger of the Lord." Jer. 25: 32–37. "For this is the day of the Lord God of hosts, a day of vengeance, that he may avenge him of his adversaries; and the sword shall devour flesh, and it shall be satiate and made drunk with blood." Jer. 46: 10. This is sufficient for Jeremiah.

We now come to Ezekiel. He informs us at this period, that men will be led to discover the emptiness of all worldly wealth and riches, and will sorely grieve that they have been such fools—finding that it has proved their ruin—"the stumbling block of their iniquity"—the chief cause of their being cut off from life eternal.

He says, "All hands shall be feeble, and all knees shall be weak as water."—"They shall cast their silver in the streets, and their gold shall be removed; (from their coffers and iron safes,) their silver and their gold shall not be able to deliver them in the day of the wrath of the Lord." Ezek. 7: 17, 19.

This lesson they will then learn, but too late; they should have learned it before, and then been saved the bitter experience of piercing themselves through with "many sorrows." But alas, for them, there always has been, and will be even to the end of time, a class of mortals who "are ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth;" and when they do, unhappily for them as in the case here brought to view, they obtain it too late to do them any real service or good. The Lord help us to learn now, that we may perceive things in their proper light, then we shall not be cumbered with much silver or gold, and have none to cast [illegible] with painful regret in the trying [illegible]

Again. The beginning of the era no doubt [illegible] the time spoken of by Daniel [illegible] saints of the Most High sh[illegible] possess the kingdom, under the [illegible]ven. "And (when) many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Dan. 12: 2.

God says, "It shall come as a destruction from the Almighty."

He also declares,—"the earth shall quake," "and the heavens shall tremble. And the Lord shall utter his voice before his army . . . . for the day of the Lord is great and very terrible;" and then presents the inquiry, "who can abide it?" But notwithstanding this awful state of things, the prophet assures us, that though "the Lord shall roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem;" though "the heavens and earth shall shake," the Lord shall be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel." And they shall know, (not only hope, or think, but know,) that he is the Lord their God, dwelling in Zion his holy hill. Then shall "Jerusalem be holy, and there shall be no strangers pass through her any more. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the mountains shall drop down new wine, (see Matt. 26: 29.) and the hills shall flow with milk; and all the rivers of Judah shall flow with waters, and a fountain shall come forth of the house of the Lord, and shall water the valley of Shittim." "But Judah shall dwell forever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation;" for "the Lord dwelleth in Zion." Joel 1: 15; 2: 10, 11; 3: 15–21. Then God "will come down, and tread upon the high places of the earth; and the mountains shall be molten under him, and the valleys shall be cleft as wax before the fire." Mic. 1: 3, 4.

Zechariah says, at that time, all nations shall be gathered against Jerusalem to battle—the Lord will appear—his feet stand upon Mount Olivet—a tremendous earthquake takes place—the mountain is cleft asunder—a desperate conflict transpires between the Cæsars (the kings of the earth,) of this world and their armies, and the Lord Jesus and his armies; (Rev. 19:) which of course results in the entire overthrow, defeat, and ruin of all God's enemies, and triumph of Messiah and those that are with him. Zech. 14.

Malachi predicts thus: "The day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall be stubble, and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." Mal. 4: 1. This implies a complete and perfect obliteration of every being and thing which is opposed to the holy government of God under the divine administration of the Messiah; and the impossibility of any wicked power ever prevailing again from the fact, that their very "root" and "branch" is to be consumed—destroyed.

For the Crisis.

he Sabbath.

No. III.

Again, it is said that the ten commandments are moral precepts; and the inference is drawn from such declarations that all the other commandments are not moral. Hence, God has given a code of immoral precepts, by the hand of Moses. Is this true? We answer emphatically, No. All of God's commandments, whether belonging to this or any preceding dispensation, are moral. It matters not what the nature of any requirement may be, there is certainly a moral principle involved in each and all of the commands of God. Because, we demonstrate to the world that we love God and also the children of God, and the world, when we love God, and keep his commandments. I John 5: 2, 3.

How can this possibly be otherwise?—The entire Sinai law, flowed from a spiritual, righteous, holy, just, good, pure, and heavenly fountain, even from the blessed God himself. Can a stream issuing from such a fountain be impure? Impossible. The Son of God says, Matt. 7: 18, "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit."

Again, the Psalmist says,—"The words of the Lord are pure words; as silver tried in the furnace of earth, purified seven times." Ps. 12: 6. "Thy word is very pure, therefore thy servant loveth it." Ps. 119: 140. "Every word of God is pure," &c. Prov. 30: 5. "In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established."

There is no more sanctity attached to the fourth commandment than to the entire law. Paul says "the law is holy."—Then we settle down upon a solid and immovable basis, that the entire law of God, which is sometimes called the law of Moses, was moral, spiritual, holy, just, and good, at the time it was given; and that law never has changed its spirituality or goodness from that day to this. It stands out as a monument of God's eternal goodness, love and benevolence, even to this very hour; and it is commendable to use that law now, if it is used in a lawful manner. See 1 Tim. 1: 8. For without it how could we demonstrate that Christ, the Son of God, is the true Messiah? Here are precepts in the law which, to our minds, test a man's moral character much more than the fourth or even any of the ten commands. Israel was required to give the firstling of their herds, and flocks, and the first fruit of all their increase to the Lord.

Again, it is said that the seventh day sabbath is a sign, or seal; Ex. 31: 13, 17, and unless we keep that day, we cannot be sealed, with the seal of the living God. Consequently, we cannot be saved. We readily admit that the seventh day sabbath is a sign, but to whom? all nations? No, not by any means. It is a sign to Israel, and Israel alone; and here is clear proof that God never gave the sabbath to other nations, for if all nations kept this day, then the sign, or sabbath would cease to be a sign to distinguish Israel from other nations. For an illustration, suppose that vessels from all nations should sail into New York harbor, all bearing precisely the same standard, how would the multitude who throng the shore and gaze with intense interest, recognize the vessels belonging to the various nations? All would be mystery. All the standards being the same they would not give them the desired information. Just so with the sabbath. Now then, the seventh day is not only a sign to Israel, but all sabbaths are a sign to that people. Proof. Ezek. 20: 10–21.

"Wherefore I caused them to go forth out of the land of Egypt, and brought them into the wilderness.

And I gave them my statutes, and shewed them my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them.

Moreover also I gave them my sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the Lord that sanctify them.

But the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wilderness; they walked not in my statutes, and they despised my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them; and my sabbaths they greatly polluted: then I said, I would pour out my fury upon them in the wilderness, to consume them.

But I wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted before the heathen, in whose sight I brought them out.

Yet also I lifted up my hand unto them in the wilderness, that I would not bring them into the land which I had given them, flowing with milk and honey, which is the glory of all lands;

Because they despised my judgments, and walked not in my statutes, but polluted my sabbaths: for their heart went after their idols.

Nevertheless mine eye spared them from destroying them, neither did I make an end of them in the wilderness.

But I said unto their children in the wilderness, walk ye not in the statutes of your fathers, neither observe their judgments, nor defile yourselves with their idols;

I am the Lord your God; walk in my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them;

And hallow my sabbaths; and they shall be a sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am the Lord your G[illegible]

Notwithstanding the chil[illegible] against me: they walked not in my statutes, neither kept my judgments to do them, which if a man do, he shall even live in them: they polluted my sabbaths: then I said, I would pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the wilderness." God is the originator of all sabbaths; he ordained them all in Mount Sinai, and gave them all to Israel for a sign and not only so, but the entire law was given for a sign to the same identical people. Deut. 6: 1—9. "Now these are the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments, which the Lord your God commanded to teach you, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go to possess it:

That thou mightest fear the Lord thy God, to keep all his statutes and his commandments, which I command thee; thou, and thy son, and thy son's son, all the days of thy life; and that thy days may be prolonged.

Hear therefore, O Israel, and observe to do it, that it may be well with thee, and that ye may increase mightily, as the Lord God of thy fathers hath promised thee, in the land that floweth with milk and honey.

Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord: and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might.

And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart:

And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes.

And thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates."

And 11: 13—22." "And it shall come to pass, if ye shall hearken diligently unto my commandments which I command you this day, to love the Lord your God, and to serve him with all your heart and with all your soul, [illegible]

That I will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain and the latter rain, that thou mayest [illegible] thy corn, and thy wine, [illegible]

And I will send [illegible]

thy cattle, that thou mayest eat and be full.

Take heed to yourselves, that your heart be not deceived, and ye turn aside, and serve other gods, and worship them;

And then the Lord's wrath be kindled against you, and he shut up the heaven, that there be no rain, and that the land yield not her fruit: and lest ye perish quickly from off the good land which the Lord giveth you.

Therefore shall ye lay up these my words in your heart and in your soul, and bind them for a sign upon your hand, that they may be as frontlets between your eyes.

And ye shall teach them your children, speaking of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

And thou shalt write them upon the door posts of thine house, and upon thy gates:

That your days may be multiplied, and the days of your children, in the land which the Lord sware unto your fathers to give them, as the days of heaven upon the earth.

For if ye shall diligently keep all these commandments which I command you, to do them, to love the Lord your God, to walk in all his ways, and to cleave unto him." Deut. 11: 13-22.

Hence, in order for Israel to receive the full impress of God's Mount Sinai seal, they must keep the whole law, in order to be justified." For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point he is guilty of all." Therefore, the Sabbath seal amounts to nothing, from the fact, that neither the law, nor the gospel, will save him under such circumstances. And just so with Jews and Gentiles in this dispensation, providing that law is now in full force; and it should be remembered that the ten commandments are never called the "law of God" separate from the rest.

Now as Israel was sealed by observing and performing the deeds of the law under which they existed, so christians are sealed by observing and doing the deeds of the gospel, or law of Christ. Eph. 1: 13, 14. "In whom (Christ) ye also trusted after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation. In whom also, after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy spirit of promise, which is the earnest of our inheritance, until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory."

What is this word of truth, this gospel of our salvation? It is faith in Christ as the true Messiah, or "Prophet" that was to be raised up. Deut. 18: 18, Acts 3: 22. And in his sayings, Matt. 18: 20; 7: 24—26. By believing and obeying him we are sealed with the holy spirit. "Grieve not the Holy Spirit by which ye are sealed unto the day of redemption." Eph. 4: 30.

With such testimony, the conclusion is inevitable that the Spirit's impress, (after we believe the gospel of the Son of God) is the seal of the living God in the present age, or dispensation, and ultimately the Father's name will be in our foreheads.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

Trust in God.

The husbandman ploughs, plants, sows, and cultivates, and then waits for God to send the rain and sunshine to bring his crops to maturity. The sailor has his ship rigged, and his canvas ready for the breeze, and then trusts God to send the winds. We should use the means of grace which the Lord hath put in our power, to the very utmost, and then wait for His blessing, in His own time and manner.—"He that will not plough, by reason of the cold, shall beg in harvest, and have nothing." E. B.

A WONDERFUL RELIC.—It is stated that in cutting through Oliver street, New York, for the purpose of extending the Bowery, a tombstone was exhumed, and a perfect skull found beneath it. The inscription was in Hebrew characters, and after being submitted to the inspection of many learned citizens of Israelitish persuasion, it was deciphered to bear the name "Grenada," while the date runs back some 899 years, which was before the discovery of America by Columbus.

NOTICE.—All letters, orders for tracts, communications, remittances, &c., &c., for [illegible], must be directed to Rochester, N. Y.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 3, 1856

Chistian Union.

NUMBER TWO.

The importance of christian union can not be overestimated; but nothing is more apparent than the fact, that there is a great want of it at the present day. If it consisted in a union of the world and the church we think its consummation is nearly completed, but we know that such a connection is strictly forbidden in the word of the Lord. It is not countenanced in the least. We are chosen "out of the world," and instructed not to be conformed to this world, for the friendship of the world is at enmity with God. We read again that pure religiou requires us "to keep ourselves unspotted from the world."

Having hinted at the importance of christian union, we now proceed to notice the basis on which christians can unite.

We remark negatively; that doctrine is not the foundation of union, neither can we expect it will be before the coming of the Lord. The church in its brightest and most prosperous days did not all think alike, and I find nothing in the scriptures to show there is to be any more harmony of opinion from now to the end of time, than during the past history of the church.

If we had a pope to tell us what we may believe, and what we may not, and were we disposed to obey as do the Catholics, we might be in harmony on doctrine; or were our heads all made in one mold, and we all taught in one school when acquiring our education, and not allowed to think independently for ourselves, we might all think alike; but our Creator has not so ordered.

The same object has various appearances, when viewed from different stand points; so honest men arrive at varied conclusions upon the same subject.

We now inquire, what is the true test, of christian fellowship?

ANS. CHRISTIAN CHARACTER.

Hear our Savior,—"Whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister and mother." Matt. 12: 50.

In the foregoing scripture the genuine test is given. All others will fail. Man has instituted many others, but the Lord's is the only one that demands our attention. By this we must stand or fall. He does not call those his brethren who believe the midnight cry is in the past, or those who believe it future; neither those who keep the seventh day Sabbath, or on the contrary observe the first day; nor those who believe the thousand years are in the past, or in the future; the test is not whether we believe man is mortal or immortal; whether the wicked will be destroyed or preserved eternally; whether the saints will live on the earth, or in some other place; for were either of these made a test of salvation, many good men and women, who had not the light on these subjects which we enjoy, would be shut out of the kingdom; but it is "whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven."

Let us contend for this test, and reject all others. Let us fellowship all that the Lord accepts, and cease to try men on our petty iron bedsteads which are too long for some, and too short for others.

We fear that when the Lord's test is applied, some who have tested others will find themselves wanting.

Attention.

We wish to say a word to our readers concerning financial matters.

We have now reached the end of the first quarter, and we observe that a large number of subscribers have not paid anything on the present vol. We are well aware that these are hard times for many of our patrons and we feel willing to share the burden with them; but we must pay our printer, compositors, paper-maker, pressman, &c.

At the present time we owe no man anything; but unless our brethren respond in earnest to this note of alarm, we shall soon be in debt. We see breakers ahead; but we believe the good Lord will prompt our friends to send the aid we need, for we have no other object in publishing our paper but to glorify the Author of our being, by comforting, enlightening, and strengthening his children.

Brn and Srs., remember the Crisis is your paper and if you are pleased with it, do not make it go begging for a living, but do all you can to extend its circulation.

We hope our preaching brethren will act as agents for us, for if the paper is productive of good to its readers, then he who scatters it is benefitting his fellow men.

As we send a large number to the poor who cannot pay, and there are none that we supply more cheerfully, we hope that those who can, will send in the means so that we shall not be obliged to cut off any sent to this class, but be able to extend its circulation among this portion of the flock of God.

We are willing to labor day and night for the benefit of our dear Brn. and Srs., but we entreat them that they do not let us be perplexed with debts.—[Editor in behalf of the Committee.

Providence Conference.

We think some have gathered a wrong impression from the resolution passed at the Providence Conference relative to preaching on "the state of the dead and final destiny of the wicked."

Some not present have concluded from the resolution, that it was decided not best to preach on those subjects at all; and that such a pledge was made.

Such a conclusion is very far from being correct. No such course was advocated, but every one was left to decide for himself when and where to preach on those topics.

The only point aimed at in the resolution is the manner of speaking on these and other subjects wherein we differ; and not to institute a gag law for the preacher of the gospel.

It is well known that some who have spoken on these and other themes pro and con, have been in the habit of using unkind expressions which have tended to alienate Christian love and esteem. The resolution opposes this practice.

We make this statement that our readers may have correct information concerning the matter.

THE SABBATH.—We would recommend to our contributors that they consent to give the Sabbath question [illegible]

☞ Last Thursday was a Thanksgiving day in Mass.; and on account of it, our paper is issued one day later this week.

☞ The Post Office address of Dr. A. M. Higgins is Palmer Depot, Mass., where all letters, orders, telegraph or express matter must be directed.

The Convention at Providence.

[CONTINUED]

EVENING SESSION.

Prayer was offered by Elder Geo. W. Burnham. An excellent sermon was delivered by Elder J. S. White, of Wrentham, Mass., from Matt. 6: 12. "Thy kingdom come." His subject was on the character and location of the kingdom of God. This discourse was listened to by a large and attentive audience.

A. M. SESSION.

Friday, Nov. 14th. The President in the chair. Devotional services were conducted by Elder J. Litch, of Philadelphia.

The business committee reported the following:

It was voted in Committee that we recommend to the Convention, that when we adjourn, it be to the time and place of the next Annual Conference.

This recommendation elicited considerable debate, and occupied most of the time allotted to the morning session. It was disposed of by a vote to lay it on the table.

On motion of Elder Osler, it was voted, that the Convention continue in session during the coming week. Adjourned.

FRIDAY P. M. SESSION.

The opening religious services were conducted by Elder E. Crowell, of Hartford, Ct.

The following resolutions were introduced by the committee on business.

Resolved, That we recommend to ministers and churches of the Advent faith, the cultivation of mutual Christian love, and that ministers occupy the position as in former times, of friendly interchange in their official capacity; making Christian character the test of fellowship.

Resolved, That as two distinct parties, recognized as Adventists, are represented in this Convention, and as by them separate interests are sustained in various places, we will do all in our power to unite these bodies, or at least to induce them to act in harmony.

Resolved, That we recommend the Advent Herald and the World's Crisis, to use their influence to effect these objects.

Elder Phelps said, that his desire was to have but one test of fellowship, which is faith and love.

Elder Fassett expressed himself heartily in favor of the resolutions. He thought if the brethren professing to believe in the speedy return of Christ could be united, the cause would be far better sustained. For the want of this co-operation in the past, our efforts have been much crippled. In this city, he said, there is sufficient strength if brought together, to erect a comfortable place of worship, and ably sustain pastoral labor.

Elder Grant said, that he felt called upon to speak; for nothing, like these resolutions had touched his heart-strings. The cause in Boston would be in a better condition, if we had but one interest and one body. It is not so much opposing sentiments which have distracted us, as the manner and spirit of those who have urged opposing doctrines. I am, Mr. President, delighted with the spirit of this Conference. I love you all as brethren. Let us exert ourselves for union, and in so doing, God will bless us. My whole heart is moved, deeply so, for the accomplishment of this high and holy object, viz., Christian union.

Elder Smith said, These resolutions have touched me, more than anything else yet presented. Thus far the existence of two parties has wrought much evil, and caused, in New Hampshire, much discouragement. Feeling their blighting influence, and seeing the melancholy consequences, we have asked, Where shall we go? To whom shall we go? I hope every brother will show himself in favor of these resolutions, heart and soul, and carry out their spirit in public and in private.

Elder Bosworth said, That he was prepared for the passage of the resolutions. He had pursued a conciliatory course, had found it beneficial, and he hoped that we should all go home, carry out the design of the resolutions, and not simply endorse them here.

Elder White said, That he had felt with deep sorrow, the effects of this disunion in past days. Where there has been wrong on our part, we will endeavor to cultivate for the future, a spirit of evangelical forbearance and Christian affection. In reference to difference of opinion on minor subjects, they will exist until the coming of Jesus Christ. I have for years, cherished views on the state of the dead, different from many of my brethren. Their views are as dear to them as mine are to me. I am glad to behold the unanimity of feeling and concert of action exhibited in this Convention. If all our brethren could look in upon our harmony, many of them would feel as brother Grant has expressed himself. It is not the difference in doctrine which has caused this disunion, but in the spirit in which they have been held, for there are churches wherein a difference in sentiment exists, but in those churches a perfect brotherly union is enjoyed.

Elder Brewer remarked, That these resolutions came up in the right time. We were not before prepared for them. The past is gone, and let it be forgotten; and may God in his mercy, throw his mantle of forgiveness over it. The future is before us—may we rightly improve it. I shall act in view of the coming judgment. The path of duty is plain before me, and by the aid of God, I will pursue it.

Elder G. W. Burnham said, I am compelled to leave for a time, but should feel condemned if I did not decidedly express myself in favor of the resolutions now under consideration, before leaving. We must act as well as talk. We must labor to remove all obstacles out of the way of effecting a union on Christian principles.

Dr. Huntington spoke of the happy union in the church in Abington, Ct. We have had various distracting questions, but we admit no contention. We have confidence one withanother, and are not troubled with hearing a contrary sentiment, or a contested point. Unity can be maintained if there is a determination to carry it out.

Elder Osler remarked, We want co-hesion. If the people have a sufficiency of divine grace, all will be well. I hope we shall unite on the ground of moral character alone; we can only have true union where moral character is strictly acknowledged. We must seek more of the spirit and religion of our Master, and then all shall be well.

Elder Crowell said, That he felt the importance of the resolution. There may be local reasons which will prevent the union of churches in the same place for the present, and which time alone can modify and remove. He quoted from a sermon delivered by Dr. Wayland, to show that brotherly respect in the ministry does not demand that one minister is obligated to always invite another into his desk, when in the congregation, or present, nor does Christian courtesy demand an exchange of desks with every brother minister. He desired the passage of the resolution.

Elder Gates said, I admire the resolution; it is of God; it breathes the spirit of christian union. I can discuss with brethren, questions wherein we differ without estrangement of brotherly love. My brethren loved me when I had less light than now, and I love them for it. Such a sentiment as expressed in the resolution is for our good, for it speaks of love of union, and should receive our sanction.

Brother Parks said, That he felt, like Sarah, to laugh inwardly, and rejoiced in the prospect of healing the existing divisions. He endorsed the resolution with all his heart, for he did not believe in proselyting any person, friend or foe, to any of his particular tenets, but in simply preaching what he conceived to be truth, and then leaving the result with God.

Brother Coburn approved the resolution on the ground that there was a good prospect of accomplishing their design.

Elder Boyer went for the resolution with all his heart, not on account of divisions in his field of labor, but because of the great difficulty of acting understandingly with other brethren. He hoped the resolution would pass.

After some additional pertinent, and interesting remarks on the subject of the resolution, and the necessity of putting its spirit into practice, by Elder Preble; the resolutions were unanimously adopted.—The adoption was then re-considered in order to give others, not present, an opportunity to express their approval or disapproval of the resolutions, and which were by vote laid upon the table.

The Convention closed by singing,

"From whence doth this union arise."

EVENING EXERCISES.

The evening exercises were opened by singing the 1013th hymn.

"Bride of the Lamb, awake, awake!"

Prayer was offered by Elder Boswell. The sermon was delivered by Elder Orrock, from Canada East, from the following text: "He will swallow up death in victory."

A. M. SESSION.

Saturday Nov. 15th—The Vice President in the chair. Devotional exercises were conducted by Elder Bosworth, of Bristol, Vt.

Elder Litch, chairman of the Business Committee, reported to the Convention the following:

Resolved, That the term "Israel" is not appropriated to any Gentile, whether in or out of Christ but belongs to Jacob and his descendants; and the promises to Israel of restoration to their own land, and to the eternal possession of that land, are to those Israelites who are in Christ, and not to Gentile Christians.

On motion of Elder Pearson, the resolution was amended by striking out the words, "whether in or out of Christ."

This resolution was laid on the table, in order to the appointment of committees on the following subjects, which were reported by the Business Committee.

Whereas, in effecting good, by any principles, it is necessary that they should be distinctly understood; and as there are many who, if they knew the sentiments entertained by us, would embrace them: and as for the last ten years the cause we advocate has been misrepresented—false issues having been raised, and injurious doctrines having been promulgated under the name of Adventism, thereby giving to those desiring the opportunity, to reproach the sentiments held by us, and turning honest minds from the real merits of the case; and as we owe it to ourselves, to the doctrines we preach, and to God, to present to the world in an associated capacity, an expose of our faith, and the ground of our action, therefore;

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to prepare such a digest to be submitted to the action of this Convention, and if approved, published to the world.

Whereas, it being essential to the effectiveness of any body, civil or ecclesiastical, that its particular work should be understood, and as it is especially important for us at this particular juncture, to have our position and work fully defined, therefore,

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to prepare an address on this subject, which shall be first submitted to this Convention, and if approved, published.

Whereas, many of our churches, and societies are suffering for the want of ministerial labor; as there is throughout the land an effectual door opened for the dissemination of light on the great gospel truths of the age; and as there are ministers among us who have wholly, or partially abandoned their legitimate work, and engaged in secular pursuits; and as there are those who are not identified with us, yet cherishing similar views; therefore,

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed, who shall prepare and report to this Convention a plan by which those among us, not devoting their entire time to the ministry, may be brought into active service, and, others, who are with us in doctrine, may be induced to co-operate in this work of faith, and labor of love.

Whereas, many of our ministers have been induced, or compelled to leave the field of active service for the want of sufficient support; and as others who are devoting their time and energies to the work are suffering with their families, and their usefulness curtailed from a similar cause; and as this deficiency of ministerial support is owing more to indifference, carelessness or covetousness, than inability; and as the Scriptures declare, that those who preach the gospel shall live of the gospel; therefore,

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to prepare and report a plan for the removal of this evil.

Whereas, much has been, and more can be done by the distribution of timely and well-written tracts; and as there is ability enough among us to make this agency extensively beneficial, therfore,

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to prepare and report a plan for the successful prosecution of this work.

Whereas, properly conducted Sabbath schools are important auxiliaries in the cause of God; and as this department of Christian labor has been too much neglected among us, and as light is necessary to proper action on this, as on other subjects; therefore,

Resolved, That connected with our Annual Conference, we have a Sabbath school anniversary, when the claims and blessings of Sabbath schools may be presented.

Resolved, That an afternoon during the session of this Convention be devoted to the consideration of the Sabbath school cause as connected with us.

On motion, a committee of nomination was appointed by the chair, consisting of Elders Litch, Preble and Pearson.

The resolution referring to the promises touching the eternal occupancy of the land of Palestine, was taken from the table.

Elder Preble said, that the three promises made to Abraham were,

First, that he should be heir of the world, &c., Gen. 13: 14, 15; Rev. 4: 13.

Second, the promise made to Abraham in answer to the question, "Whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it," Gen. 15: 8. This promise was made to Abraham in the following manner: "Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt, unto the great river, the river Euphrates," Gen. 15: 18, and this promise was fulfilled as declared in Joshua 21: 43-45.

Third. The third promise relates to Christ, the "seed," Gal. 3: 16, in whom all nations shall be blessed, and was fulfilled in our Savior's first advent; but the first promise, which relates to Abraham and his true seed, Gal. 3: 29, inheriting the land and dwelling in it forever, can only be realized when that passage is fulfilled which declares, "O my people, I will open your graves and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel."—Ezek. 37: 12.

Elder Litch referred to the term Israel, as only applicable to the literal descendants of Jacob, therefore the promises made to Israel, and to Israelites, belong to such. This gave rise to a somewhat exciting and pleasant debate, in which Brn. Parks, White and Gunner took part.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Convention was opened by devotional exercises, conducted by Elder Blake.

On motion of Elder Pearson, the resolution was amended by striking out the word "natural."

Elder Osler said, that he did not understand the Scriptures to teach that the term Israel belonged exclusively to the descendants of Jacob. There were Jews and Israelites by blood relationship, but the apostle Paul said, "All are not Israel which are of Israel." The promises made by God, refer to all believers, though they be not the natural descendants of Jacob. It is said, Abraham is the heir of the world, and is he so alone? are not those who are Christ's children to share with Abraham? Certainly. "If ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

Elder Litch said, I do not see brother Osler's conclusions. It does not follow, because Jews and Gentiles share in the heirship of the world, that therefore they are Israel or Judah; none have this right except Israel and his descendants. I also dissent from the view, that the descendants of Jacob were such by reason of any personal compliance with the commandments of Jehovah. This may be seen in sacred history, and in proof, read Ex. 15 : 4, and Hosea, chap. 1st. The phraseology is, in this prophecy, used in reference to the ten tribes, and fulfilled to the house of Israel.

Elder Pearson inquired if Elder Litch wished to be understood to say, that neither of the terms, Israel, Judah or Jew, are never in the Scriptures employed as applicable to Gentiles? Elder Litch replied in the affirmative.

Elder Pearson remarked, That he was desirous to keep a single point before the Convention; and distinctly discuss, and settle if possible, the question if the term Israel, be simply and only a national or natural title, having no regard to character.

The subject elicited many spirited remarks and important criticisms, full of deep interest, in which brethren Litch, Osler, Parks, Bosworth, Phelps and Gates took part.

The Convention adjourned to Monday 2 o'clock P. M.

(To be continued.)

How to render Preaching acceptable to the World.

Preach such doctrine as will be pleasing to the people. Do not disturb their consciences too much; rather make them feel easy in view of their accountability to God. Show them that God is so good, so kind and benignant, that he will never lay upon them any other burden than the sufferings of this life; that punishment according to his deeds, rendered to every soul of man that doeth evil on this side of the grave. Get them to believe this, and you will make them feel quite happy; they will bless you for such comforting words, and will be ready to apply to you the words of the prophet, "How beautiful are the feet of him that bringeth glad tidings of good things!"

But if you cannot go quite to this length, tell them that their future welfare is pretty much in their own hands; that they can, by being honest, upright, and benevolent, according to their ability, and by refraining from blasphemy, Sabbath-breaking, and other flagrant sins, render all the righteousness which God requires; that though he would exact more of them, provided they had suffered no misfortune by the apostacy of Adam, yet now he has relaxed the law and in condescension to their infirmity, will count their well-meant endeavors as the fulfilment of their whole duty. Thus you will gratify that disposition which every man naturally has, to stand before God upon the merits of another. Be sure, at the same time to say nothing about the deep-rooted, desperate corruption of the human heart. Let it be understood that though the sinner is not quite what he should be, on the contrary has failed in many respects, his heart nevertheless in the right place, and that his misconduct has doubtless arisen from thoughtlessness, more than from any evil intention.

But perhaps this is going a little too far. It will not do to leave Christ out of the question altogether; something behoves to be said of one whose name is so often referred to in what purports to be the plan of salvation. Tell them, therefore, that Christ came to instruct mankind; that by heeding his instruction, and endeavoring to imitate his life, even to the extent of martyrdom, if Providence so order, they will show themselves to be his true disciples, and in a fair way to obtain eternal blessedness. But say nothing about his death as an atonement for sins; let them not suspect themselves so deep in corruption that they cannot help themselves out; that salvation is "not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that showeth mercy;" that the New Birth is "not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man but of God." Indeed, it will be well to be cautious about quoting such passages of Scripture at all, lest the plain terms in which they are couched should convey to your hearers some idea of their absolutely undone condition. Do not by any means put them out of conceit with themselves, but let them feel that Christ is simply a Help to them, and not their All.

Be not too pointed in your preaching. Declaim against sin in general terms, as much as you please, for everybody will agree with you in saying that sin is a very bad thing. But do not be too particular. Do not single out special sins to make them the subject of discussion, it might disturb the quiet of some of your auditors; it might make them angry. True, Christ sometimes spoke so that the people took it to themselves. (Matt. 21 : 45,) but then it is not to be supposed that your people are to be classed in the same category with "chief priests and Pharisees." Christ never intended that you should forego the good opinion of those around you. Your aim must be to make them your friends; and you must consider it settled, that you can never succeed in making them the friends of Christ, until you have made them friends to yourself. Some of the old-fashioned preachers such as the Apostles endeavored to make men the friends of Christ first, and found their own friends among those who were first reconciled to the Redeemer. But the times are altered, and the wiser course now is for preachers first to make sure of their own friends. Be careful, then how you designate the particular sins of which any of your auditors happen to be guilty. They will only take offence, and your acceptableness among them will be endangered.

If you can manage withal, to dress your sermons in flowery language, and to add the graces of oratory, intermingled with curious and fanciful speculations, together with quotations from the heathen classics, you will not only acquire popularity, but make christianity respectable in the eyes of those who wish to profess its doctrines without following its precepts.—Calendar.

Rural Beauty.—Who does not love rural beauty? What active, generous, and amiable mind does not delight, from the height of some lofty mountain, to drink in the loveliness of the surrounding landscape?—the richness of cultivated fields, varied foliage, extended plains, flowery vales, verdant pastures, modest hills, rolling rivers, leaping brooks, sparkling fountains, glassy lakes, silvery pools, enchanting meadows, dancing cascades, thundering waterfalls, sporting flocks, grazing herds, and thousands of flittering birds, of divers wing and color?

Who does not love, in sunshiny, dewy morn, to stroll along the varying margin of some majestic stream, and listen to the lively notes of the feathered songsters of heaven, breathe in the fragrance of a thousand flowers, and watch the sportings of millions of different insects that creep and move around.

What can be more grateful than to walk amidst patches of waving grain; vigorous and thrifty vines, loaded with the tempting clusters of delicious grapes; well cared for trees, hanging with an abundance of golden fruit; and productions of nature ripening on every side? or to pass along the laughing valleys, made melodious by nature's own promptings, and admire the shapes and colors of countless plants and blossoms?

To me, these things are Eden in ruins! They are the scattered and disconnected fragments of what, when arranged in perfection's order, Jehovah himself pronounced "Very Good!" Nor shall this scattered and fragmentary beauty ever remain as now. No, the "curse" now resting here shall at length be removed; and again shall nature sing her primal song, when all the children of innocence shall rejoice together. Again the mountain shall tower in undisturbed grandeur; the hills shall stand in peaceful sublimity—the streams shall wander amid manifestations of perfect beauty on every side; the fields shall grow in living green; the groves and woodlands shall be crowned with undecaying verdure. Paradise "shall come!" and God shall dwell "with men."—Herald. E. B.

Jews in London.—At a meeting held in Norwich, the Rev. Dr. Ewald, one of the missionaries of the Society for Propagating the Gospel among the Jews, stated that there was now more Jews in Whitechapel than in Jerusalem, and more Jews in London than in the whole of the Holy land. The total number of Jews in the metropolis is estimated at 20,000, and Dr. Ewald stated that during the last five years he had baptized 124 or 125 converts.

In London, out of a population of two and a half millions, only five hundred thousand attend church.

Four and a half million dollars worth of raw silks are annually imported from China in to this country.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

AUTUMN LEAVES.

BY MARIA.

Pale Autumn leaves, sere autumn leaves
  Crushed 'neath each careless tread,
How your low rustling, to my heart,
  Speaks of the early dead.

They that were gathered by my side
  Through all youth's summer day;
That budded fair as spring-time flowers,
  And passed so soon away.

How bleak and desolate your boughs,
  That waved their leaves so green;
How lone and dark each hall and hearth
  Where their bright forms have been.

O, withered, dying, auutmn leaves,
  Or rustling neath my tread,
Or stirreb by sighing gales, ye bring
  Sad mem'ries of the dead.

So darkly in the chill damp earth
  Is laid each lovely brow,—
O, all unheeding of the tears
  That fall above them now.

Ye waken ever in my heart
  A deep and yearning prayer,
For the blest hour that shall restore
  Our earth, as Eden fair.

And robe it in eternal green
  Bedecked with fadeless flowers,
Where changing seasons bring no blight
  To dim the blooming bowers.

There our sad lays breathe forth no more
  "We all fade as a leaf"
We'll number long eternal years,
  Nor know of pain or grief.

(The above is re-published by request.—Ed.

Obituary.

Our beloved Bro. Rusher sleeps in Jesus. Calmly resigned he fell asleep on Thursday, the 20th inst. He had fondly hoped with his Brethren, to live until the Lord should come; but he fell by the arch enemy, and we are left a few days to mourn, yet not as those that have no hope. The Christian walk, the godly conversation and calm manner of Bro. Rusher, gained him the confidence and love of all who knew him; and although some hated the Advent doctrine, they loved him and paid due respect by attending his funeral. Although our dear Bro. lived ten miles from the city, about twenty-five of the brethren and sisters went out to the funeral. A large audience was in attendance. Bro. Matthias preached from 1 Thess. 4 : 13—17; showing clearly the difference between the hope of the child of God and the heathen who believe in transmigration; also the fallacy of the hope of going to heaven at death: that there is no life without the resurrection, and if Christ is not risen they which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. Most of the audience listened with attention, and my prayer is they may embrace the hope of the gospel.

We lament the death of our dear brother. His deep piety was an example for all. He seemed to walk and talk with God. His conversation was in heaven. He loved the appearing of the Lord, and no doubt the last object his eyes caught was Jesus, and the first object he sees on that blest morn, when the trumpet sounds, will be Jesus: and though he struggled against the foe, when he found death determined to conquer, he calmly submitted, and made arrangements for his funeral. He desired his brethren to come and minister at his funeral: and selected the following hymn from Watts, to be read at the grave:

"Unveil thy bosom, faithful tomb;
Take this new treasure to thy trust,
And give these sacred relics room
To slumber in the silent dust.

Nor pain, nor grief, nor anxious fear,
Invades thy bounds; no mortal woes
Can reach the peaceful sleeper here,
While angels watch the soft repose.

So Jesus slept: God's dying Son
Passed through the grave, and blest the bed;
Rest here, blest Saint, till from his throne
The morning break, and pierce the shade.

Break from his throne, illustrious morn!
Attend, O earth, his sovereign word!
Restore thy trust; a glorious form
Shall then arise to meet the Lord."

I. K. Bellows.

New York, Nov. 25, 1856.

Fell asleep in Jesus, Oct. 31, in Newfield, Conn., Sr. Lusena M. Grant, wife of Bro. Wm. A. Grant. Our sister embraced the love of Jesus, and the faith of his immediate appearing and kingdom, in the Fall of 1850; when the Lord graciously visited Newfield, by his spirit, and numbers were reclaimed and converted. Her seat was seldom vacant in the house of prayer. She loved communion with Saints; and although fondly hoping with them to wait until the King should descend in his beauty from heaven; when death laid his cold hand upon her, she submitted, and fell asleep in full expectation of coming forth from the tomb, on the morn of the resurrection, clad in glory and immortality.

She leaves a beloved companion and daughter to mourn her loss. May the God of all grace and consolation be unto them a "very present help" in this time of affliction; and grant them an eternal reunion with the loved wife and mother, in that better country, before whose glory the darkness of the earth's long night shall disappear, and the brief tribulation endured here shall be forgotten "in the abounding blessedness of Jesus' everlasting presence."—Brewer.

Fell asleep in Jesus, on the 13th day of Nov., aged nine years and four months, Sybil H. daughter of Samuel and Susan Jenkins, of New Bedford, Mass. A discourse was preached on the occasion from 1 Thess. 4 : 18.

"A few short days of evil past,
  We reach that happy shore
Where death divided friends at last,
  Shall meet to part no more.

There, there adieus are sounds unknown,
  Death frowns not in that scene;
But life and glorious beauty shine
  Untroubled and serene."

S. S. Brewer.

Foreign News.

ARRIVAL OF THE NIAGARA.

Halifax, Wednesday, Nov. 20, 1856.

The Royal Mail steamship Niagara, Capt. Ryrie, from Liverpool on the afternoon of Saturday, Nov. 8, arrived here at midnight.

There is little important news by this arrival.

Additional symptoms had manifested themselves of a close union between France, Russia and Prussia. It would appear that France supports the unconditional admission of Russia and Prussia to the second meeting of the European Conference, while England is said to oppose the admission of the former and Austria of the latter.

Treaties of commerce between Russia and France, and railway treaties between Russia and Prussia were in preparation.

Neapolitan affairs continued without change.

There had nothing of interest been received from Spain.

ARRIVAL OF THE PERSIA.

Sandy Hook, Nov. 25.

The steamship Persia is now going up the Bay. She left Liverpool on the morning of the 15th inst., at 7 o'clock.

The London ministerial journals publish, in conspicuous type, the announcement that the alliance between France and England is as close and cordial as ever; that it is unbroken, and has at no time been interrupted, or even impaired.

The opposition papers, on the contrary, declare that the alliance is virtually, if not formally, at an end: and that England stands at the present moment almost alone in Europe.

Affairs in China.—The present rebellion in China is in some respects still a mystery. The reputed first leader of the insurrection, said to be a descendant from the ancient Chinese Emperors, is now not heard from, and it is supposed may be dead. A letter in the New York Herald, from China, quotes the following in regard to the rebels:

They now only speak of two great men—Tong-Wong, Eastern Emperor, and Yu-Wong, Assistant Emperor.

This Yu-Wong was a millionaire, who at different times gave them large amounts of money to aid in carrying on the war. They finally invited him to move to the capital, which he did, and they made him Assistant [illegible] Assistant Emperor is general in chief of the army.

[illegible] the persons who have recently come down say that nothing is now heard of Western King, Southern King, Northern King, nor of Tai-ping-wong.

So this seer of visions and dreamer of dreams, Eastern Emperor, is doubtless the de facto ruler of the revolution. What has become of the other ruling spirits who started the movement with him is involved in mystery.

From this it appears that the Eastern King has, like Aaron's rod, swallowed all his sticks of fellow serpents, even the very highest, and replaced them by this Rothschild.

England and Caffre-land.—It appears that throughout a great part of Caffre-land, and principally in the region beyond the Kei, a prophet, or wizard doctor, named Umhlakaza, has possessed the people with the belief that a great natural and political revolution is at hand. The dead are to rise, both man and beast, lost friends are to revisit the earth, and slain cattle to be restored manyfold. The country which has passed into the possession of the white men is to revert to its original lords, while English and Dutch will be swept from the face of the earth. This fanatic or impositor is, we learn, the companion of Kreli, the acknowledged Chief of the Caffre tribes, and the real reason why he orders them to slay their cattle is that they may be driven by starvation to invade the British territory for the sake of carrying off our cattle. Whether the Prophet be the adviser or the tool of the Chief does not appear; but it is said that between them they are sapping the allegiance of the other Chiefs, who dread to disobey the Prophet or are tempted by his promises.

At King William's Town war was considered imminent. The authorities were, however, fully prepared. The Caffre police was disarmed, the pickets doubled, the soldiers kept in quarters after dark, the town fully fortified, and redoubts occupied by the 73d Regt. According to report, the Caffres believed that a trumpet was to sound at the full moon, when all the great changes were to take place. The white men were to be swept away, and the dead to rise after the second day's fight. From the superstition and excitement of the tribes it was expected that the war, if it commenced, would be long and bloody. On the other hand, it is said that certain tribes, as the Gaikas and Tambookies had no sympathy with "the doctor" and his disciples, and were buying up the stock which the other Caffres were abandoning. Yet the colony was suffering by anticipating the horrors of war. Farms were being destroyed, and the farmers flying from the frontier with their family and stock. The inhabitants were organizing themselves into regiments and rifle corps. Lieutenant Colonel Armstrong, who has had the experience of two Caffre wars, has been appointed to the command at Fort Peddie. The 6th regiment had been sent up to the frontier. In short, the authorities seem to have done all in their power, and have nothing now but to wait the event.

A ragged school association, in a public appeal, state that there are in London 1,400,000 who never attend public worship, 150,000 habitual drunkards, 150,000 open profligates, 20,000 professed beggars, 10,00 gamblers, 30,000 destitute children, and 30,000 receivers of stolen goods. More than 10,000 young men, under eighteen years of age, are annually committed for theft in Great Britain.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

—:o:—

Eld. S. W. Bishop appoints to preach at Concord, Dec. 7.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at Lowell, Mass, " Dec. 7.

—:o:—

Bro. Ira Morgan appoints to preach at Bridgeport, Dec. 7, at the new chapel.

—:o:—

Bro. J. Howell appoints to preach at Salem, Dec. 7.

—:o:—

Bro. Z. Campbell appoints to preach at
Plymouth Hollow, Dec. 2.
Wolcott Centre, " 3.
Prospect, Dec. 6 and Dec. 7, where Bro. Wilson may appoint.
Mansfield, Conn., (at Bro. Abbys') Dec. 14.

—:o:—

Providence permitting, I will preach at Concord, N. H. Sunday, Dec. 7.

J. Hemenway.

—:o:—

Bro. H. Munger appoints to preach at
Waterbury, Ct., Monday eve. Dec. 1.
Camp-Mills, Tuesday eve, " 2.
Litchfield, if there is a conveyance over from the station, Wednesday, " 3.
Newfield, Thursday, " 4.
Winsted, Friday " 5.
Saturday and Sunday, where Providence opens the way.

—:o:—

Eld. S. S. Brewer appoints to preach at
Bridgeport, " evenings, Dec. 3 and 4.
Newark, New Jersey, Sunday, " 7.
Boston, " 14.

—:o:—

Bro. J. Howell appoints to preach at Lowell, Mass., Dec. 14.

—:o:—

If the Lord will, O. G. Smith will preach
at West Alton, Sabbath, Nov. 29.
Hill's Corner, in Canterbury, Sabbath, Dec. 7.
Lake Village, Sabbath, " 14.
Page School House, in Holderness, Sabbath, Dec. 21.
Alton West, Sabbath, " 28.
Melvin Village, Sabbath, Jan. 4.
Vittum School House, Monday evening, Jany. 5.
January 6th and 7th, as the Brethren Hoyt and Hodsdon may appoint.
Lake Village, Sabbath, Jan. 11.

Bro. Munn appoints to preach in Lovely Street, Canton, Ct., Dec. 14, and North Canton, Dec. 21.

E. Kinsman.

Eld H. Pratt appoints to preach at Worcester, Dec. 7th.
Wilmington, Ct., " 14,
where Bro. Anderson may appoint.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Dec. 14. M. Grant.

If God permit, I will preach at Brunswick
Village, Baptist Church, Dec. 7.
Saccarappa, " 14.
West Falmouth, " 21
Freeport, (Swamp School House,) " 28.

R. R. York.

Bro. Grant: We purpose to preach, the Lord willing, as follows:
Bowdoinham, near Bro. Sparks, Dec. 15.
Hallowell, " 16.
Augusta, where the Brn. may think best " 17.
Fairfield, " 18.
Exeter, Me., Saturday afternoon and Sunday, 20 and 21.
Newbury, where Brn. may prepare, " 28.

Will Brn. that want us to come to their places and hold meetings, please inform us at Exeter and Newbury.

L. L. Howard.
I. Damman.

Dear Brn.,—We intend to come to you in the love of the truth, and to know nothing among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified; and hope that we shall be enabled to comfort and not distract the flock of God.

Brethren pray for us.

Yours, in love,
Israel Damman.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

R. R. York,—You have paid to No. 97. Cordelia Howard paid to No. 56.

L. D. Allen,—You have paid to No. 91.

S. Titus, M. Austin, H. Basset. All right.

J. T. Cornell,—You have paid to No. 87.

Bro. Draper,—We have none of the unbound Spiritualism, and for this reason send the bound.

F. E. Bliss,—We have Bible vs. Tradition, but not the Gospel Vindicator.

Eld. J. Howell's P. O. address is Salem, Mass.

Joseph Kimball's P. O. address is Unity, N. H.

J T Ongley's P. O. address is Blooming Valley Crawford Co., Pa.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

Mrs J Tuck. A M Higgins, R Williams, D Smith, O Carpenter, W Whitford, G Bliss, B W Leonard, J Porter, L D Allen, Mrs Orrock, M Wilcox, J T Cornell, S Locy, H Lucas, E Marsh, R Morrell, J B Walker, one dollar each; J R Allen, two dollars.

D Kinsman, for brethren in Collinsville, $4,00; W Draper, $2,42; J G Hook, $3,00; C Farrington, M. Nelson, S H Waldron, 50 cents each.

For the Poor.—A M Higgins, J G Hook, each $2.00.

For Books Sent.—W J Hoyt, $1,18, W Draper, 58 cents.

For Bro. Sheldon's Tracts.—C. Swift, $1,00.

For Debt of Watchman.—C Swift, $1,00.

For Bro. Sheldon.—New Bedford Tract Society, $8,00.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THE CRISIS.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one-half cent per ounce.

—:o:—

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By I. C. Welcome. 33 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE THREE COVENANTS. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents; postage 1 cent.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE BOOK OF SEVEN SEALS. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents; postage 1 ct.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE CHRISTIAN'S ONLY HOPE: or, the Faith once Delivered to the Saints. By Z. Campbell. Price 10 cents; postage 1 ct.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE. By William Shepherd. Price—four copies, 25 cents; nine copies, 50 cents; eighteen copies, $1; one hundred, $5—post-paid.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

THE DISCUSSION: Between Prof. H. Mattison, of the Methodist E. Church, and George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price 25 cents; postage 3 cents.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and The New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Single copy, 12 cents; $8 per hundred. Postage 1 cent per copy.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

A VIEW OF THE SCRIPTURE REVELATIONS Concerning a Future State. By Richard Whately, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin. Price $1; pastage 18 cents.

THE SEVEN SEALS: with Scriptural Facts concerning the Four Angels, the Four Winds, the Sealing Angel, the Seal of the Living God, &c. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cents.

THE FIRST FRUITS: a Scriptural Inquiry into the Time and Season of the First Resurrection, and Change of Those who are Alive and Remain. Price 10 cents per copy; postage 1 cent.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

JUBILEE HARP. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns well adapted to the present wants of the church. Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. Postage 7 cents.

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 38 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cts.—postage 8 cents.

GLAD TIDINGS, or Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to End in the Universe, by a Literal Destruction of Wicked Men and Devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment Collected and Arranged. By Jacob Blain. Price 10 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

BIBLE vs. TRADITION: in Which the True Teaching of the Bible is Manifested, the Corruptions of Theologians Detected, and the Traditions of Men Exposed. By Aaron Ellis. Revised and much enlarged by Thomas Read. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents: postage 6 cents.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions or the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 16 cents per volume.

A REVIEW: Giving the Main Ideas in Dr. E. Beecher's 'Conflict of Ages,' and a Reply to Them, and to his many Reviewers. To which is added the Bible meaning of the word Hell. Also, two hundred texts quoted, to show the Nature of Future Punishment. By Jacob Blain, Baptist minister. Price 8 cents; postage 1 cent.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—by D. T. Taylor. Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—by John Cumming. State of the Dead, by Milton. Intermediate State, by Grew. Each 24 pages. Price 5 cts. single; $3 per hundred. [illegible]—The Night Cometh— price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

The above named publications can be obtained at the office of the World's Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston; [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE END DRAWETH NEAR.

BY S. S. BREWER.

The evening hours of time
Have stretched themselves around
And dim the sun doth shine,—
How fast it's sinking down.
The earth around me wears
A sad and sick'ning gloom;
The breeze upon it bears
A requiem for its doom.

Kings tremble on their thrones,
And look with fear and dread;
Awaked by sighs and groans,
They raise their gory head,
And bid their men of might—
Their men of war draw near—
Swear for them and their right,
Despite of groans and tears.

Europe begins to rock,
And dreads the vengeful blow;
Columbia feels the shock
Of coming wrath and wo.
The bondman's groans and prayers
Beneath the tyrant's rod,
Have burdened long the ears
Of a prayer-hearing God.

Tyrants are bold and swear
They'll mangle, crush, and kill,—
With blasphemy declare,
To rule with iron will.
Were Sodomites of old,
So destitute of fear?
In wickedness so bold,
As sinners now appear?

O 'tis mid-hour of night,
The time to watch and pray,
To keep the armor bright,
And cast the world away.
Deliverance is near,
It truly seems to me,
The Lord must soon appear
In all his majesty.

For the Crisis.

THE DEAD.

BY H. L. H.

Written by request on the death of Bro. C Crawford and his wife.

Sadly in life's pure opening day,
Have our beloved ones past away—
Borne down by toils and anxious care,
They slumber now in silence there.

Sadly we mourn their hapless lot—
We weep above their resting spot,
And wish once more to see their face
And hear their words of truth and grace.

But they are gone, the tide of life
Has borne them from earth's scenes of strife;
And silent in their holy rest,
They sweetly sleep, in Jesus blest.

They're gone, our hearts their absence mourn;
They're gone, and ne'er shall they return
Until the heavens no more shall be,
Till time sinks in eternity.

O, then the morning light shall break,
And death's cold captives shall awake;
And harps with holiest praise shall ring,
For saints who sleep shall wake and sing.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Marriage Covenant.

BY ZETA.

No. I.

It is a fact standing out before all thinking and mature minds, that very many who enter into the marriage relation do not properly consider the importance of the obligations which they take upon them, nor realize the nature of the covenant which they make in the presence of God, angels, and men. Of so much importance is this subject, and so great and frequent the delinquencies under so sacred a covenant, that so long as the world stands in which people "marry and are given in marriage," it will be a subject worthy of examination, of careful study, and patient instruction. It is a subject which is, however, treated with great neglect, while others of less importance are much written upon. Our Lord when here, clearly intimated (Matt. 24: 38, 39,) that a lack of observance, or a careless neglect of the divine rule and obligation in this matter, was one of the leading sins for which God produced the flood, (Gen. 6,) and that it would also constitute one of the great and blinding sins of the last days. Not that he condemned the marriage relation, for he showed that God ordained it, and we are to learn its use, and obey its sacred obligations, when we take its vows upon us. It is the most important relation which mortals are capable of forming in this life. On a proper connection, with a proper observance of its duties, much of the happiness of this life depends, both for ourselves, our offspring, our relatives, and society in which we move.

When Jesus, our Lawgiver was here to instruct men, and was asked for information about marriage obligations, (Mark 10: 6-8,) He said,—"from the beginning of the creation God made them male and female. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife. And they twain shall be one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." In the above we see that God ordained that the marriage covenant should be the most sacred and binding of any between mortals. And so it has been held by the best and purest minds "from the beginning," both among christian and heathen nations. Some of the heathen nations have held it as sacred, and made it as important a matter, and punished its abuse with as severe a penalty as have the more civilized and christianized nations. Others, it is true, have made a mock of this rite, disregarding both the law, Gen. 2: 24, and the natural desire pronounced by the Lord, Gen. 3: 16, seeming to come down to a full level with the brute, as regards the sacredness of the relations of society. Did it stop among the heathen, we might question the propriety of speaking of it in a christian land, and christian paper. But it is a lamentable fact that very many under a christian education esteem it a light affair to form a marriage relation, and live a while for their own social enjoyment, until some of the real duties of life cross their selfish feelings; then they wish to throw off responsibility, to disown the rules of duty, disregard the law of God, murder their offspring, and often break from the covenant they so solemnly pledged to keep inviolate, that they may be free to act out supreme self will.

But the evil is deeper still. Those, even, who profess to be followers of the Lord, and to have been renewed by the Holy Spirit, and to enjoy good hope of eternal life, often do the same things. Still more, some who profess to be teachers, called of God to teach the religion of Jesus, are found in the class of those who esteem the marriage covenant a trivial matter, and when tempted to indulge in a desire for freedom from restraint and domestic responsibilities, they begin to reason that they can be better prepared for usefulness, unincumbered, so as to follow their own views of duty, and be their own controllers in their callings. They claim to be called to other duties of more importance, forgetting the vows they have made in the sight of God, and rejecting their "own flesh" relation, coveting the circumstances of others. The heart not being "kept with all dilligence," love begins to wane, falter, and die. A wide door is easily opened by the tempter; apologies, pleas, reasons, and duties are easily made out. Alienation has taken place; duties become burdens; advice is considered reprimand; proper restraint, bondage; service, slavery; gentle admonition, abuse; society loathsome, and all union is gone. For love, the all-important principle of true union has ebbed out, while acrimony and sometimes hatred takes place. The result that follows is soon told. Discontent, sorrow, uneasiness of mind, perverseness of will, magnifying of faults, finding abundant opportunities for complaint, plenty of reasons for adopting an old maxim, "a bad bargain is better broke than kept"—God's law is laid by, and in their estimation it is abrogated by the circumstances in the case; or else, they are exceptions to the general rule, and consequently, plead justification in breaking the marriage covenant, to be free to act one's self; or, it is sometimes on the free love principle justified, for want of congeniality of spirits.

Many there are in the pale of the church, of the above named class, who for no scriptural reason have broken the most sacred covenant, and are being fellowshiped in the violation of the greatest obligations which God has ever enjoined upon man with his fellow; while society is being corrupted by their example, and a foundation laid for others to act the same part of selfishness and sin.

Let us look at the law: "Let not the husband put away his wife." 1 Cor. 7: 11. This is absolute, excepting for the one reason mentioned by our Lord, of course. Again. "And unto the married I command, yet not I, but the Lord, let not the wife depart from her husband." 1 Cor. 7: 10. Who in the face of such plain commands as these, can dissolve their covenant relations and be guiltless before the Lord, who ordained the covenant, and made the command? The violation of such, commit the greatest sin against a companion which can be perpetrated against a mortal, and also sets God at defiance.

Many others there are, who, though they dare not fully break away from their covenant, yet live in great violation of its obligations, destroying domestic happiness, while disorder and tumult take its place. Such evils should be pointed out, reproved and deplored, and the true remedy sought to correct them. My purpose in this series of articles is, to call attention to the subject, and to point out, though but imperfectly, the remedy the Lord has furnished to avoid them.

For the Crisis.

Sketches of Sermons.

No. I.

Synopsis of a course of lectures delivered in Concord, N. H., by Eld. S. S. Brewer, on the evenings of the 4th, 5th and 6th of Nov. 1856. His lectures were on the book of Rev., and were very interesting to all who love the appearing of Jesus. His expositions of history and prophecy seem very conclusive that we are living on the very last moments of time, and soon, very soon the seventh angel will pour his vial into the air, and the voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne will be heard, "It is done."

The object in writing this synopsis is to call the attention of the brethren, far and near, to examine the subject, and search to know if these things are so. Evidently, everything is ominous, morally, physically, and politically, of the world's last crisis; and, as sure as there is a God, there is light for the righteous.

The subject is vast, and the light on the Word is seemingly brought to its final converging point. I will give you the order of the Scriptures on which he dwelt.

He commenced with the 7th of Rev.: "I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth that the wind should not blow on the earth, nor on the sea, nor on any tree." Another angel is seen ascending from the East having the seal of the living God, who cries to the four angels to whom it was given to hurt the earth and sea; and the burden of his cry was for them to hold the winds, "till we have sealed the servants of God in their foreheads." Many have thought the four angels were the four allied powers, united after the overthrow of Napoleon in 1815, and that the sealing angel was a representative of the preaching of the Advent message. Br. Brewer considered this view erroneous, although he once believed and preached it.

Item 1.—"Four angels"—synonymous with Daniel's "four beasts." Here he turned the attention of his hearers to a representation of the earth, with the four beasts of Dan. 7, upon it; each occupying a cardinal point upon its surface, thus:—"the Lion," east; the "Bear, south: the "Leopard beast," north; and the "great and terrible Beast, west. In order to see this more clearly, he read the account of the rise and fall of each beats. Says Daniel, "the four winds strove upon the great sea" and the result was, "four beasts came up out of the sea, diverse one from the other." Here observe that there are but four beasts. None have arisen since their day through the strife of the "four winds upon the great sea." The fourth beast was in the height of its glory when Christ came upon earth; and although it has been modified, it still lives, and will until the saints are all sealed and delivered.

Synonymous with this, is the image of Dan. 2: 35. "Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver and the gold broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshing-floor, and the wind carried them away."

Wind is symbol for war. What will be the effect when the "four winds" blow (or strive upon the great sea) again? Ans. A whirlwind. See Jer. 25: 32–33. Notice one peculiar feature in the destruction of the image representing four universal kingdoms; they are destroyed together. Dan. 2: 35. Therefore the "four angels" of Rev. 7, aptly correspond with the four kingdoms of Dan. Also, notice a feature in the whirlwind—it is raised up from the coasts of the earth, and the "slain of the Lord shall be in that day from one end of the earth to the other." What will be the cause of the whirlwind? Ans. The four winds blowing all at once. All earthly powers will be destroyed in that day, and the fifth universal kingdom be established in their place.

Item 2.—The sealing angel and his seal. The fourth beast having arisen and taken place a in the world marked for him in prophecy, we find him in A. D. 1, issuing decrees that all the world should be taxed, &c.; also, at the same time, according to prophecy, Christ was born, fulfilled his mission, was crucified, raised, meets his disciples and gives them their commission, and they go forth with mighty power. Behold their first work after receiving the Holy Spirit! They continue their work. Continuing to "ascend from the east," thousands believed and were confirmed by the Holy Spirit—were "sealed" by the "Holy Spirit of promise" unto the "day of redemption." But is that the seal of the living God? Hear Paul, 2 Cor. 1: 21, 22, "Now he which stablisheth us with you in Christ, and hath anointed us, is God; who hath also sealed us, given the earnest of the spirit in our hearts." What better seal can we find? Without the spirit ye are none of his. Oh, what abundance of scripture bears directly on this point. Thus we see the necessity of having the spirit. The gospel still is preached and still adds its seal to all its converts. The vast multitudes who have been slain for their faith in Jesus and those who have been laid away under the clods of the valley, having been sealed, will be gathered when the sealing time is over, and be clothed with immortality. O rapturous thought!

In tracing the work of the "angel ascending from the earth," we notice in Rev. 14: three angels, each with a respective message. These are symbols of God's ministry, the same as represented by the sealing angel, only they are typifying the work of the servants of God during the reign of the harlot power. A "falling away" had occurred in the church, and the church became Babylon. The "man of sin" undertakes to destroy the pure gospel. God's ministers cry out against the abominations. The first angel cries—"fear God!" The pope cries—"fear the Holy Catholic church, or die!"—"Fear God and give glory to Him, for the hour of his judgment is come." [The hour of his judgment here spoken of, refers to the beginning of the pouring out of the first vial of the wrath of God upon Babylon.]

But another feature in the work of the ministry must be represented, and therefore another angel is seen flying through the midst of heaven, saying, "Babylon is fallen." When did Babylon fall? Ans. When she emerged into Paul's "man of sin." Babylon implies confusion, wickedness. The church became Babylon between Constantine's day, A. D. 323, and Justin's day, 519. Never was there so much confusion and strife in the church of God as there was then. The church of Rome claimed infallibility. God's ministers declared she was a fallen, corrupt body—the "man of sin!" She was called in the 7th and 8th centuries—the Babylon of Rev. Br. Brewer here read history to correspond with this prophecy.

For the Crisis.

Tour in Canada.

By invitation, I set off, the last of Oct. to visit the expectants of the kingdom in Toronto and Canada. My series of appointments began in Thorold, but owing to the movement of the cars I could not fill that, hence, my way was on to Toronto. Bro. Skinner and wife gave me a christian's welcome, and a brother's home. Our meetings were small, but profitable. Four were "baptized." One candidate remains to take "the name of Jesus"—"obey the FORM" or type of his "doctrine;" and so be "espoused" to the heavenly "bridegroom" by the gospel nuptials.

"The Plymouth brethren" have a meeting in T., and our last two gatherings were in their Hall. They are an interesting people—having an intensely interesting history; and were it practicable I would enjoy a deeper and more enduring "fellowship."

In Whitby, sister Gage is the "candlestick." Her kind-hearted husband secured a hall for two meetings, in which "the word" was proclaimed with all my might.

In Reach, they reached out both hands. There is action in that body; and a consequent healthful appetite. "The word" went with a good relish. Expectation among the godly expectants "grew as the vine and flourished as the palm." Conviction by "the word" seemed general; six having "gladly received the word" went rejoicingly into the nuptial bond, to make up "the bride" of Jesus. There is no propriety in dragging up unwilling people, who go as if going to the gallows! Those who make "the name" of the Lord their "strong tower"—their "confession" and "cross" their badge of honor, and the coming and glory of the Bridegroom-King, their only "hope," are "willing!" Such would not be left out for the world! "They will be (his) disciples;" "The cross" becomes to them their star of triumph just so far as they bear it. Bear it then, brethren beloved, and it will lift you up amid the beaming glories of "the crown of life," the kingdom of God and freshness and fragrance of Paradise restored! It is not a calamity to be a christian; but man's highest wisdom, his divinest glory, his only unfailing assurance that he is a "son and heir of God."

In Darlington, the appointment somehow got the start of me, so that on my arrival we had to stir about to get up a meeting among those disappointed the evening before. But the brethren came out and had a sweet sitting "together in an heavenly place in Christ Jesus."

In Bowmanville, our meeting was held in the disciples' meeting house—a good audience heard; a portion of the "good seed" was sown to vegetate and await the final harvest. May fruit be found unto eternal life.

Port Hope has a few hopeful ones who "receive the word with all readiness of mind, and search the Scriptures daily to see if these things are so." At this point I write, hoping to fill out my tour under the guidance of God's good providence, seeing the brethren edified, sinners converted and the work of the Lord advanced. May the Lord return each ones marked kindess to his poor servant "an hundred fold," and give us ultimately a portion in endless life. Amen. J. B. COOK.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LINES.

Suggested on reading the obituary notice of Martha Ann Avery in the "Crisis" of Nov. 5th.

BY MARIA.

I'm tired, Mother, O "so tired" now,
This feeble frame is all too weak to bear
The weight of thought, of thought that ceaseless rolls
On my poor brain, so heavily pressing there.

I think of life, of this short earthly life,
Passing so swiftly from my grasp away;
Yet I have numbered but the gilded hours
Of childhood's morn, and youth's bright summer day.

I think of Earth—of all that I have loved
And joyed in here in vale and sea and sky;
But O, yet more of loved ones always near—
Eyes that still smile on me, yet I must die!

I think of Death—to lay this youthful brow,
Ere sorrow darkens, in a clay-cold bed,
And know the birds will sing, the flow'rets bud,
And sunbeams fall as bright, when I am dead!

And thoughts are with me, that I may not tell,
Of all the past, the present, and to come,—
But sink my failing powers when I would grasp
The untold glories of th' "eternal Home."

But O! the conflict—wearying this frail dust—
To shrink from death, and yet to long for rest;
O, would that Jesus might but "come to-day,"
I'd lay my aching head upon his breast.

I should not need then death's chill hand to lay
Upon my heart, the throbbing pain to still
And bring me rest,—but once to look on Him,
And "endless life" in every pulse would thrill!

But I am willing in the grave to sleep
A little while, if so my Father wills;
Trembling, yet trusting, I go down death's vale—
The light of glorious hope my bosom fills.

I'll wake in triumph on the rising morn.
Strong in immortal powers—death's victory o'er—
To think and sing of all God's wondrous love,
And weary, Mother, weary nevermore.

Cold Spring, Nov. 8.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

From Sr. M. C. Potter.

BRO. GRANT:—When I read Bro. Carpenter's article on "Who will join Ahab?" I was led to inquire, who has joined Ahab? Alas, too many of the dear children, who professed to know better, have gone up and done what they could to take Ramoth Gilead, to try to make this old earth that groans and heaves for deliverance a little better; when God has said it shall wax worse and worse, and has cursed it. O how has my heart bled, to see the children, who confessed that they were pilgrims and strangers on the earth, and that they were citizens of another land, seeking a "better country," (for here they have no continuing city, but they seek one to come whose builder and maker is God) engaging in these things. Who ever heard of pilgrim traveling through a strange country, stopping to make laws for that nation, when they had no interest there, and when God had commanded them to keep themselves unspotted from the world?

It was but a little act for Eve to pick the forbidden fruit, yet God drove her from the garden; and does it not become us, who are living down here at this point of time, to watch and pray lest we get absorbed in the spirit of the world? O let us all take heed, brothers and sisters, [illegible] another.

Never shall I forget the time of parting on the Lithcfield camp-ground, when Bro. Hastings described the scene on the mount of transfiguration. I often think of it, when I hear Bro. Burnham saying, —"onward" while Bro. Grant catches the sound and re-echoes it—"onward, children, onward!" Yes, we will go forward till Jesus comes, and then go home to part no more.

Your sister longing for deliverance,

M. E. POTTER.

Plymouth Hollow, Ct., Nov. 9, '56.

For the Crisis

From Sr. H. P. Chase.

BRO. GRANT:—Oh that the Lord would aid me in writing a word to the little flock scattered abroad up and down this earth, who are looking for the blessed hope and glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile bodies and fashion them like his glorious body. "Then will be brought to pass the saying "O death where is thy sting, O grave, where is thy victory." Then will this mortal put on immortality. What joy does it give the weary pilgrims who have been striving for years to look their Bibles over and note the tokens there that speak the Savior's coming.

It cheers my heart to hear from those that are looking for Jesus, for unto them that look for him will he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." "Faithful is he that calleth you who also will do it." Finally, brethren, be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might; put on the whole armor of God that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the Devil. Stand firm then, having your loins girt about with truth, your lights burning, and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, that when he comes we may be all ready to go in to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

"Soon shall I lean upon Jesus's breast;
Then, there is rest, there is rest."

"There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God;" an eternal, holy rest, where all the pure and the blest will dwell, and God himself shall be with them and be their God. Where the saints of all ages will in harmony meet, and separation will not be known; death never will enter there, no tears will ever flow, no afflictions no trials, but they will all be like Christ. The holy city, and the tree of life, will be there. It is impossible for pen to picture the beauty and glory of that everlasting kingdom. Soon, our Savior will come with all the holy angels, to be admired in all them that love him. I do feel, to-day, that I know I love that same Jesus, who ascended up into heaven there to appear in the presence of God for us, and he is coming again to be king and reign forever.— May God help us to endure that we may have part in that kingdom which is an everlasting kingdom and will never be destroyed.

Praise the Lord for eternal life, promised to the dear saints. Often does the thought arise in my mind, when shall our hopes be changed to a reality? when shall faith be swallowed up in sight, and this mortal put on immortality? I have been a great lover of time; and would it look strange if an earthly parent had been gone a long time if the children wanted to know when their father was coming? No. How they would rejoice to meet him. I hope the Lord will put it in the hearts of his children that have labored in this place to speak a word of comfort through the Crisis to the few in Bridgewater, if not permitted to do so face to face.

Your sister,

H. P. CHASE.

Bridgewater, 1856.

PRACTICAL RELIGION.—To believe is well, but to do is better. Religion—"sweet sister of the skies,' has a body and a soul.— An outward form has been given her in the scriptures of truth; and yet this form only lives as it is reduced to practice. They have the body but not the soul. He who can induce men to believe what Jesus taught does a good work; but he who is successful in leading them to do what he enjoins does a much greater work.

Practical piety is the great want of the age. It is the only practical remedy for the great evils of society. Obedience to the golden rule is the only thing which can make earth resemble heaven. This binds our race in the bond of holy brotherhood. This brings peace on earth and good will among men.—[Newburyport Herald.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1856. WHOLE NO. 67. VOL. IV.

The World's Crisis, IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Longing for Deliverance.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

How dark and gloomy this world appears! The curse and its effects are everywhere. Go where we will, we still feel that we are away from home. Our dear brethren and sisters are scattered all abroad. Those that we love in the truth, as we love our own souls, are, many of them, in circumstances of sorrow and pain. Our friends, and the fond ones that we loved are, many of them, hidden in the noisome grave. We ourselves are full of disappointment, mourning, anguish, and temptation. Our beloved Lord is not with us, and we dwell among strangers, in the land of the enemy. Our hearts are longing, sighing, breaking for our rest and our home. O the bands of mortality, how they bind us about! O the bondage of corruption, how grievously it oppresses our struggling souls! We wait for the Lord with more anxiety than the fevered patient waits for the breaking of the morning light. We pine for eternal deliverance.

We "which have the first-fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." "In this" condition "we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven." How long shall we not fall at His feet," and crown Him Lord of all?" O that He "would rend the heavens and come down! O that He would haste, and "come quickly!" O that He would roll time more speedily away, and quench our burning desires in His glorifying love! Would to heaven we could see His welcome form now descending the eastern skies.

O Immanuel, Mount Olivet waits for thee! The hills of Palestine cry for the latter rain at thy coming. The waste places of the Gentiles mourn the protractedness of thy personal absence. When shall the celestial numbers be accomplished? When shall the last event of sacred writ fill up its vacant place? God of love, how can we much longer endure? We hate the wickedness of the wicked. We despise the pomp, the glory, the pride, the show, the glitters the fashions, and the spirit of this world. We ask not for long life for ourselves, or protracted life for our friends, or riches, or honors, or pleasures, or vengeance on our foes, in this mortal state, but, O, we ask to be with thee in our eternal home. We complain not of labor, of pain, or suffering; for we love to suffer and labor in thy cause, but we burn with vehement desire for the presence of thy glory, and for the dwelling of thy holy ones. Has not thine holy word been long enough despised, set at naught, and trampled in the dust, under the feet of evil generations? Has not enough of the blood of thy chosen ones been shed to gorge both earth and hell? Has not the pall of death hung long enough on the fairest portions of thine earthly creation? Has not the blood of martyred millions long enough cried unto thee for revenging judgment?

What, O holy one, what waitest thou for? Thou, O most holy One, knowest "the times and the seasons," and thou wilt order all things well. We will be patient before thee, and wait thine appointed time; but we can never cease to long for the glory of thy face; we shall never be satisfied until we are in thy blessed likeness. We must ever pray, "Come Lord Jesus quickly." Haste on ye mortal moments, haste; "ye cannot fly too fast!" Haste, "and bring the welcome day." Ye heavens, travail; thou earth, groan; lift up thy voice thou ocean, and cry for the presence of your Lord. Groan on, and travail with deeper pangs, thou congregation of the faithful, and give thy Redeemer no rest till He fill the face of the world with the fruit of everlasting praise.

For the Crisis.

Thoughts on the Sabbath.

BY E. R. SEAMAN.

The apostle informs us that "the word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." "All things are naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do;" and as we believe every word of God is profitable, how important it is that those who profess to be pilgrims and strangers here, should have a right understanding of their duty and relation to their Creator. In summing up the whole matter, the wise man has said,—"Fear God and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil." The psalmist breaks out in singing.—"The law of thy mouth is better to me than thousands of gold and silver." Again, he says, Ps. 111: 7. 8,—"All his commandments are sure; they stand fast forever and ever, and are done in truth and uprightness."

The ten commandments which God spake from the burning mount with an audible voice, and added no more, I understand to be the moral law and rule of action, that the children of men may observe, and by obedience and a patient continuance in well-doing, secure for themselves through the atoning merits of Jesus Christ, their great High Priest, eternal life or immortality.

The difference of opinion among many, seems to be with regard to the perpetuity of this law or a portion of it. Some claiming that the law was given to the Jews, to continue only while they were the peculiar people of God. This view would leave us without any rule of action, and seems to contradict many plain passages, if I have a right understanding of them.

First, let me briefly allude to a few.—Ps. 105: 8. "He hath remembered his covenant forever, the word which he commanded to a thousand generations." No one will contend that one thousand generations have elapsed yet; then, the words of the covenant are in full force. What are they? Ans. Deut. 4: 13. "And he declared unto you his covenant which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone." So there can be no mistake about it. "My covenant will I not break nor alter the thing that is gone forth out of my lips." But the greatest objection against the perpetuity of the ten commandments seems to lie against the fourth precept, that which guards and enforces the observance of the seventh day. If this commandment has been blotted out, the New Testament is silent on the subject; and I think it will not do for us to argue this conclusion because the words of the fourth commandment are not repeated in the New Testament, any more than it would to argue the abolition of the second, or third, which might be done with equal propriety. A brother not long since, in New York, took the position that there was no law in existence for the people of God, but to obey our rulers.

If this be correct, then there is no sin; for sin is the transgression of the law, and where there is no law there is no transgression; therefore, Universalism is true, and Spiritualism has nothing to fear. But the tenor of the New Testament seems to teach that the "law is holy, and the commandments holy, just, and good." This is spoken after the commandments are supposed by many to be nailed to the cross. "Shall we continue in sin," says the apostle, "that grace may abound? God forbid." We certainly shall, if we are found violating any of the Lord's required precepts. Sin is the transgression of the law, and he that offends in one point is guilty of all.

It is true with me, that I did not wish to be found keeping the first day of the week, not wishing to be found obeying that power referred to in Dan. 7: which should "think to change times and laws," who, we find by referring to church history, has corrupted the commandments of God.

The Savior came to magnify the law and make it honorable; and it would be sin in me to take grounds with the pharisees, who called him a Sabbath breaker, when he has said he kept his Father's commandments.

God has never sanctified any day but the seventh. The Sabbath was instituted at creation, before a Jew was known. The Savior refers to this and says,—"The Sabbath was made for man." That the law of commandments contained in ordinances, which consisted in meats and drinks, and divers washings has been abolished is a plainly revealed fact. But the Sabbath commandment happens not to be found in their company, but is found alone, surrounded by these living words which show our relation to God and man.

The question comes home to us as christians,—shall we make void one of the commandments of God by our traditions, and walk hand in hand with the Catholic Church? Compare Dr. James Butler's Catholic Catechism with Eph. 20: or Deut. 5: and Dan. 7: 25. That there is a day existing in the gospel dispensation is apparent from the language found recorded in Rev. 1: 10; and that this day is the Sabbath day is clear from Isa 58: 13; and this day must be the seventh, because no other day is called the Sabbath of the Lord our God. The foregoing thoughts I submit, in the fear of God and patient waiting for his Son from heaven. May the good Lord lead us into all truth.

Lancaster, 1856.

For the Crisis.

The Lord's Day.

BY W. SHEPHERD.

No. III.

Concluded.

And now as we have occupied considerable more time among the prophets than anticipated, we conclude it expedient to rapidly run over the New Testament scriptures touching our subject, and then quickly come to a close.

From those infallible records, we learn that the introduction of this era defines the time when He, who is mightier than John the Baptist, and whose prerogative it is to baptize "with the Holy Ghost and with fire," shall make his appearance with fan in hand, to purge his floor, gather the wheat into the garner, and burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire. Matt. 3: 11, 12. And herein is a remarkable coincidence. The Old Testament closes with the burning day. The new one opens with a no less fiery ordeal. Again, this might (from the general tenor of Scripture,) be properly styled the fiery age. (See 1 Cor. 3: 13; 2 Thess. 1: 8; 1 Pet. 1: 7; 2 Pet. 3: 7.) It is that period when the separating and cleansing process is carried on; e. g. "The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire; there shall be weeping and knashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father." Matt. 13: 41, 43. This same process is designated by our blessed Lord, in another place, "The Regeneration, when he shall sit upon the throne of his glory," (Luke 1: 32,) with his twelve apostles enthroned also, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.—Matt. 19: 28. In the Acts it is called "The Restitution of all Things." Acts 3: 21. It is a very peculiar period, a day which God hath set apart for himself, a day of wonders as the Psalmist declares.—This is the Lord's doing, it is marvellous in our eyes. This is the day which the Lord hath made, we will rejoice and be glad in it." Ps. 118: 23, 24. Read the connection. "The day when God will judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ," according to St. Paul's preaching. Rom. 2: 16. It is a day when God will resurrect his sleeping ones from the dust, and invest with immortal beauty his entire Church—destroy the wicked with an "everlasting destruction." 1 Thess. 4: 15—17; 2 Thess. 1: 7—10. A day when God will have gathered together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are on the earth, even in him. Eph. 1: 10,

Now let us notice Peter's testimony touching events at this point. He declares that "the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein, shall be burned up." And then he admonishes his brethren to be "looking for, and hastening unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat." 2 Pet, 3: 10—12.

But we are forced to pass over a number of passages pertaining to our subject, and approach at once the Apocalypse. Here we find that "the Lord's day" is not ushered in surreptitiously; as it must have been if the popular opinion be correct; but by the heavens departing as a scroll when it is rolled together, and every mountain and island moving out of their places; when kings of the earth, great men and rich men, chief captains and mighty, bondmen and free men are represented as being affrighted, and in desperation seek to hide themselves from that glorious One, that sitteth upon the throne. Rev. 6: 14—17. It is introduced with loud voices, mighty thunderings, fierce lightnings, a great earthquake, and terrific hail storm. Rev. 16: 18—21. It is brought to view in another place thus;—"And I saw heaven opened, and behold, a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in Righteousness he doth judge and make war. . . . . . . And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses." Here transpires the great battle between the Son of God with his martial myriads, and the Devil with his legions. Here comes the great crisis, which ends in an ignoble defeat of the latter, who are driven from the arena of conflict, and speedily consigned to "the lake of fire burning with brimstone." Rev. 19: 11—21. And here we should not omit to mention one feature peculiar to the redeemed, Amid these eventful scenes, they are exceedingly happy, filled with joyful songs and praise to God. "And after these things I heard a great voice of much people in heaven, saying, Alleluia, salvation, and glory, and honor and power, unto the Lord our God: for true and righteous are his judgments, for he hath judged the great whore, (the whole apostate church,) which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and hath avenged the blood of his servants at her hand. . . . . . And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia; for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him, for the marriage of the Lamb is come." Rev. 14: 1—7. And they sing in thrilling and heavenly anthems; unto Him who loved them and washed them from their sins in his own blood, and hath made them "kings and priests unto God," to "reign upon the earth." Rev. 5: 9—10.

And now to close our scriptural quotations, we refer to the events noted under the sounding of the seventh trumpet, which is a compendium of the whole. "And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever. And the four and twenty elders which sat before God on their seats, fell upon their faces and worshipped God, saying, we give the thanks, O Lord God Almighty, which art, and wast, and art to come: because thou hast taken to thee thy great power, and hast reigned. And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldst give reward unto thy servants, the prophets, and to thy saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great; and shouldst destroy them which destroy (or corrupt) the earth. And the temple of God was opened in heaven, and there was seen in his temple the ark of his testament; and there were lightnings, and voices, and thunderings, and an earthquake, and great hail." Rev. 11: 15—19,

Thus we have hastily glanced through the sacred pages of inspiration, to learn the true import of "the Lord's day," and we cannot but think from the nature of the evidence produced, that "the Lord's day", has not yet been ushered in.

And why is it called the Lord's day? Simply in contradistinction to the usurper's day, the day of that wicked one and his emissaries—ungodly men. Hence, in the temptation, "the devil said unto him, (Jesus) all this power will I give thee, and the glory of them; for that is delivered unto me, and to whomsoever I will I give it. If thou therefore will worship me, all shall be thine." Luke 4: 6—7. This was said when they were on the summit of a high mountain, and Satan shewed Christ all the kingdoms of the world at a glance, and it was these he was alluding to. You will observe our Lord did not dispute with him touching his title to the same, because it was his day, and is yet his day, and will be his day, as the "strong man armed (who) keepeth his palace," vainly believing, that "his goods are (to be forever) in peace;" but the mighty shall descend from heaven, who is stronger than the strong man, and who "shall come upon him, and overcome him," divesting him of all his armor, and equally dividing his spoil among those to whom it belongs. Luke 11: 21—22; Matt. 5: 5. Yea, who shall descend with a great chain in his hand, laying hold on the Dragon, that old serpent, casting him into the bottomless pit, placing a seal thereon. This will terminate the hoary-headed monster's career for a while at least, (praise God for the prospect!) then he will be loosed a "little season," to go forth in desperation into utter destruction. Amen. Rev. 20.

Again. It is not unusual in speaking of eminent persons in the past events and contemporaneous with them, to say them—the days of our ancestors—their days—our day, &c. We read of the days of Adam—of Methuselah. Observe; when the devil's officials—"the chief priests and captains of the temple, and elders," came to arrest Jesus, he remarked to them,—"this is your hour and the power of darkness." Luke 22: 52, 53. And it is a common expression—wherein there is much truth—"the devil will have his day." And a long day it has been; ever since he told the first lie to our guileless progenitors in the garden of Eden—'ye shall not surely die'—which brought death into our world and all its woe. A long day indeed; nearly six thousand years; and what destruction, blood, and misery has been the result of his works! These are to be destroyed soon, for this purpose will the Son of God appear the second time, that he might destroy the works of the devil, and this will be accomplished (praise God!) in "the Lord's day," or the day of Jehovah's power. We have most conclusive evidence, that it will soon be ushered in upon us, that it is very "near, even at the doors." Amen.

The length of time that this day will span, from the teaching of the Apostle, 2 Pet. 3: 8; Rev. 20: 4, 5, 6;—the general tone of Scripture—the opinion which has always obtained in the true church, we are inclined to believe that it will occupy one thousand solar years.

And now brethren beloved in Christ, "seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless;" "looking for, and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat;" out of which ruins, by the immediate superintendence of Deity and the energy of his omnipotence, we look for the production of a stainless world—"a new heavens and new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." Be vigilant, then, that ye "come behind in no gift," waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ;" that when he shall appear in all his glory, ye may receive from his lips the welcome plaudit—"Well done, thou good and faithful servant," "enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." And to this end may God grant you his especial favor, that ye may grow in grace and in heavenly wisdom and knowledge of the coming one, that ye may be permitted, ultimately, to participate in that ineffable bliss, where Jesus is crowned "King of Kings and Lord of Lords;" amid the triumphant songs and hallelujahs of the white-robed multitude—the choral melody of angels—the general assembly and church of the first-born," whose names are enrolled in heaven,—the redeemed of every nation, tongue, and people—the most distinguished intelligences summoned from all parts of Jehovah's immense universe, to witness a spectacle of magnificence and supernal grandeur, alone within the power of God to produce; and there cast your dazzling crowns before him with the utterance of these meritorious ascriptions—

"Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength and honor, and glory and blessing." Yea, may such be your high and holy destiny, in that blessed era just opening upon us, even

"The Lord's Day." Amen.

Elizabeth City, N. J., 1856.

For the Crisis

The Lord's Supper.

Bro. Grant:—Permit me to say a few words on a subject which has for some time rested on my mind. Though I feel incompetent, and make no attempt to teach, yet, I would endeavor to excite the minds of Brn. and Srs., to examination and reflection on some points which, it appears to me, are generally overlooked. I have often been pained at the neglect of the Lord's supper omong us, as a people, (the causes of which, I rejoice to know, are being in some measure removed,) yet, I have been no less pained at the unscriptural and apparently indifferent manner in which it is too often administered. By reading my Bible, I learn the following particulars relating to this sacred institution; that, "on the first day of the feast of unleavened bread when even was come," the Lord Jesus "sat down with the twelve" disciples alone, not with a room full of spectators, not at morning, noon, but at evening. They "sat down" (not knelt,) after the usual manner of taking their meals. They surrounded a table, for one dipped his hand with his Lord in the dish. They were not scattered over a large hall or church, here and there one, with ungodly men and women at their side, to whom the bread and wine might be passed, leaving it at their option to refuse or partake of the hallowed emblems.

Jesus took unleavened bread and "brake" it, and gave to his disciples, not a leavened loaf cut into half inch squares. And they drank of the "fruit of the vine." It seems the Apostles were particular to deliver to the churches that which they received from their Lord on this occasion, and that it was understood to be equally binding with other things taught them; for we read of the [illegible] "they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." Acts 2: [illegible] was considered sufficiently important to [illegible] them to come together for the [illegible] purpose of [illegible] read in 1 Cor. 11: 20. They did not first listen to two lengthy discourses, or fatigue the mind by attention to other religious services, and at their close appropriate some twenty minutes or half an hour (and occupy the greater part of that in traveling from one communicant to another,) to the receiving of this expressive memorial of their crucified and risen master. They were particular to keep this ordinance as it had been given them.

Paul, in writing to the church at Corinth, speaks of the "bread which we break," from which I infer that a knife was not used in dividing it in pieces. He speaks of the "Lord's table;" and that the form or ceremony observed in partaking of this supper was that of an ordinary meal, we may infer from the Corinthian believers having fallen into the error of taking a full meal on the occasion, eating and drinking an improper quantity, and not observing becoming order.

The Lord's Table! Pray tell me what sort of a table are the slips in a meeting house? But some will say,—"it is only a spiritual table." Yes, and perhaps it is only "spiritual bread" and "spiritual wine;" well, let us be consistent, and if we have only a spiritual, or figurative Lord's table, let us throw away the name and outward form altogether, or have a literal table and come around it in true Apostolic order.

Then, it is called a "supper;" why not a breakfast, or dinner? At the first, "they met on the evening of the day, as we learn from Acts 20: 7. And if the first Christians were careful thus far to keep the ordinance as delivered to them, we cannot suppose they were indifferent as to the kind of bread used, especially as they had been taught that leavened bread represented "malice and wickedness," and unleavened bread "sincerity and truth." I know some will think these things of trifling consequence—so some have considered all religious rites, and some of our brethren fancy it savors of Papistical notions to attach much value to this sacrament, and to speak of a special blessing received in partaking of it. And one will say—"O it is no matter how we have the Lord's Supper;" and another,—"It is no matter when we have it, nor of what the elements used are composed, nor who partakes with us," and so on, till not a few have taken the liberty to conclude it is no matter whether we do, or do not have it.

The Lord's table is the property of the church; it is joint stock—Christ's and ours, and the church has the right and should extend an invitation to all who love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity and truth, and whose conversation is such as becometh the gospel of Christ, to come to that table. But must everybody, therefore, who professes to believe with us the bible doctrine (holding the truth in unrighteousness,) become spots in our feasts of charity when they feast with us, "feeding themselves without fear?" The truth is, I apprehend, this precious memorial of a Savior's redeeming love, and pledge of his return to his waiting church, has become, through inattention to bible order, and the hasty and seemingly heartless manner in which it is celebrated, little more than an unmeaning ceremony—or devout mockery of a sacred and deeply impressive ordinance—a divine hieroglyphic of the great truth, "ye are bought with a price, even the precious blood of Christ."

But every body and every thing is hurried now, and amid the incessant whirl and bustle of every day life, the mind, prone to forget things eternal, becomes engrossed with things seen—the temporal, and no time is found for that frequent, close self-examination which saints of other days deemed so essential to growth in grace.

As for meditation—the word is almost obsolete in our religious dialect—it is altogether too calm an idea for this excitable age. How many have their appointed seasons of quiet and holy meditation on divine things now? How many, their stated hours of closet prayer? But one day in the seven we may assemble ourselves together, and how much we need to improve its hours of rest in turning the mind from the earthly to the heavenly; in seeking communion with the Father and the Son and fellowship with each other, till we realize more our oneness in Christ, and with Christ; and how may we better affect this, than by coming together around His table with that dying charge, so tenderly, so solemnly given, thrilling on our ears—"this do in remembrance of me;" and while faith looks back to the cross, and forward to the coming, we show forth the Lord's death till He come. Let us linger there reviewing the wonderful work of redemption, reading the brief but touching record of the closing hours of the life of the man of sorrows—see him washing his disciples' feet, and learn that lesson of lowly humility and brotherly love embodied in the words—"If I then your Lord and Master have washed your feet, ye ought also to wash one another's feet,"—looking in upon that dark hour of agony in Gethsemane—dwelling upon the mournful scenes of Calvary, where the Lamb without spot—our Passover—was sacrificed for us, till our expanding minds grasp the great love wherewith he loved us, who poured out his soul unto death to redeem us from all iniquity, and our hard hearts "dissolve in thankfulness," our eyes "melt in tears," and we go from the hallowed spot, feeling that we are not our own, and our consequent obligation to glorify God in our bodies and spirits which are His. Then, may the world take knowledge of us that we have been with Jesus. In such seasons we gain fresh supplies of grace—the praying spirit—the watching power, and O, we need them now to enable us to stand amid the peculiar and powerful temptations of these last perilous times.

Brn and Srs., how is it? Have we prized the Lord's supper as we ought? Have we realized its import? Have we been careful to "examine ourselves before eating that bread and drinking that cup?" Is there no danger of eating and drinking unworthily, and so being guilty of the body and blood of the Lord, now? Is it not possible now, as then, to eat and drink condemnation to our own selves, not discerning the Lord's body? O, if for the guilt thus incurred many of the church of Corinth were weak and sickly, and many slept, why are we spared? May not at least much of our present spiritual weakness, sickliness, and death, be in consequence of our having incurred condemnation similar to that of our Corinthian brethren, and of our neglect to give good heed to the word of God?

Come, brethren, you, upon whom it devolves more particularly to "set in order," and who ought to know how to behave in the house of God, why not look at this matter and agree on something, and let it be known what is believed about it; that we may understand each other, and be understood by those without. It sometimes happens that a brother goes to a place and is very particular about a table, and unleavened bread, &c., and invites none to partake but baptized persons; another follows, paying no attention to any of these things; and the silence of some on the subject altogether, leads to the supposition that they do not believe in the ordinance at all, and so occasion is given the enemy to speak reproachfully.

May the great Head endue the servants of the church with wisdom, and enable us all to stand, having our loins girt about with the truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness, that we may be of those whom the King shall delight to honor, and sit down with that white-robed company who shall eat the Marriage Supper of the Lamb, when the Master himself shall come forth and serve us. Amen.

So prays

Nov. 5. 1856. A Lover of Order.

For the Crisis.

"Happy?" Yes, why shouldn't a man be happy if he is trying to love God and do good to men, if he keeps busy and out of mischief, gets food and raiment and don't drink rum, chew, or smoke tobacco, drink tea or coffee, or follow any of fashion's tyrannical fooleries? If he lives temperate, keeps clean, behaves himself, is prudent enough to live independent, and honest enough to be poor, what shall hinder him from being happy? Above all, if he has the love of God in his heart how can he help being happy? Try it and see. H. L. H.

For the Crisis

Short Sayings.

The more we suffer for Christ the more we delight to suffer for Him.

The way to have anything done in the right way is to have it done in the Lord's way.

The more we do for Christ, the more we realize what he has done for us. E. B.

The great God seems to have given that commandment—know thyself—to those men more especially who are apt to make remarks on other men's actions and forget themselves.

Distrust the sincerity of that man's friendship who is fond of everybody.

Death makes our enemies cease to hate us, and our friends to love us more.

He submits himself to be seen through a microscope, who suffers himself to be caught in a passion.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 10, 1856.

Christian Union.

NUMBER III.

In our last we took the position that Christian Character is the true test of christian fellowship.

We purpose now to notice an essential element in christian character, which is love.

We understand this principle to be necessary to constitute us Brn. and Srs., in Jesus.

Says the word of the Lord,—"Though I speak with the tongues of men and angels and have not charity, (properly rendered love) I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am NOTHING. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity it profiteth me nothing." 1 Cor. 13: 1–3.

This is plain talk. Can we stand this test? We see that correct faith, or belief, does not constitute us Jesus' brethren, for devils believe and tremble.

Understanding all mysteries, and all knowledge, besides giving all our goods to feed the poor, is nothing without love.

Whom shall we love? Let Jesus answer. "I say unto you love your enemies."

We see that love is a primary element in genuine christian character.

It was not necessary that he should tell us to love our friends but it seems plain that he would have us love all between our positive enemies and bosom companions. Were we tried by this standard to-day, should we all be acquitted?

Can we heartily pray—"Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors?"

The Apostle expressly says, that those who have "hatred" "shall not inherit the kingdom of God." The Savior says, "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye love one another." John, 13: 34, 35.

There are two important points in the scripture just quoted.

First;—If we do not love one another, then we are breaking the Savior's commandment, which if we do, we thereby show that we do not love Him; for He says,—"He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." Again; "If ye love me keep my commandments." "He that loveth me not, keepeth not my sayings." "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar." "This is the love of God, that we keep his commandments".

We see it is impossible for us to be christians unless we love one another. There is no affinity between us and Jesus when we have hatred in our hearts.

Second. If we do not love one another, men will not know that we are Jesus' disciples; consequently, our light would "be darkness," and we become mere stumbling blocks in the way of the wicked, to be consumed with them at last. Remember our Savior says—"by this (love) shall all men know that ye are my disciples;" then it follows that when we have not this, (love) they know that we are not Jesus' disciples.

Have we this essential element of christian character? Without it all our professions are NOTHING.

Italy.

A heavy storm-cloud seems to be hanging over the oppressors of Italy, and about to burst upon their heads with relentless fury. Groans and tears, dungeons of torture, starvation and death have been long administered to the innocent in that fair land, by the united force of ecclesiastical and civil power; but the time appears to have come, when the "ten kings . . . shall hate the harlot, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh and burn her with fire." Rev. 71: 12–16.

It is evident, that the time is near when Rev. 18: 21 will be fulfilled.—"And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great mill-stone, and cast it into the sea, saying, thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and shall be found no more at all."

There is a bright prospect that Christians will soon see their coming King. Many voices are ready to exclaim with the poet:—

"Come and reign; come and reign,
Jesus, on thy throne;
And, O, it fills my heart with joy
To know we are almost home."

The approaching struggle will be terrible, but when the war-cloud is passed, the bow of peace will be painted upon the retreating storm, and the sunshine of glory will illumine and gladden forever the saints' elysian home.

The following soul-stirring manifesto has just been issued from the down-trodden sons of Italy:—

"First, therefore, we demand friendship and fellowship with all the nations of the earth.

Second. That Italy belongs to Italians.

Third. That Italy be one and indivisible, and under a single government of liberal form.

Fourth. That the fundamental laws of Italy guaranty:

1st. Equal rights at law.

2d. Independence of general from local administration.

3d. Personal liberty.

5th. Inviolability of domicil, and of the privacy of letters.

5th. Inviolability of possessions and property.

6th. Liberty of conscience.

7th. Liberty of the press.

8th, Liberty of public speaking and convention.

9th. Responsibility of the Ministry—and,

10th. The institution of a national Guard.

As to the peculiar form of government, Italians will regulate this question, as they will, also, the 'personnel' thereof, in good time. Let the Popes return to their nets, let them fish for souls for the skies, and cease to tyrannize over the body."

"Our course is taken; the war in Spain, the burning of Moscow, with their episodes, are before our minds.

We will reduce our most superb cities to ashes, with our celebrated monuments. We will devastate our fertile plains, and leave behind us but the vestiges of destruction and extermination.

Without distinction of age, sex, or social position, all, all, shall be soldiers—we will come with every kind of weapon, and rush with furious desperation upon the vandals who dare to invade our boundaries, and to trample under foot the most sacred rights of man.

Mountains of corpses shall rise above the mountains, torrents of blood shall run through our plains.

Then, indeed, shall Italy call herself 'the land of the dead;' but the dead shall not all be Italians. Whosoever shall visit our fields of battle, will see with surprise that around each dead Italian there lie at least more dead strangers.

It will be as they would have it."

Corrections.—In Bro. Shepherd's article on the Lord's day, No. 1, the expression just following the introductory quotations should read, "the announcement of the glorious advent of the Messiah," instead of the "commencement." Near the close of the last column instead of "God names it thus," read, "Joel, &c.

"It is more Blessed to give than to Receive."—A five dollar bank-note has just been received, to assist in publishing "The Crisis" with the above written upon the back of the same. As our funds are very low at the present time, all favors of this kind are most acceptable and in "season." And we hope that many of our readers, "according to the ability which God giveth," will enclose to us "the material aid," to enable us to send forth "The Crisis" to comfort and strengthen the things that remain, so long as it shall please our heavenly Father.

For the Crisis.

O my! What a scowl!—Look here, friend, you don't believe that looks any like God's image, do you? Well, I don't either. Now, friend, do try to be good-natured. Why, such a look would curdle all the milk of human kindness that there is in the house. Come, brighten up that face, my good friend,—you don't feel really more than half as ugly as that look indicates. Now try to have that cloud roll off from your darkening brow. Come, try to walk in the light a little. You will find it better for yourself and it will certainly make all around you feel better too. Now be good-natured, won't you? That's a dear good man. H. L. H.

Notice.—All letters, orders for tracts communications, remittances, &c., &c., for H. L. Hastings, must be directed to Rochester, N. Y.

☞ The Post Office address of Dr. A. M. Higgins is Palmer Depot, Mass., where all letters, orders, telegraph or express matter must be directed.

For the Crisis.

Tracts.

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

Jesus commanded his disciples to go and teach all nations, and the word preach has the sense of proclaiming, or making public announcement. So we are not restricted to the voice of the living preachet by any means. It is well that this is the case for had the gospel been propagated only by the living voice of its preachers, it would, unless special miracles had prevented, have long since become extinct, or so corrupted that no features of its original glory would now be discernible. Had the apostles refused to write as well as preach, had the prophets only uttered their petitions and allowed them to die away upon the silent air, we should today have no inspired prophecy, no divine history, no sacred chronology, no standard of faith, no fountain of truth and light; but only a cumbrous and hideous mass of human fables imposed by the artfulness of the cunning upon the weakness of the illiterate, alike disgraceful to God, hurtful to man, subversive of the truth, and insulting to common sense.

The dark ages afford examples of this. The writings of holy men of old were ignored, and hidden; and a ghastly mass of fables and foolish verbiage was uttered from the ten-thousand voices of ignorant monks and besotted priests. A collection of inspired Tracts discovered, read, translated and published far and wide, was the means of kindling anew the beacon fires of truth to light the weary wanderer o'er life's cheerless wastes to the peaceful glory of the better land.

Paul wrote tracts, Peter wrote tracts, James, and John, and Jude wrote tracts; and their "Epistles general" were neither more nor less than tracts for general distribution and circulation. Thus they strove to disseminate truth, and it is to these tracts, under God, that we must attribute the preservation of the uncorrupted gospel of Jesus Christ. These theological tracts collected, form the Holy Scriptures which are able to make us wise unto salvation.

When printing was invented a new impetus was given to the work of gospel preaching. Luther called printing "the last bright flame before the extinction of the world;" and he thanked God "that it came before the last day came." Aided by this wondrous art, the Bible, its first product, was torn from its chains and its obscurity and flung to the benighted sons of men, who hitherto had sat in darkness. In detached portions, or in complete collections these tracts written long ago, by hands which are crumbled back to dust, have been the light of the church through all the dark ages through which she has passed.

So she has moved along, and the light is shining more and more unto the perfect day.

The apostles and prophets in the dissemination of truth, labored under difficulties which were peculiar to their age. The slow and tedious labors of the pen were rewarded by the scanty manuscripts which served to perpetuate, rather than disseminate the truths they wrote.

But there is a change. The press is struggling with the elements of thought and truth, and from it are flung leaves which are for the healing of the nations. But Satan is busy too. His agents work. While christians labor, facts show that in the city of London all the works issued by tract societies and such associations of christian men are not equal to the number of obscene works which are issued and sold secretly and in defiance of law! And Satan is equally busy in our own land. Then there is a host of light literature, which, light as it is, will probably sink many of its readers to infamy here, and to hell hereafter. Hosts of these publications go forth to feed those, who, like the wild ass, love to snuff the east wind.

Now christians should be as faithful as the children of the devil—as wise as the children of this generation. Shall we let Satan get the start of us? Shall we allow him to outrun us in the race? If not, we must be up and doing—working while we have time. We must work diligently, as does our adversary. He uses the press, we must do the same, or be left far behind.

We can do much by preaching, but we can do a work by means of tracts that the preacher can not do. Do you want to send a good sermon to a friend a thousand miles away? It would cost fifty dollars to send a preacher, but two or three cents will send a tract with the sermon in it.

Why, only yesterday, a fine, intelligent, lady told me that she never heard or desired to hear on the "blessed hope" till her husband got a little tract, (a good one, too.) "The Key of Truth" by Bro. Sheldon. That key unlocked her Bible, and now she and her husband are converted and baptized, and instead of staying at home Sundays, they go off from four to eight miles to meet with the people of God. And this is one case among a host. Where I write, the country is stirred for miles around. Men come on foot to evening prayer meetings, from four to six miles, and to meetings Sundays from five to nine or ten miles around.

And much of this work has been done under God by tracts, which have not cost half as much as some people will spend for a bonnet ribbon, or for a piece of luxurious furniture, or for useless food and adornings. These instances of the effect of truth thus disseminated are not solitary. I could spend hours telling of them, yet the most would be untold.

Now let us go to work and scatter abroad such publications as are adapted to open men's eyes, to touch their hearts, to improve their lives, and to prepare them for the day of the Lord. It is at hand. Its clouds hang dismally o'er the celestial arches. They roll awfully along the sky. Now we can hide ourselves from the fury of the coming tempest. Now we can save others from the wrath to come. Now we can spread the light and lead men to see the reasonableness of the truth of God, that they may obey the Lord and be saved in his heavenly rest. Let us then neglect no means that can conduce to such an important end. There are multitudes in this land who would receive the truth could they but see it. Will not we endeavor so to let our light shine that they may see it and be led to Christ. O let us work! Away with mere theorizing—away with mere believing—let us act! Let us lay aside doubtful disputations—let us refrain from vain jangling—let us be diligent, that the Master may find us in peace! Already he is at the door. Tokens of his coming are on every hand, and happy are those who shall be found ready in that hour.

"Watch, 'tis your Lord's command—
And while we speak, he's near;
Mark the first token of his hand,
And ready all appear."

Come, brethren, let us engage anew in the work of the Lord. Let us pray more, believe more, work more, rejoice more, hope more, love more and be more like Jesus in everything. God bless and save us all. Amen.

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 1., 1856.

P. S. Will the Brn. be patient with me a little. My removal has prevented my giving prompt attention to their letters. I will soon attend to them. H. L. H.

The Providence Convention.

[Continued.]

P. M. SESSION.

Monday, Nov. 16th—The Convention was called to order by the President at the time appointed. The devotional exercises were conducted by Elder O. G. Smith, after which the minutes of the Convention were read and approved. The consideration of the subject before the Conference at the time of adjournment, was resumed.

Elder Phelps, to sustain the position that the term Israel was applicable to all Gentile Christians as well as those of Jewish origin, offered an exposition of Romans 9th and 11th, and Ezek. 38th and 39th.

Elder Litch said, God made a special and personal promise to Abraham, and this covenant was made sure by "His oath unto Isaac," and he "confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant, saying, unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance." The prophets express themselves on this subject after this view: "I will bring them into the land where your Fathers have dwelt," &c., and this promise is to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and to the seed of Jacob, and their nationality continues to all eternity.

Elder Preble said, that the land of Canaan is not exclusively promised to the descendants of Jacob, but that land will be given in common to Gentiles in Christ as well as to Jacob. This is proved from Gen. 13: 14—17; Gal. 3: 29, which shows that Abraham, though at the time of these promises was in this same land, and also a Gentile, yet he and his seed (Gal. 3: 29), should possess this land, Canaan, as well as the children of Jacob. The deed, or covenant, therefore, made to Abraham, does embrace not merely Gentile lands, but also the land of Canaan; and of course all Gentile Christians, whether living before the days of Jacob, or Israel, as well as all Gentile Christians under the gospel, will share in the land of Israel.

Elder Grant thought that the resolution covered more ground than the simple term Israel.

The President said, the resolution involved two points; these might be discussed separately or together.

Elder Pearson then offered an amendment, making it read thus:

Resolved, that the term Israel, is not appropriated to any Gentile, but belongs to Jacob and his descendants: which was adopted.

Elder Litch said, he had heard the quotation, "All are not Israel which are of Israel," &c., and the conclusion drawn from it. But such a conclusion, in his view, was not a legitimate deduction. He then referred to Rom. 9th. Ishmael was not Abraham's heir, but Isaac. The same is true in the family of Isaac: it reads, "Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated." God made his covenant of election, according to the flesh, as well as to the seed of promise. God has promised the very land where Israel lay, to his descendants. Abraham is the Father of all nations, who with him, are heirs of the world. The term Israel, is appropriated to descendants of Jacob, in the Old Testament, and does it change its designation in the New Testament? I think not.

Elder Preble said, I do not know of any Scripture in the Old or New Testaments that declares the term Israel, to be restricted to the natural descendants of Jacob. I think the title embraces all true believers. We learn from Gen. 28: 31, that Jacob received the name Israel, because he prevailed with God—"Thou hast prevailed." Therefore, it is evident, that the term may be applied both to the literal descendants of Jacob, and to all who prevail with God: but where the eternal and gracious promises are intimately connected, then character alone claims the title Israel, and may be thus claimed by Jew or Gentile.

Elder Fassett said, that he had the same view of this question, as explained by Elder Preble. The term Israel may be applied to either Jew or Gentile, if thus believers, hence the appropriateness of the Savior's address to Nathaniel: "Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom there is no guile." The Israel of God embraces all God's people under the old and new covenant.

Elder Fassett further remarked that the terms "O my people," and "children of God," were in the Old Testament synonymous.

Brother Parks said, that the appellation Israel was given only through promise; the natural descendants of Jacob are not recognized as Israel, for they have not all complied with the requirements of the promise. The prevailing ones alone are the persons entitled to the term; if we have complied, then are we Israel: all prevailing Gentiles share the blessing in Christ.

After some additional remarks from brethren Bliss, Litch and Preble, the Convention adjourned.

A. M. SESSION.

Tuesday Nov. 17th.—The President in the chair. The opening services were conducted by Elder J. Litch.

The committee on nominations reported the following committees: On Digest, Litch, Bliss, Grant, Osler, Preble.

On Address and Policy:—Pearson, White and Howell. On Ministerial Labor: Osler, Geo. W. Burnham and Orrock. On Ministerial Support: Osler, Orrock, W. Burnham and Bosworth. On Sabbath Schools, and Tracts: Pearson, Orrock and Litch.

The discussion on the application of the term Israel, &c., was resumed, and on motion, the second division of the resolution was considered: "And the promises to Israel, of restoration to theiwland, and nor to its eternal possession, are to those in Christ, and not to Gentile Christians."

Elder Geo. W. Burnham said, the promises referred to in Paul's letter to the Gallations, third chapter, settled his mind on this subject. The promise of God to Abraham embraced the inheritance or land, and this grant was made to Christ, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." And Paul in another letter plainly asserts, "That the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel."

Elder Grant concurred in the remarks made by the last brother; that the blessing of Abraham comes on all believing Gentiles. This promise is connected with a covenant, which is recorded in Genesis, where we find both the promise and covenant. "I will give unto thee and unto thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession." For the real meaning and application of this covenant, Elder Grant called attention to Gal. 3: 14–29, "That the blessing of Abraham mihgt come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith," &c. Therefore, said Elder Grant, it seems to me, that this is a promise not of the Spirit, but made by the Spirit to the Israel of God. It is very plain, that the whole subject is about an inheritance, and not about a promise of the Spirit.

Elder Chapman said, it appears from the argument of some, that Gentile Christians are not allowed to be Israelites. I take it therefore, that our fathers Abraham and Isaac are on the same footing with ourselves, we are all ruled out of the city of Abraham. If the view of these brethren be correct, then we have no title to the land of Canaan. Abraham looked north, south, east and west, and God said unto him, "all the land that thou seest to thee will I give it." I think he saw all Palestine—and it does appear to my mind, that all Christians come in and share alike in Christ.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

Sketches of Sermons.

[Concluded.]

We look farther and find a third angel; his message is pointed and severe: for with a loud voice he declares, "if any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand, the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God." The vials are being poured out; God's servants warn the people; the beast is now in the height of his glory in the 10th, 11th, and 12th centuries.

Look at the message. It must be delivered while the beast is in existence and when there is danger of being turned away from the truth. Was there not danger in the dark ages of the church becoming almost extinct? The influence of the beast was mighty. But how is it now? Vastly different! There is danger now,—yet how small when compared to the strength it once possessed. Then those who died for their faith could be called blessed—and their works still follow them. Their property was confiscated, they were driven from their homes—suffered more than tongue or pen can describe; yet they gained the victory over the beast, over the image, and over the mark of his name; and they are blessed. Praise God!

But another angel is brought to view, who cries mightily with a strong voice, (18th chap.) "having mighty power." He cries—"Babylon is fallen, is fallen," &c. Observe this; he adds, "and is become the habitation of devils," &c. This brings us to Martin Luther's day; he translates the Bible, and what light breaks forth! He preaches, and with what power! He writes ninety-one accusations against the church of Rome, and posts them up to the great annoyance of the church. Bulls are issued against him; he openly burns them up; he is called to appear before the "Diet of Worms"—his friends advise him not to go, but he declares he will go, even if devils are there as thick as the tiles upon the house tops! Truly he was a "mighty angel!"

But another voice is heard—"Come out of her my people!" We now see that the gospel blazes forth with increasing light. The way is prepared for the last message to this world, symbolized by the angel in the 10th chap.: and with the work of this angel the "sealing message" winds up! The last servants of God are sealed,—soon the four winds will blow once more! The battle of the great day of God Almighty will be fought! Glory unspeakable awaits the suffering church; with uplifted hands and joyous heart they cry,—"Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly," Even so. Amen.

16th chap. THE VIALS. In harmony with the three angel's messages of the 17th chap., the vials of the wrath of God are poured out. I cannot in this, make the subject plain. It must be listened to and studied: but there is light and harmony here that I never have seen before. Thank God for the truth, and the promise that light will increase unto the end!

In the 15th chap. we find a preface to the 16th. The seven angels having the seven last plagues, for in them is FILLED UP the wrath of God. Notice also in the 11th chap. two witnesses "are brought to view. Read verses 5, and 6. "And if any man," &c. Chap. 16, informs us in regard to the plagues; turns water to blood, &c. (Waters symbolize nations.)

But who are the two witnesses? Ans. Dan. and John. Daniel speaks of the "last end of the indignation." John speaks of vials in which are filled up the wrath of God. (Same import as the indignation of Dan.) Both speak of the same powers which would wear out the saints, and both give the time of their continuance. Notice. The vials are entirely distinct from the trumpets. The 1st vial poured out "upon the earth," was fulfilled between A. D. 625, and 800; it was in symbol, a noisesome and grievous sore, and fell upon the men who had the mark of the beast, and them which worshiped the image. The fulfillment of this, we find in the troubles the Catholics were subjected to, by the invasion of the Lombards upon Italy, (symbolized by "the earth.") who desecrated their churches, &c. So great was the effect of this vial that the Catholics were afraid they should lose their identity as a people; this will clearly be seen by the addresses of the Popes, Stephen and Leo, to Pepin and Charlemagne, the emperors of the Franks. I will insert one sentence of an address to Pepin, delivered by an embassy of Pope Stephen:

"Illustrious Lords; we are overwhelmed with bitter sadness, and pressed down by an extreme agony. Our misfortunes have caused us to shed such abundant tears, that it seems as if they alone would recount our griefs. The Lombard, in his demoniac fury, dares to command the holy city to open its gates. He threatens, if we refuse to obey his orders, to overthrow our walls, stone by stone, and to put us all, men and women to the sword." This aptly illustrates the "grievous sore."

The second vial was poured out "upon the sea; and it became as the blood of a dead man," &c. The sea symbolizes the Greek empire. Truly, after every christian was driven out, and the Catholic religion made the religion of the empire, what better figure could be obtained to represent its condition than "the blood of a dead man?" To live there, was death, to embrace the Catholic religion was eternal death sure. Then behold the sickly state of the empire! The first and most powerful empire that once supported the "man of sin" finally became extinct.

Third vial. This is poured "upon the rivers and fountains of waters, and they became blood." This brings us to the Crusades; which caused an immense flow of blood, both in Europe and Asia. Millions of people were destroyed. (Rivers and fountains are to a sea what smaller and exterior communities and nations are to a great central people. Lord on Apoc. p. 481.) Also the period known in the history of Europe as "the grand Interregnum." This interregnum commenced with the downfall of the imperial authority of Germany and Italy. During this time a civil war was carried on in Germany and Italy, between two factions known as the Guelphs and the Ghibellines "who for a long source of time, tore each other to pieces with inconceivable fury." (See Koch's history.)

The pouring out of the third vial met the approbation of God's people, as will be seen by reading vers. 5, 6, 7. The history of Europe from the 12th century onward to the 15th, is one of the most bloody ever recorded. By the immense number who followed the Crusaders and perished, Europe was much weakened; and while they were in progress, blood flowed freely in the German States, and in Italy.

Fourth vial. This was "poured upon the sun." ("The sun here is a symbol of the Gospel," as also the woman clothed with the sun; i. e. clothed with the Gospel.)—

We refer the reader to the Reformation of Martin Luther, as a fulfillment of this.

Fifth vial. This "was poured upon the seat of the Beast." At the commencement of the Reformation, Spain was in the height of its glory, and was the 5th head of the "beast;" therefore, this vial affects Spain in particular. The effect of the Reformation was such that all Europe was awakened, and a new era began. The Catholic Church was annoyed by the scorching influence of God's burning truth as the reformers poured it upon them, and they blasphemed God by the most terrible oaths: but at last, under the patronage of Charles V., of Spain, they began to arouse, and under the reign of this emperor, extensive means were used to put down Protestantism. Here the inquisition flourished more than ever before or since, and war was made (on the smallest pretexts,) on many small governments that favored Protestantism. The "Invincible Armada" was fitted out by Spain, and blest by the Pope of Rome, for the especial purpose of conquering Protestant England; but it signally failed, and with the failure, the decisive influence that Spain had acquired in the affairs of Europe was completely destroyed, and ever since, the Spanish people seem to have lost all energy, and are sunken into almost hopeless decay, while Protestantism has gained power. This truly caused the kingdom upon which the 5th vial was poured to be filled with "darkness." Spain's overwhelming disappointment, and continued decay, is aptly illustrated by the expression—"they gnawed their tongues for pain."

The sixth vial "was poured upon the great river Euphrates." Here, Bro. Brewer differed from the commonly received interpretation of the power symbolized by this. He considered the symbol as referring to the "Mother of Harlots"—the mystic Babylon; and the drying up thereof as being fulfilled under Maria Theresa and her son Joseph of Austria, who commenced cutting off the revenues of the church. In Austria, Joseph issued an edict granting toleration to Protestants, and forbidding his subjects having any intercourse with the court of Rome; while the French government completely upset the whole system of Catholicism, and Bonaparte waged war upon the Pope, taking away his temporal power, and using the church revenues to support his army. Ancient Babylon was taken by Cyrus, by changing the course of the river, enabling his troops to march through its bed directly into the city. Now, as ancient Babylon was a type of mystic Babylon, in order to overthrow its power, its "river" of revenues must be turned into another channel. This was, in fact, the way the Catholic church lost her power; a fit antetype, truly.

I have written enough to give the reader some idea of tha subject advanced, in regard to the fulfillment of prophecy, yet it is very imperfect, for I write from memory, not having taken notes. Light is to increase to the end, and we are to search as for hid treasure, in order to find it. There is no mistaking the time in which we live. God forbid that we, who have come out here to meet the Bridegroom should harbor the thought—the church is in darkness; no, those that "were ready" had light. Evidently there is a lethargy, a slumbering on prophecy, from which it seems impossible to arise; yet, if indulged in, it will end in the sleep of death. It will take all our energy and power here, to throw off Satan's opiate. It is a mighty struggle.

Bro. Brewer's ideas in regard to the two "horned beast," I cannot give clearly, but they seemed very plausible.

Seventh vial. He considered we were living in the very last dregs of this vial, and attempted to show from scripture and history that it had been pouring out for the last twelve years. "Voices, thunderings and lightnings," he considered symbols of the angry elements that have prevailed so extensively for the last ten years; and the earthquake was fulfilled in 1848, when nations were revolutionized and thrones overturned. &c.; and that we are now at the point (present truth and history, and especially the present condition of Italy corroborates it,) when "great Babylon will come into remembrance before God;" then will the scenes of the judgment be realized. Is it so? Have we been living under the pouring out of the seventh vial, and is it almost accomplished?

Do we realize, that we are now to heed he admonition "Watch and pray," and keep our garments? Do we believe the end of all things is at hand? Ah, there is no time for contention! Individually we must see that our own garment is prepared, faultless, spotless. Let us heed the last counsel. "Buy of ME gold," &c.—That the church may arouse is my earnest prayer. Amen. * *

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus, at Ware, Mass., Nov. 22d, sister Louisa, wife of Bro. T. J. Wetherell, aged 21 years.

The subject of this notice gave her heart to the Lord some six years ago, under the labors of Bro. Hemenway, in Clinton, Mass., and from that time it could be said of her that she was one of the godly, as her life and conversation would show. She was deeply interested in the subject of the Savior's coming, and was one of those who were disappointed in the last time movement, but notwithstanding the disappointment, she still hoped, and chose to suffer affliction with the people of God, knowing that he who had promised was faithful, and at the end the vision would speak. She hoped that she might have been one of the number that would not taste death, but it was otherwise ordered. She must fall asleep. Her disease was consumption; she was a great sufferer, but bore all without a murmur—an example of patience in time of affliction; and at the last she felt, as she had often expressed, a desire to have a clear witness of her acceptance with God.

She now sleeps quietly by the side of a sister of her beloved companion, waiting the sounding of the trump of God, to call the sleepers from their dusty beds, and to clothe them with immortality and unfading beauty. How transcendently glorious the thought, (notwithstanding all our disappointments,) that all we have been looking for, and praying for, and desiring, and all that is promised is yet in the future, and is just before us. Lord hasten the time, when suffering of every kind shall come to an end, and the day of eternal gladness begin.

Louisa was a daughter of Elder J. Porter, of Canada East. The words of Holy Writ will be a source of consolation to the bereft, as says the apostle; "Them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him; and this we say unto you by the word of the Lord." "Wherefore comfort ye one another with these words." D. E. MOULTON.

[Will the Herald please copy?]

Lawrence, Dec. 5, 1856.

Foreign News.

ARRIVAL OF THE ARABIA.

HALIFAX, Dec. 3.

The Royal mail steamship Arabia, from Liverpool on the forenoon of Saturday, 22d ult., arrrived at this port about half-past one o'clock this P. M., en route for Boston.

NAPLES.—The Governor of Palermo has ordered a strict surveillance to be exercised upon all French and English comm'cial vessels. It is probable that within a day or two the Neapolitan question, which has remained in a state of stagnation for a long time, will be advanced a stage one way or the other.

Capt. Newell, of the whaling barque Alice Fraser, of New Bedford, at San Francisco, reports that on the 26th of July last, a volcano burst out on the Island of Ounimaak, in the Pacific, throwing the water some 800 feet into the air, followed by an ejection of lava, which covered the deck of his ship.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

:o:

BRO. Z. CAMPBELL appoints to preach at Mansfield, Conn., (at Bro· Abbys') Dec. 14.

Eld. S. S. BREWER appoints to preach at Boston, Dec. 14.

BRO. J. HOWELL appoints to preach at Lowell, Mass., Dec. 14.

If the Lord will, O. G. Smith will preach at Lake Village, Sabbath, Dec. 14.
Page School House, in Holderness, Sabbath, Dec. 21.
Alton West, Sabbath, " 28.
Melvin Village, Sabbath, Jan. 4.
Vittum School House, Monday evening, Jany. 5.
January 6th and 7th, as the Brethren Hoyt and Hodsdon may appoint.
Lake Village, Sabbath, Jan. 11.

Bro. Munn appoints to preach in Lovely Street, Canton, Ct., Dec. 14, and North Canton, Dec. 21. E. KINSMAN.

Eld H. Pratt appoints to preach at Wilmington, Ct., Dec. 14, where Bro. Anderson may appoint.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Portsmouth, N. H., Dec. 14. M. GRANT.

If God permit, I will preach at Saccarappa, Dec. 14.
West Falmouth, " 21.
Freeport, (Swamp School House,) " 28.
R. R. YORK.

BRO. GRANT: We purpose to preach, the Lord willing, as follows:
Bowdoinham, near Bro. Sparks, Dec. 15.
Hallowell, " 16.
Augusta, where the Brn. may think best " 17.
Fairfield, " 18.
Exeter, Me., Saturday afternoon and Sunday, 20 and 21.
Newbury, where Brn. may prepare, " 28.
Will Brn. that want us to come to their places and hold meetings, please inform us at Exeter and Newbury.
L. L. HOWARD.
I. DAMMAN.

Dear Brn.,—We intend to come to you in the love of the truth, and to know nothing among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified; and hope that we shall be enabled to comfort and not distract the flock of God. Brethren pray for us.
Yours, in love,
ISRAEL DAMMAN.

ELD. S. S. BREWER appoints to preach at
Fair Haven, Mass., Dec. 1.
River Head, evening, " 21.
Turner's Corner, " 23.
Worcester, " 28.
Springfield, evening " 30.
Hartford, " 31.
In company with Eld. Matthewson, will commence a meeting on Thursday evening and continue over Sunday at Waterbury, Conn., Cheshire Jan. 11th. S. S. BREWER.

CONFERENCE.

The Eastern Iowa, and Rock Island Conference is expected to meet in Moline, Ill., Friday Jan. 2nd, 1857. P. B. MORGAN.

The Post office Address of Eld. P. B. Morgan is Cordova, Rock Island, Co.,

BOOKS SENT.—S B Munn, S J Moore, and A P Morril.—Out of Ramsey's works—will forward when we have them.

D Ireland—54 cents are now due.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to prepay postage. The postage on TRACTS, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

THE THREE COVENANTS. By E. Campbell. Price 5 cents; postage 1 cent.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE BOOK OF SEVEN SEALS. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents; postage 1 ct.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE CHRISTIAN'S ONLY HOPE: or, the Faith once Delivered to the Saints. By Z. Campbell. Price 10 cents; postage 1 ct.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE. By William Shepherd. Price—four copies, 25 cents; nine copies, 50 cents; eighteen copies, $1; one hundred, $5—post-paid.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

THE DISCUSSION: Between Prof. H. Mattison, of the Methodist E. Church, and George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price 25 cents; postage 3 cents.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and The New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Single copy, 12 cents; $8 per hundred. Postage 1 cent per copy.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

A VIEW OF THE SCRIPTURE REVELATIONS Concerning a Future State. By Richard Whately, D D., Archbishop of Dublin. Price $1; pastage 18 cents.

THE SEVEN SEALS: with Scriptural Facts concerning the Four Angels, the Four Winds, the Sealing Angel, the Seal of the Living God, &c. By W. Sheldon Price 3 cents.

THE FIRST FRUITS: a Scriptural Inquiry into the Time and Season of the First Resurrection, and Change of Those who are Alive and Remain. Price 10 cents per copy; postage 1 cent.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

JUBILEE HARP. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns well adapted to the present wants of the church. Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. Postage 7 cents.

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 38 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cts.—postage 8 cents.

GLAD TIDINGS, or Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to End in the Universe, by a Literal Destruction of Wicked Men and Devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment Collected and Arranged. By Jacob Blain. Price 10 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himeself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

BIBLE vs. TRADITION: in Which the True Teaching of the Bible is Manifested, the Corruptions of Theologians Detected, and the Traditions of Men Exposed. By Aaron Ellis. Revised and much enlarged by Thomas Read. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents: postage 6 cents.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions or the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 16 cents per volume.

A REVIEW: Giving the Main Ideas in Dr. E. Beecher's 'Conflict of Ages,' and a Reply to Them, and to his many Reviewers. To which is added the Bible meaning of the word Hell. Also, two hundred texts quoted, to show the Nature of Future Punishment. By Jacob Blain, Baptist minister. Price 8 cents; postage 1 cent.

The above named publications can be obtained at the office of the World's Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston; H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y.; W. Pratt, Moline, Ill.; A. F. Porter, 20 Erie street, Philadelphia, Pa.; S. S. Brewer, 54 Wilson street, Providence, R. I.; S. W. Bishop, Portsmouth, N. H.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for this paper or the books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake somewhere.

S Hewitt, O F Cain, N Gould, J [illegible], W Moore, Z Grovier, J A [illegible], S [illegible], H N Patten, A J Densmore, H J [illegible], S Cook, S R Ward, $1.00 each.

C Boutwell, 93 cts.

FOR BOOKS SENT.—C Boutwell, [illegible]; W Moore, $1.00.

Geo Bliss—17 cts due [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

"The things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal."—PAUL.

CHAP. I.

NAOMI.—(pleasant.)

BY JULIA A. FERRIS.

Peaceful and fair the sunshine lay
On Bethle'm's green and vine-clad plains;
And here and there with gentle sway,
Waved the rich fields of golden grains.
For Israel's God smiled on the land,
Nor yet withheld her former rains.

Behold yon cot, reposing there
Beneath those tall and graceful trees;
The cot where dwells Naomi fair,
Naomi, mild as evening breeze.
See her within the cottage door,
Her forehead shaded by her hand,
Numb'ring her many blessings o'er,
As she surveys her own fair land;
And her full heart with grateful swell,
Praises the God of Israel!

"Our trees bend down beneath their load
Of rip'ning fruit. Our vines are fair;
Our gardens yielding every good,
To please our taste, reward our care;
And all our stores with plenty fill!
Praised be the God of Israel!

Emblems of peace, our snow-plumed doves—
For sanctuary offerings raised—
Are bright and fair, and fill these groves
With life and beauty—God be praised.
Our lambs as white and round and spry
As ever skipped o'er heath or hill,
Like snow-flakes dot yon mountain high,—
Praised be the God of Israel!

And still a scene more sweetly fair,
Is spread o'er yonder whitened plain;
Like graceful elms, my loved ones there,
Bend low, to reap the ripened grain.
Elimelech, my honored lord,
My early loved, and early wed—
Thank God! his slightest wish or word,
Has ne'er by me been disobeyed,—
Upright and wise he doth excel;
Praised be the God of Israel!

And near him there, my eldest born,
My dark-haired Mahlon, tall and brave;
Already has the clarion horn
Summoned him forth, his land to save.
Mahlon will be to honor raised,
And serve his country; God be praised.
And by his side, erect and fair,
His younger brother mild of eye;
I see from here, his shining hair
Upon his shoulders clustering lie—
Yet in his teens; and life hath been
To him one long bright summer day;
No care or grief he yet hath seen,
To cloud his brow or dim his eye.
God bless thee now, my gentle son,
My fair-haired boy, my Chilion!
I feel my heart with rapture thrill;
Praised be the God of Israel!"

CHAP. II.

MARA.—(bitter.)

The sun pours down his scorching rays
On Bethle'm's parched and burning plains;
And o'er the lands where'er you gaze,
The fields are bare of grass or grains.
Israel has sinned against the Lord,
And he witholds the timely rains.

Naomi sits within her door,
Naomi, sad, and wan, and pale,
Thinking her many sorrows o'er;
And thus she sings with plaintive wail:—
"Israel hath sinned against the Lord,
Israel hath bowed the knee to Baal,
Now what betides us, who can tell?
Save us, O God of Israel!
Our trees are bare, our vines are dead,
Our gardens parched, and brown and sere;
And we've consumed our last of bread,
Steeped moist with many a bitter tear.
Our bleating lambs and turtle-doves,
No more upon the altars bleed;
Our sinful priests have left the groves,
Their own half-famished ones to feed.
Alas! we've sinned against the Lord;
Israel hath sinned in very deed.

They tell us that in Moab's land,
There's bread, and fruit, and wine, and oil.
We're weary of our native land,
Weary of unavailing toil;
Weary of hearing murmurs rise
Against our God, and we will go
To Gentile lands, and spare our lives
From this sad fate, this bitter wo.
We are still living; it is well,
I'll trust thee, God of Israel!"

Ten years are passed. We see her now
In Moab's land, widowed and poor,
With whitened hair, and wrinkled brow,
Again she sits within her door,
Her hands are clasped, her form is bowed;
Naomi's grief is very great.
With trembling voice she sings aloud—
"Alas how bitter is my fate.
Surely against me hath the Lord
Stretched out a strong opposing hand,
And made my name to be abhorred,
Among the daughters of the land.
And now with every comfort gone,
No pleasure ever more to know,
Ere sets to-morrow's weary sun
To my own country will I go."

CHAP. III.

NAOMI.

On cushions soft, she now reclines,
Within a richly curtained room;
Fair infant's arm her neck entwines—
Sweet is her passage to the tomb.
A holy faith lights up her eye,
A holy hope her bosom cheers;
She sees with a prophetic eye
Thro' the dim vail of distant years.
Again her voice with joyous swell,
Praises the God of Israel.

"Come here, my Ruth, and let me tell
Of him who from this seed shall spring,
Strong to deliver Israel;
Our glorious, our eternal King—
And this, our child, shall be the stem
From which the righteous branch shall grow,
Born in this very Bethlehem;
A Nazarene more pure than snow,
Mighty to conquer death and hell!
Praised be the God of Israel!

And ere I yet resign my breath,
The vision bright, advances still,
To where, redeemed from sin and death,
[illegible] shall stand on Zion's hill:
Girded with strength and righteousness,
I see our kingly Shiloh stand;
Leading his people forth with peace—
His own of right, a princely band.

Our King shall reign in righteousness,
His princes shall with judgment rule.
Lord, let me now depart in peace,
With holy joy my cup is full;
Ne'er felt my heart such rapturous thrill—
Praised be the God of Israel!"

Patterson, N. [illegible]

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Marriage Covenant.

BY ZETA.

No. II.

It may, and doubtless will by some be thought that this subject is too delicate to be written upon in a public paper, where it will meet the eye of so many who will see their faults pointed out. But this is the best reason why it should appear in such a place.

In our former article we made allusion to the sacredness of this God-appointed covenant, and to the little esteem attached to it by some, who break it at will, and others who disregard its duties; also to some of the evils growing out of such neglect. In this, we wish to hint at some of the principles governing this relation, and state some of the rules laid down in the Scriptures, which should be carefully studied, and obeyed by all who enter the marriage relation. Families are each, little communities stationed in various places by divine Providence, which will extend their influence abroad, either for good or for evil. The mere benefit of the two forming a union between themselves for life, should not govern the parties, though they should expect reciprocal benefit; but they should have respect to the benefit and happiness of society around them. The true and deep affections of the human heart for a fellow-being, suitable to form a union for life, to beget confidence sufficient to commit one's interests, fortunes and happiness to another, is vastly different from that passion which suddenly vacillates from idolatry to aversion. There should exist true respect, confidence and affection, mutually, to determine two to form a union for life. They should remember that for this, as for all other acts, they must give account to God. In this contract there is something more intended than the mere convenience of each party as fellow travelers through life. A cordial, tender, and strong attachment for each other should lead to the choice of companionship, independent of self advantages which govern other contracts. If either party is delinquent in these qualifications, and enters upon such relation, such an one commits the greatest fraud that can be committed against a fellow mortal. We venture to affirm, that no other sin against a mortal can equal the palming off of one's self upon an affectionate, confiding companion, while the affections, the interests, and sympathies are witheld. Each is expected to give themselves to the other, not merely to share each other's joys, but to bear each other's burdens, woes, and griefs; to consult each other's peace and good, and to do all they can to render the voyage of life happy, and useful as possible. Each has committed a great trust to the other, who has pledged before God to keep it. From henceforth, all interests are to be one. Neither one has the power of success and happiness entirely in their own hands, that power must be wielded by both. It can be done; but to do it, great care should be taken to preserve that confidence and affection which caused the union. Much allowance should be made for the imperfections of human nature, for vacillation of feelings, and variety of temperaments. Wisdom is needed to do this, and as the word of God giveth light, we should seek wisdom from Him by the daily study of His word.

"Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding, for the merchandize of it is better than the merchandize of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold." The law of the Lord gives us much instruction in domestic duties, as well as in other departments of life. It is our sufficient rule. "My son, forget not my law, but let thine heart keep my commandments, for length of days and peace shall be added unto thee. Let not mercy and truth forsake thee; bind them about thy neck, write them upon the table of thine heart; so shalt thou find favor and good understanding in the sight of God and man." Prov. 3: 1–4. The above is an important item of advice, with a great promise. I will quote another. "Lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him, (God) and he shall direct thy paths." Prov. 3: 5, 6.

It is not to be expected that all our pathway will be strewn with fragrant flowers, and all circumstances afford pleasures. Trials, difficulties, and afflictions are the common lot of humanity. Dark prospects, storms of adversity, bitter waters of anguish, and bread of affliction are to [illegible] perienced. These are the places where the true-hearted companion is most needed, and these are the opportunities to prove afresh the continued care and tenderness of true affection. The ardent feelings of affection which at first existed may, and will subside, but if the heart is properly guarded and trained, a more deep, rational, and steady principle of confidence and affection will remain. Our affections are not to be accommodated like the ocean's tide which ebbs and flows, nor to resemble the rivulet of the mountain's side, whose channel is filled by showers, frozen by the winter's cold, and dried by the summer's heat; but to be so cultivated and controlled, as to resemble the living, boiling, pure fountain, which the winter's cold cannot congeal, nor the summer's heat evaporate. God has laid a tribute on our affections. He commands first, that we should love Him with all our heart, and then our neighbor as ourselves, and our companions as ourselves; for two who unite in marriage are "ONE FLESH," having one purpose, one will, one interest. Our affections can be cultivated and regulated, so as to be properly exercised toward our Creator and the creature. Supremely to the first, purely and rationally to the second, and not inordinately to anything.

Let us now examine the inspired rule, given in Eph. 5: 21–29. "Submit yourselves one to another in the fear of God. Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord: for the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church, and he is the Savior of the body. Therefore, as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands, in everything. Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it. So ought men to love their wives, as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself, for no man ever yet hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church."

This is so plain that none can misunderstand it, though many forget to obey it. I will quote again. "Likewise, ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands, that, if any obey not the word, they may also without the word be won by the conversation of the wives, while they behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear. * * * Likewise, ye husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honor unto the wife, as unto the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life, that your prayers be not hindered. Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous." 1 Pet. 3: 1, 2, 7, 8.

The above should be often read, prayerfully contemplated and compared with our lives. But I must speak farther, and on other points in another chapter.

For the Crisis.

Christ's Inheritance.

A Sermon preached at the meeting house in Vermillionville, Sab., Aug. 24th, 1856, by George L. Teeple. Text., Ps. 2: 8, 9. "Ask of me and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession. Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron, thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel."

Often has this text been quoted to prove that the time would come before the Second Advent of our Lord Jesus Christ, when the gospel would be preached in all the world, and under its influence, all nations would become enlightened and embrace Jesus Christ as their Savior; when, in fact, all would become converted to God, and peace reign from shore to shore. This time has been styled the "Temporal Millennium?"

I shall try to show that the text does embrace any such idea, and that that time, which a majority of the professed churches are expecting, will never come. I shall attempt to show when the text will be fulfilled, and the manner of its fulfillment.

First, let us inquire who the person is, addressed, and who is the bestower of the things asked for. In the context we read as follows: "I will declare the decree: the Lord hath said unto me, thou art my Son: this day have I begotten thee." Then comes the text, "Ask of me, &c. Here we learn, then, that the person addressed is the Son of God, and the bestower of the things asked for is the Father, the Lord that sitteth in the heavens.

Second,—Do the heathen, at the present time, belong to Christ? Certainly not; for they that are Christ's, or rather "have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." Gal. 3: 27. "And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts." Gal. 5: 24. "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Rom. 8: 9. These passages show conclusively, that the heathen are not at the present time belonging to Christ. The heathen, we understand to be all those who do not receive Jesus Christ as their Savior; and are all these to be converted before the end? I think not, for the Scriptures assert no such thing. Not one passage in all the oracles of God carries any such idea, but on the contrary, "wicked men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." 2 Tim. 3: 8. "In the last days perilous times shall come." "And because iniquity shall abound the love of many shall wax cold." Matt. 24: 12. Is not this the state of things at the present time? and does the present aspect of things, look like the conversion of the world? Far from it. Look where you will, wickedness prevails, vice triumphs over virtue. There is not a nation under heaven but what is ripening for destruction.

Wickedness increases and is striving for the mastery; and although it may seem to succeed for a while, yet it only prepares the world the more fully, for the destruction that awaits it, at the coming of the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. He will finally prevail. The heathen will be given into his hands, and he will dash them to pieces like a potter's vessel.

Here, perhaps, one will say, I believe all this, but the text has a spiritual meaning, and signifies to subdue the stubborn heart and cause it to yield to the influences of the Gospel. If this is the meaning of the text, why give us such admonition as is found in the verses following the text, viz.: "Be wise now, therefore O ye kings: be instructed, ye judges of the earth. Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice with trembling, Kiss the Son lest he be angry, and perish from the way when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him."

Christ will have the gospel preached first in all the world as a witness unto all nations, not necessarily unto to every individual, if so, the resurrection must take place first, in order to accomplish this work; for there are thousands that lie beneath the clods of the valley who have never heard of Christ as the Savior of the world.—Therefore, it cannot have such a broad meaning; but, as I understand it, it is something like this, Supposing we hear that in the city of Washington there is a man proclaiming the way of knowledge, and that he has in his possession a book explaining this way, and he would instruct all that would listen to him, and give them a chance to obtain a copy of the book mentioned, whereby they might become wise in every thing that would tend to make them happy. Now, if we were eager to get wisdom, would we not embrace the first opportunity to obtain the book, and listen to the man capable of giving us wisdom? I think we should. If we hear of it, and do not make any exertion to hear and get the book of wisdom, do we not virtually reject knowledge? Certainly we do. So with the heathen nations. They have a chance to hear and get the Scriptures, which are able to make them wise unto Salvation, for Missionaries have been sent into all parts of the world to proclaim the gospel to the heathen, but they will not put themselves in the way to hear and believe; consequently, they reject salvation, and must be given into the hands of Christ to receive their doom.

Jesus says—"The word that I have spoken unto you, the same shall judge you in the last day." "But," says one, "there are those that do not have a chance to hear the word." True, but Paul says—"They that have the law, shall be judged by the law; and they that have not the law, are a law unto themselves." Here you have both classes; they that have the law are judged by the law, and those that are a law unto themselves are judged without law. If either class reject their law, they become the class spoken of in our text. Christ has died and rose again—sent out his servants to preach the word—ascended on high to intercede for all that will come unto God through him, and all can come that will.

The hour of probation closes. Jesus stops pleading, and asks the Father for the things spoken of in our text. Inasmuch, he might say, as I have done the great work laid out for me to do, and have paid the price, I claim the heathen for my inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for my possession.

The question is asked,—What for? Ans. "To rule them with a rod of iron, and to dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel."

The reason why this must be accomplished, will be seen, when we for a little while contemplate the creation of man, his fall, and the promise to the woman. We learn from Isiah 45: 18, the Lord did not make the earth in vain, but he made it to be inhabited. This was the first design as we see in the creation of man. After forming man out of the dust of the ground, and putting breath in his nostrils, he placed him in the garden of Eden and gave him dominion over the fish of the sea, the fowls of the air, and the beasts of the field, and placed him on probation; but in the hour of temptation he fell—the dominion was taken from him—the ground was cursed for his sake, with the assurance that he must now eat his bread by the sweat of his face, until he return to the earth; for "dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." Then comes the blessed promise—"The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head." When man had fallen, the devil took possession of the world (for he offered it to Christ—he is also styled the God of the world, the Prince of this world) and man fell a victim to his wiles. Man was left without any hope beyond the grave, unless some one could be found powerful enough to open the grave and bring the dead forth; if no such one could be found, they must lie there forever. This Jesus accomplished.

The first Adam when tempted yielded; the second Adam commences at the same point—He is tempted and overcomes. The first Adam dies, goes into the grave, and as yet remains there; the second Adam dies, goes into the grave, and glory to his name! He conquers the king of terrors, and comes forth victorious. He has conquered the enemy—now he can bring back the lost possession. It was necessary for Christ to die, for Paul says—"For as much then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same, that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; and deliver them, who, through fear of death, were all their life time subject to bondage."

[To be continued.]

For the Crisis.

THE GATHERING STORM.

BY S. S. BREWER.

See, the storm is gathering fast,
The winds begin to roar;
Yon little bark before the blast,
Strives for its native shore.
O, how it glides upon the breast
Of each succeeding wave,
And nobly parts the foamy crest,
As round the billows rave.

It's coming near to port at last,
The breakers dash and foam;
They've reached the haven, and have cast
Their anchor safe at home.
Pilgrim, the heavens are growing dark,
The sky is overcast;
Up, christian, now, and steer thy bark
Amid the howling blast.

The signs of coming wrath and doom
Are thick'ning all around;
Creation wears omnific gloom,
And soon the trump must sound.
Keep steadily thine eye upon
The compass and the chart,
The voyage of time is almost run—
Live for a spotless heart.

Providence, R. I., Oct. '56.

For the Crisis.

Proverbs.

Idleness is the high road to perdition. If you do not keep employed, the devil will have you employed.

Keep your heart open to goodness, and goodness will come into your heart.

If you permit Satan to make a toy shop of your mind, he will at length, turn it into a wholesale store. Fight against Satan and he will fight against you; but treat him with favor and he will flatter you.

Live in peace, and God will give you the spirit of peace.

There is no blindness so difficult of cure as the blindness of superstition..

Bigotry is the fever and ague of the mind.

God hears those who hear him.

A generous man makes others generous.

E. B.

For the Crisis.

Self-composed.

A person can always do more, and do it better, and always feels better in doing it, when self-composed. Do not get into a fluster. Keep cool. "The Lord reigns." You "cannot make one hair white or black." "He that believeth shall not make haste." Let your moderation be known unto all men. "The Lord is at hand!"

E. B.

He is the best accountant who can count up correctly, the sum of his own errors.

Choice Selections.

Liberality of Sentiment.

What an idea some people have of the human mind! They seem to think it a wonderful crime for any person or persons to differ from them in anything, or on any subject. Just as if they know everything! Just as if God had set them up for religious, moral, and political regulators in particular!

The truth is, men and women can no more think alike than they can look, eat, sleep alike. Because some men have light hair, and blue eyes, and wish to sleep eight hours in twenty-four, they are no less men than those who have black hair and dark eyes, and wish to sleep but five hours in twenty-four. And because some women have pretty curls, and pretty eyes, and pretty forms and faces, they are no more women than those who are too homely to be looked at.

So it is in the thinking world. Some think more and some think less. Some think fast and some think slow. Some think under one shade of circumstances, and others think under a very different shade. Some are educated to one bias of thought, and others to another bias. Who, therefore, cannot see the importance of liberality of sentiment, in order that we may cultivate friendly and kindly feelings in relations with each other? Am I unrighteous simply because I differ from you in sentiment? Who makes us differ? What makes us differ? You hold the very best sentiment you can; and so do I—and who is to be blamed? We would both hold very different opinions could we think different sentiments to be right; but we cannot. And again I ask, who is to be blamed? Are you sure you are right in every opinion you hold? May you not possibly be wrong in some things? May not your friends be right where you are wrong?

Be liberal then. Put off that vinegar-faced-self-wisdom-fideness, and be a brother—be a man not a Pope. You cannot press human minds all into one mass of thought. You may as well think of pressing a heap of cannon balls into a solid body, for then there are no balls there—they lose their identity in the jam; and so human minds would cease to be human minds, when merged in one mass. Think and let others think, and still live!—Newburyport Herald.

E. B.

The Dying Christian.

It is silent in his chamber, save only that, occasionally, a few broken sentences are whispered, and subdued sobs and soft footsteps are heard. His hour is come. His tender, loving wife, and weeping, affectionate children are at his bedside, with breaking hearts, to receive his parting words. His countenance is fearfully pale, but an almost angelic smile that rests there, makes it interesting even in death. The cares of earth have all retired and left him to fall asleep in calmness and quiet. How sweet is the divine assurance that pervades his believing soul! Angels are at his pillow whispering words of heavenly consolation to his mind. He fears not to die. He remembers that his Redeemer has laid in the darkness and silence of the grave before him, and thus, as it were, sanctified his bed of corruption. While it is disagreeable to him to enter the chilling waters, he rests in the happy confidence that the hand that holds him will not suffer him to sink forever. He triumphs in the thought that he "shall come again from the land of the enemy." His hope takes hold on immortality. The blissful prospect of an endless life softens the anguish of the final struggle. His sun goes down in celestial clearness.

"O" his "pain," his "bliss of dying!"

Well might one of ancient days exclaim, "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his."

Now sleep, toiling pilgrim, now sleep in the dust,
Thy waking shall be with the pure and the just,
Thy greeting shall be with the glorified throng,
And the song of thy triumph the seraphims' song.

—Newburyport Herald.

E. B.

NO SUCH THING AS WEATHER WISDOM.—Mr. E. Merriam, of Brooklyn, who has devoted a lifetime to meteorological and atmospheric observations, &c., gives the following as the result of his experience:

With all my practice and experience in observing atmospheric changes, and recording hour by hour and day by day thermometrical and meteorological observations, and in connection with simultaneous observations made and recorded elsewhere, I feel more and more convinced that it is not in the power of any human being to determine, even a single day in advance, what changes will take place in the atmosphere.

He tries to please everybody, consequently pleases nobody, not even himself. Brother, had you not better keep straight on, turning neither to the right nor the left, take an independent, God-fearing course?

Men are like bugles—the more brass they contain, the farther you can hear them. Women are like tulips—the more modest and retired they appear, the better you love them.

If we all had windows in our breasts, we would take good care to keep the blinds down.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1856. WHOLE NO. 48. VOL. IV.

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address, so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Meditations.

BY C. H. FULLER.

"Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my Redeemer." Ps. 19 : 14.

Though straiter and narrower grows the way, I am persuaded that the days of our sojourning are almost ended. Though fiercer rages the conflict, I know that it is almost over. Though darker grows the night, and thicker settles the battle-cloud gloomily around us, the brilliant dawn of glory's morning approaches. "The Sun of Righteousness" will soon arise and gladden with his beams the hearts of the faithful.

Already beneath the fringed cloud of gathering wrath serenely shines the blessed day-star of promise, and waiting ones beholding it, rejoicingly thank God and take courage.

Though the enemy's ranks are multiplied, though they are waxed strong in wrath, the day of their overthrow approacheth, for to the Captain of our salvation shall victory be given; to the tower of the flock shall come the first dominion; the rightful heir shall soon declare his power upon the earth, he shall take the throne of his father David, he shall reign in righteousness, and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

"Then Peace shall wave her sceptre high
And Love's fair banner greet the eye."

Then shall resplendent glory sit enthroned with liberated nature upon the placid lake, and in the purling rill, upon the lofty mountain's brow, and in the lowly vale; upon the prairie's wide extent and in the woodland glade; by the brooklet's side; in the deep ravine; on the mossy knoll or beetling cliff: in rural grot or shady dell, and through the cave's deep recesses, and on the desert's trackless wild shall eternal sunlight gleam.

"Weeping streams" shall cease their sorrowing and "murmuring brooks" forget their plaintive songs. The gentle zephyrs sigh no more but whisper to us now in tones of joy. Yea, "the mountains and the hills break forth before us into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clasp their hands." Forth from that "new heaven," there looks no threatening frown, no lowering cloud of gloom, no omens dire of woes to come, but in those azure depths serene, are seen reflected the radiant smiles of earth redeemed as she triumphantly wheels her onward course.

No darksome wilds, or dismal shades; no scorching heat, or wintry blast; no booming thunder, or dread simoon; no furious hurricane, or earthquake shock, shall there be known. No wasted forms, on couches lie to wait grim death's approach. No traveler worn with woes he long has borne, goes plodding down those blissful vales. No remembrance there of ills that were, no sorrowing for "dear departed joys" that may never more return; for the present, the joyful, glorious, eternal present is an enduring reward, a satisfying pleasure at which ten thousand life-times of suffering sink into insignificance.

O glorious thought! O blissful, ecstatic vision of delight! O home, most blessed! And art thou mine? Is Jesus mine elder brother?

And will he welcome to those everlasting mansions one so unworthy as I?

Shall I, so doubtful, fearful, be able to stand amid the unveiled glory of the Eternal?

Shall I, who have been so long disobedient to the will of my Heavenly Father, and done so little to his glory be accounted worthy to join in those anthems of praise to our Redeemer?

Shall I behold His face in righteousness? 'Tis even this my heart wisheth and even this my soul seeketh.

I am lonely and sigh for the sweet companionship of those bright immortals. I am weary and would repose beneath those pendent shades. I am tired and tempted, and long for that resplendent morning of glad release. I am sick of this mortal life, with its strifes and cares and worthless toys; its doubts and fears, and failing hopes; its ills and griefs and transient good; its sinful joys, and pain, and death. Yes, I am sick, and fain would quaff immortal health from life's healing fountain.

Hasten, O hasten, Lord, our only deliverance! Let thy wide-spreading kingdom in all its untold glory arise! Cleanse the robes of ALL thy saints from spot or stain; then O Lord, bid them look up from toil, from bondage, from pain, from sorrow, from dangerous journeyings by sea and land, from persecutions and trials among false brethren, from scourgings and imprisonment, and from the bewildering temptations and cares of this life, to behold in bright reality the joy, the peace, the beauty, the glory, the life, the land, the home, the LORD which they so long have seen by faith.

See, Lord, is not the harvest even now fully ripe? Behold the wicked scoffer strengtheneth himself because our hope still tarrieth, and the faithful ones are growing fewer. Almighty Lord! vouchsafe thine aid; so gently, safely guide and uphold us by thine own right hand, that we, though the waves run mountain high, still grasping thine out-stretching, all-powerful arm, may fearlessly and surely walk these troubled waters, nor tire till our feet shall press the soil of Eden's grounds.

In the name of Jesus, Father, so let it be! Amen!

Cheshire, Mass., Nov. 4, '56.

For the Crisis.

Chrits's Inheritance.

BY G. L. TEEPLE.

No. II.

Thus, you see, before Christ's resurrection there was no hope of a release from the grave. But now, thank God, the work is accomplished. Jesus says—"I am he that was dead, and am alive; yea, and am alive forevermore, and I have the keys of death and hell." Christ, then, has the power in his own hands; and in his own good time he can unlock the prison-house and bid the sleepers rise. Some suppose that the devil has the power now. I think not. He did have it until he lost it by Christ, who went into, and came out of the grave. To illustrate. Suppose I have a casket of jewels, and by some means one of you get the key. Who, I ask, has the power of the casket? Key, signifies power; therefore, the one having the key has the power. The devil for 4000 years deposited his jewels in the casket; then Christ came, who was deposited with the rest, but on the third day he broke the bars, took the keys, or power, from the devil, so that for the last 1800 years Christ has had the power in his own hands, and will ere long use that power and bring up the sleeping ones. Our fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, companions, children, and friends, will not always lie beneath the clods of the valley, but they will come forth (those that have fallen asleep in Jesus), blooming in immortal beauty. Lord, hasten the time!

And now the question no doubt arises in the mind, at what time will this be, and what will be the manner of his getting the inheritance? In Dan. 7: we learn, that it is not before the end, for he says—"I saw in the night visions, and behold one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed."—Here we learn that it is when Jesus comes in the clouds of heaven, that he comes to his Father, attended by his angels, and he asks and receives at his hands a dominion and a kingdom.

Mark, the dominion given to Adam passed away, it was taken from him; but the dominion given to the second Adam—the Lord Jesus Christ, is never to pass away. The prophet Micah declares in language like this—"O tower of the flock . . . . . unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion."

The first dominion we see was given to Adam and lost; the same dominion must come back to Christ, the great Shepherd or tower of the flock. Christ has promised a kingdom to his followers, for he says—"I appoint unto you a kingdom. This kingdom, we learn, was established at the foundation of the world, for "when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them" &c. Then he will say to them on his right hand,—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." What kingdom was established at the foundation of the world?—Certainly none but the earth, given to our first parents: and had they continued in their first state of innocence there would have been no cause for this great work to have been done, but the earth would have retained all its primeval beauty.

Adam lost the kingdom and it was destroyed, so to speak; but when it comes into the hands of Christ, it will never be destroyed. But will God's plan be frustrated, and a sort of a spiritual kingdom only be established! I think not.

But to make it still plainer, let us look at the parable of Christ, in Mat. 13.—Here Christ declares, "The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man that sowed good seed in his field; but while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat." And when the servants enquire if they shall root up the tares, the answer is, "Let both grow together until the harvest; and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn.

Now, when Jesus explains this parable, he says,—"He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man. The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one; the enemy that sowed them is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world, and the reapers are the angels. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the end of this world. The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear let him hear."

There is something in this parable worthy of our consideration. First, let me remark, many have claimed that the tares were in the church, but this is not the case, for the tares are in the field, and the field is the world, not the church. The church of God is one and pure; all that enter this fold and belong to it must come in by the door, which is Christ, and he will not admit any but the pure; consequently the church is free from tares although there are those prophesying to be in the Church of God that have climbed up some other way and are theives and robbers. None but believers belong to the true church of Christ. But the tares are in the world among the children of the kingdom, and will remain so until the end of the world.

Where is the temporal Mellennium?—There is none. Wicked men will be here until the final conflagration, then, like the tares, they are to be burned up. Furthermore, Christ says that, as the tares are to be gathered out of the field, so Christ will send his angels and gather out of his kingdom all things that offend and them which do iniquity.

So you see, plainly that this earth, the world, is to be the kingdom of Christ, and the children of the kingdom are to shine forth in this kingdom which is to be the earth purified. First, he asks the Father, and the wicked are given into his hands; and then he commences the work that the Father informs him he should do, (viz.,) "Rule them with a rod of iron and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." This he will do as we learn from other scriptures. Ps. 72: "Give the king thy judgments, O God, and thy righteousness unto the king's son. He shall judge thy people with righteousness, and thy poor with judgment. The mountains shall bring peace to the people and the little hills, by righteousness. He shall judge the poor of the people, he shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor. . . . He shall have dominion also from sea to sea and from the river unto the ends of the earth. They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him, and his enemies shall lick the dust." The same thing is taught here as in our text. He will break in pieces all his foes.

Although Satan triumphed at first, over the first Adam, and has tried to triumph over the second Adam but has not succeeded, he will yet try once more to conquer the King of Kings and Lord of Lords, and will then fall a victim into the hands of him who is to rule. John the Revelator describes Jesus as coming on a white horse, and the armies of heaven following him on white horses; while Satan and his hosts make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb overcomes them. He shall smite the nations with a sharp sword that proceedeth out of his mouth, (which sword is his word. The sword of the Spirit is the word of God. Eph. 6; 17. The word is a sharp two-edged sword. Heb. 4: 12,) and they must yield to him as their conqueror. Yes, he conquers. He has a name upon his thigh written, "King of Kings and Lord of Lords." Hence, kings must now yield to his sceptre and lords bow before him; and a voice will proclaim the glad news that "the kingdoms of this world have become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ."

For the Crisis.

The true Israel of the New Testament.

BY Z. CAMPBELL.

NUMBER I.

Concerning the true Israel of God, there are two opinions; one is, that Israel always means the truly faithful servant of God, of all nations, without any particular regard to the literal children of Jacob. The other is, that Israel always means the literal seed of Jacob, irrespective of religious character. That the latter is the meaning of the term in the Old Testament, cannot be reasonably doubted. But some, who admit this, maintain that in the New Testament, the term always means the righteous only. Now there is but one way to settle the question, and that is, to let the New Testament speak for itself.

We, therefore, propose to examine the New Testament and learn how the term Israel is used, and how it is contrasted with the Gentile.

The first time the word Israel occurs in the New Testament, is Matt. 2: 6, "And thou, Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda; for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule (margin, feed,) my people Israel." This text was cited to Herod, by the chief priests and scribes, to prove where Christ should be born. But the original, Micah, 5 : 2, also proves, that the Governor that was to come out of Juda, was to "rule my people Israel," the Israel of the Old Testament. If the birth of Jesus fulfilled Micah 5 : 2, as to birthplace, he must actually fulfil the other—"rule my people Israel," as understood by Micah.

But the first time the Old Testament Israel are referred to in the New is Matt. 1 : 21. The angel of the Lord said to Joseph, concerning Mary—"And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." Now Christ said he and the Father were one; therefore, the people of God, and the people of his Son, are one; and the people of God, according to Micah 5 : 2, are his Israel—"rule my people Israel." So the text in Matt. 1 : 21, the last clause of it, evidently means "for he shall save Israel from their sins." So the first announcement made of Jesus in Matt. is that he shall save the Israel of the Old Testament, even that sinning Israel, and more especially the lost sheep of them, as we shall show hereafter.

We pass to Matt. 2 : 2. The wise men from the East came to Jerusalem to seek the young child, "Saying, where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the East, and are come to worship him." They were "wise men;" and having read Num. 24 : 17, "there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel," and having seen his star, they immediately set off to find, and worship the young "King of the Jews."

What Jews, says one? Why the Jews which the Star came out of, and the seed of Jacob as understood by Balaam, who wrote, that there should "come a Star out of Jacob." The same Jews, or Israel, whom Balak hired Balaam to curse; and the same he could not, even for Balak's house full of silver and gold, because God had blessed them. These, the literal house of Jacob, were the Jews, whose King the wise men came to worship. Thus far, we have the direct testimony of inspiration that Israel, in the New Testament, are the literal seed. And if we should fail to prove it so clearly in every instance, still, it will fall on our opponents to find an instance in the New Testament, in which the term Israel is used to denote any other people than the literal seed of Jacob.

We pass on to Matt. 8 : 10. "Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no not in Israel." Jesus spake this concerning a centurion, but whether he was a Jew or Gentile, we are not informed; but from his title, he was, most probably a Roman captain, but had more faith than was common to an Israelite, from which may be inferred that he was not an Israelite. But be that as it may, Christ made a distinction between those he called Israel, and Gentiles, irrespective of their faith. This is plainly seen in Matt. 10 : 5, 6. "Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not; but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel."

"Lost sheep" is not a term that our Savior originated; it occurs in the prophets of the Old Testament, and to that alone we are to look for its meaning. And we find that when Israel, the literal seed of Jacob strayed away from God they were represented as "lost sheep," "scattered sheep" "stray sheep," sheep "without a shepherd," &c. Now, in the command given to the apostles, to go not to the Gentiles, but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, Christ evidently used the phrase "lost sheep" in the Old Testament sense, and in the same sense the word Israel. By lost sheep, he could not mean rebellious Gentiles, for he told them not to go among the Gentiles. But is is evident that Israel as a nation, were privileged with the first and exclusive offer of the kingdom, and to this end the Apostles were first sent; but after the Jews rejected the offer, it was extended to the Gentiles, and commission was then given,—"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Mark 16 : 15.

In giving the first command, limited to the house of Israel, no one can fail to see that Christ kept up the Old Testament national distinction, between Israel and Gentile, irrespective of faith. If this distinction has ever been done away, out of Christ, we should like to know when and where and how. We admit it is done away, or rather never existed, in Christ; for in Christ, there is neither Jew nor Greek, bond or free, male or female. But Gentiles out of Christ, Christ calls Gentiles, and Israelites out of Christ, he still calls Israel, even the lost sheep, the wicked Israelites, he calls Israel, and no man has a right to dispute him.

In this sense the word Gentile is used in Matt. 12: 18. "I will put my spirit upon him and he shall show judgment to the Gentiles." Ver. 21. "And in his name shall the Gentiles trust." This is the Old Testament sense of Gentiles, cited from Isa. 42.

A certain woman of Canaan next claims attention. This woman came to Christ, begging for mercy, and pleading in behalf of her afflicted daughter; and his disciples besought him to send her away. And he said "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Then came she and worshipped him, saying, Lord, help me! But he answered and said, it is not meet to take the children's bread and to cast it to dogs. And she said truth, Lord; yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from the master's table. Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt."

How any one can read this pathetic narrative, and then tell us there is no Israel but the true and faithful believer, is a mystery. This faithful Gentile worshipper of Jesus, not only submitted to be called a dog; but humbly took a dog's place, and begged a dog's part of the children's bread; and Christ, though he blessed her, would not own her as one of his Israel, notwithstanding she had all the qualifications in a superlative degree, of what some call a spiritual Israelite.

Let it be understood from henceforth that what some call a spiritual, or "true Israel," is but a dog in our Savior's estimation. Matt. 15 : 22–28.

The promise of our Savior to his apostles will now claim attention. "Verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, (literally, renovation, renewing, or restitution,) when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Matt. 19 : 28.

In connection with this promise, Isaiah prophesied,—"And I will turn my hand upon thee, and freely purge away thy dross, and take away thy tin. And I will restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellor as at the beginning. Afterwards, thou shalt be called the city of righteousness, the faithful city." "And I will restore thy judges as at the first." It is evident that in the twelve apostles, this part of the prophesy will be fulfilled. And first, because the apostles are to sit on thrones, and become judges of Israel in the future, in the renovation, or restitution; and also "when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory;" and that is—"when the Son of man shall come in all his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit on the throne of his glory; then his apostles will sit on thrones, and then will be restored the judges of Israel as at the first. The Israel then, that the apostles are to judge, are the same Israel as at the first.

Second. The prophecy of Isa. 1 : 26, 27, refers to the [illegible] the apostles are [illegible]

Third. When the [illegible] children asked [illegible] one of her sons should [illegible] hand and the other on his left [illegible] dom, he replied: [illegible] but it shall be given [illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. | BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1856. | WHOLE NO. 68. VOL. IV.

The World's Crisis, IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Meditations.

BY C. H. FULLER.

"Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my Redeemer." Ps. 19 : 14.

Though straiter and narrower grows the way, I am persuaded that the days of our sojourning are almost ended. Though fiercer rages the conflict, I know that it is almost over. Though darker grows the night, and thicker settles the battle-cloud gloomily around us, the brilliant dawn of glory's morning approaches. "The Sun of Righteousness" will soon arise and gladden with his beams the hearts of the faithful.

Already beneath the fringed cloud of gathering wrath serenely shines the blessed day-star of promise, and waiting ones beholding it, rejoicingly thank God and take courage.

Though the enemy's ranks are multiplied, though they are waxed strong in wrath, the day of their overthrow approacheth, for to the Captain of our salvation shall victory be given; to the tower of the flock shall come the first dominion; the rightful heir shall soon declare his power upon the earth, he shall take the throne of his father David, he shall reign in righteousness, and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

"Then Peace shall wave her sceptre high
And Love's fair banner greet the eye."

Then shall resplendent glory sit enthroned with liberated nature upon the placid lake, and in the purling rill, upon the lofty mountain's brow, and in the lowly vale; upon the prairie's wide extent and in the woodland glade; by the brooklet's side; in the deep ravine; on the mossy knoll or beetling cliff: in rural grot or shady dell, and through the cave's deep recesses, and on the desert's trackless wild shall eternal sunlight gleam.

"Weeping streams" shall cease their sorrowing and "murmuring brooks" forget their plaintive songs. The gentle sephyrs sigh no more but whisper to us now in tones of joy. Yea, "the mountains and the hills break forth before us into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clasp their hands." Forth from that "new heaven" there looks no threatening frown, no lowering cloud of gloom, no omens dire of woes to come, but in those azure depths serene, are seen reflected the radiant smiles of earth redeemed as she triumphantly wheels her onward course.

No darksome wilds, or dismal shades; no scorching heat, or wintry blast; no booming thunder, or dread simoon; no furious hurricane, or earthquake shock, shall there be known. No wasted forms on couches lie to wait grim death's approach. No traveler worn with woes he long has borne, goes plodding down those blissful vales. No remembrance there of ills that were, no sorrowing for "dear departed joys" that may never more return; for the present, the joyful, glorious, eternal present is an enduring reward, a satisfying pleasure at which ten thousand life-times of suffering sink into insignificance.

O glorious thought! O blissful, ecstatic vision of delight! O home, most blessed! And art thou mine? Is Jesus mine elder brother?

And will he welcome to those everlasting mansions one so unworthy as I?

Shall I, so doubtful, fearful, be able to stand amid the unveiled glory of the Eternal?

Shall I, who have been so long disobedient to the will of my Heavenly Father, and done so little to his glory be accounted worthy to join in those anthems of praise to our Redeemer?

Shall I behold His face in righteousness?

'T is even this my heart wisheth and even this my soul seeketh.

I am lonely and sigh for the sweet companionship of those bright immortals. I am weary and would repose beneath those pendent shades. I am tired and tempted, and long for that resplendent morning of glad release. I am sick of this mortal life, with its strifes and cares and worthless toys; its doubts and fears, and failing hopes; its ills and griefs and transient good; its sinful joys, and pain, and death. Yes, I am sick, and fain would quaff immortal health from life's healing fountain.

Hasten, O hasten, Lord, our only deliverance! Let thy wide-spreading kingdom in all its untold glory arise! Cleanse the robes of ALL thy saints from spot or stain; then O Lord, bid them look up from toil, from bondage, from pain, from sorrow, from dangerous journeyings by sea and land, from persecutions and trials among false brethren, from scourgings and imprisonment, and from the bewildering temptations and cares of this life, to behold in bright reality the joy, the peace, the beauty, the glory, the life, the land, the home, the LORD which they so long have seen by faith.

See, Lord, is not the harvest even now fully ripe? Behold the wicked scoffer strengtheneth himself because our hope still tarrieth, and the faithful ones are growing fewer. Almighty Lord! vouchsafe thine aid; so gently, safely guide and uphold us by thine own right hand, that we, though the waves run mountain high, still grasping thine out-stretching, all-powerful arm, may fearlessly and surely walk these troubled waters, nor tire till our feet shall press the soil of Eden's grounds.

In the name of Jesus, Father, so let it be! Amen!

Cheshire, Mass., Nov. 4, '56.

For the Crisis.

Chrits's Inheritance.

BY G. L. TEEPLE.

No. II.

Thus, you see, before Christ's resurrection there was no hope of a release from the grave. But now, thank God, the work is accomplished. Jesus says—"I am he that was dead, and am alive; yea, and am alive forevermore, and I have the keys of death and hell." Christ, then, has the power in his own hands; and in his own good time he can unlock the prison-house and bid the sleepers rise. Some suppose that the devil has the power now. I think not. He did have it until he lost it by Christ, who went into, and came out of the grave. To illustrate. Suppose I have a casket of jewels, and by some means one of you get the key. Who, I ask, has the power of the casket? Key, signifies power; therefore, the one having the key has the power. The devil for 4000 years deposited his jewels in the casket; then Christ came, who was deposited with the rest, but on the third day he broke the bars, took the keys, or power, from the devil, so that for the last 1800 years Christ has had the power in his own hands, and will ere long use that power and bring up the sleeping ones. Our fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, companions, children, and friends, will not always lie beneath the clods of the valley, but they will come forth (those that have fallen asleep in Jesus), blooming in immortal beauty. Lord, hasten the time!

And now the question no doubt arises in the mind, at what time will this be, and what will be the manner of his getting the inheritance? In Dan. 7: we learn, that it is not before the end, for he says—"I saw in the night visions, and behold one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed."—Here we learn that it is when Jesus comes in the clouds of heaven, that he comes to his Father, attended by his angels, and he asks and receives at his hands a dominion and a kingdom.

Mark, the dominion given to Adam passed away, it was taken from him; but the dominion given to the second Adam—the Lord Jesus Christ, is never to pass away. The prophet Micah declares in language like this—"O tower of the flock . . . . . unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion."

The first dominion we see was given to Adam and lost; the same dominion must come back to Christ, the great Shepherd or tower of the flock. Christ has promised a kingdom to his followers, for he says—"I appoint unto you a kingdom. This kingdom, we learn, was established at the foundation of the world, for "when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them" &c. Then he will say to them on his right hand,—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." What kingdom was established at the foundation of the world?—Certainly none but the earth, given to our first parents: and had they continued in their first state of innocence there would have been no cause for this great work to have been done, but the earth would have retained all its primeval beauty.

Adam lost the kingdom and it was destroyed, so to speak; but when it comes into the hands of Christ, it will never be destroyed. But will God's plan be frustrated, and a sort of a spiritual kingdom only be established! I think not.

But to make it still plainer, let us look at the parable of Christ, in Mat. 13.—Here Christ declares, "The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man that sowed good seed in his field; but while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat." And when the servants enquire if they shall root up the tares, the answer is, "Let both grow together until the harvest; and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn.

Now, when Jesus explains this parable, he says,—"He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man. The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one; the enemy that sowed them is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world, and the reapers are the angels. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the end of this world. The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear let him hear."

There is something in this parable worthy of our consideration. First, let me remark, many have claimed that the tares were in the church, but this is not the case, for the tares are in the field, and the field is the world, not the church. The church of God is one and pure; all that enter this fold and belong to it must come in by the door, which is Christ, and he will not admit any but the pure; consequently the church is free from tares although there are those prophesying to be in the Church of God that have climbed up some other way and are theives and robbers. None but believers belong to the true church of Christ. But the tares are in the world among the children of the kingdom, and will remain so until the end of the world.

Where is the temporal Mellennium?—There is none. Wicked men will be here until the final conflagration, then, like the tares, they are to be burned up. Furthermore, Christ says that, as the tares are to be gathered out of the field, so Christ will send his angels and gather out of his kingdom all things that offend and them which do iniquity.

So you see plainly that this earth, the world, is to be the kingdom of Christ, and the children of the kingdom are to shine forth in this kingdom which is to be the earth purified. First, he asks the Father, and the wicked are given into his hands; and then he commences the work that the Father informs him he should do, (viz.,) "Rule them with a rod of iron and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." This he will do as we learn from other scriptures. Ps. 72: "Give the king thy judgments, O God, and thy righteousness unto the king's son. He shall judge thy people with righteousness, and thy poor with judgment. The mountains shall bring peace to the people and the little hills, by righteousness. He shall judge the poor of the people, he shall save the children of the needy, and shall break in pieces the oppressor. . . . He shall have dominion also from sea to sea and from the river unto the ends of the earth. They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him, and his enemies shall lick the dust." The same thing is taught here as in our text. He will break in pieces all his foes.

Although Satan triumphed at first, over the first Adam, and has tried to triumph over the second Adam but has not succeeded, he will yet try once more to conquer the King of Kings and Lord of Lords, and will then fall a victim into the hands of him who is to rule. John the Revelator describes Jesus as coming on a white horse, and the armies of heaven following him on white horses; while Satan and his hosts make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb overcomes them. He shall smite the nations with a sharp sword that proceedeth out of his mouth, (which sword is his word. The sword of the Spirit is the word of God. Eph. 6; 17. The word is a sharp two-edged sword. Heb. 4 : 12,) and they must yield to him as their conqueror. Yes, he conquers. He has a name upon his thigh written, "King of Kings and Lord of Lords." Hence, kings must now yield to his sceptre and lords bow before him; and a voice will proclaim the glad news that "the kingdoms of this world have become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ."

For the Crisis.

The true Israel of the New Testament.

BY Z. CAMPBELL.

NUMBER I.

Concerning the true Israel of God, there are two opinions; one is, that Israel always means the truly faithful servant of God, of all nations, without any particular regard to the literal children of Jacob. The other is, that Israel always means the literal seed of Jacob, irrespective of religious character. That the latter is the meaning of the term in the Old Testament, cannot be reasonably doubted. But some, who admit this, maintain that in the New Testament, the term always means the righteous only. Now there is but one way to settle the question, and that is, to let the New Testament speak for itself.

We, therefore, propose to examine the New Testament and learn how the term Israel is used, and how it is contrasted with the Gentile.

The first time the word Israel occurs in the New Testament, is Matt. 2: 6, "And thou, Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda; for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule (margin, feed,) my people Israel." This text was cited to Herod, by the chief priests and scribes, to prove where Christ should be born. But the original, Micah, 5 : 2, also proves, that the Governor that was to come out of Juda, was to "rule my people Israel," the Israel of the Old Testament. If the birth of Jesus fulfilled Micah 5 : 2, as to birthplace, he must actually fulfil the other—"rule my people Israel," as understood by Micah.

But the first time the Old Testament Israel are referred to in the New is Matt. 1 : 21. The angel of the Lord said to Joseph, concerning Mary—"And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." Now Christ said he and the Father were one; therefore, the people of God, and the people of his Son, are one; and the people of God, according to Micah 5 : 2, are his Israel—"rule my people Israel." So the text in Matt. 1 : 21, the last clause of it, evidently means "for he shall save Israel from their sins." So the first announcement made of Jesus in Matt. is that he shall save the Israel of the Old Testament, even that sinning Israel, and more especially the lost sheep of them, as we shall show hereafter.

We pass to Matt. 2 : 2. The wise men from the East came to Jerusalem to seek the young child, "Saying, where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the East, and are come to worship him." They were "wise men;" and having read Num. 24: 17, "there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel," and having seen his star, they immediately set off to find, and worship the young "King of the Jews."

What Jews, says one? Why the Jews which the Star came out of, and the seed of Jacob as understood by Balaam, who wrote, that there should "come a Star out of Jacob." The same Jews, or Israel, whom Balak hired Balaam to curse; and the same he could not, even for Balak's house full of silver and gold, because God had blessed them. These, the literal house of Jacob, were the Jews, whose King the wise men came to worship. Thus far, we have the direct testimony of inspiration that Israel, in the New Testament, are the literal seed. And if we should fail to prove it so clearly in every instance, still, it will fall on our opponents to find an instance in the New Testament, in which the term Israel is used to denote any other people than the literal seed of Jacob.

We pass on to Matt. 8 : 10. "Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no not in Israel." Jesus spake this concerning a centurion, but whether he was a Jew or Gentile, we are not informed; but from his title, he was, most probably a Roman captain, but had more faith than was common to an Israelite, from which may be inferred that he was not an Israelite. But be that as it may, Christ made a distinction between those he called Israel, and Gentiles, irrespective of their faith. This is plainly seen in Matt. 10 : 5, 6. "Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not; but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel."

"Lost sheep" is not a term that our Savior originated; it occurs in the prophets of the Old Testament, and to that alone we are to look for its meaning. And we find that when Israel, the literal seed of Jacob strayed away from God they were represented as "lost sheep," "scattered sheep" "stray sheep," sheep "without a shepherd," &c. Now, in the command given to the apostles, to go not to the Gentiles, but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, Christ evidently used the phrase "lost sheep" in the Old Testament sense, and in the same sense the word Israel. By lost sheep, he could not mean rebellious Gentiles, for he told them not to go among the Gentiles. But is is evident that Israel as a nation, were privileged with the first and exclusive offer of the kingdom, and to this end the Apostles were first sent; but after the Jews rejected the offer, it was extended to the Gentiles; the commission was then given,—"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Mark 16 : 15.

In giving the first command, limited to the house of Israel, no one can fail to see that Christ kept up the Old Testament national distinction, between Israel and Gentile, irrespective of faith. If this distinction has ever been done away, out of Christ, we should like to know when and where and how. We admit it is done away, or rather never existed, in Christ; for in Christ, there is neither Jew nor Greek, bond or free, male or female. But Gentiles out of Christ, Christ calls Gentiles, and Israelites out of Christ, he still calls Israel, even the lost sheep, the wicked Israelites, he calls Israel, and no man has a right to dispute him.

In this sense the word Gentile is used in Matt. 12: 18. "I will put my spirit upon him and he shall show judgment to the Gentiles." Ver. 21. "And in his name shall the Gentiles trust." This is the Old Testament sense of Gentiles, cited from Isa. 42.

A certain woman of Canaan next claims attention. This woman came to Christ, begging for mercy, and pleading in behalf of her afflicted daughter; and his disciples besought him to send her away. And he said "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Then came she and worshipped him, saying, Lord, help me! But he answered and said, it is not meet to take the children's bread and to cast it to dogs. And she said truth, Lord; yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from the master's table. Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt."

How any one can read this pathetic narrative, and then tell us there is no Israel but the true and faithful believer, is a mystery. This faithful Gentile worshiper of Jesus, not only submitted to be called a dog; but humbly took a dog's place, and begged a dog's part of the children's bread; and Christ, though he blessed her, would not own her as one of his Israel, notwithstanding she had all the qualifications in a superlative degree, of what some call a spiritual Israelite.

Let it be understood from henceforth that what some call a spiritual, or "true Israel," is but a dog in our Savior's estimation. Matt. 15: 22–28.

The promise of our Savior to his apostles will now claim attention. "Verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, (literally, renovation, renewing, or restitution,) when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Matt. 19: 28.

In connection with this promise, Isaiah prophesied,—"And I will turn my hand upon thee, and freely purge away thy dross, and take away thy tin. And I will restore thy judges as at the first, and thy counsellor as at the beginning. Afterwards, thou shalt be called the city of righteousness, the faithful city." "And I will restore thy judges as at the first." It is evident that in the twelve apostles, this part of the prophesy will be fulfilled. And first, because the apostles are to sit on thrones, and become judges of Israel in the future, in the renovation, or restitution; and also "when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory;" and that is—"when the Son of man shall come in all his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit on the throne of his glory; then his apostles will sit on thrones, and then will be restored the judges of Israel as at the first. The Israel then, that the apostles are to judge, are the same Israel as at the first.

Second. The prophecy of Isa. 1: 26, 27, refers to the [illegible] apostles are [illegible]

Third. When the [illegible] children asked [illegible] one of her sons should sit on his right hand and the other on his left in his kingdom, he replied: [illegible] but it shall be given [illegible] is prepared of my Father." Why had he the power to give his apostles seat on thrones, and no power to grant the woman her request? It seems evident that the Father had decreed that Israel's judges should be restored in the renovation, and revealed to Christ, that in his apostles they should be restored, hence his power to bestow this high honor on them; but the Father had not decreed that Zebedee's sons should sit on his right and left hand in his kingdom; there was no previous prophecy to that effect, so Christ had no power to grant that request.

Matt. 27: 37. "And set up over his head his accusation written, THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS."

The wise men worshiped him, at his birth, as King of the literal Jews, as we have shown; and here, at his death, he is publicly styled King of the Jews, and unless it can be shown that the earth brought forth a new kind of Jews, between his birth and death, he died King of the literal Jews, at least prospectively.

It is evident the literal Jews did not believe that Christ was their Messiah: but at the same time they understood the fact that Messiah was to be their King. This is evident from several passages in Mark 15: 12. "And Pilate answered and said again unto them, what will ye then that I shall do unto him whom ye call the King of the Jews?" 18th ver. "And began to salute him, Hail, King of the Jews!" 32d ver. "Let Christ the King of Israel descend now from the cross, that we may see and believe." Up to this time, nothing was known of a spiritual Israel.

We pass on to Luke 1: 32, 33. "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his Father David. And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever."

Of this same Son it is written in Isa. 9: 7, "Upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever." Facts are always consistent with themselves, and in this case, the facts are these. Christ is the son of David by natural descent; he is promised David's literal throne, and government, and David's literal subjects; the house of Jacob; the same Jacob that David reigned over; indeed there is no other Jacob known in the Bible, from Gen. to Rev. It would be singularly out of harmony to say a king must take the throne of France to reign over the Chinese. So if Christ is to reign over the house of a spiritual Jacob, he must take a spiritual David's spiritual throne, and spiritual kingdom; and we shall, indeed, have a "sky kingdom."

Now listen to the prophecy of Zacharias,—Luke 1: 67–75. "And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying; blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for he hath visited and redeemed his people, and hath raised up a horn of salvation for us, in the house of his servant David, as he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began; that we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us; to perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant, the oath which he sware to our father Abraham, that he would grant unto us, that we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life."

In this New Testament prophecy, we have the following facts:

1st. That the Lord God of Israel hath visited and redeemed his people Israel, prospectively; for it is a prophecy of the future.

2d. His people are the literal Jews, as already shown.

3d. This is as God spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began. These old prophets all spake of the redemption of the literal Israel, for they knew no other. This was the mystery—"Which in other ages was not made known to the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the spirit,—that the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel." Eph. 3. This mystery was not known to Zacharias, for he prophesied before Christ was born, and before the apostles were called, and it was Christ and his apostles who first revealed the mystery.

4th. "That he would grant unto us, that we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, (the we and us are the true, Old Testament Israel, spoken of by all the old prophets,) might serve him without fear, all the days of our life." All the days of our life cannot mean the immortal life, it is all the days of the natural life of Israel, as spoken by the mouth of the old prophets. This is to be after God has redeemed them.

We only need to add that Zacharias spake this by the Holy Ghost; and said it was as God "spake by his holy prophets, which have been since the world began." Now we should be careful and not lie unto the Holy Ghost; but if we say the Israel, spoken of in the above prophecy, is not the Israel spoken of by the Old Testament, we do give the lie to the Holy Ghost, and we might as well say, the child referred to, was not the one spoken of by the old prophets.

To this agree also the words of Simeon, who also spake by the spirit concerning the young child Jesus. "A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel." He, by the Holy Spirit, recognized the Old Testament distinction between Israel and Gentile. And again, he said; "This child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel." Many of the literal seed of Israel did fall over the said child, and the same many will rise in him.

So says Simeon, by the Holy Spirit. He could not mean a spiritual Israel, for the so-called spiritual Israel believed on him and fell not.

From a few texts in John, we may learn who the Jews are, in the New Testament sense. "His disciples say unto him, Master, the Jews of late sought to stone thee, and goest thou thither again?" A strange kind of spiritual Jews, to undertake to stone their Lord and Master! "And the Jews' passover was nigh at hand." John 11: 8, 55; 12: 9, 13; 13: 33; 19: 14, 15, 19.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 17, 1856.

Christian Union.

NUMBER IV.

We have endeavored to show—

1. The importance of Christian union.

2. That Christian character is the true test of Christian fellowship.

3. That christian love is an essential element in christian character.

We now inquire what are the fruits of christian love, or how is it developed?

In answering this question, for the purpose of making the point plainer, we will contrast the fruits of love with those of hate. We have always noticed that hatred leads one to speak of the faults instead of the good qualities of an individual; and to place the former in the fore ground of the picture that they may first attract the attention of the observer, instead of trying to conceal them from the public gaze; also, that the hater shows a satisfaction when he discovers a blemish in the character of the one he hates; and on the contrary looks sad when a moral stain is wiped off from the object of dislike. When an action or word may be caused by one of two motives, one of which is good and the other bad, he at once seizes upon the latter, and forms his conclusions from that stand-point.

We seldom hear one who has hatred speaking of the good qualities of the one he hates. In short, he is but pleased when the faults of the proscribed are most conspicuous, and his virtues most obscured.

Ques. Has the reader such feelings toward any one? If so, the peace of God does not rule in thy heart. "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer; and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." 1 John 3: 15.

Let us look a few moments at the fruits of love, and ask ourselves if we manifest them to all with whom we associate.

"Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law." Rom. 13: 10. It follows then, according to this Scripture, that if we knowingly do anything to injure our neighbor, it is evident we do not love him. We have ever observed that when a mother loves her son, though he be wayward, she does not take satisfaction in speaking of his faults, but delights in making known all his good qualities. She sorrows when she hears of his mistakes, and grieves still more when they are scattered through the community.

We have never known the husband to entertain his neighbors with an account of the faults of his wife, so long as he loved her; but when he had broken his plighted vows, and become an alien to domestic joys, and changed his love to one of hatred, then he can talk of her failings with a fiendish relish.

Let us not forget "that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us;" that "if any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his;" and that "the fruit of the spirit is love."

When we hear a professed child of Jesus discoursing upon the misdeeds of his brother in Christ, or any other one, (unless it be to guard some one from being led astray,) we at once conclude he is deficient in love which is an essential element in christian character, and deserves a rebuke from those with whom he is associated.

For the Crisis.

"What is that to Thee?"

BY H. L. H.

If the Papal theory were correct, and if Peter was the divinely-appointed head and overseer of all the apostles of Christ, we should find it difficult to account for such a remark as this. In that case it were perfectly appropriate that he should say, "And what shall this man do?" If, like his pretended successors, it was his province to mind everybody's business except his own, nothing could be more pertinent than such inquiries as to the duties and obligations of others. But this was not the case, and the master's reply was of such a nature as to convince him of the fact. "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to THEE? follow THOU me."

This answer was probably intended as a cure for that officiousness which entered somewhat largely into the character of this eminent apostle of Jesus Christ. It's perfect propriety under the circumstances was most manifest. Peter had formerly boasted of his remarkable steadfastness in the cause of Christ, saying, "Though all men forsake thee, yet will not I." He had subsequently rashly wounded a servant of the High Priest. He afterward forsook Christ and fled—then he followed Christ afar off—then he associated with the servants—then he denied Christ. Then he cursed and swore—then he wept bitterly—then he came to the sepulchre with John, to see whether Jesus was risen—afterwards Jesus had talked with him, had received from him reiterated assurances of his love—had restored him to his favor and appointed him to feed his sheep and his lambs, and had foretold his future martyrdom for Jesus' sake; and then, as if presuming on his restoration to favor again, he said,—"And what shall this man do?" The answer was pointed—"What is that to THEE? follow thou ME." Jesus would not tolerate a meddlesome disposition in the apostle Peter. He will no more tolerate it in you, or in me.

We are prone to fall into this error. We find it easier to tell twenty men what to do, than to be one of the twenty to go and do it. We find it much easier to give good advice, than to set good examples. Hence, we think ourselves peculiarly qualified for the work of minding our neighbors' business, albeit facts may give painful demonstration that we know not how to mind our own. So then, instead of inquiring with Paul,—"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" we inquire,—"And what shall this man do?" Thus we watch his delinquences and forget our own. Thus, while narrowly observing his deviations from the path of rectitude, we fall headlong into the ditch ourselves!

Christian, let us remember that our duty is to mind our own business. Nothing else will answer, and our Master's reply to all of our undue anxiety over the affairs of others is,—"What is that to thee?" And his requirement of each of us is—"Follow thou me." Let us heed his voice. Let us give ear to his words. Let us obey his requirements. And whenever allured towards forbidden paths let us listen to that gracious and impressive admonition—"What is that to thee? follow thou me." God help us to do this, and save us evermore. Amen.

Dec. 4, '56.

For the Crisis.

"Repent and be Converted."

BY H PRATT.

No. I.

This is the language of inspiration, not merely to those who first witnessed the descent of the Spirit, but to all who are out of the pathway of the just. Repentance is necessary to prepare our hearts for a change of action, and nothing but penitence will enable us to turn from a course of sin, to that of holy obedience.

When we are convinced of our sinful course, and that it leads to death, the inquiry is at once raised—"What shall I do to be saved?" And the answer is at hand, "be converted," or, in other words, turn into the path of the Just.

Conversion is no more nor less than a change of course or action. Now, as conversion is simply to change, or to turn, the question arises, can a person who has turned into the right path ever get away from, or lose it again?

To answer this question understandingly, it will be necessary to ascertain which is the right path or way. Jesus says, "I am the way, the truth, and the life." Now as Christ is the "way," or "vine," how can we be turned, or grafted into it? By being converted. How can we be converted?—By the law of God. This is able to make us wise unto salvation, or, to turn us into the right path. It is the guide-board to the promised land.

The Psalmist says, "The law of God is perfect, converting the soul."

Now—"if ye abide in me," (the vine, or path,) implies a liability to get out. And again; "If ye continue in my word,—(the path,) then are ye my disciples indeed."—Therefore, it avails us nothing to get in the right way unless we keep in it. To profess hope in Christ because we were converted, or turned into the right way twenty years ago, and have been out ever since, would be like persons upon a wrecked ship hoping that they were being drifted right, because they had started right from harbor, six months before. A person who will urge that there is no possibility of getting out of the way after having once been in it, needs converting just as much as a sinner, for he has erred from the truth, and if any one converts him he saves a soul from death.

It needs a specific truth for every phase of the church just as much as it does a particular guide board at every corner where there is a branching-off road.

To illustrate this, we take the case of Adam and Eve. They were in the path, but they needed the law of God to keep them there, as much as the sinner does to direct him into it: and had they suffered the law of God to direct or convert them, concerning the tree of knowledge, they had not been driven from their Eden-home to suffer misery and death. Yet this command to them has no more to do in converting or directing us here, than one of our guide-boards would, when removed from its proper place and borne off in any direction by the traveler.

The guide for Adam was—"But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Here then was the direction for them; the guide-post on which it was placed was in the garden of Eden, and nowhere else. The penalty for not following its direction was death.

If Adam had been converted by this law of God, and continued in the path of obedience, he would have saved his own life—the life of millions of the human race—the life of the Son of God—a world of goodness and beauty from the curse of God, and its inhabitants from his indignation.

Wales, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Conversations Between a Brother and Sister.

BY JULIA A. FERRIS.

No. I.

Bro.—I am very happy to see you, after so long a separation, but must say I regret to learn that you have become an Adventist.

Sr.—You ought not to regret that I have had the moral courage to become unpopular, since your own church, in the days of Wesley and Fletcher, considered it a great virtue to be a "peculiar" people.

Bro.—It is not your unpopular position that I object to, but your anti-christian tenets.

Sr.—Anti-christian! Now, since you apply to us so broad an epithet, I think I have a right to demand that you shall investigate our doctrine and see whether the term will apply. I am ready to renounce any tenet as soon as it is proved to be antichristian. Will you now tell me what you consider to be the fundamental principles of an orthodox faith?

Bro.—Well, I consider, in the first place, the foundation principles of a sound christian faith, to be a belief in the holy Trinity. Now, since you are so sensitive about the word antichristian, will you be so good as to give me a clear and lucid definition of your views concerning the God-head, and see if I do not convict you of antichristian sentiments.

Sr.—I will endeavor to be as lucid as possible, but will say, in the first place, that the terms Trinity, and Triune God, are not scriptural, but merely scholastic terms, which our people never use. I believe in the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. The Father and Son I believe to be distinct beings, and the Holy Spirit, an emanation from God.

Bro.—Ah I thought so. Well; I thank God that I believe in one God, not TWO.

Sr.—So do I. I believe "there is none other God but one, for though there be that are called Gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many and lords many,) but to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him." 1 Cor. 8: 4—6.

You see the distinction Paul makes.—Well, you asked for a lucid definition. I cannot give a clearer idea than by an illustration. Suppose you stand before a large mirror: you see, reflected in that mirror the express image of your person." We call it seeing yourself in the glass. Now, suppose you had the power, by your "manifest word" to give life to that image of your person, and could impart to it "all the fullness" of your character, making it as exactly like yourself in character as it now is in person, and you will have another person, and yet it will be yourself.—This illustrates my idea of the Father and the Son. You see, I acknowledge the identity of both. The Holy Spirit, I believe to be an emanation from the Father and Son, (the same as the sunshine, from the natural sun,) and often, by a figure of speech, personated in scripture, as when we say of the sun, HE is setting, &c.

We will now consider the word antichrist. John gives us a mark by which we can distinguish this character. Will you tell me who John says is antichrist?

Bro.—I believe he says, "he is antichrist who denieth the Father and the Son."

Sr.—Certainly. Will you now tell me what you consider to be the antichrist of prophecy?

Bro.—I agree with all protestant commentators, that the antichrist of prophecy, is the Roman Catholic church; but whoever holds to antichristian tenets I believe, so far as they go, to be anti—(or opposed to) Christ.

Sr.—Precisely. I agree with you there. Will you now explain in what sense the Roman Catholic church denies the Father and the Son?

Bro.—I am not prepared at present.

Sr.—I am. Away back in the dark ages, she began to sing "three in one, and one in three;" introduced the terms "Trinity" and "Triune God," blending them into one; so as to destroy the distinct entity of each; and in that sense, and in no other, does that church deny the Father and the Son.

Bro.—Do you mean to say that the doctrine of the Trinity is a mark of antichrist?

Sr.—I do.

Bro.—You are really very uncharitable.

Sr.—I do not wish to be so, but as I have a principle of honesty, and as the title, antichristian, is proved to be not my property, I think common honesty requires, that I should carry it home to its lawful owners, and tell you, that if the Roman church is the antichrist of prophecy, then your darling doctrine of Holy Trinity is the very mark by which we are to distinguish this antichrist.

Will you tell me, before leaving the room, which you consider the next most important doctrine?

Bro.—I consider the doctrine of the atonement as next in importance, but cannot stay longer now to talk with you.

The Providence Convention.

[Continued.]

Elder Parks said, I do not see how the conclusion of our venerable and beloved brother Chapman can be avoided. It involves issues of great importance. If we decide the promise as belonging especially to Israel, no Gentile can be saved under it. Is it true that the natural descendants of Jacob constitute the only Israel of God? If so, Mr. President, you and I can never have inheritance in the kingdom of God. Our beloved brother Litch said, there are other promises which meet the state of the Gentiles; but is it not written, "the meek shall inherit the earth?" Is Palestine a part of the earth, sir? If so, the meek shall inherit it.

Elder Gates could not see that the brethren differed much; that difference was more in terms. He believed that God's promise included all believing Jews, and believing Gentiles in Christ. Still he could conceive a little difference in tracing God's covenant through Abraham. For instance there were specific promises to a certain part of Israel, and therefore he inclined to the view presented by Dr. Litch.

Elder Geo. W. Burnham said, it appears to me, if Gentile believers are fellow-heirs with Israelite believers, then they must inherit conjointly the land of promise. It is also said, "Ye are all one in Christ Jesus." I wish this point to be met.

Elder Fassett thought that we had the liberty not only to read the language defining the covenant in the Old Testament, but may seek for its explanation in the new, and expound the promises to Israel thereby.

Elder Howell said, I have said nothing as yet, respecting the exclusive right of Israel to Canaan. I would now say, that the territory to which reference has been made, is the kingdom of God. The question of territory reaches the subjects of the kingdom. It is agreed, that Abraham, by promise, had the land conferred upon him and his seed. I apprehend, the promise is misunderstood; and to prove it, the following scripture is generally quoted, "For the promise, that he should be heir of the world, was not to Abraham or his seed." The term "world" in this passage does not refer to territory, but people. Upon the authority of Dr. Cumming, this criticism is given.

The President remarked, that the original did not warrant such an interpretation, the meaning of kosmos being habitable globe.

Elder Howell continued; The kingdom of Israel embraced the territory of Palestine, and the kingdom was taken from literal Israel and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits of righteousness, and the nation that finally obtains the kingdom, is an elect people gathered out of every people. The grant to Abraham takes in Canaan; that is certain; there was no pledge or promise with limits, but what belongs to all believers.

Many others participated in the discussion of this question, creating considerable interest, and showing too, how Christians may differ in sentiment on secondary subjects, yet be courteous and kind.

On motion of Elder Pearson, the resolution was laid upon the table, and on motion of Elder Osler, the resolution on Cristian Union was taken therefrom. After a few remarks the Convention adjourned.

TUESDAY, P. M. SESSION.

The opening devotional services were conducted by Elder Brewer, after which the regular business was called up. Elder Grant thought that too much importance could not be attached to the resolution again before the Convention. Whatever is calculated to unite Christians is valuable—it is of God. Whatever is calculated to produce disunion is exceedingly injurious—it is indeed, bad. Ministers had caused much of the disunion, &c.; here, my brethren, is the place for union to take effect. It is as true now as ever, "like priest like people." I feel to co-operate in this great and good work. If I have said anything which may have caused the "love of any to wax cold," I am ready to make amends if it be possible. I fellowship all who love Jesus. If we fully adopt the platform of Christian union, we shall do well.

Elder Osler said, I am happy in being able to coincide with Elder Grant. It is my purpose to speak particularly on the true ground of union. We can only be united, as a people, by administering the discipline of the gospel, in individual cases of departure from Christian integrity; and discountenancing all divisions and offences contrary to the principles of the gospel of Christ.

Elder Geo. W. Burnham remarked, that in order to effect a union on a safe and righteous basis, we may be obliged to investigate some of the reasons of the existing divisions, and enforce Christian discipline, that the right be manifested and approved, and the wrong exposed and condemned.

Elder Pearson being called up by a special vote, made some remarks on the causes which produced the existing disunion, and gave what he deemed to be the only safe, just and permanent principles of Christian union.

After an exceedingly animated and profitable discussion on this important resolution, in which most of the members took a deeply interested part, it was with entire unanimity adopted. The Convention then adjourned.

A. M. SESSION.

Wednesday, Nov. 18th.—The devotional exercises were conducted by Elder J. Howell.

Elder J. Litch, chairman of the Committee on digest, made the following report which was adopted after some explanations and interesting remarks on each article, as follows:

"It being often asked what are our distinguishing sentiments as believers in the premillennial advent, we deem it our duty to declare to the world our belief, that the Scriptures teach, among others, the following

IMPORTANT TRUTHS.

1. That the heavens and earth which are now, by the word of God, are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men. That the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein, shall be burned up. That the Lord will create new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness — that is, the righteous will forever dwell. (2 Pet. 3: 7, 10, 13.) And that the kingdom and the dominion under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him. (Dan. 7: 27.)

2. That there are but two appearings, of the Savior to this earth. Heb. 9: 28. That both are personal and visible. Acts 1: 9, 11. That the first took place in the days of Herod; Matt. 2: 1; when He was conceived of the Holy Ghost, Matt 1: 18, born of the Virgin Mary, Matt. 1: 25, went about doing good, Matt. 11: 5, suffered on the cross, the just for the unjust, 1 Pet 3: 18, died, Luke 23: 46, was buried, Luke 23, 53, arose again the third day the first fruits of them that slept 1 Cor. 15 4, and ascended into the heavens, Luke 24 51, which must receive him until the times of the restitution of all things, spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets. Acts 3 21. That the second coming, or appearing, will take place when he shall descend from heaven at the sounding of the last trump, to give his people rest, 1 Thess. 4 15, 17; 1 Cor. 15 42 being revealed from heaven in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel. 2 Thess. 1, 7, 8. And that he will judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom. 2 Tim. 4, 1.

3d. That the second coming, or appearing, is indicated to be now emphatically nigh, at the doors (Matt. 24 33) by the chronology of the prophetic periods Dan.) 7 25; 8 14; 9 24; 12 7, 11, 12; Rev. 9 10, 15; 11 2, 3; 12 6, 14; 13 5,) the fulfilment of prophecy (Dan. 2d, 7th, 8th, 9th, 11th, and 12th; Rev. 9th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, and 17th) and the signs of the times. Matt. 24 29; Luke 21 25 26. And that this truth should be preached both to saints and sinners, that the first may rejoice, knowing their redemption draweth nigh, Luke 21 28; 1 Thess. 4 18, and the last be warned to flee from the wrath to come (2 Cor. 5 11) before the master of the house shall rise up and shut to the door. Luke 13 24, 25.

4th. That the condition of salvation is repentance toward God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. Acts 20 21: Mark 1 15. And that those who have repentance and faith will live soberly, and righteously, and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. Tit. 2 11–3.

5th. That there will be a resurrection of the bodies (Job 19 25; Isa. 26 19; Matt. 27 52) of all the dead, John 5 28, 29, both of the just and the unjust. Acts 24 15. That those who are Christ's will be raised at his coming. 1 Cor. 15 23. That the rest of the dead will not live again until after a thousand years. Rev. 20 5. And that the saints shall not all sleep, but shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump. 1 Cor. 15 51, 52.

6th. That the only millenium taught in the word of God is the thousand years which are to intervene between the first resurrection and that of the rest of the dead, as inculcated in the 20th of Revelation, vs. 2–7. And that the various portions of Scripture which refer to the millennial state, are to have their fulfilment after the resurrection of all the saints who sleep in Jesus. Isa. 11th: 35 1, 2, 5–[illegible]; 65 17 [illegible].

7th. That the promise that Abraham should be the heir of the world was not to him, or to his seed through the law, but through the righteousness of faith. Rom. 4 13. That they are not all Israel which are of Israel. Rom. 9 6. That there is no difference under the gospel dispensation, between Jew and Gentile. Rom. 10 12. That the middle wall of partition that was between them is broken down, no more to be rebuilt. Eph. 2 14, 15. That God will render to every man according to his deeds. Rom. 2 6. That if we are Christ's, then are we Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. Gal. 3 29. And that the restoration of Israel, yet future, is in the restoration of the saints to the earth created new, when God shall open the graves of those descendants of Abraham who died in faith, without receiving the promise, with the believing Gentiles, who have been grafted in with them into the same olive-tree—and shall cause them to come up out of their graves, and bring them, with the living who are changed, into the land of Isrrel. Ezek. 37 12; Heb. 11 12, 13: Rom. 11 17; John 5 38, 29.

8th. That there is no promise of this world's conversion. Matt. 26 13. That the horn of Papacy will war with the saints, and prevail against them, until the Ancient of Days shall come, and judgment be given to the saints of the Most High, and the time come that the saints possess the kingdom. Dan. 7 21, 22. That the children of the kingdom, and the children of the wicked one, will continue together until the end of the world. when all things that offend shall be gathered out of the kingdom, and the righteous shall shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Matt. 13 37 43. That the Man of Sin will only be destroyed by the brightness of Christ's coming. 2 Thess. 2 8. And that the nations of those which are saved, and redeemed to God by the blood of Christ, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation, will be made kings and priests unto God, to reign forever on the earth. Rev. 5: 10; 21 24.

9th. That it is the duty of the ministers of the Word to continue in the work of preaching the gospel to every creature, even unto the end, Matt. 28 10 20—calling upon them to repent, in view of the fact that the kingdom of heaven is at hand, Rev. 14 7—that their sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord. Acts 3 19 20.

And 10th. That the departed saints do not enter their inheritance or receive their crowns at death. Dan. 12 13; Rev. 6 9–11; Rom. 8 22 23. That they cannot be perfect. Heb. 11 40. That their inheritance, incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away is reserved in heaven ready to be revealed in the last time. 1 Pet. 1 4, 5. That there are laid up for them and us crowns of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give at the day of Christ, to all that love his appearing. 2 Tim. 4 8. That they will only be satisfied when they awaken in Christ's likeness. Psa. 17 15. And that when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, the King will say to those on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Matt. 25 34. Then they will be equal to the angels, being the children of God and of the resurrection. Luke 20 36.

On motion of Elder Litch it was voted that we now proceed to the consideration of the laws of tropes and symbols; and that the Convention be resolved into a Bible Class with the President in the Chair.

The Convention then adjourned.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

The Marriage Covenant.

BY ZETA.

No. III.

In our last, we mentioned some of the rules to be observed to keep this covenant inviolate, to produce usefulness and happiness in the domestic circle. We quoted from Eph. 5: where the duty of each is clearly and authoritatively stated. To enable each to obey such commands, under all circumstances, the heart should be under divine grace; for, although there are many examples of the power of conjugal affection which are as pure and true as any in the world where christianity had made no impress, nevertheless, God is the only source of goodness, and of true principles; and what is not given by natural endowment to poor fallen nature, to enable mortals to live in union and love, may be given by grace. Consequently, we should seek unto God, daily call upon him, and obey his precepts.

The influence of true piety in the family circle is far greater than is generally conceived. It powerfully influences others, more so than in any other place. Christianity AT HOME is a healing fountain, and when you go abroad, its streams go with you, its virtues are seen and felt. It is a citadel, a strong-hold which defies the attacks of the enemy on all sides. It has conquered stout and obdurate hearts, set the principles, and moulded the youthful minds of the greatest men; preserved from great evils, smoothed the most rugged paths of life, and drawn the fairest and most indelible pictures on earth. There are many circumstances in life which will offer opportunities for trouble, and unless "the heart is kept with all diligence" it will often rise up in rebellion against the dearest object of our affections, and bitter words and angry looks will follow.

Love must be the governing principle. Where that is wanting, no union exists. Hence the command,—"Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them." But some are ready to say, and do say, they cannot do it. I answer, you can do it. God requires you to do it. You have pledged before him that you would do it. He will not relinquish his claim on you. It is righteous, and God has never required of you that which you are not, by his grace, able to do. If you cannot love the one you have chosen for a companion as you ought, then never rest, nor cease to cry to God for help, for grace to set your heart in order, until you can freely, and fully render to her what your covenant requires, so long as she lives, and acknowledges its claims upon her. She is not without her imperfections, and you should expect to bear with them. There are crossess to meet, disappointments to be borne, advise to listen to, complaints to hear, faults to be overlooked, trespasses to be forgiven, and will not christianity enable you to do all this? Will not a sense of your own faults and need of forgiveness from God furnish a motive for you? All are subjects of imperfections. A daily study of the Scriptures will teach us to know how to walk and please God. The married pair who intend to "be followers of God as dear children," will find their relative duties particularly marked out in the Bible; and these passages they will study especially, to obey them, praying the Lord to assist them, and comparing their actions with the word, to see wherein they fail, seeking to amend, that they may follow the pattern.

I wish here to quote an extract from the pen of another on this subject. It is worthy of being read often:

"What I have, therefore, to recommend to you is, serious meditation, accompanied with prayer to God on these passages of Scripture which teach you how to act in this relation. 'Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it. . . . So ought men to love their wives, even as their own bodies. Let every one so love his wife as himself.' Eph. 5: 25, 33. 'Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them.' Col. 3: 19. 'Husbands, give honor unto the wife, as unto the weaker vessel.' 1 Pet. 3: 7. Perhaps no part of Scripture less requires a comment. The christian husband is taught by this passage that God requires him to love the woman he has chosen, to be kind and tender to her, yea, to honor her; and, therefore, that the domestic tyrant, the fierce animadverter on every little omission, the husband whose contemptuous treatment of a wife is an habitual degradation of her, are persons condemned by the Lord of all. Here husbands may learn that something more is required of themthan merely to afford a maintainance to a wife.

Nothing can compensate for the want of that love required in the passages quoted. What is a maintenance any farther than it is enjoyed? and how impossible is this, unless it is accompanied with tenderness, kindness, and respectful treatment in words and actions. Alas, for want of these endearments, many a woman, who, by her dress seems to tell the world that she has a husband who spares no expense to gratify her, is, in all her finery, to be considered as a gaudy victim, ever bleeding under the hands of domestic cruelty. Look at the example which the inspired penman has selected for the model of a husband's behavior towards his companion. 'Husbands, love your wives even as Christ also loved the church and gave himself for it.' Eph. 5: 25.

Here is at once example and motive. What more could even an inspired penman say, in order to form the husband to everything affectionate, disinterested, and attractive to his wife, than this,—love her as Christ loved the church. He who understands christianity, finds a volume in such a sentence. . . . . "This," says he, "is my pattern. Such a friend as Christ was to his church, am I to be to my spouse. Am I a part of that body of which he is such a Savior? Then he gave himself for me. Let me imitate that affection, of the fruits of which I humbly hope I am a partaker. I here find myself required to love my wife, though she is not without fault, to interfere between her and danger, to supply, as far as is in my power, everything which can contribute to her comfort, to seek not only her present, but her everlasting happiness, for thus did Christ love his church."—Advice to a Married Couple. pp. 40, 42.

How vastly different from the above pattern are those husbands who are cold-hearted, secretive, rash, bitter, immodest, tantalizing, void of sympathy, indifferent to the finer sensibilities of the wife.

Let the above pattern be followed, and many a wife would be a very different companion from what some now are, under bad treatment. Let these things be well pondered and examined, and while we give another chapter, we shall notice also some of the duties of the wife.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

RELIGION.

BY W. H. WESTERVELT.

Religion is a precious treasure,
It lifts our hearts to things above;
Affording peace and constant pleasure,
It fills our hearts with heavenly love.

CHORUS.

Grace and glory shall be my story,
While I in Christ such beauties see;
Thro' endless ages onward rolling,
This richest treasure mine shall be.

Religion lifts the drooping spirits
And cheers us on this heavenly way;
Great peace and joy our minds inherit,
While we by faith do watch and pray.
Grace, &c.

Religion is the one thing needful,
It is the pearl of greatest price,
And makes us to our God feel grateful
Who binds us with such heavenly ties.
Grace, &c.

Religion will forever guide us,
If we but follow Christ's commands;
Then naught he'll suffer e'er to harm us,
While we are guided by his hands.
Grace, &c.

New Bedford, Oct. 1, '56.

Domestic Summary.

NEGRO TROUBLES IN MISSOURI. The New Madrid (Mo.) Times says:

A number of prominent citizens of this county have called a meeting, to be held at the Court House, in this city, on this day, for the purpose of determining the best course to be adopted to suppress a supposed insurrection of the negroes in this and the adjoining counties.

This move was put on foot after information having been received that the negroes of this county, together with those of Obion county, Tennessee, have concocted, and are meditating, a general insurrection, to take place about the 25th of December

NASHVILLE, Dec. 10. The City Councils of this city have passed a law directing the employment of an additional police force, day and night; forbidding negro schools and negro preaching; forbidding all assemblages of negroes after sundown; authorizing the arrest of free negroes from other countries, and the arrest of free resident negroes if found in suspicious circumstances. A great deal of uneasiness is felt in the city as well as in the country.

Foreign News.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.

The Royal Mail steamship Africa, Captain Shannon, from Liverpool, Saturday, Nov. 29, arrived at her dock at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

There is nothing new respecting the issue with Russia.

It is confidently asserted that the Peace Congress will re-assemble soon.

The political news from France and Spain is unimportant.

Latest advices from the East assert that the Persians have taken Herat.

MARSEILLES, Friday.—It is announced that a strong Russian corps is advancing through Bessarabia to the Black Sea.

Seven English ships-of-war are expected at Constantinople, from Malta.

The Swiss question,—at first a snow ball—is becoming an avalanche. The German Confederation has backed the King of Prussia, who has demanded the unconditional release of the royalist prisoners. This has been point blank refused. The Swiss government sent General Dufour (an old friend of Louis Napoleon's when the latter was an exile in Switzerland) to Paris, to see what line France will take. It must be remembered that Louis Phillippe asked Switzerland to hand over Louis Napoleon to him, but Switzerland stoutly refused.

The hope of an amicable settlement of the matter [illegible] . . . [illegible], and the Swiss government is preparing for the worst. The effective strength of the Swiss army is returned as 162,943 men and 700 guns. The Federal government, moreover, can, in case of war, call out the cantonal troops, consisting of 40,000 men, and would probably recall the 12,000 Swiss, who form the nucleus of the army of the King of Naples. In fact, Switzerland can put on foot a force of about 214,000 men. The Correspondance Prussienne avers that public opinion throughout Europe recognizes the valid right of Prussia over Neufchatel, and concludes by directing attention to the great military power of Prussia.

THE EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.—New York, Dec. 12.—Private advices from London state that the cable for the New York, Newfoundland and London Telegraph Company, is being manufactured at the rate of from ten to fifteen miles per day, and there is no doubt that the whole will be completed before next June. Until the completion of the submarine connection between Newfoundland and Ireland, the company intend to obtain foreign news, if possible, from steamers passing Cape Rice.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

If the Lord will, O. G. Smith will preach at Page School House, in Holderness, Sabbath, Dec. 21.
Alton West, Sabbath, " 28.
Melvin Village, Sabbath, Jan. 4.
Vittum School House, Monday evening, Jany. 5.
January 6th and 7th, as the Brethren Hoyt and Hodsdon may appoint.
Lake Village, Sabbath, Jan. 11.

Bro. Munn appoints to preach in Lovely Street, Canton, Ct., Dec 14, and North Canton, Dec. 21.
E. KINSMAN.

If God permit, I will preach at Saccarappa, Dec. 14.
West Falmouth, " 21.
Freeport, (Swamp School House,) " 28.
R. R. YORK.

BRO. GRANT: We purpose to preach, the Lord willing, as follows:
Augusta, where the Brn. may think best " 17.
Fairfield, " 18.
Exeter, Me., Saturday afternoon and Sunday, 20 and 21.
Newbury, where Brn. may prepare, " 28.
Will Brn. that want us to come to their places and hold meetings, please inform us at Exeter and Newbury.
L. L. HOWARD.
I. DAMMAN.

Dear Brn.,—We intend to come to you in the love of the truth, and to know nothing among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified; and hope that we shall be enabled to comfort and not distract the flock of God.
Brethren pray for us.
Yours, in love,
ISRAEL DAMMAN.

ELD. S. S. BREWER appoints to preach at Fair Haven, Mass., Dec 2[illegible].
River Head, evening, " 21.
Fauce's Corner, " 23.
Worcester, " 28.
Springfield, evening " 30.
Hartford, " 31.
In company with Eld. Matthewson, will commence a meeting on Thursday, Jan. 1, and continue over Sunday at Waterbury, Conn., Cheshire Jan. 11th. S. S. BREWER.

CONFERENCE.

The Eastern Iowa, and Rock Island Conference is expected to meet in Moline, Ill., Friday Jan. 2nd, 1857. P. B. MORGAN.

Bro. Geo. Waugh appoints to preach at the Waldo Block, Worcester, next Friday and Saturday evenings and over the Lord's day. Subject—The Revelation of St. John.
In behalf of the church,
SAMUEL AYERS.

Providence permitting I will preach as follows:
River Point, or Phenix, Dec. 19
Providence, " 21
Lafayette, " 22
Peacedale, and Wakefield, R. I. 24 to 26
New Bedford, " 28
Fairhaven Mass. first Sabbath in Jan. (Head of river in the eve.)
Lowell, 2nd and 3d Sabs. in Jan.
Communications received at the above places after Dec. 18th.
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Providence permitting, I will commence a series of meetings at Chicopee Falls, Mass., Wednesday evening, Dec. 24, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day. M. GRANT.

If the Lord will, I will preach in Lynn, (Dye-House-ville) Sunday Dec. 21st, and in Ware Sunday Dec. 28. D. E. MOULTON.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

Eld I C Welcome, N R Gould, J C Munson, S R Parkhurst, M Whitaker, P Miller, S Ingalls, J Gifford, S Fulson, S E Teeple, A Sowle, W Pittsinger, L Smith, A Humphreville, S E Shirley, W B Bartlett, $1 each.

J French, M Matthews, S Jennings, T G Newman, C M Trask 50 cts each.

G D Merril, $1,50, G W Annis, (by S Leonard,) $3,40, Bro. Matthews $1,88, J E Roberts $2, C French, 60 cts, M A Ober, 66 cents, N Hall, 51 cents, C J Ackerman, 41 cents.

FOR BOOKS.—Miss F Bliss $3,10, E J Ackerman 59 cets.

FOR BRO. SHELDON.—Miss F Bliss $1,90.

M. Whitaker—You have paid to No. 96.

J E Roberts—The amount now sent pays to No. 104.

J B Richardson—Your paper is sent regularly from this office.

C S[illegible]—You are credited to No. 7[illegible].

J T Ongley: P. O. address is [illegible] Valley [illegible] Co., [illegible].

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to prepay postage. The postage on TRACTS, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

THE THREE COVENANTS. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents; postage 1 cent.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By I. C. Welcome. 33 cents; postage 6 cents.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE BOOK OF SEVEN SEALS. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents; postage 1 ct.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE CHRISTIAN'S ONLY HOPE: or, the Faith once Delivered to the Saints. By Z. Campbell. Price 10 cents; postage 1 ct.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE. By William Shepherd. Price—four copies, 25 cents; nine copies, 50 cents; eighteen copies, $1; one hundred, $5—post-paid.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

THE DISCUSSION: Between Prof. H. Mattison, of the Methodist E. Church, and George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price 25 cents; postage 3 cents.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and The New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Single copy, 12 cents; $8 per hundred. Postage 1 cent per copy.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

A VIEW OF THE SCRIPTURE REVELATIONS Concerning a Future State. By Richard Whately, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin. Price $1; postage 18 cents.

THE SEVEN SEALS: with Scriptural Facts concerning the Four Angels, the Four Winds, the Sealing Angel, the Seal of the Living God, &c. By W. Sheldon Price 3 cents.

THE FIRST FRUITS: a Scriptural Inquiry into the Time and Season of the First Resurrection, and Change of Those who are Alive and Remain. Price 10 cents per copy; postage 1 cent.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

JUBILEE HARP. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns well adapted to the present wants of the church. Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. Postage 7 cents.

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 38 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cts.—postage 8 cents.

GLAD TIDINGS, or Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to End in the Universe, by a Literal Destruction of Wicked Men and Devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment Collected and Arranged. By Jacob Blain. Price 10 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

BIBLE vs. TRADITION: in Which the True Teaching of the Bible is Manifested, the Corruptions of Theologians Detected, and the Traditions of Men Exposed. By Aaron Ellis. Revised and much enlarged by Thomas Read. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents: postage 6 cents.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions or the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 16 cents per volume.

A REVIEW: Giving the Main Ideas in Dr. E. Beecher's 'Conflict of Ages,' and a Reply to Them, and to his many Reviewers. To which is added the Bible meaning of the word Hell. Also, two hundred texts quoted, to show the Nature of Future Punishment. By Jacob Blain, Baptist minister. Price 8 cents; postage 1 cent.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—by D. T. Taylor. Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—by John Cumming. State of the Dead, by Milton. Intermediate State, by Grew. Each 24 pages. Price 5 cents single, $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the Coast of Man; Ancient Landmarks; Destiny of the Wicked; The Great [illegible]; [illegible] cts. single; $1.50 per hundred. [illegible] Future Punishment, The Key of Truth, The Night Cometh, price 2 cents single, $1 per hundred.

The above named publications can be obtained at the office of the World's Crisis, [illegible] Hanover street, Boston; H. L. [illegible] [illegible], N. Y.; W. [illegible] [illegible].

is prepared of my Father." Why had he the power to give his apostles to sit on thrones, and no power to grant the woman her request? It seems evident that the Father had decreed that Israel's judges should be restored in the renovation, and revealed to Christ, that in his apostles they should be restored, hence his power to bestow this high honor on them; but the Father had not decreed that Zebedee's sons should sit on his right and left hand in his kingdom; there was no previous prophecy to that effect, so Christ had no power to grant that request.

Matt. 27: 37. "And set up over his head his accusation written, THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS."

The wise men worshiped him, at his birth, as King of the literal Jews, as we have shown; and here, at his death, he is publicly styled King of the Jews, and unless it can be shown that the earth brought forth a new kind of Jews, between his birth and death, he died King of the literal Jews, at least prospectively.

It is evident the literal Jews did not believe that Christ was their Messiah: but at the same time they understood the fact that Messiah was to be their King. This is evident from several passages in Mark 15: 12. "And Pilate answered and said again unto them, what will ye then that I shall do unto him whom ye call the King of the Jews?" 18th ver. "And began to salute him, Hail, King of the Jews!" 32d ver. "Let Christ the King of Israel descend now from the cross, that we may see and believe." Up to this time, nothing was known of a spiritual Israel.

We pass on to Luke 1: 32, 33. "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his Father David. And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever."

Of this same Son it is written in Isa. 9: 7, "Upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever." Facts are always consistent with themselves, and in this case, the facts are these. Christ is the son of David by natural descent; he is promised David's literal throne, and government, and David's literal subjects; the house of Jacob; the same Jacob that David reigned over; indeed there is no other Jacob known in the Bible, from Gen. to Rev. It would be singularly out of harmony to say a king must take the throne of France to reign over the Chinese. So if Christ is to reign over the house of a spiritual Jacob, he must take a spiritual David's spiritual throne, and spiritual kingdom; and we shall, indeed, have a "sky kingdom."

Now listen to the prophecy of Zacharias,—Luke 1: 67–75. "And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying; blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for he hath visited and redeemed his people, and hath raised up a horn of salvation for us, in the house of his servant David, as he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began; that we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us; to perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant, the oath which he sware to our father Abraham, that he would grant unto us, that we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life."

In this New Testament prophecy, we have the following facts:

1st. That the Lord God of Israel hath visited and redeemed his people Israel, prospectively; for it is a prophecy of the future.

2d. His people are the literal Jews, as already shown.

3d. This is as God spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began. These old prophets all spake of the redemption of the literal Israel, for they knew no other. This was the mystery—"Which in other ages was not made known to the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the spirit,—that the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel." Eph. 3. This mystery was not known to Zacharias, for he prophesied before Christ was born, and before the apostles were called, and it was Christ and his apostles who first revealed the mystery.

4th. "That he would grant unto us, that we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies (the we and us are the true, Old Testament Israel, spoken of by all the old prophets,) might serve him without fear, all the days of our life." All the days of our life cannot mean the immortal life, it is all the days of the natural life of Israel, as spoken by the mouth of the old prophets. This is to be after God has redeemed them.

We only need to add that Zacharias spake this by the Holy Ghost; and said it was as God "spake by his holy prophets, which have been since the world began." Now we should be careful and not lie unto the Holy Ghost; but if we say the Israel, spoken of in the above prophecy, is not the Israel spoken of by the Old Testament, we do give the lie to the Holy Ghost, and we might as well say, the child referred to, was not the one spoken of by the old prophets.

To this agree also the words of Simeon, who also spake by the spirit concerning the young child Jesus. "A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel." He, by the Holy Spirit, recognized the Old Testament distinction between Israel and Gentile. And again, he said; "This child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel." Many of the literal seed of Israel did fall over the said child, and the same many will rise in him.

So says Simeon, by the Holy Spirit. He could not mean a spiritual Israel, for the so-called spiritual Israel believed on him and fell not.

From a few texts in John, we may learn who the Jews are, in the New Testament sense. "His disciples say unto him, Master, the Jews of late sought to stone thee, and goest thou thither again?" A strange kind of spiritual Jews, to undertake to stone their Lord and Master! "And the Jews' passover was nigh at hand." John 11: 8, 55; 12: 9, 13; 13: 33; 19: 14, 15, 19.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 17, 1856.

Christian Union.

NUMBER IV.

We have endeavored to show—

1. The importance of Christian union.
2. That Christian character is the true test of Christian fellowship.
3. That christian love is an essential element in christian character.

We now inquire what are the fruits of christian love, or how is it developed?

In answering this question, for the purpose of making the point plainer, we will contrast the fruits of love with those of hate. We have always noticed that hatred leads one to speak of the faults instead of the good qualities of an individual; and to place the former in the fore ground of the picture that they may first attract the attention of the observer, instead of trying to conceal them from the public gaze; also, that the hater shows a satisfaction when he discovers a blemish in the character of the one he hates; and on the contrary looks sad when a moral stain is wiped off from the object of dislike. When an action or word may be caused by one of two motives, one of which is good and the other bad, he at once seizes upon the latter, and forms his conclusions from that stand-point.

We seldom hear one who has hatred speaking of the good qualities of the one he hates. In short, he is but pleased when the faults of the proscribed are most conspicuous, and his virtues most obscured.

Ques. Has the reader such feelings toward any one? If so, the peace of God does not rule in thy heart. "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer; and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." 1 John 3: 15.

Let us look a few moments at the fruits of love, and ask ourselves if we manifest them to all with whom we associate.

"Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law." Rom. 13: 10. It follows then, according to this Scripture, that if we knowingly do anything to injure our neighbor, it is evident we do not love him. We have ever observed that when a mother loves her son, though he be wayward, she does not take satisfaction in speaking of his faults, but delights in making known all his good qualities. She sorrows when she hears of his mistakes, and grieves still more when they are scattered through the community.

We have never known the husband to entertain his neighbors with an account of the faults of his wife, so long as he loved her; but when he had broken his plighted vows, and become an alien to domestic joys, and changed his love to cruel hatred, then he can talk of her failings with a fiendish relish.

Let us not forget "that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us;" that "if any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his;" and that "the fruit of the spirit is love."

When we hear a professed child of Jesus discoursing upon the misdeeds of his brother in Christ, or any other one, (unless it be to guard some one from being led astray,) we at once conclude he is deficient in love which is an essential element in christian character, and deserves a rebuke from those with whom he is associated.

For the Crisis.

"What is that to Thee?"

BY H. L. H.

If the Papal theory were correct, and if Peter was the divinely-appointed head and overseer of all the apostles of Christ, we should find it difficult to account for such a remark as this. In that case it were perfectly appropriate that he should say, "And what shall this man do?" If, like his pretended successors, it was his province to mind everybody's business except his own, nothing could be more pertinent than such inquiries as to the duties and obligations of others. But this was not the case, and the master's reply was of such a nature as to convince him of the fact. "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to THEE? follow THOU me."

This answer was probably intended as a cure for that officiousness which entered somewhat largely into the character of this eminent apostle of Jesus Christ It's perfect propriety under the circumstances was most manifest. Peter had formerly boasted of his remarkable steadfastness in the cause of Christ, saying, "Though all men forsake thee, yet will not I." He had subsequently rashly wounded a servant of the High Priest. He afterward forsook Christ and fled—then he followed Christ afar off—then he associated with the servants—then he denied Christ. Then he cursed and swore—then he wept bitterly—then he came to the sepulchre with John, to see whether Jesus was risen—afterwards Jesus had talked with him, had received from him reiterated assurances of his love—had restored him to his favor and appointed him to feed his sheep and his lambs, and had foretold his future martyrdom for Jesus' sake; and then, as if presuming on his restoration to favor again, he said,—"And what shall this man do?" The answer was pointed—"What is that to THEE? follow thou ME." Jesus would not tolerate a meddlesome disposition in the apostle Peter. He will no more tolerate it in you, or in me.

We are prone to fall into this error. We find it easier to tell twenty men what to do, than to be one of the twenty to go and do it. We find it much easier to give good advice, than to set good examples. Hence, we think ourselves peculiarly qualified for the work of minding our neighbors' business, albeit facts may give painful demonstration that we know not how to mind our own. So then, instead of inquiring with Paul,—"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" we inquire,—"And what shall this man do?" Thus we watch his delinquences and forget our own. Thus, while narrowly observing his deviations from the path of rectitude, we fall headlong into the ditch ourselves!

Christian, let us remember that our duty is to mind our own business. Nothing else will answer, and our Master's reply to all of our undue anxiety over the affairs of others is,—"What is that to thee?" And his requirement of each of us is—"Follow thou me" Let us heed his voice. Let us give ear to his words. Let us obey his requirements. And whenever allured towards forbidden paths let us listen to that gracious and impressive admonition—"What is that to thee? follow thou me." God help us to do this, and save us evermore. Amen.

Dec. 4, '56.

For the Crisis.

"Repent and be Converted."

BY H PRATT.

No. I.

This is the language of inspiration, not merely to those who first witnessed the descent of the Spirit, but to all who are out of the pathway of the just. Repentance is necessary to prepare our hearts for a change of action, and nothing but penitence will enable us to turn from a course of sin, to that of holy obedience.

When we are convinced of our sinful course, and that it leads to death, the inquiry is at once raised—"What shall I do to be saved?" And the answer is at hand, "be converted," or, in other words, turn into the path of the Just.

Conversion is no more nor less than a change of course or action. Now, as conversion is simply to change, or to turn, the question arises, can a person who has turned into the right path ever get away from, or lose it again?

To answer this question understandingly, it will be necessary to ascertain which is the right path or way. Jesus says, "I am the way, the truth, and the life." Now as Christ is the "way," or "vine," how can we be turned, or grafted into it? By being converted. How can we be converted?—By the law of God. This is able to make us wise unto salvation, or, to turn us into the right path. It is the guide-board to the promised land.

The Psalmist says, "The law of God is perfect, converting the soul."

Now—"if ye abide in me," (the vine, or path,) implies a liability to get out. And again; "If ye continue in my word,—(the path,) then are ye my disciples indeed."—Therefore, it avails us nothing to get in the right way unless we keep in it. To profess hope in Christ because we were converted, or turned into the right way twenty years ago, and have been out ever since, would be like persons upon a wrecked ship hoping that they were being drifted right, because they had started right from harbor, six months before. A person who will urge that there is no possibility of getting out of the way after having once been in it, needs converting just as much as a sinner, for he has erred from the truth, and if any one converts him he saves a soul from death.

It needs a specific truth for every phase of the church just as much as it does a particular guide board at every corner where there is a branching-off road.

To illustrate this, we take the case of Adam and Eve. They were in the path, but they needed the law of God to keep them there, as much as the sinner does to direct him into it: and had they suffered the law of God to direct or convert them, concerning the tree of knowledge, they had not been driven from their Eden-home to suffer misery and death. Yet this command to them has no more to do in converting or directing us here. than one of our guide-boards would, when removed from its proper place and borne off in any direction by the traveler.

The guide for Adam was—"But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Here then was the direction for them; the guide-post on which it was placed was in the garden of Eden, and nowhere else. The penalty for not following its direction was death.

If Adam had been converted by this law of God, and continued in the path of obedience, he would have saved his own life—the life of millions of the human race—the life of the Son of God—a world of goodness and beauty from the curse of God, and its inhabitants from his indignation.

Wales, Mass.

For the Crisis

Conversations Between a Brother and Sister.

BY JULIA A. FERRIS.

No. I.

Bro.—I am very happy to see you, after so long a separation, but must say I regret to learn that you have become an Adventist.

Sr.—You ought not to regret that I have had the moral courage to become unpopular, since your own church, in the days of Wesley and Fletcher, considered it a great virtue to be a "peculiar" people.

Bro.—It is not your unpopular position that I object to, but your anti-christian tenets.

Sr.—Anti-christian! Now, since you apply to us so broad an epithet, I think I have a right to demand that you shall investigate our doctrine and see whether the term will apply. I am ready to renounce any tenet as soon as it is proved to be antichristian. Will you now tell me what you consider to be the fundamental principles of an orthodox faith?

Bro.—Well, I consider, in the first place, the foundation principles of a sound christian faith, to be a belief in the holy Trinity. Now, since you are so sensitive about the word antichristian, will you be so good as to give me a clear and lucid definition of your views concerning the God-head, and see if I do not convict you of antichristian sentiments.

Sr.—I will endeavor to be as lucid as possible, but will say, in the first place, that the terms Trinity, and Triune God, are not scriptural, but merely scholastic terms, which our people never use. I believe in the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. The Father and Son I believe to be distinct beings, and the Holy Spirit, an emanation from God.

Bro.—Ah I thought so. Well; I thank God that I believe in one God, not TWO.

Sr.—So do I. I believe "there is none other God but one, for though there be that are called Gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many and lords many,) but to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him." 1 Cor. 8: 4—6.

You see the distinction Paul makes.—Well, you asked for a lucid definition. I cannot give a clearer idea than by an illustration. Suppose you stand before a large mirror: you see, reflected in that mirror the express image of your person." We call it seeing yourself in the glass. Now, suppose you had the power, by your "manifest word" to give life to that image of your person, and could impart to it "all the fullness" of your character, making it as exactly like yourself in character as it now is in person, and you will have another person, and yet it will be yourself.—This illustrates my idea of the Father and the Son. You see, I acknowledge the identity of both. The Holy Spirit, I believe to be an emanation from the Father and Son, (the same as the sunshine, from the natural sun,) and often, by a figure of speech, personated in scripture, as when we say of the sun, HE is setting, &c.

We will now consider the word antichrist. John gives us a mark by which we can distinguish this character. Will you tell me who John says is antichrist?

Bro.—I believe he says, "he is antichrist who denieth the Father and the Son."

Sr.—Certainly. Will you now tell me what you consider to be the antichrist of prophecy?

Bro.—I agree with all protestant commentators, that the antichrist of prophecy, is the Roman Catholic church; but whoever holds to antichristian tenets I believe, so far as they go, to be anti—(or opposed to) Christ.

Sr.—Precisely. I agree with you there. Will you now explain in what sense the Roman Catholic church denies the Father and the Son?

Bro.—I am not prepared at present.

Sr.—I am. Away back in the dark ages, she began to sing "three in one, and one in three;" introduced the terms "Trinity" and "Triune God," blending them into one; so as to destroy the distinct entity of each; and in that sense, and in no other, does that church deny the Father and the Son.

Bro.—Do you mean to say that the doctrine of the Trinity is a mark of antichrist?

Sr.—I do.

Bro.—You are really very uncharitable.

Sr.—I do not wish to be so, but as I have a principle of honesty, and as the title, antichristian, is proved to be not my property, I think common honesty requires, that I should carry it home to its lawful owners, and tell you, that if the Roman church is the antichrist of prophecy, then your darling doctrine of Holy Trinity is the very mark by which we are to distinguish this antichrist.

Will you tell me, before leaving the room, which you consider the next most important doctrine?

Bro.—I consider the doctrine of the atonement as next in importance, but cannot stay longer now to talk with you.

The Providence Convention.

[Continued.]

Elder Parks said, I do not see how the conclusion of our venerable and beloved brother Chapman can be avoided. It involves issues of great importance. If we decide the promise as belonging especially to Israel, no Gentile can be saved under it. Is it true that the natural descendants of Jacob constitute the only Israel of God? If so, Mr. President, you and I can never have inheritance in the kingdom of God. Our beloved brother Litch said, there are other promises which meet the state of the Gentiles; but is it not written, "the meek shall inherit the earth?" Is Palestine a part of the earth, sir? If so, the meek shall inherit it.

Elder Gates could not see that the brethren [illegible]; that difference was more in terms. He believed that God's promise included all believing Jews, and believing Gentiles in Christ. Still he could conceive a little difference in tracing God's covenant through Abraham. For instance there were specific promises to a certain part of Israel, and therefore he inclined to the view presented by Dr. Litch.

Elder Geo. W. Burnham said, it appears to me, if Gentile believers are fellow-heirs with Israelite believers, then they must inherit conjointly the land of promise. It is also said, "Ye are all one in Christ Jesus." I wish this point to be met.

Elder Fassett thought that we had the liberty not only to read the language defining the covenant in the Old Testament, but may seek for its explanation in the new, and expound the promises to Israel thereby.

Elder Howell said, I have said nothing as yet, respecting the exclusive right of Israel to Canaan. I would now say, that the territory to which reference has been made, is the kingdom of God. The question of territory reaches the subjects of the kingdom. It is agreed, that Abraham, by promise, had the land conferred upon him and his seed. I apprehend, the promise is misunderstood; and to prove it, the following scripture is generally quoted, "For the promise, that he should be heir of the world, was not to Abraham or his seed." The term "world" in this passage does not refer to territory, but people. Upon the authority of Dr. Cumming, this criticism is given.

The President remarked, that the original did not warrant such an interpretation, the meaning of kosmos being habitable globe.

Elder Howell continued; The kingdom of Israel embraced the territory of Palestine, and the kingdom was taken from literal Israel and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits of righteousness, and the nation that finally obtains the kingdom, is an elect people gathered out of every people. The grant to Abraham takes in Canaan; that is certain; there was no pledge or promise with limits, but what belongs to all believers.

Many others participated in the discussion of this question, creating considerable interest, and showing too, how Christians may differ in sentiment on secondary subjects, yet be courteous and kind.

On motion of Elder Pearson, the resolution was laid upon the table, and on motion of Elder Osler, the resolution on Cristian Union was taken therefrom. After a few remarks the Convention adjourned.

TUESDAY, P. M. SESSION.

The opening devotional services were conducted by Elder Brewer, after which the regular business was called up. Elder Grant thought that too much importance could not be attached to the resolution again before the Convention. Whatever is calculated to unite Christians is valuable—it is of God Whatever is calculated to produce disunion is exceedingly injurious—it is indeed, bad. Ministers had caused much of the disunion, &c.; here, my brethren, is the place for union to take effect. It is as true now as ever, "like priest like people." I feel to co-operate in this great and good work. If I have said anything which may have caused the "love of any to wax cold," I am ready to make amends if it be possible. I fellowship all who love Jesus. If we fully adopt the platform of Christian union, we shall do well.

Elder Osler said, I am happy in being able to coincide with Elder Grant. It is my purpose to speak particularly on the true ground of union. We can only be united, as a people, by administering the discipline of the gospel, in individual cases of departure from Christian integrity; and discountenancing all divisions and offences contrary to the principles of the gospel of Christ.

Elder Geo. W. Burnham remarked, that in order to effect a union on a safe and righteous basis, we may be obliged to investigate some of the reasons of the existing divisions, and enforce Christian discipline, that the right be manifested and approved, and the wrong exposed and condemned.

Elder Pearson being called up by a special vote, made some remarks on the causes which produced the existing disunion, and gave what he deemed to be the only safe, just and permanent principles of Christian union.

After an exceedingly animated and profitable discussion on this important resolution, in which most of the members took a deeply interested part, it was with entire unanimity adopted. The Convention then adjourned.

A. M. SESSION.

Wednesday, Nov. 18th.—The devotional exercises were conducted by Elder J. Howell.

Elder J. Litch, chairman of the Committee on digest, made the following report which was adopted after some explanations and interesting remarks on each article, as follows:

"It being often asked what are our distinguishing sentiments as believers in the pre-millennial advent, we deem it our duty to declare to the world our belief, that the Scriptures teach, among others, the following

IMPORTANT TRUTHS.

1. That the heavens and earth which are now, by the word of God, are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men. That the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein, shall be burned up. That the Lord will create new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness — that is, the righteous will forever dwell. (2 Pet. 3: 7, 10,13.) And that the kingdom and the dominion under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him. (Dan. 7: 27.)

2. That there are but two appearings, of the Savior to this earth. Heb. 9: 28. That both are personal and visible. Acts 1: 9, 11. That the first took place in the days of Herod; Matt. 2: 1; when He was conceived of the Holy Ghost, Matt 1: 18, born of the Virgin Mary, Matt. 1: 25, went about doing good, Matt. 11: 5, suffered on the cross, the just for the unjust, 1 Pet 3: 18, died, Luke 23: 46, was buried, Luke 23, 53, arose again the third day the first fruits of them that slept 1 Cor. 15 4, and ascended into the heavens, Luke 24 51, which must receive him until the times of the restitution of all things, spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets. Acts 3 21. That the second coming, or appearing, will take place when he shall descend from heaven at the sounding of the last trump, to give his people rest, 1 Thess. 4 16, 17; 1 Cor. 15 42 being revealed from heaven in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel. 2 Thess. 1, 7, 8. And that he will judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom. 2 Tim. 4, 1.

3d. That the second coming, or appearing, is indicated to be now emphatically nigh, at the doors (Matt. 24 33) by the chronology of the prophetic periods Dan.) 7 25; 8 14; 9 24; 12 7, 11, 12; Rev. 9 10, 15; 11 2, 3; 12 6, 14; 13 5,) the fulfilment of prophecy (Dan. 2d, 7th, 8th, 9th, 11th, and 12th; Rev. 9th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, and 17th) and the signs of the times. Matt. 24 29; Luke 21 25 26. And that this truth should be preached both to saints and sinners, that the first may rejoice, knowing their redemption draweth nigh, Luke 21 28; 1 Thess. 4 18, and the last be warned to flee from the wrath to come (2 Cor. 5 11) before the master of the house shall rise up and shut to the door. Luke 13 24, 25.

4th. That the condition of salvation is repentance toward God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. Acts 20 21; Mark 1 15. And that those who have repentance and faith will live soberly, and righteously, and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ. Tit. 2 11–3.

5th. That there will be a resurrection of the bodies (Job 19 25; Isa. 26 19; Matt. 27 52) of all the dead, John 5 28, 29, both of the just and the unjust. Acts 24 15. That those who are Christ's will be raised at his coming. 1 Cor. 15 23. That the rest of the dead will not live again until after a thousand years. Rev. 20 5. And that the saints shall not all sleep, but shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump. 1 Cor. 15 51, 52.

6th. That the only millenium taught in the word of God is the thousand years which are to intervene between the first resurrection and that of the rest of the dead, as inculcated in the 20th of Revelation, vs. 2–7. And that the various portions of Scripture which refer to the millennial state, are to have their fulfilment after the resurrection of all the saints who sleep in Jesus. Isa. 11th: 35 1, 2, 5–10; 65 17 26.

7th. That the promise that Abraham should be the heir of the world was not to him, or to his seed through the law, but through the righteousness of faith. Rom. 4 13. That they are not all Israel which are of Israel. Rom. 9 6. That there is no difference under the gospel dispensation, between Jew and Gentile. Rom. 10 12. That the middle wall of partition that was between them is broken down, no more to be rebuilt. Eph. 2 14, 15. That God will render to every man according to his deeds. Rom. 2 6. That if we are Christ's, then are we Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. Gal. 3 29. And that the restoration of Israel, yet future, is in the restoration of the saints to the earth created new, when God shall open the graves of those descendants of Abraham who died in faith, without receiving the promise, with the believing Gentiles, who have been grafted in with them into the same olive-tree—and shall cause them to come up out of their graves, and bring them, with the living who are changed, into the land of Isrrel. Ezek. 37 12; Heb. 11 12, 13: Rom. 11 17; John 5 38, 29.

8th. That there is no promise of this world's conversion. Matt. 26 13. That the horn of Papacy will war with the saints, and prevail against them, until the Ancient of Days shall come, and judgment be given to the saints of the Most High, and the time come that the saints possess the kingdom. Dan. 7 21, 22. That the children of the kingdom, and the children of the wicked one, will continue together until the end of the world, when all things that offend shall be gathered out of the kingdom, and the righteous shall shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Matt. 13 37 43. That the Man of Sin will only be destroyed by the brightness of Christ's coming. 2 Thess. 2 8. And that the nations of those which are saved, and redeemed to God by the blood of Christ, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation, will be made kings and priests unto God, to reign forever on the earth. Rev. 5: 10; 21 24.

9th. That it is the duty of the ministers of the Word to continue in the work of preaching the gospel to every creature, even unto the end, Matt. 28 10 20—calling upon them to repent, in view of the fact that the kingdom of heaven is at hand, Rev. 14 7—that their sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord. Acts 3 19 20.

And 10th. That the departed saints do not enter their inheritance or receive their crowns at death. Dan. 12 13; Rev. 6 9–11; Rom. 8 22 23. That they cannot be perfect. Heb. 11 40. That their inheritance, incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away is reserved in heaven ready to be revealed in the last time. 1 Pet. 1 4, 5. That there are laid up for them and us crowns of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give at the day of Christ, to all that love his appearing. 2 Tim. 4 8. That they will only be satisfied when they awaken in Christ's likeness. Psa. 17 15. And that when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, the King will say to those on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Matt. 25 34. Then they will be equal to the angels, being the children of God and of the resurrection. Luke 20 36.

On motion of Elder Litch it was voted that we now proceed to the consideration of the laws of tropes and symbols; and that the Convention be resolved into a Bible Class with the President in the Chair.

The Convention then adjourned.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

The Marriage Covenant.

BY ZETA.

No. III.

In our last, we mentioned some of the rules to be observed to keep this covenant inviolate, to produce usefulness and happiness in the domestic circle. We quoted from Eph. 5: where the duty of each is clearly and authoritatively stated. To enable each to obey such commands, under all circumstances, the heart should be under divine grace; for, although there are many examples of the power of conjugal affection which are as pure and true as any in the world where christianity had made no impress, nevertheless, God is the only source of goodness, and of true principles; and what is not given by natural endowment to poor fallen nature, to enable mortals to live in union and love, may be given by grace. Consequently, we should seek unto God, daily call upon him, and obey his precepts.

The influence of true piety in the family circle is far greater than is generally conceived. It powerfully influences others, more so than in any other place. Christianity AT HOME is a healing fountain, and when you go abroad, its streams go with you, its virtues are seen and felt. It is a citadel, a strong-hold which defies the attacks of the enemy on all sides. It has conquered stout and obdurate hearts, set the principles, and moulded the youthful minds of the greatest men; preserved from great evils, smoothed the most rugged paths of life, and drawn the fairest and most indelible pictures on earth. There are many circumstances in life which will offer opportunities for trouble, and unless "the heart is kept with all diligence" it will often rise up in rebellion against the dearest object of our affections, and bitter words and angry looks will follow.

Love must be the governing principle. Where that is wanting, no union exists. Hence the command,—"Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them." But some are ready to say, and do say, they cannot do it. I answer, you can do it. God requires you to do it. You have pledged before him that you would do it. He will not relinquish his claim on you. It is righteous, and God has never required of you that which you are not, by his grace, able to do. If you cannot love the one you have chosen for a companion as you ought, then never rest, nor cease to cry to God for help, for grace to set your heart in order, until you can freely, and fully render to her what your covenant requires, so long as she lives, and acknowledges its claims upon her. She is not without her imperfections, and you should expect to bear with them. There are crossess to meet, disappointments to be borne, advise to listen to, complaints to hear, faults to be overlooked, trespasses to be forgiven, and will not christianity enable you to do all this? Will not a sense of your own faults and need of forgiveness from God furnish a motive for you? All are subjects of imperfections. A daily study of the Scriptures will teach us to know how to walk and please God. The married pair who intend to "be followers of God as dear children," will find their relative duties particularly marked out in the Bible; and these passages they will study especially, to obey them, praying the Lord to assist them, and comparing their actions with the word, to see wherein they fail, seeking to amend, that they may follow the pattern.

I wish here to quote an extract from the pen of another on this subject. It is worthy of being read often:

"What I have, therefore, to recommend to you is, serious meditation, accompanied with prayer to God on these passages of Scripture which teach you how to act in this relation. 'Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it. . . . So ought men to love their wives, even as their own bodies. Let every one so love his wife as himself.' Eph. 5: 25, 33. 'Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them.' Col. 3: 19. 'Husbands, give honor unto the wife, as unto the weaker vessel.' 1 Pet. 3: 7. Perhaps no part of Scripture less requires a comment. The christian husband is taught by this passage that God requires him to love the woman he has chosen, to be kind and tender to her, yea, to honor her: and, therefore, that the domestic tyrant, the fierce animadverter on every little omission, the husband whose contemptuous treatment of a wife is an habitual degradation of her, are persons condemned by the Lord of all. Here husbands may learn that something more is required of themthan merely to afford a maintainance to a wife.

Nothing can compensate for the want of that love required in the passages quoted. What is a maintenance any farther than it is enjoyed? and how impossible is this, unless it is accompanied with tenderness, kindness, and respectful treatment in words and actions. Alas, for want of these endearments, many a woman, who, by her dress seems to tell the world that she has a husband who spares no expense to gratify her, is, in all her finery, to be considered as a gaudy victim, ever bleeding under the hands of domestic cruelty. Look at the example which the inspired penman has selected for the model of a husband's behavior towards his companion. 'Husbands, love your wives even as Christ also loved the church and gave himself for it.' Eph. 5: 25.

Here is at once example and motive. What more could even an inspired penman say, in order to form the husband to everything affectionate, disinterested, and attractive to his wife, than this,—love her as Christ loved the church. He who understands christianity, finds a volume in such a sentence. . . . . "This," says he, "is my pattern. Such a friend as Christ was to his church, am I to be to my spouse. Am I a part of that body of which he is such a Savior? Then he gave himself for me. Let me imitate that affection, of the fruits of which I humbly hope I am a partaker. I here find myself required to love my wife, though she is not without fault, to interfere between her and danger, to supply, as far as is in my power, everything which can contribute to her comfort, to seek not only her present, but her everlasting happiness, for thus did Christ love his church."—Advice to a Married Couple. pp. 40, 42.

How vastly different from the above pattern are those husbands who are cold-hearted, secretive, rash, bitter, immodest, tantalizing, void of sympathy, indifferent to the finer sensibilities of the wife.

Let the above pattern be followed, and many a wife would be a very different companion from what some now are, under bad treatment. Let these things be well pondered and examined, and while we give another chapter, we shall notice also some of the duties of the wife.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

RELIGION.

BY W. H. WESTERVELT.

Religion is a precious treasure,
It lifts our hearts to things above;
Affording peace and constant pleasure,
It fills our hearts with heavenly love.

CHORUS.

Grace and glory shall be my story,
While I in Christ such beauties see;
Thro' endless ages onward rolling,
This richest treasure mine shall be.

Religion lifts the drooping spirits
And cheers us on this heavenly way;
Great peace and joy our minds inherit,
While we by faith do watch and pray.
Grace, &c.

Religion is the one thing needful,
It is the pearl of greatest price,
And makes us to our God feel grateful
Who binds us with such heavenly ties.
Grace, &c.

Religion will forever guide us,
If we but follow Christ's commands;
Then naught he'll suffer e'er to harm us,
While we are guided by his hands.
Grace, &c.

New Bedford, Oct. 1, '56.

Domestic Summary.

NEGRO TROUBLES IN MISSOURI. The New Madrid (Mo.) Times says:

A number of prominent citizens of this county have called a meeting, to be held at the Court House, in this city, on this day, for the purpose of determining the best course to be adopted to suppress a supposed insurrection of the negroes in this and the adjoining counties.

This move was put on foot after information having been received that the negroes of this county, together with those of Obion county, Tennessee, have concocted, and are meditating, a general insurrection, to take place about the 25th of December

NASHVILLE, Dec. 10. The City Councils of this city have passed a law directing the employment of an additional police force, day and night; forbidding negro schools and negro preaching; forbidding all assemblages of negroes after sundown; authorizing the arrest of free negroes from other countries, and the arrest of free resident negroes if found in suspicious circumstances. A great deal of uneasiness is felt in the city as well as in the country.

Foreign News.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.

The Royal Mail steamship Africa, Captain Shannon, from Liverpool, Saturday, Nov. 29, arrived at her dock at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

There is nothing new respecting the issue with Russia.

It is confidently asserted that the Peace Congress will re-assemble soon.

The political news from France and Spain is unimportant.

Latest advices from the East assert that the Persians have taken Herat.

MARSEILLES, Friday.—It is announced that a strong Russian corps is advancing through Bessarabia to the Black Sea.

Seven English ships-of-war are expected at Constantinople, from Malta.

The Swiss question,—at first a snow ball—is becoming an avalanche. The German Confederation has backed the King of Prussia, who has demanded the unconditional release of the royalist prisoners. This has been point blank refused. The Swiss government sent General Dufour (an old friend of Louis Napoleon's when the latter was an exile in Switzerland) to Paris, to see what line France will take. It must be remembered that Louis Phillippe asked Switzerland to hand over Louis Napoleon to him, but Switzerland stoutly refused.

The hope of an amicable settlement of the matter has therefore [illegible], and the Swiss government is preparing for the worst. The effective strength of the Swiss army is returned as 162,943 men and 700 guns. The Federal government, moreover, can, in case of war, call out the cantonal troops, consisting of 40,000 men, and would probably recall the 12,000 Swiss, who form the nucleus of the army of the King of Naples. In fact, Switzerland can put on foot a force of about 214,000 men. The Correspondance Prussienne avers that public opinion throughout Europe recognizes the valid right of Prussia over Neufchatel, and concludes by directing attention to the great military power of Prussia.

THE EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.—New York, Dec. 12.—Private advices from London state that the cable for the New York, Newfoundland and London Telegraph Company, is being manufactured at the rate of from ten to fifteen miles per day, and there is no doubt that the whole will be completed before next June. Until the completion of the submarine connection between Newfoundland and Ireland, the company intend to obtain foreign news, if possible, from steamers passing Cape Rice.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

If the Lord will, O. G. Smith will preach at Page School House, in Holderness, Sabbath, Dec. 21.
Alton West, Sabbath, " 28.
Melvin Village, Sabbath, Jan. 4.
Vittum School House, Monday evening, Jany. 5.
January 6th and 7th, as the Brethren Hoyt and Hodsdon may appoint.
Lake Village, Sabbath, Jan. 11.

Bro. Munn appoints to preach in Lovely Street, Canton, Ct., Dec. 14, and North Canton, Dec. 21. E. KINSMAN.

If God permit, I will preach at Saccarappa, Dec. 14.
West Falmouth, " 21.
Freeport, (Swamp School House,) " 28.
R. R. YORK.

BRO. GRANT: We purpose to preach, the Lord willing, as follows:
Augusta, where the Brn. may think best " 17.
Fairfield, " 18.
Exeter, Me., Saturday afternoon and Sunday, 20 and 21.
Newbury, where Brn. may prepare, " 28.
Will Brn. that want us to come to their places and hold meetings, please inform us at Exeter and Newbury.
L. L. HOWARD.
I. DAMMAN.

Dear Brn.,—We intend to come to you in the love of the truth, and to know nothing among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified; and hope that we shall be enabled to comfort and not distract the flock of God.
Brethren pray for us.
Yours, in love,
ISRAEL DAMMAN.

ELD. S. S. BREWER appoints to preach at
Fair Haven, Mass., Dec 20.
River Head, evening, " 21.
Fauce's Corner, " 23.
Worcester, " 28.
Springfield, evening " 30.
Hartford, " 31.
In company with Eld. Matthewson, will commence a meeting on Thursday, Jan. 1, and continue over Sunday at Waterbury, Conn., Cheshire Jan. 11th. S. S. BREWER.

CONFERENCE.

The Eastern Iowa, and Rock Island Conference is expected to meet in Moline, Ill., Eriday Jan. 2nd, 1857. P. B. MORGAN.

Bro. Geo. Waugh appoints to preach at the Waldo Block, Worcester, next Friday and Saturday evenings and over the Lord's day. Subject—The Revelation of St. John.
In behalf of the church,
SAMUEL AYERS.

Providence permitting I will preach as follows:
River Point, or Phenix, Dec. 19
Providence, " 21
Lafayette, " 22
Peacedale, and Wakekfield, R. I. 24 to 26
New Bedford, " 28
Fairhaven Mass. first Sabbath in Jan.
(Head of river in the eve.)
Lowell, 2nd and 3d Sabs. in Jan.
Communications received at the above places after Dec 18th.
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Providence permitting, I will commence a series of meetings at Chicopee Falls, Mass., Wednesday evening, Dec. 24, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day. M. GRANT.

If the Lord will, I will preach in Lynn, (Dye-House-ville) Sunday Dec. 21st, and in Ware Sunday Dec. 28. D. E. MOULTON.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

Eld I C Welcome, N R Gould, J C Munson, S R Parkhurst, M Whitaker, P Miller, S Ingalls, J Gifford, S Fulson, S E Teeple, A Sowle, W Pittsinger, L Smith, A Humphreville, S E Shirley, W B Bartlett, $1 each.

J French, M Matthews, S Jennings, T G Newman, C M Trask 50 cts each.

G D Merril, $1,50, G W Annis, (by S Leonard,) $3,40, Bro. Matthews $1,88, J E Roberts $2, C French, 60 cts, M A Ober, 66 cents, N Hall, 51 cents, C J Ackerman, 41 cents.

FOR BOOKS.—Miss F Bliss $3,10, E J Ackerman 59 cts.

FOR BRO. SHELDON.—Miss F Bliss $1,90.

M. Whitaker—You have paid to No. 96.

J E Roberts—The amount now sent pays to No. 104.

J B Richardson—Your paper is sent regularly from this office.

O Stacks—You are credited to No. 75.

J T Ongley's P. O. address is [illegible] Valley [illegible] Co., Pa.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to prepay postage. The postage on tracts, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

THE THREE COVENANTS. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents; postage 1 cent.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By I. C. Welcome. 33 cents; postage 6 cents.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE BOOK OF SEVEN SEALS. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents; postage 1 ct.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE CHRISTIAN'S ONLY HOPE: or, the Faith once Delivered to the Saints. By Z. Campbell. Price 10 cents; postage 1 ct.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE. By William Shepherd. Price—four copies, 25 cents; nine copies, 50 cents; eighteen copies, $1; one hundred, $5—post-paid.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

THE DISCUSSION: Between Prof. H. Mattison, of the Methodist E. Church, and George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price 25 cents; postage 3 cents.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and The New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Single copy, 12 cents; $8 per hundred. Postage 1 cent per copy.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

A VIEW OF THE SCRIPTURE REVELATIONS Concerning a Future State. By Richard Whately, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin. Price $1; postage 18 cents.

THE SEVEN SEALS: with Scriptural Facts concerning the Four Angels, the Four Winds, the Sealing Angel, the Seal of the Living God, &c. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cents.

THE FIRST FRUITS: a Scriptural Inquiry into the Time and Season of the First Resurrection, and Change of Those who are Alive and Remain. Price 10 cents per copy; postage 1 cent.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

JUBILEE HARP. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns well adapted to the present wants of the church. Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. Postage 7 cents.

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 38 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cts.—postage 8 cents.

GLAD TIDINGS, or Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to End in the Universe, by a Literal Destruction of Wicked Men and Devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment Collected and Arranged. By Jacob Blain. Price 10 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

BIBLE vs. TRADITION: in Which the True Teaching of the Bible is Manifested, the Corruptions of Theologians Detected, and the Traditions of Men Exposed. By Aaron Ellis. Revised and much enlarged by Thomas Read. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents: postage 6 cents.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions or the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 16 cents per volume.

A REVIEW: Giving the Main Ideas in Dr. E. Beecher's 'Conflict of Ages,' and a Reply to Them, and to his many Reviewers. To which is added the Bible meaning of the word Hell. Also, two hundred texts quoted, to show the Nature of Future Punishment. By Jacob Blain, Baptist minister. Price 8 cents; postage 1 cent.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—by D. T. Taylor. Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—by John Cumming. State of the Dead, by Milton. Intermediate State, by Grew. Each 24 pages. Price [illegible] single, $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the Coast of Man; Ancient Landmarks; Destiny of the Wicked; The Great Invitation. [illegible] cts. single; $1.50 per hundred. [illegible] Future Punishment, The Key of Truth, The Night Cometh, price 2 cents single, $1 per hundred.

The above named publications can be obtained at the office of the World's Crisis, [illegible] Hanover street, Boston; [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE WATCHER'S REPLY.

BY SIMEON BATCHELOR.

The conflict of ages—when did it begin?
Shall truth, or shall error the victory win?
Shall light sit enthroned, or shall error thus reign,
And naught ever banish its dark gloom again?

Shall cruel oppression rule with its hard hand,
Or freedom be free then to break every band?
Shall the blood of the martyrs cry ever in vain,
Or is there redress for their groans and their pain?

Shall man meet his fellow in battle array,
Still slay with the sword, and his brother betray?
Shall earth be a field thus of turmoil and blood,
Poured forth on its surface, in vision, a flood?

Not only the glittering of armor we see,
But raging of mind like the waves of the sea;
Each seeking the mastery, longing for fame,
Care less for true glory, but more for a name.

We ask thee, lone watcher, tell what thou hast seen,
And the signs of the present, O what do they mean?
Our faith will increase as we listen to thee,
And see words prophetic become history.

Far back in the garden did the conflict begin—
But still there is hope, for the truth yet shall win;
The seed of the woman the serpent shall bruise,
Of which kings and prophets had far distant views.

The Lord, he is just, by his judgments we see,
But now in the hist'ry of earth where are we?
We ask thee, thou watcher upon the watch tower,
How distant is morning, oh what is the hour?

The history's full—wrote by prophet and seer—
The dawning of day, yes, the end must be near;
Great Babylon's glory—one night brings her fall;—
How vain was that trust in those gates and her wall.

But that overcoming was conquered at last,
The kingdom of silver is now in the past;
Aspiring, subduing, see Grecia arise,
But her king, though "the Great," weeps—a mortal
he dies.

The kingdom's divided to the four winds of heaven,
Rome stains the last page, but her doom God hath given;
The last scene now hastens, her plagues in one day—
No harps on the willow, in faith, watch and pray.

The signs of to-day speak, oh swift is her fall!
She sinks; sin and death now are no more at all;
The conflict has ended in victory, when
The glad song aris s—Hallelujah! Amen.

Pownal, Vt., 1856.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Gospel.

BY B. MATTHIAS.

The gospel is suited to all people and to all ages. It is not a system or formulas of services, but a declaration of good—the embodiment of a great promise. There is nothing like it, and nothing can take its place. There is but one gospel.

It is called "good news"—"good tidings of great joy." It brings relief to the afflicted—pardon to rebels, and peace to the troubled. It is hope to the dying, and knocks at the sepulchre, leaving its passport of admission to the kingdom of life, in due time.

1. THE SUBJECT OF IT.

It is not by an infinite degree, what is preached to the masses for gospel—a fixed creed with prescribed duties or works of the law. It is not a threat of eternal torment to criminals, nor a promise to the good of transportation at death, to remote regions.

Sad to say—for the most part, it is barbarously misunderstood—and outrageously misrepresented. It does not reproach, censure, taunt, prefer, select, or discriminate. It knows no partiality. It is like the rain falling upon the just and unjust, and the sun shining upon the evil and the good.

It is an offer of good—great good—full, free, and unconfined. It is a perfect gush of overflowing water of life from the great fountain of goodness, rolling its precious waves at the feet of all the wretched, dying, cursed sons of men. "It shall be unto all people." It was preached unto Abraham by God himself,—hence, the subject of it cannot be misunderstood. "In thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Gal. 3: 7: Gen. 12: 7; 18: 14–16; 15: 5; 17: 7. It was preached to Isaac and Jacob.

"He hath remembered his covenant for ever, the word which he commanded to a thousand generations; which covenant he made with Abraham, and his oath unto Isaac; and confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant; saying, unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance." Ps. 105: 8–11. This is to last through all ages and to serve all the families of the earth. "For when God made the promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, he [illegible] by himself, saying, surely blessing I [illegible] will multiply thee. . . . Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath; that by two immutable things in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us."

This hope is inspired by the promise. The same is called in another place—"the hope of the gospel," which our Lord calls "the word of the kingdom"—"gospel of the kingdom." So then it is the promise of inheritance, and of many children to be born from the dead at the appearing of Christ. The promise embraces the restitution of all things, with all believers. It is never preached by prophet or apostle, but with this reference. Peter says, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which, according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away." 1 Pet. 1: 3, 4.

Paradise was corrupted and forfeited. The kingdom of Israel was corrupted and forfeited. Both are to be restored at the appearing of Jesus. Christ preached this on the cross to the thief who prayed,—"Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." Our Lord answered him, "Thou shalt be with me in Paradise." Of course, at the time specified when he should come into his kingdom, which, according to Ezek. was to be overturned, overturned, overturned, and be no more until "He come whose right it is." Ezek. 21: 27.

This is the way Paul preached in "all his epistles," the essential feature being the resurrection, which fact is so important, that there is nothing in the gospel without it. It is the life of it. But for the resurrection of Christ, the whole plan of mercy would have proved a total failure. Any pretension to save without it would have been mere mockery. After the promise made to Adam, nothing could deter God from fulfilling it; and he has laid help upon one who is able and mighty to save.

But for the resurrection, the promise would be subjected to an everlasting protest. To this effect reasons the apostle. "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain;" (it cannot be vain if there is salvation without the resurrection,) . . . . yea and we are found false witnesses of God, because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ; whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. For if the dead rise not, then is Christ not raised; and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain, ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." 1 Cor. 15: 14–18.

This could not be a consequence, if men were created imperishable as some suppose.

The apostle declares that the gospel was preached to the Jews, by Josiah, and that all the world beside heard it. It cannot be hid, but by judicial blindness. ("According as it is written, God hath given them the spirit of slumber, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear) unto this day. And David saith, let their table be made a snare, and a trap, and a stumbling-block, and a recompense unto them. Let their eyes be darkend, that they may not see, and bow down their back alway." Rom. 11: 8–10.

Thus it happened unto Israel for rejecting the gospel. The heathen are judged by the same rule. "Because that when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful; but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened."

The last trial has been made upon this world, with the gospel.

1. The Jews were tried, and rejected the gospel.

2. The heathen rejected the same gospel.

3. Christians, so-called, rejected the gospel. Can it be denied? If the apostles, Paul and Peter—the prophets and Jesus have given the right account of it, then this statement is true, awfully true, fatally true. Any person of candor will be convinced of this by one fair reading of the 11th chap. of Heb.

This digression will no doubt be allowed, seeing its relevancy to the subject in hand.

II. [illegible] OF THE GOSPEL.

Without going into a labored description of faith I will present it as connected with the promise of the gospel. This is the light in which the apostle presents it; see Heb. chap. 11, Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham and his co-patriarchs; all of whom acted in reference to the inheritance. It is distinctly expressed in the narrative of the patriarchs. "By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise; for he looked for a city which hath foundations; whose builder and maker is God."

Looking for a city, is assigned as the reason of their faith. Because they saw the promises "afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." They could afford to do this in view of the great reward. Not that they expected to go to heaven, but that heaven would come to earth. Joseph thought his bones would be available one day, and wished to wake up at home.

Moses esteemed the reproach of Christ before the wealth of Egypt; he looked for the reward where Abraham sojourned and died. There were many more in St. Paul's account of the believers of early times, of whom he says, "time would fail to tell;" "of whom the world was not worthy."

"And these all having obtained a good report, through faith, received not the promise; God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." According to this narrative these worthies gained only a good report; the reward of faith was reserved until the very last child should be ready for it. The youngest child must be of age, and then all at the same time will receive the reward.

Suppose Jesus, Peter and Paul should visit the churches of this age, listen to their dogmas, and hear nothing about the Abrahamic faith,—or, in other words, hear another gospel declaimed. Our Lord would charge them as he had occasion once before,—"You make the word of God of none effect by your traditions." Paul would say,—"My prophecy is a reality." Peter would say,—"These are the false teachers, and scoffers that were to be in the last days." The same would be Jude's testimony. John would say,—"He that believeth not that Jesus shall come in the flesh is not of God." Suppose they should happen into a church in time of a revival and witness the scenes incident to such an occasion, and hear the counsel from the spiritual advisers, after this sort;—"Only believe"—"believe that Jesus died for you"—"believe that he now saves you." Another will inform the seeker that he must be willing to be damned, which means in orthodox dialect, eternal torment. Awful condition indeed. What an amount of submission!! It would be tedious to detail the variety of quack proscriptsons proposed for the cure of these anxious souls.

I think that the holy company we have named, would withdraw, saying,—"Let them alone, they are joined to their idols." "Come out of her my people; that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues."

"From such turn away." "Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees."

In conclusion, and in contrast, let me give a gospel prescription. "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth, the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thy heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."

For the Crisis.

A Happy Family.

Recently being on a tour for my Master in the State of New York, I put up several days with what I pronounce a happy family. The family consisted of husband, wife, and three well trained and lovely children. The parents were meek, humble, simple hearted souls, who seemed wholly devoted to God and his cause. They appeared to have received a good education, and to understand well what belongs to the proprieties of life. Their kindness to me I shall not soon forget; for I was not in good health while with them, and no father or mother could be more attentive to my wants than they were. The oldest daughter, "Mary," a fine specimen of all that is virtuous, dignified, and modest, seemed to me to have given her heart entirely to the Lord; for the meekness of Jesus seemed to shine in all her actions.—The second daughter, "Lib," aged about ten or eleven years, as sweet as a full blown June rose, with a heart as tender as an angel's, was the pet of every one that came into the house; and a word to her on the subject of religion would make the tears start in a moment. Then there was little "Sammy," aged seven years, brim-full of innocent fun and frolic, gamboling round the door-yard, and making every one love him.

How I loved that family! I wonder if I shall ever see them again? Not one unkind word did I hear, or one unkind look did I see all the while I was there. I conclude the kingdom of God will be full of just such people. O that our brethren and sisters would all remember, that family religion begins with good family government.

E. B.

For the Crisis.

Affectation.

I despise affectation in any one. It seems to me to be the most foolish, ridiculous, and useless part a person can act.—How mean, silly, and contemptible it makes one appear! And it frequently costs something, too. So, the man of affectation labors and spends to make people think he is what he is—a fool! On the contrary, how noble, interesting, and agreeable it makes one appear when acting naturally, and consistently! Well bred people always love the society of such an one, even if he be singular, and display uncommon eccentricity in his manners.

E. B.

Poetry.

SONG OF THE WAITING ONES.

BY W. SHEPHERD.

AIR.—"Flow gently sweet Afton."

Awake, slumb'ring virgins, join in a sweet song
Of praise and thanksgiving to God and the Lamb,
Who brought us salvation—to freely bestow—
Which saves us from sin, and from death, and its woe.
Cheer up, then, ye mourner, redemption is near,
The Heavenly Bridegroom is soon to appear,
And our joy will be full when our labor "is done,"
If we only prove faithful till the Savior shall come.

Hosanna to Jesus, dear Spirit, inspire
Our hearts e'er to love him, to bless and admire;
We'll praise him, we'll praise him, and crown him
our King,
Salvation through Jesus, salvation we'll sing.
O glory to Jesus, whose feet shall then stand
On Zion's bright mountain, the fair promised land.
We'll sing with the angels and join the fair throng,
If we only prove faithful till the Savior shall come.

And if we are called ere that happy morn
To rest in the grave and be laid in the tomb,
When the "last trump" shall sound thro' the earth and the skies
We again shall awake and in splendor arise.
In the bright resurrection the morning of bliss,
When Jesus shall crown the ransomed ones his;
O glory to Jesus, will then be the theme,
If we only prove faithful till the Savior shall come.

When the saints of all ages in the kingdom shall meet,
Round the throne of God's glory their Redeemer to greet,
What joy, O what rapture, shall fill each glad soul,
While pleasures celestial eternally roll.
Enrob'd pure and spotless with harps ever sing
Hallelujah, salvation to Jesus our King;
Through grace we must conquer and win a bright crown,
If we only prove faithful till the Savior shall come.

Elizabeth City, N. J.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

From Bro. S. J. Morgan.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to say a few words through the Crisis to the little flock. "Neither can they die any more for they are equal unto the angels, and are the children of God being the children of the resurrection." Jesus is the life of the believer here and the hope of the life hereafter. John 11: 25. In this world men die, and for that reason men marry that the vacancies may be filled up; but in that world they marry not, because they die not. Rev. 21: 4. Death reigns here, but cannot enter there. The believer is not totally ignorant of the happiness of his future inheritance. The upright shall dwell in God's presence; our Lord will be there with a body, and wherever he is, corporeally, there is heaven. Enoch and Elisha will be there in their glorified bodies, and all the redeemed. There we shall see our little ones that were taken away from us; we loved them here—how much more when we behold them smiling, shining cherubs. Husbands and wives, parents and children, ministers and people, kindred and friends will there meet to part no more for ever. Shall we not know each other? Peter, James and John knew Moses and Elias. Matt. 17: 1–2.

Paul told the Thessalonians they were his hope, and joy, and crown, at the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ: surely, then, he must know them.

Our blessed Jesus gave his followers the best of comfort in the worst of time, assuring them that "in his Father's house are many mansions;" and we know that His Father is the Father of every believer in him, and that his home is their home.

My brethren, every occupant will be completely swallowed up of glory and of God. Multitudes who possess not a foot of land now will possess a mansion and inherit the earth. Of the reality of all this happiness there can be no doubt, for the adorable Redeemer declares "If it were not so I would have told you." "Men may deceive you, you may deceive yourselves, but I will not; I go to prepare a place for you." When he comes he will never say, "Well done" to any who have not done well. It matters but little who speaks ill of us here, for Jesus will soon dwell with us, and make us rulers over many nations.

All we can do for Christ is very little, and it is most ungrateful not to do the little we may. If all our deeds, sufferings, and improvings, were put together, they would scarcely be worth naming, when compared with the glory which shall be revealed by him for us. He has in store for those who serve him, a crown of righteousness—a throne of glory, and a kingdom. They may have beet. beggars here, but that shall not prevent them from being rulers in glory. Here they have but flashes of joy, and floods of sorrow; but there they shall enter fully into the joy of their Lord. The joy of Heaven will be pure, free from alloy—an ocean of joy without one drop of grief. Let the eye turn whichsoever way it may, there is nothing but joy and gladness. Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face. Now we know in part; then shall we know even as we are known. Now we are assaulted by the enemy, then we shall be free from every foe, and have nothing in us or about us, to induce temptation. Nothing will be found there to mar our pleasures, nor our peace. Here christians are in their infancy, there they will arrive at the fullness of the stature of Christ. Here at best, they are faithful over but few things, there they are made rulers over many things. Here they are saved by hope, there they possess the reality. Now they have the earnest; then, the inheritance.

O blessed be God! Christ is now hid, and our lives are hid with him; but he will not always be concealed, for he is soon to appear in all the splendor of the heavenly world, accompanied by ten thousand times ten thousand glorified saints and angels. It will be Christ's glory to have his saints with him, and their glory to be with him.

And now, dearly beloved, what shall I say more? What a glorious meeting, when glorified saints, and glorified angels with a glorified Christ, appear in glory! Then he will say,—"Come, take possession now; here are your mansions—your seats—your thrones—your sceptres—your kingdoms—your crowns. Reign forever. Then will they sing salvation unto God, who sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb. Amen. Behold he cometh quickly!

S. J. MORGAN.

Nov. 23, 1856.

For the Crisis

Short Sayings.

If you wish your children to love you, make them feel that you love them.

Never tell your children to do a thing but once, and then they will learn to go at once and do it.

If you wish to spoil your children, make them think they are as bad as possible.

E. B.

Choice Selections.

Charity.

Night kissed the young rose, and it bent softly to sleep. Stars shone, and pure dew-drops hung upon its bosom, and watched its sweet slumbers. Morning came with its dancing breezes, and they whispered to the young rose, and it awoke joyous and smiling. Lightly it danced to and fro in all the loveliness of health and youthful innocence. Then came the ardent sun-god, sweeping from the east, and smote the young rose with its scorching rays and it fainted. Deserted and almost heart-broken, it dropped to the dust in lowliness and despair. Now the gentle breeze, which had been gamboling over the sea, pushing on the home-bound bark, sweeping over hill and dale, by the neat cottage and the still brook, turning the old mill, fanning the brow of disease, and frisking the curls of innocent childhood—came tripping along on her errands of mercy and love, and when she saw the young rose she hastened to kiss it, and fondly bathed its forehead in cool, refreshing showers, and the young rose revived and looked and smiled in gratitude to the kind breeze, but she hurried quickly away; for she soon perceived that a delicious fragrance had been poured on her wings by the grateful rose; and the kind breeze was glad in heart, and went away singing through the trees.

Thus charity, like the breeze, gathers fragrance from the drooping flowers it refreshes, and unconsciously reaps a reward in the performance of its office of kindness, which steals on the heart like rich perfume to bless and to cheer.

The Troublesome Neighbor.

A few years ago, a poor mechanic, of a very quarrelsome disposition, settled near a Christian farmer, whose friends expressed to him their sympathy in the annoyance he was likely to receive.

"Never mind," said the good old man, "I have never yet quarrel ed with a neighbor, and I am too old to begin now."

Six months passed, and then began a series of petty annoyances, which the farmer bore uncomplainingly; but this only irritated his neighbor the more, until meeting the farmer one day in the height of passion he poured upon him a torrent of insult and abuse.

"Friend," said the farmer gently, "no man under the influence of passion can reason clearly; come to me calmly and we will discuss your grievances."

The angry man raised his clenched hand to strike him, but was restrained by some unseen influence, and both went their way.

About a week after, the mechanic was passing the farmer's house with a load of grain. It was at the foot of a hill, and the load was heavy. He coaxed, threatened, and beat his oxen, but all to no purpose. He must leave his load or ask aid of the man he had injured. Presently he saw the farmer unhitch his oxen from a load of hay, and come towards him. With kindly words the farmer proffered his assistance, drew him safely to the summit, and without waiting for thanks, departed as he came. Here is a simple act but mighty in its influence. The mechanic was humble, acknowledged the purity and power of that religion that could "bear and forbear," and has since that time never willingly provoked his friend.

God's Coffer.

There was once a respectable wealthy man, whose name was Benedict—that means "Blessed." And he had a good right to bear such a name; for God had blessed him richly with all good things, and all who knew him blessed him too; and he always sought to make others happy—the stranger as well as the neighbor—particularly the poor and needy. But he did in this way; when he had passed a joyous day with his friends, he would go into his chamber and think. "There are many who have not had such a day of enjoyment. How would it have been if I had invited as many more guests?" Then he would lay by of his money, as much as the feast had cost him, in a chest which he called God's Coffer.

In the same way, if he heard that there had been a fire anywhere, he would give largely for the relief of the unhappy sufferers; and then he would behold his own house, and go into his chamber, and think, "all here is safe and unhurt," and immediately he would lay up some gold in God's Coffer.

Whenever he heard of any destruction of property from thunder or hail, or drought or other mischances, he would lay up gold on account of it, in God's Coffer.

Also, if he had occasion to buy wine, or costly furniture, he would purchase it but moderately only, to enable him the better to entertain his friends; and then go into his chamber, and say, "So much more mightest thou have bought, and have enriched thy stores," and lay up the value in God's Coffer. Besides which, he would willingly give of his best wine, if a sick person needed it.

And as he lay on his dying bed, and death was approaching, the poor, the widows, and the orphans lamented and wept, and said, "who will take pity on us when Benedict is taken from us? As long as he lived we wanted for nothing, but what will now become of us?"

But he said, "A good householder takes care that when he is away his children should not want. So take the 'God's Coffer,' with all that is in it. It belongs to the poor, the widows, and the orphans; divide it, and use it well and wisely."

And so God's Coffer has remained for hundreds of years, to the comfort of the needy, and the man is remembered with grateful blessings.—[Krummacher.

An Italian has invented an instrument by which the telegraphic wire will transmit to any distance an exact fac simile of any writing or design, so that the despatch and signature of a correspondent will appear as if written by himself.

The Moslems deny the personal sufferings of Christ, and believe that a phantom was crucified in his place. They also hold to the second coming of the Lord in flesh, as a forerunner of Mohammed, who shall re-appear shortly before the day of Judgment.

He enjoys much who is thankful for little. If the mercies of God be not loadstones to draw us to heaven, they will be millstones to sink us to perdition.

Afflictions are God's whetstones—they put a new edge upon old principles.

A clear conscience is a good staff for old age.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 107, HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1856. WHOLE NO. 69. VOL. IV. NO. 17.

The World's Crisis,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Christ's Inheritance.

BY G. L. TEEPLE.

No. III.

Having attained the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession, He proceeds to prepare it for his followers, and the manner of preparing is brought to view in the 2nd Epistle of Peter. Peter declares that the present heavens and earth are reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men. He further says—"but the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up." Here we see the cleansing of the earth by the greatest purifier in the world, and a new earth appears for his people.

Peter says—"Nevertheless we, according to His promise, look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." To illustrate this matter, we take a stove that is worn out, to the foundry. It passes through its fiery ordeal and comes out in the would a new stove. So when this earth is worn out and waxed old as a garment, and is ready to be folded up, the inhabitants being ripe in wickedness; the Lord takes the earth into his hands, burns up the wicked and the works of wickedness, and melts the earth with fervent heat, and, after the dross is consumed, the earth comes forth from the hand of its Maker in all its primeval beauty, ready for the saints to take possession of the kingdom promised to them.—Christ now becomes subject to the Father, and God becomes all and in all. 1 Cor. 15: 28.

It is declared the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. Sin came into the world by the devil; so, when the devil is destroyed, then, death, the effects of sin, is destroyed also; consequently, in the new creation there can be no death, but life, the gift of God, will be possessed by the saints of the Most High, and they shall neither sorrow nor sigh, for the former things shall be forgotten.

O how delightful, how pleasing the tho't that ample and full provision has been made so that all, that will, may partake of those celestial joys. Here are corruptible crowns and possessions defiled, that pass away, but there are crowns of glory and "an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away." "The kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

Now in conclusion, let me say,—take heed to the admonition following our text. Inasmuch as the time is coming when all that reject the gospel will be given to Christ, to be ruled with a rod of iron and be dashed in pieces like a potter's vessel,—be wise. It is wisdom to listen to the gospel, break off from sin, and embrace the offer of Jesus, and have a shelter from the approaching storm.

Sinners, be wise for yourselves, flee to Christ, he stands ready to receive you with outstretched arms; he waits to embrace you. O then come,—sinner come! Come now ere it is too late. Don't turn a deaf ear to all the entreaties of the gospel and the invitations of Christ, that are being continually held out to you through his servants; but listen and be instructed by the judgments of God, that have in time past fallen on the heads of the wicked, and learn from their history not to persist in sin and perish, but listen as for eternal life. Serve the Lord with fear. Not a slavish fear in view of the punishments he has threatened, but a filial fear; that kind the boy had towards his father when tempted to disobey him, with the assurance that the father would not punish him, for he was so kind. The little boy remarked, that although his father was kind and might not punish him, yet he would not disobey his father because it would hurt his father's feelings. He feared to grieve his kind father.

Here is filial fear, the same kind we must have towards our heavenly Father.—We love him, says John, because he first loved us. O let us love him more, and study not to grieve such a good parent as ours, who will not withhold any good thing from them that walk uprightly. Try to obey him in all things.

Says Christ,—If ye love me keep my commandments. Recollect,—"great peace have they that love thy law and nothing shall offend them." Ps. 119: 165. It is just and right we should love and serve him, for he has shown great love towards us. He has died for us, and purchased our redemption with his own blood. Then how ardent ought our love to be to him, who has done so much for us. God grant us grace to love thee more. Rejoice with trembling. While we may rejoice in view of the state of things brought to view in our text, when all sin and the effects of sin are gone, and we be permitted to enjoy our fair Eden home, and basks in the sunbeams of God's eternal glory, let us still tremble in view of the fact, that we are still on probation, subject to temptation and still more so in these perilous times when influences are abroad in the earth tending to draw the mind away from Christ. And we are in danger of being overcome by temptation, as well as others, and fall as did our first parents, and so finally lose the kingdom and inheritance that is to be brought back and restored by Jesus Christ. For the heavens must retain him until the times of restitution of all things, spoken of by all the holy prophets. To lose this is to lose all. Then let us tremble for fear, and watch over ourselves to the end of the warfare.

"Kiss the Son lest he be angry and ye perish from the way when his wrath is kindled but a little." To kiss the Son, signifies to embrace him, to fall into his arms, taking him as our guide, our protector, and our great deliverer,—our eternal Savior. O then, come, embrace this opportunity, as the only time to fall into His arms, and receive him as your once crucified but now risen and exalted Redeemer; lest, by your continual procrastination and refusing to come, the last hour of time arrives and finds you without an interest in the Son of God, and his wrath kindles, and ye perish from the way with the rest that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Let me entreat you to be ruled by grace divine, and softened before God by melting mercy and dying love; rather than wait, and finally have to be ruled with a rod of iron, and dashed in pieces like a potter's vessel.

Blessed are all they that put their trust in Him. Do not put your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help; for "cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm.' Put not your trust in the righteousness of any man, for man cannot save you; neither put your trust in your own goodness. Hundreds, I fear, are doing thus. They say I live honestly—I pay all my debts—I give to the support of the gospel—I help in all the reforms—I attend regularly the house of worship, and of all things I possess I give tithes; consequently, I must be saved.

Stop, friend; remember, our own righteousness is like filthy rags, and although we may do all the outer acts of devotion, yet our trust may not be in God, and we fall like the house built upon the sand, when the great deluge of fire comes upon the world. We want something more to secure us than what is in mortal man. In order to be secure in the coming storm, we must get something proof against the thing coming. If it was a storm of rain, we should require something to buoy us above the waters, as did Noah; but now, we see a storm of God's wrath approaching, made up of fire and brimstone; and what can withstand it? Nothing in all this material world can we find to put our trust in.—But there is One, that revealed himself as talking with Moses in the burning bush; One, that stood by the three Hebrew children and suffered not an hair to be singed; One, that preserved John in the boiling oil. If we put our trust in Him, he can keep us when the world is on fire. Truly, then, blessed are all they that put their trust in Him; all, all; rich and poor; bond and free; white and black; Jew or Gentile; male or female. Then come, brother, cast all your care upon Him; put your trust and confidence in him, and you are safe.

If you are weak, he is strong; if you have cares and sorrows he can bear them. He is everything to those that put their trust in him, and while you continue to trust him he will never leave you nor forsake you; in all emergencies he will be with you, to guide and deliver you, and to keep you in perfect peace; for, says the prophet, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee; because he trusteth in thee."

O, to be kept in perfect peace, that peace that flows like the river, that rolls on and on, until it launches out into the broad bay of eternal glory where—

"Peace shall reign from shore to shore,
And nations shall learn war no more;"

where all shall enjoy pleasures that never die, and range the fields of bliss by their dear Redeemer's side, being permitted to partake of the tree of life which is in the midst of the Paradise of God.

I beseech you all, brethren, sisters, sinners,—come, and put your trust in God. And now may the spirit of God enlighten and guide your minds into the truth, and bring you to be partakers of the kingdom of God, through Jesus Christ our Lord.—Amen.

For the Crisis.

The true Israel of the New Testament.

BY Z. CAMPBELL.

[Concluded.]

Having gone through the evangelists and found the terms Israel, Jews and Gentiles used in precisely the Old Testament sense, we examine the "Acts of the Apostles;" beginning at Acts 1: 6. "When they therefore were come together, they asked of him saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?"

There can be no doubt with regard to the Israel here spoken of,—for there never was but one Israel that ever had the kingdom which was promised to Christ, and the kingdom which he came to restore. All admit that David's kingdom is the one in question, and Israel once possessed it under David, and lost it under Zedekiah. Ezek. 21: 27. To restore it, must be to give it to those who lost it, or it cannot be restored to Israel. The Israel that lost it were an Israel nationally, whether they believed God or not. But it does not follow that it will be restored to the same Israel whether they rebel against God or not. Zacharias did not so prophecy, but very differently,—"That he would grant unto us, that we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness." This is what the apostles did not seem to understand when they put the question, as though they thought the kingdom might be restored then, to a disobedient Israel; whereas, it is not until they are delivered out of the hand of their enemies, and serve God without fear, in holiness and righteousness. Still they are the same old Israel.

The Lord himself, made the several Old Testament distinctions between Israel and Gentile after this. Acts 9: 15. "But the Lord said unto him, go thy way; for he (Paul) is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel." 23d v. "And after that many days were fulfilled, the Jews, (the same children of Israel,) took counsel to kill him." This is the Old Testament Israel; and the same in chap. 10: 36, 39; in 11: 18, 19; in 14. 6, 16, 23, 24, 26, 41–50; and in 14: 1–5, These are so clear in themselves, that no comment is needed.

Believing Jews are still called Jews, in the New Testament; as also unbelieving Jews. Proof. Acts 16: 20. "These men, (Paul and Silas,) being Jews, do exceedingly trouble our city." 17: 5. "But the Jews which believed not, moved with envy." We come now to that well-known text, Rom. 2: 28, 29. "For he is not a Jew, which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision, which is outwardly in the flesh. But he is a Jew which is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart in the spirit, and not in the letter; whose praise is not of men, but of God. What advantage then, hath the Jew." None at all, according to the interpretation, some put on the 28th and 29th verses.

Paul's argnment is, that there is no profit to one who is circumcised and does not keep the law,—but there is profit to one who is uncircumcised and does keep it. 'For he is not a Jew who is one outwardly;" that is, outward circumcision, unaccompanied with keeping the law, is not regarded by God as circumcision. So he is certainly no more a Jew, who is one outwardly, than he is a christian who is one outwardly. If all we have of christianity is outward, it will profit nothing. "But he is a Jew who is one inwardly;" in the same sense, he only is a christian who is one inwardly. And this ought to have been known to every Jew; but it appears it was not, and Paul was laboring to convince them. See ver. 17th. "Behold, thou art called a Jew, and resteth in the law." Resting in the law alone, never yet made a Jew in his individual responsibility to God. "What advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision? "Much every way," says Paul, and then gives an instance from the oracles of God. But if he meant there never was a Jew except the true and faithful believers of God, tell us how he could say there was much profit every way in being a circumcised Jew? But Paul explains it thus: "For what if some did not believe? shall their unbelief make the word of God without effect? God forbid." If some Jews do not believe, still, the promise of God to the Jews, as a people, will not be made void. And one of his promises is, that when they are delivered from their enemies, and from the hand of all that hate them, they will serve God without fear in holiness and righteousness. God will not break this promise because some Jews did not believe it. There are some professed christians who do not believe Zacarias' prophecy. "What advantage then hath the" christian? None at all; if God should throw away the whole church, because some do not believe his promises to Israel. And "what then? are we better than they? No, in no wise; for we have before proved both Jew and Gentiles, that they are all under sin." Here, again, Paul keeps to the Old Testament distinction between Jew and Gentile, notwithstanding he had just said, "he is not a Jew who is one outwardly."

We will now watch Paul closely and see whom he calls a Jew after this. Rom. 9; 3–6. "For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh, who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God and the promises. Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh, Christ came, who is over all, God blessed forever. Amen." "For they are not all Israel, which are of Israel."

No wonder he said, the Jew hath much advantage every way, for all the good things belong to him in the above long catalogue. But Paul has done more than to show us what inestimable blessings belong to Israel, he has told us who are Israelites—his brethren and kinsmen according to the flesh: not the spiritual Israel, but the Israel according to the flesh. And yet he said, "they are not all Israel, which are of Israel;" and he might have added, they are not all christians who are of christians. And what then? should we have understood that there are no christians who are of christians, and that there are no Israel who are of Israel? Not at all. His language proves there is an Israel who are of Israel, and that they are his brethren, the Israel according to the flesh; but that some of them had so far apostatized as not to deserve the honored name of Israel. Rom. 11: 1. 'I say then, hath God cast away his people? God forbid. For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin."

We know, now, whom Paul calls Israel; they are his brethren according to the flesh, and descendants of Abraham. We will now see whom he calls Gentiles. Ver. 13th. "For I speak to you Gentiles, inasmuch as I am the apostle of the Gentiles. I magnify my office."

Paul dedicates this epistle—"To all that be in the house, beloved of God, called to be saints,"—what some claim to be the true Israel; but Paul calls them Gentiles. Again, writing to "the saints" at Ephesus, and the faithful in Christ Jesus," he thus addresses them:—"For this cause, I Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ for you Gentiles." He should have called them Israel, if there are no Israel but true believers.

Paul keeps up the Old Testament distinction between the literal Jew and Gentile, throughout his epistles. "If by any means I may provoke to emulation them which are my flesh, (literal Jews) and might save some of them. For if the casting away of of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be but life from the dead? For if the first-fruits be holy, the lump (or whole crop) is also holy; and if the root (original stock of the Jews) be holy, so are the branches;" that is, the descendants. The restoration of the literal seed of Jacob is everywhere promised in the Old Testament, and Paul confirms it in language unmistakable—"them which are my flock." These are Paul's true Israel, holy at the root, and holy in the branches; holy in the first fruits, and holy as a lump. But some of the branches are broken off through unbelief; bnt the unbelief of some does not make the grace of God of none effect to the lump. Paul does not condescend to call his Gentile brethren Israel in one instance in all his epistles, but he does call them Gentiles still, and of "the wild olive tree;" and that this is the Old Testament sense of the terms may be seen in Rom. 15: 8–12.

"Now I say that Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision, for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers; and that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy, as it is written (Ps. 18: 49,) for this cause I will confess to thee among the Gentiles, and unto thy name. And again he saith, (Deut. 32: 43,) rejoice ye Gentiles, with his people. And again, (Ps. 117: 1.) praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles, and laud him all ye people. And again Esaias saith, (Isa. 11: 1) there shall be a root of Jesse, and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; in him shall the Gentiles trust."

In these citations from the Old Testament, Paul uses the terms "his people," and Gentile in the Old Testament sense: and if he did not mean so, he was criminally guilty in not saying so; for in citing as he did, Moses, David and Isaiah, he leaves us no room to think he meant any other distinction between the people of God and the Gentiles, than that of the prophets. Yea, he does more than leave us to infer this; he first says,—"Christ was a minister of the circumcision, for the truth of God, TO CONFIRM THE PROMISES MADE UNTO THE FATHERS."

Now, of whom are the fathers, the fathers? Paul says, his brethren and kinsmen "according to the FLESH who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory and the COVENANT, and the giving of the law and the service of God and the PROMISE. Whose are the fathers, and of whom, as concerning the FLESH, Christ came."

His plain language is, therefore, that Christ was a minister of the circumcision, to confirm the promise made to the fathers, to their children according to the flesh, or Israelites—his brethren—according to the flesh—"Whose are the fathers." That is, the fathers are the fathers of Israel according to the flesh; to whom pertaineth the PROMISES. The promises then, belong to Israel according to the flesh, so says Paul; and moreover, Christ came, not to take them away, but to CONFIRM them.

And in order to prove this he made four citations in quick succession, from the old prophets. The whole text cited from Moses (Deut. 32: 43,) reads thus: "Rejoice O ye nations, (Heb. heathen, or Gentiles, or nations.) with his people; for he will avenge the blood of his servants, and will render vengeance to his adversaries, and will be merciful unto his land, and to his people"—Paul's Israel according to flesh.

But, says one, did not Paul say to the Galations, "Know ye therefore, that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham?" Yes, and more; among those that have been baptized into, Christ, there is "neither Jew nor Greek, bond or free, male or female."

But in saying, "they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham," he did not say that Abraham had no other children. There ever have been two kinds of children in the world; the natural children of a family, and adopted children. The adoption of a child never made him heir to more than the natural child, neither does the adopted child disinherit the natural child. So those that are of faith, are indeed the children of Abraham, by adoption; but they cannot disinherit the natural seed to whom Paul says, pertaineth the PROMISES. He says, also, the adoption pertains to the Israel according to the flesh. So the broken off branches may be grafted in by adoption. This is present and individual relation, but the salvation of the "lump," is deferred "until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." And all Israel, (Paul's Israel, according to the flesh) shall be saved; as it is written, there shall come out of Zion the deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob; for this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins. It is an error that many have fallen into, that the Jews in denying Christ, departed from the Abrahamic faith. But this is not a fact. As a people they believe in the promise unto the fathers, and all the prophets said of Christ; but they deny the MAN. Paul says, speaking of the promise.—"Unto which promise our twelve [illegible] instantly serving God day and night, hope to come." The twelve tribes, as a people, had no faith in Jesus, but looked for Messiah to come; and yet they served God day and night, hoping to come to the promise made of God unto the fathers.

That Paul used the terms, Jew and Gentile, in the literal sense, may be seen in Gal. 2: 3, 13, 14.

Gal. 3: 28, is often cited to prove there is neither Jew nor Greek; but the apostle limits the non-distinction to those in Christ. "For as many of [illegible] been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. There (in Christ,) is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female, for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." In Col. 3: 10. 11, he presents the same idea, speaking of those who have "put on the new man,"—"Where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free; but Christ is all and in all."

Here the apostle asserts, first, there is neither Jew nor Greek; yet he called Peter a Jew after he had put on Christ, Gal. 2: 14; and after some of the Romans and Ephesians had been baptized into Christ, he still calls them Gentiles. He asserts, too, there is no circumcision in Christ, but the apostles were circumcised before they put on Christ, and coming into Christ did not uncircumcise them. They were free men also before, and still free men in Christ. So then, all there is of it, is that none of these distinctions are recognized in Christ as privileged distinctions; but in Him the christian obligations, privileges, and blessings are alike to all, though the nominal distinctions do exist still.

We have now examined the principal passages in the New Testament in which the terms, Jew, Israel or Jacob, and Gentile are used; and we have found in every inst ance, they are used in their Old Testament sense. Paul expressly says, that Israel are his brethren and kinsmen according to the flesh, and that everything pertains to them that the christian hopes for through Christ. We find that the converted, and unconverted Jews are alike called Jews without a qualifying term; and that converted, and unconverted Gentiles are also called Gentiles. And as this distinction is by divine inspiration, and is common throughout the New Testament as well as the Old, it must be by design.

None other than the literal seed is implied in the Old Testament; as, "Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, he that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him as a shepherd doth his flock." Jer. 31: 10. If this is not the same Israel that will be gathered, that was, or now is scattered, the prophet wrote with an in tention to deceive us, for his language means it and nothing else.

Again; 11th ver. "For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and ransomed him from the hand of him that was stronger than he." (Gen. 25: 23.) 12th v. "Therefore they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together to the goodness of the Lord; . . . . and their souls shall be as a watered garden; and they shall not sorrow any more at all."

No doubt, Zacharias had his mind on this prophecy, or a similar one, when he spake the language in Luke 1: 74, 75.

Thus much is written that we may get into a more Biblical mode of interpretation, and that we may think less of preaching our own views, and more of preaching the great truths of the "gospel of the kingdom."

For the Crisis.

From Sr. E. J. Ackerman.

BRO. GRANT:—For the first time, I have taken my pen to write a few lines for the Crisis. We are pilgrims and strangers, in a strange land, seeking a better country, where sickness, sorrow, pain and death, can never have admittance. In tranquil rest we'll dwell undisturbed by care or woe, and our Savior's praises sing while eternal ages roll. No jarring note will be heard, no angry looks be seen. O, I'll try while here I roam, to walk in wisdom's ways, that with the followers of the Lamb I may be gathered home. "There will be no broken band,—all, all are there." No more parting with those we love—when once we've met on that peaceful shore, the pangs of parting will be felt no more. Let us all strive to be faithful here. Although we may have great trials surrounding us on every side, we'll endeavor to bear them patiently, realizing that they are not worthy to be compared with the reward that is in reserve for us when Christ shall appear; for it is written, that our afflictions here which are but for a moment, will work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

The church in this place are few in number, yet they trust in the Lord feeling that they are strong, because he hath promised to be with them even "to the end of the world." We seldom have preaching, but are not without the little prayer meetings. As we assemble ourselves together we feel it is not in vain, for Jesus hath said,—"where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst," and his promises are sure; though heaven and earth shall pass away yet not one jot or tittle of his word shall fail. As we feel the sweet, hallowed influence of his presence, we can say truly, the world has no charms for us; and it inspires us to cry more earnestly "may thy Kingdom come!"

"Then Savior us through grace receive,
Transported from this vale to live,
And in thy Kingdom dwell;
Where faith is sweetly lost in sight,
And hope in full, supreme delight,
That mortals ne'er can tell."

Your sister, in hope,
ELIZA J. ACKERMAN.

Sharon, Oct. 9, '56.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 24, 1856.

Christian Union.

NUMBER V.

In former articles, we have endeavored to show that there can be no true christian union where there is not christian love which is "shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto us," as a consequence of repentance for sins, and pardon from the Lord. All the resolutions, creeds, and by-laws that men can invent will bind us no more than a rope of sand, unless love and christian character be the basis of union.

But there is another element in christian character to which we would call attention for a few moments: to wit., "love of the truth." People may believe the truth and not love it. I may believe a friend is dying, or that he has backslidden from the Lord, but I have no love for such knowledge.

Paul tells us by inspiration when prophesying of "the mystery of iniquity, and . . . . that wicked" one that should be revealed, who is to be destroyed "with the brightness of his (Christ's) coming," that they should "perish, because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved." The prime charge seems to be, not that they are without the truth, but that they do not love it. It is not difficult to decide when a man has love for an object, for he will use all proper means to obtain the same. If he loves money, his actions and words will show it. Who, that truly loves an object, would not strive to be its possessor.

Hence it follows, if one loves the truth, he will search for it as for "hid treasures."

One cannot be indifferent about the possession of an object he loves; it is absurd to suppose it. Every one's experience would bodly controvert such a sentiment; consequently, we are led to believe without doubt, when we meet with individuals who manifest no desire to know the sublime truth revealed in the Bible, that they do not love it, and therefore, they are deficient in an important characteristic necessary for true christian union.

We often meet with people who profess great love for the truth, but who will not follow any further than they are sustained by the popular voice in community, thus demonstrating that they love reputation and "the praise of men more than the praise of God." He who loves the truth in sincerity, as a christian should, will never make a compromise with error to save friends, money, or reputation.

We are fully persuaded that this important element in christian character is fast yielding to a love of error and fables, thus fulfilling the following scripture:—"For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." 2 Tim. 4: 3—4.

In Dickenson's New Testament this reads—"The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but will accumulate teachers to themselves according to their own eager desire, having an insatiable curiosity, and they will indeed withhold their attention from the truth, and will be turned to fables."

Wm. Tyndale, who first translated the New Testament into the English language renders this passage as follows:—"For the time will come, when they will not suffer wholesome doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they (whose ears itch) get them an heap of teachers, and shall turn their ears from the truth and shall be given unto fables."

We see from the foregoing, that it is essential we should love the truth in order to possess a genuine christian character, suitable for union on gospel principles. A union without this, would not be a christian union.

Stop.

We regret that we are under the necessity of discontinuing the Crisis to those who are not on the free list, and have never paid anything since it became a subscription paper, in Aug. 1855. We are not prepared to admit that any one who professes to observe the principles of christianity, would consent to receive a paper for more than eighteen months without paying or intending to pay anything, when he knew the publishers had no intimation to the contrary.

Brn., let us hear from you without delay, and if you cannot pay at present, and intend to do so as soon as possible, then we shall continue to send the paper; but if you do not like the Crisis, please say so, and we will part in friendship; but permit us to say in christian kindness, to those who may conclude to cut our acquaintance, we need what is honestly our due; and we feel confident that all who truly love Jesus, will do the best they can, and if they can or cannot pay anything, we shall expect to hear from them immediately.

If we should stop any who have, or have not made known to us their inability to pay, if they will inform us we will send them the Crisis as usual; as we wish to supply the poor as long as we publish the paper. Let all, who can, contribute for the object. [ED. in behalf of the Committee.

Look Here!

There are over five hundred of our paying subscribers who have not paid any thing for the present volume, which commenced the first week in Sept. If we could go on and meet our bills, we would be silent, for we very much dislike to say any thing about money matters; yet we are aware that our self-denying, and self-sacrificing brethren and sisters wish us to speak freely, and they will cheerfully do all they can to relieve our necessities.

We are now about one hundred dollars in debt, but if we receive what is now due, which should have been paid more than three months since, then, we can go on with a light heart. Perhaps some will make a donation for the benefit of the poor, to help us in this our time of need. Remember—"He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord, and that which he hath given will he pay him again." Come, Brethren and Sisters, show your faith by your works.

We shall try to make the Crisis just such a paper as you need at this time; one that will be of more real value to you than many things that cost much more.—We cannot think it is pleasing to the Lord to have us running in debt, for we are instructed to "owe no man anything." We therefore beg of our patrons that they will not suffer us to be fettered and loaded down again with an "OLD DEBT."

Brethren, shall this call pass unheeded? We hope better things. We wish our preaching brethren would bring this matter before their congregations, and feel a common interest with us, praying the Lord to give us wisdom, and make the Crisis a blessing to all its readers.

Our subscription list has increased some hundreds since we removed the paper to Boston, and we are satisfied, that with a little effort on the part of each reader our number of subscribers can be doubled.—People will read something, and let us try to benefit them by placing in their hands that which will lead them to serve the Lord, and gain a home in the everlasting kingdom.

We trust the response will be prompt, hearty, and "pocket deep."

Remember, we need your aid NOW. We shall say no more at present.

ED. in behalf of the Committee.

For the Crisis.

What is for Christians.

For christians there are crowns of glory, harps, white robes, palms of victory, songs of gladness, joys eternal, everlasting pleasures, unchanging friends, holy smiles, divine greetings, celestial raptures, unfading beauties, immortal bodies, and changless glories;—there is eternal life, undecaying health, a certain home, a splendid city, a river of life, a better country, a fruitful land, a heavenly rest, a perfect state of society, a meeting with Jesus and angels! I will be a christian! B. B.

For the Crisis.

Consolation.

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

Earth affords us no enduring consolation. We look for joy, and lo! sorrow comes; we desire peace, and find tumult; we seek blessings, and obtain curses. For bread we have a stone, for a fish a serpent, for an egg a scorpion. We cannot console ourselves here, 'mid the wasteness and desolation of earth. We cannot be comforted with the vapid joys and delusive pleasures of this world. O no; our hearts turn from the prevailing ruin and desolation, and seek for consolation at a purer fount.

Our consolation is in the immutable God of heaven and earth. Hither, as to a rock of refuge, we hie from the storms of time; hither, as to a stronghold, we flee from the rude assaults of raging foes; hither, as to an ever gushing fountain, we haste to slake our burning thirst, and lose the torment of life's fitful fever in the consolations of God. In him, the Unchangeable—the Strong—the High—the Holy—the Eternal One, we find our joy. The eternal God is our refuge, and underneath us are the everlasting arms. He, the All-wise, and the All-powerful One, is our pledged supporter, our everlasting strength. Here then, the weak and frail children of men may be secure. They may come with all their wants and all their woes, and they may confide in the goodness, strength, and wisdom, of him that made the heavens and the earth. He can do for them exceeding abundantly above all that they can ask or think.

O let your desires go forth, let your imagination revel, let your thoughts expand, your petitions enlarge, and after all, he is able, and willing too, to do exceeding abundantly above the whole. Let us build our confidence here, upon him who is without variableness or shadow of turning, so while earthly hopes are fading away, or are borne in wild confusion down time's arrowy tide, ours shall surmount the rock of ages, and stand in the calmness of Almighty majesty, amid all the ruin of earth's departing scenes.

Our consolation comes to us through Christ. We have everlasting consolation through grace, and grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. He is our Great Counselor and Mighty God;—our friend and Redeeming kinsman; our Way, and Truth, and Life; our Hope, our Resurrection, our Savior! What bounteous consolations are suggested by these titles of Christ, and what everlasting joy will the accomplishment of his varied labors afford, to those whose hearts adore him as their Lord and God. Consolation through Christ is adapted to our needs. It is the pearl of price in a casket, where we may view it—the grapes of Eschol brought to us in the desert, by a friendly hand—the water of life handed down to us in an "earthen vessel"—the fruits of Paradise gathered by the Lord's own hand, and flung gently down to pilgrims in a desert world. The great Physician not only procures the healing balm, but he comes down into the hovel of adversity and woe, and binds it about our bleeding hearts with his own gentle hand. Here we have consolation; consolation brought nigh, and brought nigh by one who is "bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh"—made in the likeness of sinful flesh, and yet one who did no sin, and who was the brightness of the Father's glory, and the express image of his person.

What consolation may we enjoy as we come and unfold the story of our sorrows before HIM, and catch the soft tide of sympathy that gushes from his brother-heart! Ah, he is touched with the feeling of our infirmities; his experience of mortality is complete, aye, and of immortality also!—He has trodden every pilgrim foot-mark, from Bethlehem's manger to the eternal throne. He has passed from immortal glory down to the very dust of death, and then upward in "the path of life," to enjoy again that glory which he had "before the world was." He has known the wealth of universal heritage—the poverty of utter homelessness—and now he knows again, the "riches of his glory." He has been honored by angelic adoration, and again he has endured the mocking and spitting of an impious mob; and now he is exalted far above all principality, and power, and every name that is named, both in this world, and the world to come. Thus has he struck each chord in the great harp of the universe; he has run the whole wide register, down and up again, from the lofty music of pre-existent gladness, down to the deep wailings of the mortal agony, and from the hushed whispers of the gloomy sepulcher up to the mighty hallelujahs that burst from angel hosts above. And all through this changeful destiny he bears the vivid recollection of the past. Perfected through sufferings, the great captain of our salvation may well bring many sons to glory, along the same thorny and perilous course. Tempted in all points as we are, stretching forth the hand of his Omnipotence, he knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation.

To such a Savior we may come and bring our woes; and through such a Mediator we may receive all the blessings of that God, who always maketh us to triumph in Christ. Here we rest. Here we are secure. The waves of coming wrath cannot disturb us—the crash of dissolving elements—the thunder of the earth's grand catastrophe—the enkindling of nature's final fires—all these cannot affright the trusting heart of him whose cares are cast on Jesus Christ.

The consolations which God bestows through Jesus Christ, are ministered to us and especially applied to our hearts by the Holy Spirit. The especial work of the Spirit of God on the hearts of believers is, to comfort, assist, and instruct them. "I will send the comforter" was one of the precious parting promises of the blessed Lord. This Comforter, Teacher, or Advocate, was in some sense to supply the void which the absence of Jesus occasioned in the church; it was also to be present with them in unnumbered localities, which Jesus could not do were he to remain bodily upon the earth; and finally it was to abide forever with the church of God, and thus Christ was to be with them always even to the end of the world.

How sweet the words of Jesus when he promised us this consolation. How cheering this token of an absent Savior's love. Christian, remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said—"if I go away I will send the comforter, which shall abide forever." Have you this comforter? Does it dwell within you? While you sing, does it make melody in your heart? While you pray, does it make intercession for you with inarticulate groanings? While you grow weak, are you "strengthened with might" by God's spirit "in the inner man?" While you faint in the desert, does this "earnest" of your heritage come to you as a soul-inspiring foretaste of your inheritance—a pledge of future glory—a cluster of the grapes of Canaan, brought down by the hand of faith, and hope, the "spies?" If you have this consolation, well may you rejoice. You may lift up your head and look up—you may be glad in the Lord, and you may be "sealed unto the day of your redemption." External troubles may send their ripples o'er your heart, but deep beneath them all, there shall flow the tidal current of peace divine, where no storm can ever toss it, where no hurricane can agitate it.

Christian, have you in your heart a depth where the world cometh not? a place of peace where you hold communion with God, and where, if the prince of this world cometh, he "hath nothing," and can find nothing, to destroy your joy? "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life."

O trust beneath the shadow of Jehovah's wings. Make him thy refuge and thy rest: find consolation in him, and there shall be no sorrow that shall go unhealed within thy heart.

And if the bitterness of bereavement shall be thine—if thy heart's treasures go down amid the corruption and rottenness of the sepulchre—if all thy jewels of joy and value be turned to filth and dust then thou mayest still find consolation. Look up—behold Him who says—"I am the resurrection and the Life." Muse upon the glories of that day when he shall come with might and power to spoil grim Death, the spoiler of his flock, and to re-knit again in everlasting bonds your torn and bleeding heartstrings in his kingdom. Call your afflicted fellow-weepers and bid them recollect the promised glories of that day, when the Lord shall descend, the dead arise, the saints be caught up to meet and dwell forever with the Lord. Then, "comfort one another with these words." 1 Thess. 4: 18.

Thus shall your heart grow strong, your hope shall be sure and steadfast, and your faith eagle-eyed shall watch for the day of rest and glory that is to come. And when that day dawns, the calmness of earthly trust shall be exchanged for the raptures of heavenly triumph; the struggles of the tried and tempted here, for the exultation of the free children of the living God; the tears of mortal woe, for the songs and everlasting joy of the redeemed; and the dim, though priceless illumination of the sure word of prophecy for the seven-fold splendors of that sun that shall no more go down.

Such, O Christian, are thy consolations. Take them, bind them to thy heart, be joyful in hope, patient in tribulation, instant in prayer. God bless you, and save you evermore. Amen.

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. '56.

The Providence Convention.

[Concluded.]

FRIDAY, P. M. SESSION.

After the usual opening exercises the Convention was called to order in the capacity into which it had resolved itself, as per vote before adjournment. The President said:

In bringing to your consideration the subject of tropes, I will lay down

1. That all language is either literal, tropical, or symbolical.

2. That language to be tropical, i. e. figurative, must contain a trope, or tropes of some kind. And we cannot determine that it contains these, without we are able to designate the tropes that are used in any given sentence, and specify their kind or class, and give their significance in literal phraseology.

3. That if there are tropes used, they are limited to nine classes which are denominated the Simile, Metaphor, Synecdoche, Metonymy, Substitution Hyperbole, Apostrophe, Personification, and Allegory.

We won't be deterred by these hard names which a little examination will make very simple; and as we shall have very little to do with the last four, we will explain them and then limit ourselves to the consideration of the first five.

The Hyperbole is simply an expression of more than is intended to be understood. The Apostrophe is an address to the subject of the discourse. A Personification is an address to an inanimate object as if it had intelligence. And the Allegory is a story analagous to that which is being illustrated. As there is no intricacy in the use of these figures we will turn our attention more particularly to the others named.

Aside from those, language that is not symbolic, is always literally expressed unless there is a Simile, or comparison of one thing or act with another;—a Metaphor, or an affirmation that something is, what in reality only resembles;—a Synecdoche, in which a part is taken for the whole or the whole for a part;—a Metonymy, in which that which is contained is put for the container, the cause for the effect, &c.; or a Substitution, in which one thing is put in the place of another.

After several illustrations of these several figures, the law was laid down, that the metaphor when it exists, is to be looked for in what is affirmed of the subject, and not in the subject of which the affirmation is made.

The first chapter of Isaiah was then considered, in respect to the figures embodied in it—the object of the exercise being to develop principles of interpretation, and not to elicit or settle opinions. The Chair read passage after passage, and inquired after each sentence, if it contained any figure? if so, what? These interrogations were responded to by the class, promiscuously and generally correctly, and elicited a good deal of interest.

When the 18th verse had been reached, Elder Fillmore, an aged and venerable minister of the Methodist denomination, and an uncle of the ex-President of that name, sent a request to the chair that he would explain in a similar manner the 35th chapter, which was complied with. The Chair said: The subjects of the first itaffirmation are the wilderness and the solitary place. There can then be nothing metaphorical in the use of those words, and the only figure in them is the Synecdoche, by which they are put for wildernesses and solitary places.

Elder Bassett. Can they not mean the moral condition of the people?

The Chair. By what law of language?

Elder F. I don't know.

The Chair. Nor do I. The affirmation made of them is that they shall be glad, which is not compatible with the nature of inanimate objects; and hence it is a metaphor, expressive of restoration to a condition that shall conduce to cheerfulness and joy. The desert, by a metaphor, shall rejoice and it shall blossom, as shown by a simile, as the rose. It shall become beauteous with flowers, and resound with songs of joy. The glory of Lebanon was its majestic cedars; and the excellency of Carmel and Sharon was in their fruits and flowers. By the Metonymy the glory and excellency are put for those things in which their glory and excellency consist; and which are so to change the condition of the desert that it will be like the garden of the Lord, when the wilderness shall be like Eden. And the epoch of this change is shown by the declaration that there will be then a revelation of the glory of the Lord and the excellency of our God.

After proceeding through the chapter, Elder Fillmore asked, "If the way to heaven is so plain that the way-faring man though a fool need not err therein, how happens it that men differ so widely respecting it?"

The Chair. The way referred to in the chapter, is not the way to heaven, but is put by substitution for the rules of conduct which shall actuate us when we get there. It is not till the Lord shall bring again Zion, that the watchmen will see eye to eye.

Elder F. asked several other questions which were answered. A few moments were then spent on the second chapter of Isaiah; and then a short reference was made to the laws of symbolization—when the Class adjourned.

The Convention having resumed its sitting. The Committee on Ministerial support and supply of destitute Churches offered the following report: That in view of the lateness of the hour, and the magnitude of the case, it is expedient to merge both subjects into one and to appoint a standing committee whose duty it shall be to consider the subject and report at a Convention to which this may be adjourned. The report was adopted, and that Committee continued.

Elder Litch being called upon read the hymn 846:

"Jesus, Lord, we look to thee;
Let us in thy name agree:
Each to each unite, endear;
Come, and spread thy banner here."

This being sung, Elder Brewer read the 15th chapter of Paul's first letter to the Corinthian church, in the quaint language of an ancient translator. A prayer was offered and benediction pronounced by Eld. Josiah Litch, when the President declared the Convention adjourned.

The following ministering brethren were present during the Convention.

P. Hawks, Providence, R. I.
G. W. Burnham, Salem, Mass.
O. G. Smith, N. H.
C. Cunningham, Westboro' Mass.
F. Gunner, New York.
J. Pearson, jr., Newburyport.
O. R. Fassett, Boston.
I. R. Gates, Pennsylvania.
Bro. Parks, Philadelphia.
Dr. T. Huntington.
John Pearce.
Wesley Burnham, Mass.
Sam. Chapman.
S. S. Brewer, Providence, R. I.
Miles Grant, Boston.
J. S. White, Wrentham, Mass.
J. D. Boyer, Pennsylvania.
G. Phelps, New Haven, Ct.
J. M. Orrock, Canada East.
T. M. Preble, Weare, N. H.
B. R. Batchelor, New Bedford.
R. Hutchinson, Canada East.
L. Osler, Providence, R. I.
D. Bosworth, Bristol, Vt.
J. Howell, Salem.
E. Crowell, Hartford.

The following letter from Geo. Baker being addressed to the Convention, was read on Tuesday:

"Dear Brethren:—When I read the notice of the Convention at Providence, I hoped to be able to meet with you, but fear I shall be denied this privilege. It would be highly gratifying to me, and I doubt not profitable to be with you in your deliberations, and share in your counsels and prayers. I trust your assembling will be for your edification and comfort, and my prayer shall go up to the mercy-seat, that you may have the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace, and that you may be able to devise some means by which the glorious truths of the kingdom to come may be spread abroad, and take a deeper hold on the hearts and lives of our fellow-men. I trust, dear brethren, you will meet in the Spirit of conciliation and fraternal love, and that you will show to the friends and enemies of the cause, that in this faith we can rise above all narrow-minded and sectarian feelings, all that is discordant, unbrotherly and unkind, and unite us cordially in 'the work of faith, and labor of love.

I hope some representative of the cause from this region will be present, and enlist some one to come to this Western Reserve and proclaim the truths of the Second Advent faith and hope. I think good might be done and souls saved. We are approaching a crisis; the period for the election of the Chief Magistrate of the nation is at hand, and the eyes of most men are turned toward some political deliverer. Their attention needs to be directed to Him who is able to deliver us from our thraldom, to remove the curse, and destroy the works of the devil. Praying that you may have a season of refreshing and quickening, and that your Convention may conduce to the glory of God and the advancement of the cause, I subscribe myself your brother in the faith and hope of the gospel." George C. Baker.

Garretsville, Ohio, Nov. 2d, '56.

For the Crisis.

The Sabbath.

(Concluded.)

Perpetuity of the Law of God, given to Israel from Mt. Sinai by Moses.

Some affirm with a great deal of emphasis that the seventh day Sabbath is now obligatory upon all christians, from the fact, that it is to be observed for a thousand generations, "forever," always, perpetually, "throughout your generations." And now if this argument is good for anything, then it positively enforces the entire law upon the people in this dispensation (and in fact all future ages, for it is said that the Sabbath is a moral precept, and binding throughout all time,) for the above expressions are connected with the whole law. I will now present some specifications:

"And the Lord spake unto Moses,—saying, Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily, my sabbaths ye shall keep, for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations, that ye may know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you. Ye shall keep the Sabbath therefore, for it is holy unto you, every one that defileth it shall be surely put to death, for whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from his people. Six days shall work be done, but in the seventh is the sabbath of rest, holy to the Lord. Whoso doeth any work in the Sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death. Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the sabbath throughout their generations for a perpetual covenant. It is a sign between me and the children of Israel forever, for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested and was refreshed."—"Oh! that there were such a heart in them that they would fear me and keep all my commandments always."

Now then, every one will see at once, that God requires the children of Israel to keep the Sabbath throughout their generations for a perpetual covenant forever, "always" or surely be put to death, &c. This, is truly strong language, and it is so strong that some believe that the above emphasized expressions embrace at least all the gospel dispensation.

We will now offset the same expressions touching the observance of the passover, blowing of trumpets, offering of sacrifices and incense, &c. &c., and see if there is a willingness on their part to be consistent, and carry out the promises upon which they have planted themselves, to their legitimate conclusion. If we do, we shall see them slaying the first-born of their doves, rams, lambs, &c. &c., and performing all those sacrificial offerings that the children of Israel did after God brought them out of the land of Egypt. Turn to Ex. 12: 11–24, and there you will find that God requires the children of Israel to keep the passover.

Verse 14, "And this day shall be unto you for a memorial, and ye shall keep it a feast to the Lord throughout your generations. Ye shall keep it a feast by an ordinance forever." Verse 24. "And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons forever." Also verse 17.

Now turn to Num. 10, 1–10, and there you will learn that God commanded Moses to make him two trumpets of silver for calling the assembly, and we learn that when the trumpets were blown, the assembly assembled at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation; and in the eighth verse, God says:

"And they shall be to you for an ordinance forever throughout your generations." Vs. 8, ch. 18. "And the Lord spake unto Aaron, Behold I also have given thee the charge of my heave offerings of all the hallowed things of the children of Israel unto thee have I given them by reason of the anointing and to thy sons by an ordinance forever." Ver. 19—"All the heave offerings of the holy thing which the children of Israel offer unto the Lord, have I given thee and thy sons, and thy daughters with thee, by a statute forever; it is a covenant of salt forever. Verse 28. "It shall be a statute forever throughout their generations." Num. 19: 21, "And it shall be a perpetual statute unto them," &c.

Again, 2 Chron. 2: 4, "Behold I build a house to the name of the Lord my God, to dedicate it to him and to burn before him sweet incense, and for the continual shew-bread, and for the burnt offerings morning and evening on the Sabbaths, and on the new moons and on the solemn feasts of the Lord our God; this is an ordinance forever to Israel."

Once more, Ezek. 46: 13, 14. "Thou shalt daily prepare a burnt offering unto the Lord of a lamb of the first year without blemish, thou shalt prepare it every morning. And thou shalt prepare a meat offering for it every morning, the sixth part of an ephah, and the third part of an hin of oil to temper with the fine flour a meat offering continually by a perpetual ordinance unto the Lord."

Again, Lev. 3: 10, 17. "And the priests shall burn them upon the altar; it is the food of the offering made by fire for a sweet savor, all the fat is the Lord's. It shall be a perpetual statute for your generations throughout all your dwellings, that ye eat neither fat nor blood." Again, Ex. 29: 8; 30: 8–10: "And when Aaron lighteth the lamps at even, he shall burn incense upon it a perpetual incense before the Lord—throughout your generations. And Aaron shall he make an atonement upon the horns of it once a year, with the blood of the sin-offering of atonements, once in the year shall make atonement upon it thoughout your generations," &c.

If any one wishes to pursue this subject any further, let them read the 23d and 24th chapters of Leviticus, and the 17th chapter, 1–7 verses. And in connection with Deut. 5: 29, read Deut. 11: 1 5, and 12: 1, 11—and every one will discover that the commandments are not only to be kept always, but the statutes and judgments, which are the offering of sacrifices, &c., are to be observed always.

It is thought by some that Deut. 7; 9, imposes the obligation on christians in this dispensation to keep the Jewish Sabbath; but this argument is too small to need refutation, for all will see on a moment's reflection, that a thousand generations is not so strong an expression as throughout your generations.

Now then, I appeal to every rational man to know if the Sabbath-keepers are not required, in order to be consistent, to erect their altars and commence slaying their animals, and offer their sacrifices to the Lord; sprinkle their blood, keep the passover, blow the trumpets, offer up incense, eat no fat, nor blood, &c. &c.?—for God requires the children of Israel to do these things always, forever, perpetually throughout their generations,—and all these terms signify precisely the same length of time when connected with the keeping of the passover and sacrifices, as they do when connected with the keeping of the Seventh Day Sabbath.—Investigator.

For the Crisis.

EVENING.

BY H. L. H.

Now from care and labor free,
Turns my troubled heart to thee;
Father, soothe my soul to rest,
Let me lean upon thy breast.

Woes beset and sins allure,
Friends are false and foes secure;
Gathering storms affright my soul,
Thundering tempests o'er me roll.

Carping care and worldly thought,
On my brow their lines have wrought;
Sorrow with its hidden smart,
Stirred the fountains of my heart.

Tempests lie in wait around,
Snares on every hand are found;
Father, while I tread life's way,
Keep me safe, nor let me stray.

Peace Dale, R. I. 1856.

For the Crisis

Short Sayings.

Whoever does anything with needless haste is sure to repent of it at his leisure.

It is much more profitable to do a little well than to do much ill.

Whoever goes for God, shall come in peace.

If God has the heart the devil cannot have the actions. E. B.

Italian Proverbs.

Never do that by proxy which you can do, yourself.

Never defer that until tomorrow which you can do to-day.

Never neglect small matters and expenses.

Many kinds of diseases to which we are subject, are the fruit of our own imprudence and intemperance.

A clean conscience is a jewel one may always carry with him if he will. E. B.

Eld. J. Howell's P. O. address is Salem, Mass.

Joseph Kimball's P. O. address is Unity, N. H.

Obituary.

For the Crisis.

Died in Lee, N. H., Oct. 16, 1856, Sister Comfort Durgin, widow of the late Jeremiah Durgin of Lee; aged sixty-one years, three months and three days.

Sr. D. had been a resident of Lee, fifty-nine years, and was the mother of fifteen children, thirteen of whom are now living.

Our beloved sister was converted to God some thirty-seven years ago under the labors of Elder John Osborne; was a consistent christian for a season; but, after several years, she did not enjoy all that it was her privilege. In 1843 she and her companion, with several of their children, became interested in the heart-searching message of the advent of Christ. They embraced the advent doctrine and endeavored to purify themselves by obeying the gospel, since which time sister Durgin has enjoyed the favor of God's love shed abroad in the heart.

They rejoiced with us and were with us disappointed in not realizing at that time the "blessed hope."

June 28, '54, Bro. Durgin fell a victim to the enemy, Death, aged sixty-six years, eleven months, and nine days. He sleeps in Jesus. Some few days previous to his death, he manifested a desire to see his family, together, which desire was granted. The absent children, though somewhat scattered, being apprised of their Father's illness and wishes, came home. When all the children, thirteen in number, with their mother, were seated in the room, where lay the affectionate father and husband, truly it must have been an affecting scene. It was the first time the family were ever together, and also the last.

After leaving his last counsel with his family, he took leave of them, and soon fell asleep. Over two hundred mourning relatives followed him to his burial place, pleasantly situated near his house. His wife now sleeps by his side, in the same grave.

A father and mother in Israel have finished their course, kept the faith, and died on the field of battle. Their house was a home for the servants of God. The Son of peace abode there, and I trust does still.

Sister Durgin generally enjoyed good health, till about four months previous to her decease, but during those four months, she suffered exceedingly from tumors, and a rose cancer, which resulted in her death. She murmured not, but endured her great suffering with christian patience. She leaves a large circle of relatives, brethren and sisters, to mourn, but they sorrow not as others that have no hope. Her children, all but two, have sought and found the Savior in the days of their youth, and have been buried with Christ by baptism. I trust the other two will do likewise, and thus an unbroken family be gathered finally into the kingdom of God.

The writer endeavored to comfort the friends and neighbors with the hope of the resurrection of the dead. John G. Hook.

Concord, N. H., Nov. 30, '56.

Died; on Friday morning, Dec. 5, Salletha Louisa, daughter of Mark E. and Phebe Ann Green, aged 6 years and 7 months. Also on the day following, their little son Frank, three years old; both of the scarlet fever.

Two most lovely children, dear and interesting to their parents and brothers, and endeared to all the numerous friends that have been wont to enjoy the hospitality and friendship of our brother and sister Green—now suffering an agonizing desolation.

Wonderful providence! that God should take such severe measures with his friends—smite them down as would an enemy.

But, "God is his own interpreter
And he can make it plain."

He does not afflict willingly, but for our profit.

David said, "Before I was afflicted, I went astray." Trials are not joyous nor welcome; but "afterwards they yield the peaceable fruits of righteousness. Yet they are light when compared with the great reward. "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen." We are abundantly admonished, that if we place ourselves under the divine instruction, we must submit to its discipline.

"For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth"—"every son,"—no exceptions. But while it is sure to be administered, it is apportioned in wisdom. Our weakness is considered. He knows we are dust. He will not punish out of measure.

"God tempers the wind
To the shorn lamb."

All shall end in glory—a weight of glory—a glory exceeding all conception, or anticipation. Our best course is to imitate Job "though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." This same good man looked to the end of trials, and asked to be hid until God's wrath should be past. It will soon end upon the enemies of the Lord, when the afflicted, and grieved, and way-worn traveler shall rest at home, and the soldier shall ground his arms at Jesus' feet; an the mourners shall cease weeping, as they see their children coming to their border again.

Thus saith the Lord refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears, for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord: and they shall come again from the land of the enemy. And there is hope in thine end saith the Lord, that thy children shall come again to thine own border.

God grant that our beloved brother and sister may receive this chastisement as an evident token of God's good purpose to them, to make them white, and meet for the kingdom.

Yours looking for the blessed hope,
Barnet Matthias.

Salterville, N. J., Dec. 16, '56.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

If the Lord will, O. G. Smith will preach at
Alton West, Sabbath, 28.
Melvin Village, Sabbath, Jan. 4.
Vittum School House, Monday evening, Jany. 5.
January 6th and 7th, as the Brethren Hoyt and Hodsdon may appoint.
Lake Village, Sabbath, Jan. 11.

If God permit, I will preach at Saccarappa, Dec. 14.
West Falmouth, " 21.
Freeport, (Swamp School House,) " 28.
R. R. York.

Bro. Grant: We purpose to preach, the Lord willing, as follows:
Newbury, where Brn. may prepare, " 28.
Will Brn. that want us to come to their places and hold meetings, please inform us at Exeter and Newbury.
L. L. Howard.
I. Damman.

Dear Brn.,—We intend to come to you in the love of the truth, and to know nothing among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified; and hope that we shall be enabled to comfort and not distract the flock of God.
Brethren pray for us.
Yours, in love,
Israel Damman.

CONFERENCE.
The Eastern Iowa, and Rock Island Conference is expected to meet in Moline, Ill., Friday Jan. 2nd, 1857. P. B. Morgan.

Providence permitting I will preach as follows:
River Point, or Phenix, Dec. 19
Providence, " 21
Lafayette, " 22
Peacedale, and Wakefield, R. I. 24 to 26
New Bedford, " 28
Fairhaven Mass. first Sabbath in Jan.
(Head of river in the eve.)
Lowell, 2nd and 3d Sabs. in Jan.
Communications received at the above places after Dec 18th.
W. S. Campbell.

Providence permitting, I will commence a series of meetings at Chicopee Falls, Mass., Wednesday evening, Dec. 24, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day. M. Grant.

If the Lord will, I will preach in Lynn, (Dye-House-ville) Sunday Dec. 21st, and in Ware Sunday Dec. 28. D. E. Moulton.

Eld. J. Couch appoints to preach at Boston the first Lord's day in Jan.

Eld. M. Grant appoints to preach at Portsmouth, N. H. the first Lord's day in Jan.

Bro. Boutell appoints to preach at Lawrence, Mass. Sunday, Dec. 28.

Eld. S. S. Brewer appoints to preach at Worcester, " 28.
Springfield, evening " 30.
Hartford, " 31.

Change of Appointment.

Bro. Brewer will be at Cheshire, Friday eve, Jan. 2d, and continue over the Sabbath. Will some Bro. meet him at Meriden, on Friday on the arrival of the express from Hartford.

Bro. Brewer and myself will commence a series of meetings at Waterbury, Wednesday eve. Jan. 7th, to continue over the Sabbath. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend. S. G. Mathewson.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Charlemont, Mass. Friday eve, Jan. 2.
North Adams, Sunday Jan. 4.
South Adams, " " 11th.
Cheshire, Mass. " " 12th.
Lebanon Springs, N. Y. 14th and continue evenings through the week and over the Sabbath.
Otis, Mass. Sunday 25th.
Winsted, Ct. Wednesday, 28th and continue through the week.
Campville, Monday eve, Feb. 2nd.
Northfield, Tuesday and Wednesday, 3d and 4th.
Litchfield, (South Farms,) Thursday eve, and continue through the week.
C. Goodrich.

Any brethren wishing to address me, will please direct to any of the above Sunday appointments. C. G.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

N Davidson, C Rice, C H Pike, J Smith, L Leavitt, A Barton, M Christenson, A K Warren, J P Shaw, P Waterman, A Farrow, jr., S Howland, S P Thayer, J B Wait, J F Hardin, $1 each.

E Hogan, W B Rose, W Day, J W Allen, C Deane, A Woodworth, O Bennet, 50 cents each.

L Tuttle, $1.12, J Hooker, $1.59.

For the Poor.—N Davidson. 25, S R Eddy 12 cents, S H Waldron $1, J P Shaw, $1.

For Books.—Jacob Hooker 41 cents, J P Longee, $1, S R Eddy, 88 cents, S P Thayer, 24 cents.

Levi Tuttle.—We are out of "Plain Way." Give you credit on the Crisis.

J. W. Allen, $1.00 pays for one copy 6 months.

N. Davidson.—You have paid to No. 85.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

THE THREE COVENANTS. By [illegible] Campbell. Price 5 cents; postage 1 cent.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By I. C. Welcome. 33 cents; postage 6 cents.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE BOOK OF SEVEN SEALS. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents; postage 1 ct.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE CHRISTIAN'S ONLY HOPE: or, the Faith once Delivered to the Saints. By Z. Campbell. Price 10 cents; postage 1 ct.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE. By William Shepherd. Price—four copies, 25 cents; nine copies, 50 cents; eighteen copies, $1; one hundred, $5—post-paid.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

THE DISCUSSION: Between Prof. H. Mattison, of the Methodist E. Church, and George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price 25 cents; postage 3 cents.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and The New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Single copy, 12 cents; $8 per hundred. Postage 1 cent per copy.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

A VIEW OF THE SCRIPTURE REVELATIONS Concerning a Future State. By Richard Whately, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin. Price $1; postage 18 cents.

THE SEVEN SEALS: with Scriptural Facts concerning the Four Angels, the Four Winds, the Sealing Angel, the Seal of the Living God, &c. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cents.

THE FIRST FRUITS: a Scriptural Inquiry into the Time and Season of the First Resurrection, and Change of Those who are Alive and Remain. Price 10 cents per copy; postage 1 cent.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

JUBILEE HARP. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns well adapted to the present wants of the church. Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. Postage 7 cents.

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 38 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cts.—postage 8 cents.

GLAD TIDINGS, or Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to End in the Universe, by a Literal Destruction of Wicked Men and Devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment Collected and Arranged. By Jacob Blain. Price 10 cents postage 1 cent.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

BIBLE vs. TRADITION: in Which the True Teaching of the Bible is Manifested, the Corruptions of Theologians Detected, and the Traditions of Men Exposed. By Aaron Ellis. Revised and much enlarged by Thomas Read. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents: postage 6 cents.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions or the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 16 cents per volume.

A REVIEW: Giving the Main Ideas in Dr. E. Beecher's 'Conflict of Ages,' and a Reply to Them, and to his many Reviewers. To which is added the Bible meaning of the word Hell. Also, two hundred texts quoted, to show the Nature of Future Punishment. By Jacob Blain, Baptist minister. Price 8 cents; postage 1 cent.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—by D. T. Taylor. Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—by John Cumming. State of the Dead, by Milton. Intermediate State, by Drew. Each 24 pages. Price 5 cents single, $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the [illegible] of Man; Ancient Landmarks; Destiny of the Wicked; The Great Incentive; 3 cts. single; $1.50 per hundred. ——Future Punishment, The Key of Truth, The Night Cometh, price 2 cents single, $1 per hundred.

The above named publications can be obtained at the office of the World's Crisis, [illegible] Hanover street, Boston; H. L. [illegible] Rochester, N. Y.; W. Pratt, [illegible] F. Porter, 20 Erie street, Philadelphia; [illegible] S. S. Brewer, 54 [illegible] [illegible] S. W. Bishop, [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE SURE HOPE.

BY JOHN W. ALLEN.

Hopes that to-day look bright, may soon
Lie mouldering in their final graves;
And castles built upon the sand,
Shall be destroyed by time's dark waves.
The seeming pearl that yonder shines,
And lures us on to grasp the prize,
May in our hand a bauble prove,
And burst before our wondering eyes.

The name that's written on the strand,
To be admired by men of lore,
May in a moment be erased,
By the first swell that laves the shore.
The form that we to-day behold
Walking erect, in manhood's prime,
May be upon the morrow bowed,
By the fast falling sands of time.

The ship that on the broad sea sails
For some fair port, in quiet hour,
May in an instant be submerged
By the wild tempest's wrathful power.
The city broad upon the plain,
By years of toil, that upward grew,
The opened earth may close upon,
And hide forever from our view.

Kingdoms and empires that to-day
Are mighty in their regal pride,
May ere long drink the cup that's filled
From Revolution's judgment tide.
Alas! that every hope shall fail,
By past events to us is proved,
But the one Hope that's built upon
The Rock—that never can be moved.

Seneca Falls, N. Y.

LINES.

To Mrs. R. E. Wood, on the death of her infant boy.

BY CHAS. K. FULLER.

God hath given, God hath taken,
Surely thou wilt not say nay.
Freddie sleepeth—soon he'll waken
To the joys of endless day.
Though so bright, so pure, so winning,
He was mortal as thyself;
Though thy darling did no sinning,
He was not exempt from death.

Thou wilt miss his cherub prattling,
Sadly miss his roguish play;
But he's not with earth's scenes battling,
He has gone from them away.
Still be joyful in thy sorrow,
Thou shalt see thy darling Fred,
On the dawn of brighter morrow,
After pain and death have fled.

Will you not then gladly "leave him"
In his narrow bed of clay?
Much he'd found with thee to grieve him,
Much to lead him oft astray;
But the Savior safe will keep him
From temptation's luring power,—
Then be chary of thy weeping,
For thy child will weep no more.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Marriage Covenant.

BY ZETA.

(Concluded.)

From what has been said in former chapters on this subject, it is easy to see that there are many very delinquent husbands even among hopeful christians. That all may feel that they come short of imitating the pattern, perfectly, is rational. But when we see manifestations entirely the reverse from this, living wholly contrary to it, men who are always murmuring, ordering and fault-finding, adverting to the better qualities of other wives, spending their time in other society when most proper to be at home, making home only a lodging place to pass the night, and to take dinner: while all their words of news, instruction and conversation are reserved for other society, and all their hours of reading and conversation are spent elsewhere, while the wife, who needs the benefit of these, the presence of the husband, and his aid to lessen her burdens, to soothe her sorrows, to speak words encouragement, to help bear the burdens, the cares and trials of home, is left to struggle through the most rugged paths of life in solitude. Or, if she be not alone, surrounded with a family who might give joy to her heart, did she not see them coming up under improper example, without parental authority, destitute of proper instruction, often following the customs of the father, and becoming idlers, or complainers and commanders. These only add sorrow to disappointment, while broken promises, and blighted hopes are mingled with her daily duties. But if she has the true fortitude, patience and government of woman, she may be able to endure the delinquencies, gain a controlling influence over her family, and finish her course, while "her children arise up and call her blessed."

We repeat, while such scenes as these are often witnessed, the subject of inquiry should be by many, am I addicted to such evils, [illegible] life? If any who may read these articles should feel his conscience pronouncing him guilty, we hope he will find something here which will make both his ears to tingle, and lead him to Christ for a better heart.

But we now have something to say of the duties of the wife; something which comes with authority, as it comes from God. Perhaps as much might be spoken of delinquencies in duties here, as in the other department, but we shall notice some of the duties as cited by the author of the work quoted from in a previous article, giving an extract from his remarks on the same, and leave the thoughtful to make their own reflections.

"To the wife the word of God speaks thus,—'Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord. For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church. Therefore, as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands, in everything.' Eph. 5: 24. 'Let the wife see that she reverence her husband.' Eph. 5: 33.

Here we should particularly notice that virtue on which the admonition principally turns, namely; submission,—a virtue so prominently commended, certainly merits particular attention. The superiority which the Scriptures give to the man over the woman is not that of a master over a slave. The precepts enforced on the husband are of such a kind as to show that the superiority with which he is invested is founded in reason, and maintained by love. God has not required from the woman the submission of a slave, but a reasonable and advantageous submission, such as a man of good sense knows it becomes him to receive, and which an affectionate wife will yield with pleasure.

Some women, however, consider everything of this kind, as a relinquishing of all self-defense. Mistaken creatures! It is their best security, as well as one of their loveliest ornaments. See 1 Pet. 3: 4, 5. Like polished armor, it is both beauty and defense.

Considering the importance given to the virtue now under consideration, we see at a glance how far from that character which the Holy Scriptures recommend to women, are those who deny to a husband any rule in his house, unless he purchase it at the expense of peace. Such conduct is not only against the spirit, but the very letter of christianity. The apostle, as if to prevent the possibility of a misunderstanding, enforces his point by a most striking illustration.

"Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord; for the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church, and he is the Savior of the body. Therefore, as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in everything.' The church is subject unto Christ to this extent. She is always to be known by these circumstances;—that as her legislator, she receives laws from Christ; as her Lord, she receives commands from him; as her guide she follows him. That religious society, therefore, which renounces the authority of Christ, and sets up for its own directress in matters of faith and morals, is not the church.

This model of subjection, unreserved subordination, and reverential deference, is a woman in the ties of wedlock to make her examplar, if she would be found in that relation such as God approves. Let her be frugal, industrious, cleanly and chaste. She is to have the praise of all these good qualities, but let her remember that if, withal, she is self-willed, and refractory, she is destitute of that virtue in which the Holy Scriptures seem to have concentrated all the good qualities of a wife. Much as she may triumph in the contemplation of her superiority over the idle and extravagant with whom she compares herself, she resists the order of God, and resembles not the church but the world; she acts as if she were determined to go as far as possible from the pattern which God has set before her, and had chosen one which is the very reverse of the church."—Advice to a Married Couple, p. p. 44, 46.

Should the instruction in the above be heeded by all families, very many of the evils of life would be happily avoided. May the Lord enable us to act wisely and righteously in all our deportment, that we may be useful among our fellow-men, glorify God in our lives, enjoy his favor as we pass through this vale of sorrows, and gain the everlasting habitations prepared for his people, in the world to come.

The higher one aspires to rise, in this world, the lower he falls in the account of God and angels.

For the Crisis.

I Will be Good.

BY EDWIN BURNHAM.

Set this determination up in your mind—I will be good. Bring your whole soul, body, and spirit right up to this decision Feel it, and then say it. Say it to God, to your fellow beings, and say it boldly. Commit yourself, and then struggle to accomplish your purpose. Do not compromise with the Devil by saying, I mean to be good, but I dare not say so, lest I should not be. Away with all provision-making for the Enemy, "bind the sacrifice with cords to the horns of the altar."

Leap right into the river of moral purity and holy devotion, in sight of God, angels, men, and devils, and then prove your determination to remain there, by your earnest efforts. If you fail now, do not give it up. Try again. Pray and cry, and pray and cry again, and still again. You are weak; yes, but God is strong. You are a poor creature; yes, but He is rich. You are exceedingly tempted by the devil; yes, but He will make a way for your escape The flesh baffles; yes, but grace will give you power to overcome.

Trust in God. Believe that He will help you, and His help you shall have. He has spoken, and He will make it good: "blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled." Not just now—no, perhaps not—but at length. SHALL BE! Yes, God speaks as He means.

There is an advancement in goodness.—Cut off the evil branches, and root out the evil germs, as they appear. They must appear before you can get rid of them. Do not get discouraged when you see them. It is the goodness of God to you, which causes Him to make them manifest to you. Do not complain of the heat of the furnace—let the fire burn—you must be purified to go into the "Holy Place." Cry out, in the midst of the flames, louder, and still louder, I will be good. "O Lord, do thou it for thy name's sake"—make me holy.

You shall at length come forth as the gold that is purified from all its dross. No matter for past sins—repent of them—do not brood over them—say I will now, and forever, be good. God will forgive the past. He must do so. He has promised abundantly to pardon when we turn to Him.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

IS MAN IMMORTAL?

BY S. A. PORTER.

Is man immortal? Theology replies,
"He is, and came so from his Maker's hand,
With two-fold nature; when the earthly dies,
The form ethereal must e'er expand."

Is man immortal? "Yes," tradition cries,
"And bliss or woe eternal is his doom;—
The gem must dwell in darkness or the skies,
While the frail casket moulders in the tomb."

Is man immortal? false Philosophy
Affirms he is, nor gives a reason why;
With bold assumption utters her decree—
"The soul—a part of Deity, can't die."

Is man immortal? Mesmerism, too,
Presumes at once to give the question rest,
And thinks she rends the veil that hides from view,
To hold her converse with each shadowy guest.

But ask man's nature, ask where is the part
That's proof against the universal foe?
What fraction of his being 'scapes the dart,
When the grim monster strikes the fatal blow?—

And nature sighs her answer,—"there is none
Of all this wonder of creation plan,
But shrinks and shudders when the shaft is thrown,
That executes the curse on fallen man."

Then ask the Word of God, which plain reveals
That man is mortal, destined to the clay,
From whence he sprang; all that he thinks, or feels,
Or knows, to death's dark shade must pass away.

It tells us, too, that immortality
Is God's great gift, through His victorious Son,
His resurrection's pledge—that He May raise His people when He takes His throne.

E. Boston, Mass. Dec. 8, 1856.

Correspondence.

For the Crisis.

From Sr. S. C. Wait.

BRO. GRANT:—While I have been perusing the "Crisis" bearing the many heart-cheering epistles from different brothers and sisters from the east, west, north, and south, the thought suggested itself, I would like to read letters written by some of the brothers and sisters of Edinboro', and surrounding vicinity. Dear friends, your letters would be as cheering to them as theirs are to you. We, poor despised pilgrims, should try and help each other all we can. We are scattered here and there over this wide earth, probably never will have personal acquaintance until Jesus comes; yet we may become familiar with each other through the medium of the pen. What blessed privileges we may thus enjoy.

Much is said throughout the scriptures, of divine truth and love. It is given us as a token, whereby we may know we are Christ's disciples, if we have love one towards another. How may we come in possession of this love?

The beloved apostle John says,—"Whoso keepeth the word of God, in him verily is that love of God." Again—"Behold what manner of love the Father has bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." John says, "If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and His love is perfected in us."

Think of the love God manifested in giving his only son to ransom us from that penalty entailed upon us by the disobedience of our first parents. Also, think of the unspeakable love the Son of God has shown toward fallen man, by his willingness to die for, and forgive even his enemies; those that caused him to die that ignominious death upon the cross. There he was extended between heaven and earth, betwixt two malefactors. And after they had made a crown of thorns and placed it upon his head, ridiculing him in every manner wicked men and devils could invent; spitting upon him and giving him vinegar mixed with gall to drink &c., he looks upon them with an eye of pity, and says,—"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do" What compassion our Savior manifested toward all. What an example he has left us to follow!

Again, we see the Father's love, in making his will, or words, plain to our understanding; not choosing holy angels, who, in all probability, would have counted it a pleasure indeed to have borne the glad tidings of salvation to the lost; but made choice of men having the same passions as their fellows, to be ministers of the word of reconciliation. Jesus made known what qualifications are necessary to be possessed by those who engage in this glorious work. He did not leave them in darkness as to the manner of their communications, but has distinctly pointed out the spirit in which they shall declare those joyful tidings.

Again, we see the spirit of Christ is very tender, affectionate, forbearing and kind; and in proportion as we possess this spirit, we should manifest it in all our doings. It will mingle with, and give grace and loveliness to all our acts, both public and private.

O that we had that love and regard for each other's feelings that the beloved and venerable apostle Paul had. He said he would not eat meat so long as the present state of things should endure, if the same was a cause of offence to his brethren, or an occasion of stumbling. He also says, "the strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak," and ever to beware least they make still weaker the weak for whom Christ died, and whose lives are precious in his sight.

Dear brethren and sisters, is there any class of people from whom the world have more reason to expect a clear exhibition of the spirit of Christ, in its various features and graces than from those who are constantly looking for the speedy redemption, yea, I may say looking daily for the return of their blessed Savior?

Ought not the bearers of this most solemn and subduing message ever presented to mortal man, continually show the length and breadth of its controlling and subduing power on their own hearts? May the grace of God be sufficient for us, is the prayer of your unworty sister,

S. C. WAIT.

For the Crisis.

From Bro. J. A. P.

BRO. GRANT:—It is a long time since I have attempted to address my Brn. and Srs. through the Crisis. I have this evening been perusing its columns with much satisfaction, and, while reading a letter from one with whom, in common with others of like precious faith, residing in the same place where I have previously enjoyed many delightful seasons while fondly hoping soon to participate in the joys of a blissful Paradise, I felt like responding to her request, and saying a few words to those who, like sheep, are scattered upon the mountains, and in the midst of the mist, and fog, and perils, of these last days, are still maintaining their integrity before God, and trusting his promise sure.

O how many times I have thought of the dear ones with whom I have associated in by-gone days, and to whom, in my feeble manner, I have preached Jesus.

Truly, the past has often been present with me, and when weighed down in my mind, with sorrows oppress, it has served to revive my drooping spirits; and while my cup has been, and still is mixed with sadness, I have not forgotten the lovers of the beloved Son of God, in B—. No, I think of those who in deed and truth possess the blessed hope; and to such I would say, fear not; God, even thy God, is thy refuge.

Should the winds blow; be thou calm. Should the storm beat heavily against thy little barque; trust, O trust in God.—Should the raging waves well nigh capsize thy boat, and thou almost go overboard; think, ere thou despair; thy Father's at the helm. The wind, and storm, and waves, are all at His control. He has been our strong Tower in days past, and when trouble has come upon us, and affliction been strewn in our path—a loved one torn from our embrace by death, we have learned to lean upon Him, and exclaim: "He doeth all things well." Too good is God to be unkind, too wise to err. Though we may err in very many ways, God is still the same.

We may be separated from those we love, and wade through trials sore: we may even be disowned, cast off by them—God changes not. He is over all, blessed, forevermore.

How different from man! My soul doth magnify the Lord for his mercies shown to me. Though we have been sad y disappointed, and the world has pointed the finger of scorn at us; though wicked professors have mocked us and made light of the cross and of our blessed hope; though false brethren have proved treacherous, and caused us to weep by night and by day, and our friends have forsaken us, and devils beset us on every hand to destroy our peace: yet there is a sweet in it. The blessed hope is blessed yet; and it will be blessed until it is changed to fruition; and methinks, that even then the saint will look back and exclaim; blesssed hope! and why? because, it is hope that saves us now; and such a hope points to an eternal substance, and it can never lose its blessedness. Yours in the midst of sorrows, looking for redemption,

J. A. P.

Dec. 6, '56.

For the Crisis.

From Bro. H. J. Peck.

BRO. GRANT:—It has been some tim since I thought of writing to you, and t the dear brethren scattered abroad, to in form you how the little church is gettin along in this place.

In the former part of Oct., we had blessed time. God poured out his spiri in our midst, and the cry was heard—"Men and brethren what must I do to be saved?" Sinners were converted; backsliders reclaimed, and the work of the Lord revived in the hearts of his children. Bro. Mathewson was with us a few evenings, and preached in the demonstration of the spirit and with power. He also baptized several before leaving. Satan was at work in all his various forms, to stop the spirit of God from striving with the hearts of the children of men. But thanks be unto God, who giveth us the victory, through Jesus Christ, that there is a way opened up, and a throne of grace made accessible through Jesus Christ, where we may come and plead the merits of Him who died for us. And in view of this what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness; looking for and hasting unto the coming of the Lord. O let us have on the wedding garment, our lamps trimmed, and our lights burning brightly; that we may hear it said unto us—"well done"—when He shall come the second time without sin unto salvation.

While penning these few lines, I feel the love of God kindling in my soul, and which enables me to rejoice, in view of one day getting home, where trials and sorrows shall end, and where God shall wipe away all tears from our eyes; and where the redeemed of the Lord shall come to Zion with songs and everlasting joys upon their heads.

I hope with you to swell the chorus round the throne of God, and with harps in hands, bid every string awake to his praise; and range those blissful fields of glory, and walk the golden street, clad in immortality, shouting redeeming grace and dying love, to him who hath redeemed us by his precious blood and given us an inheritance in his kingdom. Yes, we will hail him who was despised and crucified, as our God, Savior, and King. I am bound for Mount Zion; my face is set thitherward, and I hope ere long to meet you all there.

Yours, in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes,

HENRY J. PECK.

South Farms, Conn., Nov. '56.

For the Crisis.

From Br. B. P. Manning.

BRO. GRANT:—Where I have been traveling from place to place, trying to preach the word to the people, there appears to be a waking up. I think, if the brethren try to be united, the Lord will work.—There is a little church in Rye, N. H., striving for the Kingdom. May the Lord bless and save them, is my prayer. In Auburn, N. H., there are also a few saints. I like the letter of brother E Burnham's in the Crisis, published a few weeks since, relative to calling things by their right names. I see there is a disposition among some of the brethren to use wrong names and harsh words, such as "Jehu" and "Jehu's family" &c. Such epithets have done harm among the little ones. I do believe it to be very wrong to do so, let it come from whom it will. These are idle words. What says Jesus in Matt. 12: 36, 37?—"But I say unto you, that every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment; for by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned. "O how careful we should be, living so near the judgment.

Again, hear Jesus in Matt. 25: 45. "Then shall he answer them saying, verily I say unto you, inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me." On the other hand, it reads,—"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Brethren, the Lord is soon coming, and who will be found waiting? who will be found giving meat in due season to the household? "Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing. Matt. 25: 46.

May the Lord help us to keep all the commandments, that when he comes to make up his jewels, we may have a place in his kingdom.

Brother, sister, do you desire a seat in the kingdom? Then strive to obey God in all things. Love as brethren. O, I want to be there! Pray for me that my faith fail not. Yours in hope of eternal life,

BENJ. P. MANNING.

Goffstown, Nov. '56.

For the Crisis.

From Bro. O. D. Eastman.

BRO. GRANT:—We are always glad to read the columns of the "Crisis" and to hear from those who are "striving to keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus," believing that all such as do his will, shall receive a crown of life. In these perilous times, when the great multitude would lead us astray, how important that we remember the admonition of the Savior in Luke 21: 34—36, "Take heed, watch and pray always," for such only can be found ready. How cheering is the christian's "blessed hope," that in a little while Jesus will come again, and we shall be made like him, and see him as he is.

All things will be made new, and the groans of creation will cease. The saints of all ages and all climes will meet to enjoy an everlasting rest. Their last tears will have been shed, and sorrow and pain will forever flee away. O Lord, hasten the time, and "Let thy Kingdom come."

Yours in hope,

O. D. EASTMAN

Landaff, N. H., Nov. 8, '56.

For the Crisis.

From Bro. S. Webster.

BRO. GRANT:—We have no shepherd in this vicinity to feed the sheep, but plenty of wolves to scatter the little flock. Please lend your christian aid to a few poor pilgrims through this barren land and world of woe, to that heavenly city.

Will you be so kind as to send us a preacher of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and Him crucified, and cheer us with the glad sound,—"the Bridegroom cometh." O that we might "hear the voice of one crying in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord." We want to hear the gospel trump sound once more, before we hear the trump of God sound to raise the dead that sleep in Jesus.

There are a few of us in Plymouth, that love the Lord, and claim the promise of his appearing the "second time, without sin, unto salvation." Now, do not despise the "poor in spirit," for "they shall be comforted." "Condescend to men of low estate." Christians, do you keep the commandments, and abide in his love? If you do you have the promise,—"ask, and ye shall receive;" yes, and at the end, eternal life; but to the fearful and unbelieving, and all liars—eternal death—the second death. Your Bro.,

S. WEBSTER.

Plymouth, Vt., Nov. 4, '56.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167, HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 31, 1856. WHOLE NO. 70. VOL. IV. NO. 18.

The World's Crisis, is published weekly by believers in the Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

JOSEPH H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy 6 months	$1.00
For a single copy 3 months	50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Editor of the World's Crisis, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Original Articles.

"Love One Another."

BY H. L. HASTINGS.

How kind, how sweet these words.—They have the fragrance of paradise about them. They come from him who had often leaned his head upon Jesus' breast, and who there had caught the deep, rich, holy odor of love divine. "Love one another." Not in lip and tongue only, but in deed and truth. Let your love be without dissimulation. How blessed is the pure principle of Christian love, that beareth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Love that envieth not, that suffereth long, that is kind, that is not easily provoked, that thinketh no evil, that fulfills the law, and that is the end of the commandment. Love that never faileth. Love that comes down from God as sunshine from the orb of day; love that cheers like golden light the heart that was dark, and cold and hard. Love that wells up within the soul sparkling like a crystal fountain; love that abides like a perpetual well-spring; love that flows out like rivers of living water. Love that is shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost. Love that beams in the eye, that tunes the voice, that warms the heart, that rules the hand, that guides the life. Love that makes the lion like a lamb and that leads fierce nature in flowery bands a captive at the chariot wheels of Jesus Christ.

Let us love one another, for love is of God. This it is that allies us to our Lord and makes us like Christ; and this never faileth. Prophecies shall fail, when all vision and prophecy shall be realized in the full glories of Messiah's reign;—tongues shall cease, when all the confusion of this Babel-world shall be o'er and the jargon of its many tongues shall give place to the pure language of Immanuel's land; that knowledge which has puffed and swollen so many little men in this world shall vanish away before the perfection of that day when we shall know even as we are known. But love never faileth. It abides an everlasting principle. It dwells in every ransomed breast. Eternally shall its mighty tidal current flow from the bosom of that God whose name is Love, and eternally shall it flow in shouts of praise and songs of gratitude from the countless myriads of the saved. The "incense breathing morn" of this earth, hath no fragrance so sweet as the rich odor of holy love, which shall forever bathe, like a resplendent cloud, the hearts and homes of Paradise restored. We want to be there,—then let us love, let us love one another with pure hearts fervently. Let us love God and love his works. Let us cast out hatred and malice, and let our hearts beat in holy unison with the heart of him who hath loved us and given himself for us! Let us "love one another."

Rochester, Dec., 1856.

For the Crisis.

The Supremacy of Scripture.

BY J. B. COOK.

The Scripture cannot be broken." John 10: 35.

The Jews so applied their law, touching the unity and distinct being of God, as to charge Jesus with blasphemy. "The Lord our God is one Lord," said they. No being or image of aught in earth or heaven is entitled to the name or honor that belongs alone to Him. Ex. 20: 1–7; Deut. 5: 6–11. They thus felt bound by the highest authority to charge Jesus with blasphemy, for taking the divine name and honor in any sense, to himself.

Our Lord vindicated himself by quoting their own acknowledged law, more clearly and comprehensively than they had ever before heard. "Is it not written in your law, I said ye are Gods? If He called them Gods, unto whom the word of God came, and the Scripture cannot be broken; say ye of whom the Father hath sanctified and sent into the world, thou blasphemest: because I said I am the Son of God? If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not."

This quotation of Jesus is from Ps. 82; 6, and that is based on the language of the Almighty, concerning His promised "Son"—the seed of Abraham—in whom all nations shall be blessed. God had said—"I will be to Him a Father, and He shall be to me a Son." Heb. 1: 5; 2 Sam. 7: 14; Ps. 2: 7. The inspiring address to this "Son," is,—"Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever." "Being made much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they." This better and "more excellent name" is the Divine! Ps. 45: 8; Heb. 1: 4. The prophet Isaiah records His name as "wonderful Counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of peace."

Thus the Jews were confounded on several occasions from their own sacred books. Thus all expositors may be confounded who take one part of Scripture to ignore another! Never did an interpretation of erring mortals seem more certain, than that of these Jews, whose zeal impelled them to guard the worship and honor of their God. They were right so far as they reverenced "the God of Abraham, of Israel, and of Jacob." But they were also altogether wrong in so applying one portion of their "law," as to deny and annul another! This, Jesus quoted to show that their "one"—their "only Lord God" stood pledged to bring forward His "Son," and invest them with the honors of His own divine "name!"—for the Scripture can not be BROKEN!"

One portion of holy "Scripture" is as supreme—as unerring and Divine, as another. Hence, should the whole church assume the ground and agree to fix their mind on preaching the gospel (as God's plan for subduing and saving the world,) it can avail nothing against the Lord's coming "the second time to salvation." For the Scriptures cannot be broken to accommodate either Gentile or Jew. Man's ignorant opposition to God's revealed purpose, is as the clouds of our atmosphere to the movements of the planets. They may obscure our vision, but can not change the course of events—to "make the word of God of none effect." "The Scripture can not be broken."

"The Scripture" is the purpose of God written out "for our learning." This purpose of God is the highest law in the universe; for "God, (with his will—his word) is over all, and blessed forever. He declares the end from the beginning, saying,—"my counsel shall stand and I will do all my pleasure." From this, it follows that there is nothing in Heaven, earth, or hell; none among angels, men, or devils, that can defeat, or defer the fulfilment of God's written purpose. "For the Scripture cannot be broken."

Freedom and opportunity are provided for and allowed, for each one to test himself. There is also a uniformity in the several courses of nature, as day and night, seed time and harvest, &c. But this freedom and this very uniformity of nature, is asserted by "the Scripture." It furnishes the highest occasion to illustrate the supremacy of the written word. In all points when the accomplishments of "the scripture" does not demand the arresting obeyance of this "uniformity of nature," all things "continue this day according to thy ordinances; for all, O Lord, are thy servants." Ps. 119: 91; 74: 16, 17; Jer. 31: 35; 33: 25; Acts 17: 24–26; 15: 18; Isa. 44: 6–8; 46: 10.

The course of nature is thus like the freedom of the creature, independent and not absolute, but subordinate, and subservient to the over-ruling will of God. But by a class of philosophers, "nature" is Deified, it is made supreme; hence, all that they know of God is subject and secondary to "the uniformity of nature." Nature is so made an expanded, over-ruling, but imaginary idol.

Natural things—natural men—nay, all "that is natural," obey natural laws for natural ends, and by these the present race of creatures and course of nature is maintained. But "the scripture" discloses the higher, purer, diviner system of things that shall supercede "the natural."

"The second Adam," for instance, will supercede the first. "The second—the new Covenant—" is to occupy in Palestine and over the world the sphere of the first. "The servant—Moses"—will be superceded by "the Son;" and the whole system and circle of "the shadow and example of good things to come," will find their anti-typical, everlasting "substance" in "the world to come"—"the kingdom of heaven."

In the world's history approaching this consummation, we find that "the scripture (which is God's will, "written for our learning,") has had entire supremacy over "nature" so far as they have come in seeming conflict—so far, at least, as to settle the principle, and furnish a ground of assurance," that the system of "the scripture" will advance to absolute and everlasting triumph!

The Demontsration of this, lies in two grand events embraced in the context—the birth, and the resurrection of Jesus.

By the first, Jesus is "the Son of God!" By the second he is "declared to be the Son of God!" Both of which are above and in defiance of all the wisdom of man and the power of nature. No wisdom, even of God's professing people, could have evaded the charge of blasphemy brought against Jesus; not have harmonized his claims to be "the Son of God." But "the wisdom of God," that appears in the scripture, answers the charge, and maintains his claim triumphantly. God is indeed "One" as revealed in the scripture which the Jewish mind embraced; but as this same scripture made known "the Son," who should bear the Divine name, it was accomplished, so as to confound the wisdom of man, and foreshow the supremacy of scripture.

"The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee," said the angel to Mary, "therefore, also that holy thing which shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God!" Thus, above and beyond all the light in the Jewish mind—above and beyond all the "ordinances of nature," we see that "the scripture cannot be broken." No birth analagous to this has ever before or since transpired.

Thus, also, with regard to "the resurrection" by which Jesus was "declared to be the Son of God, with power." There was no "law of nature;" nor illumination of the human mind that was able even to start the suggestion of such a departure from nature. The idea belongs altogether to the scripture. It could not and "can not be broken."

Nature in her present course is controlled by mere natural laws and natural men. It is so recognized in the scripture; but though cognisant of all existing things, the scripture never stops short of a system of things—a constitution of the world in harmony with heaven,—in accordance with the character of Christ. It will be "the kingdom of heaven!"

This "heavenly" system will be as unique, and unlike the "earthly," as the birth of "the Son of God" is unlike that of all other births in the history of the human race. Hence, we find that whenever the scripture demands that "the laws of nature" should be held in abeyance, they are so held, and the world's wisdom is confounded; for "the scripture can not be broken."

Note. The waters were gathered at the at creation into one place; and "the dry land" appeared. Here, "the laws of nature" held them, and would have held them still; but the foretold deluge submerged even the mountains "fifteen cubits!"—for "the scripture can not be broken." Thus the Red Sea, and the Jordan rolled back their floods to accomplish the unfailing "scriptnre."

Seed-time and harvest, summer and winter, and day and night is the present order of events; but (as illustrated in the birth of Jesus,) the foretold famines, exceeding abundance, and times of darkness, have proved to a demonstration, that there is no "fate" nor "law" by which "the scripture can not be broken." The seven years' abundance and famine, the three days' darkness, and other events in Egypt, and in Canaan, are cases in point. They are above the present constitution of nature. They belong to a series of miraculous events that demonstrate the absolute supremacy of the scripture—the written will of God.

The deliverances and foretold dispersions of Israel—the beastly character, precise number, limitations and divisions of the "four" gentile empires, are each in accordance with no mere wisdom or natural course in human events; but the corresponding history of the world for four thousand years demonstrates the existence of a controlling, divine mind. "The scripture cannot be broken!"

"The time of the end" the rush "to and fro," with increase of knowledge"—the seventh headship, and its inspired description ("was, is not, and yet is,") as verified by the Napoleon dynasty, at the head of the Frog power (France, that must take the lead in the "battle of the great day," Rev. 16: 13,) show how fast "the world is weaving its own winding sheet; making ready for the knell of "the Anti-Christ," and illustrating the supremacy of the scripture, that will soon destroy, or sway all agencies into subordination to its heavenly consummation. Amen.

In the light of this subject, we should see that the imaginary "nature" of philosophy is no God—nor would it ever have existed but as the creature or the creation of God Almighty! It has never had force to falsify one statement of the scripture—God's written will.

The church of Christ "began in the spirit;" but now under the cloud of Rome, and "science falsely so called," she seeks to be "made perfect by the flesh"—by men still in the flesh! All such see no need to stand in the Lord's counsel touching the Advent of Christ—the second time—to salvation. In their view the scripture can be broken as to Christ's coming, and the world's interest be vastly advanced. But no, "the scripture"—"the spirit demands "the second" Advent, to destroy death and deliver the world, as much as it did the first to "redeem (atone for) us by his blood!" Heb. 9: 10; 2 Pet. 3: 1–3; Tit. 2: 13. 1 Thes. 1: 9, 10; Acts 3: 20; John 14: 1–3; Luke 19: 11–14; 21: 5–36.

Though these and other texts, if fulfilled according to their plain meaning, will confound the professing church, as Jesus did the Jews 1800 years ago; yet "the scripture CAN NOT BE BROKEN."

"The Lord looketh on the heart;" but as "He also is wise, and will not call back his words," those who, like the Jews, reject his "word" are his "enemies." Matt. 7: 21–27; Luke 19: 27. "God is no respecter of persons." He means just what he says, and says just what he means. When he says Israel and Judah, he does not mean Gentiles, and vice versa.

All scripture relative to Israel and Judah concerning their restoration must be fulfilled, for "the scripture cannot be broken." The same scripture that proves the return of the Messiah, also declares the return of Israel to their own land. The nations—the Gentiles, are specifically named in the covenant with Abraham. Gen. 22: 14–18. Hence nothing done for the Gentiles or the church can supercede Israel in that covenant.

God's counsel shall stand! The scripture is its written form. Amen.

For the Crisis.

"Thou shalt love thy Neighbor as thyself."

GAL. V. IV.

BY MARION A. COTTON.

Paul had been striving to impress upon the minds of his Galatian brethren the truth, that circumcision availed nothing. And he finally sums it all up in this one word—"Love thy neighbor as thyself." Now, in the first place, let us find out who our neighbor is. Turn, if you please, to Luke, 10th chapter, commencing at the 30th verse; read to the 38th verse.

By this, we find our neighbor to be any one who is suffering, and needs our assistance. Often we do not behold even neighborly love among those who should be united by a nearer tie, that of brotherly love.

We can all of us tell whether we have this love or not, and we can tell whether others have it; for, as we read along, we find the works of the flesh given; likewise the fruits of the spirit. If we see a man performing the works of the flesh, we may rest assured he does not love his neighbor, be his professions ever so great. On the other hand, if we see a man possessed of the fruits of the Spirit, we know he loves his neighbor.

Let us look a little at the fruits of the Spirit and see if we have them, or have ever had them. The first fruit is love. How is it with a soul that is converted? The first impulse is love; love to God, love to christians, love to the whole human race. Those whom he once hated, he now loves; everything is lovely.

The second is joy. Oh, the joy of a new creature in Christ Jesus. He is filled with joy unspeakable. Then, this wild tumultuous joy subsides and peace, sweet peace, steals over the soul. He looks around him and sees those of his friends who are out of the ark of safety; he would lead them by the hand of love to that state of joy and peace which he now experiences.

Long-suffering. Perhaps his friends oppose him, ridicule him, and try every mode of persecution: it is then he sits calmly, patiently, and with long-suffering beneath their scorn.

Gentleness then comes in; he mildly remonstrates with them, endeavors to persuade them to seek the Savior; they discover his goodness, but will not listen; they laugh on, and he, by an eye of faith, looks forward to that blissful land where his trials will all be over.

Meekness. This was a peculiar trait in the character of Jesus. He was meek and lowly. Only think of the great Creator's coming to redeem men; and they spit upon Him, smite Him, and insult Him in every manner; he meekly bears it all. We must bear it of fellow-worms, if he could of his own workmanship.

Lastly, temperance; not only in regard to drink, but in eating; also dressing, houses, and furniture; temperance in ALL things. How many of us have these graces? If we have them, there is no law against us; if we have them not, Oh, let us seek to have them, and we shall not seek in vain.

Cheshire Mass., Dec. 7, 1856.

For the Crisis.

Love God.

He is eternally worthy of our highest love. He has loved us with a strong and saving love. He commands us to love Him. We must perish forever unless we do love Him. It is our present and eternal glory to love Him.

E. B.

For the Crisis.

Parental Government.

BY ZETA.

NUMBER I.

The present generation is often called by writers, lecturers, ministers and others, "an unruly generation." Facts are constantly demonstrating that the remark is painfully true. The young of this generation are, to an alarming extent, disobedient, irreverent, unmannerly, bold, proud, and shameless. Complaints of these evils are constantly made in many places. Parents often express their surprise that their children act as they do, and frequently attribute it to the bad example of others, This may be the cause in part, in many cases, but there is a cause nearer home in most families of ill-behaved children. There is a lack of parental restraint, of controlling power, which should not exist in every family. Some persons are peculiarly adapted, or endowed by nature, to govern well; others are less so, and because they lack the natural gift to command, they often excuse themselves, and say they cannot control their children. I have often heard this remark from parents, in the presence of their unruly children. Children soon learn the fact that their parents have not the art to govern them, though they seldom in youthful days have wisdom to regret it, but are glad to have their own ways.

Parents cannot rid themselves of the responsibility which rests upon them to "train up their children" in a proper manner. God has not only constituted man the head of the wife, but has also made them unitedly, the governors of their children. He requires that they train them up in righteousness, or at least do all they can towards it.

"But this is an evil age," says one; "it should not be expected of us to train our children as parents did in former days. We are fallen upon Paul's perilous times when children 'shall be disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection,'" &c.

This is your fault, in part. Parents cause their children to be disobedient, to be unthankful, unholy, and to lose their natural affection. Such sins are transmitted from the parents to the children, and not from the children to the parents. Paul, seeing down through the lane of mortal life, beheld the apostasy from the simplicity of truth in doctrine, and in discipline—the laxity in human government, in parental authority, and announced the catalogue of evils that would follow.

But let us hear what the Lord commands on this point, by the mouth of Paul. "And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Eph. 9: 4.

Here, then, is a caution to fathers not to tamper with the passions of their children, not to provoke them to wrath; and accompanying it, is a command to bring them up "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." The mind of the child is of such a nature as to receive almost any impress you please to enstamp upon it. In the early stages of expansion and development of the human mind, it is susceptible of the deepest, clearest, and most indelible impressions.

This, then, is the time to mould the mind for virtue, goodness, duty and righteousness. Mind is not like water which must be always running downward to its level, or absorbed into other substances; but like the plant and vine, it is shaped by surrounding elements, and agencies, and its growth impeded, or increased according to the nature of the elements. It can be made to climb from one limb to another, up the tree of knowledge, and be led from branch to branch, inhaling wisdom, love, virtue, submission, gentleness, meekness, goodness, truth, righteousness and holiness. Or it can be led in ignorance, down into the dark cells of selfishness, peevishness, hatred, anger, clamor, debate, strife, disobedience, and death.

Which course do you choose [illegible] your children? Nearly all will [illegible] say, I desire to lead them in the better way.

But I am not competent to do this. The Lord must help, or my children will never be righteous and holy.

True. And the Lord is ready to help. He will give you wisdom to begin, if you will diligently seek it.

But some will here remark, that all children cannot be made good, even by the best of training; some will be bad even in the best of families. This is admitted, but there are exceptions, and if you want your children to be among these exceptions, you will be pretty sure to have them.

But try now to be like Abraham; believe God, and follow his instruction; then you may be blessed with the things promised Abraham. Hear what the Lord says of him:—

"For I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord, to do justice and judgment; that the Lord may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him." Gen. 18: 19.

Much stress is laid upon the point under consideration. Abraham is here distinguished by this important feature—"I know him that he will command his children and his household after him."

How can parents appear before God, and be guiltless, with a family who have come up under their neglect, in careless disregard for parental authority, in avarice, pride, profanity, scepticism, revelry and such like?

These evils generally come for want of proper training in childhood. It is a task, to be sure, to watch the opening and direction of the mind of the child. It also requires study, diligent, patient, continual, prayerful study to learn how to direct, attract and control that mind. And you must not say,—"I have too many cares to attend to this work; never; this must be attended to. It is the all-important thing for parents. Better never do any other thing in all your lives than feed, clothe, instruct, and "train" your children, rather than let them come up to add their moral poison to the flood of vices which now rises to deluge our race, and destroy them soul and body in hell. What moral picture looks more dark and forbidding, and demands more pity than a family of reckless, disorderly, vulgar, unruly, disobedient, quarrelsome children? But on the other hand, what company of mortal beings can exhibit so lovely a picture, as a family circle of well-trained, modest, orderly, loving, obedient children, with affectionate regard for their parents who have set their minds by right precepts, and holy example? No other scene is so admirable.

Letter from M. L. Curtis.

But, my brethren, be ye patient till the advent of the Lord; like the husbandman, who waiteth for the precious fruits of his goound, and is patient as to them, until he receive the early and the latter rain; so also, be ye patient and fortify your hearts: for the advent of our Lord draweth nigh. We are a people who believe in a literal, personal, second advent of the Lord Jesus Christ; the man that was born of Mary at Bethlehem, and who is the Mediator between God and fallen man. And we have no faith in the theory, that the second advent was at the destruction of Jerusalem. If so, then we are in the new earth,—

"Where truth shall sit on every hill,
And blessings flow in every rill,
And praise shall every heart employ,
And every voice shall shout for joy."

Brethren, are we there? No, no. Hold on a little longer and we shall be where there is more truth than there is here, more blessings than there are here, more praise than there is here; and when our President has received the last vote, and His constituents cry out,—"We are come, we are come," you will hear more and louder shouting than you have heard here in the past week. And I don't know but our President will take his seat before the 4th of March.

Bro. and Sr. Teeple, Sr. Mussey, and all that have buried friends in the cold ground, be patient, for the advent of our Lord draweth nigh, when death and hell must give up the precious dust.

M. L. Curtis.

Madison, Conn., Nov. 17, 1856.

Dr. South says, "The tale-bearer and the tale-hearer should be hanged up both together, the former by the tongue, the latter by the ear." In speaking of the tattler, he says, "If you let this fly blow in your ear, a worm will come out of your mouth."

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 31, 1856.

Reflections.

Before this number reaches many of our readers, the year '56 will be closed with all its varied scenes of joy and sorrow, of blessings unnumbered from our Father in heaven, many of which have been but poorly improved, and yield no comfort in moments of reflection. Those unkind words and misspent hours have left their impress but O may there be none for the record of the coming year. Let the few fleeting hours that remain of this life be well spent, and our last words in kindness be spoken, that we may leave no sting of anguish to fill a wounded heart.

Many solemn and interesting reflections steal unconsciously upon the mind as we review the events of the by-gone year. It is fitting that it should be so.

Amid the strife and confusion of political, religious and financial partizans striving for the ascendency over their rival competitors, it is fortunate that once in a year, circumstances lead men to a few sober thoughts, as they are led to make a brief pause in their daring rush, although they may dash onward again, like the "lightning train" from its station, to the final depot where we must stop. When we number the changes of the year recorded for the judgment review, we start amazed and wonderwhy we live, while millions have breathedtheir last, and are now sleeping in the darkness of the tomb, marked by the willow weeping o'er the spot where the loved ones rest unharmed by earth's rude storms, while we mourn alone, and finish our weary pilgrimage in sable dress through life's thorny pathway, to the land of happy greeting—the land of glory, of endless joy, where farewell words are never spoken, and sorrows tears cease to flow.

Here our cup of grief is often filled to the brim, and from the deep fountains of the heart flows out the most bitteranguish. As days, weeks, and months have passed, the orphan list has swelled its numbers, their agonizing cries have rent the midnight air, while they have felt their lonliness in a cold and he rtless world with nother's voice to cheer the gloom, no father' care to provide their daily food; but left a prey to those who watch for the innocent, as wolves for lambs. May God preserve them from the hand of the destroyer.

While some have trod in flowery paths and joyous scenes of friendship's choicest days, others have felt the withering blast of an enemy's rage, or been deeply wounded by slander's demon tongue.

Though the king of terrors has not yet entered our lovely home and cast a mournful shade upon all around, yet there are many from which it has culled the fairest flowers, and spoiled the choicest jewels. The family idol was the first prize drawn by death's lottery. O, how many fond hearts in anguish lie bleeding, that one year ago were buoyant with merry joy and brightest hopes of constant peace. The spoiler has done his work, and the bridegroom weeps by the grave of his lovely bride. The lone widow in silent sadness spends weary days and long gloomy nights, as she mourns over the loss of him whose hand she fondly claspod in nuptial bliss, since the last new year's dawn.

Should Jesus tarry another year, who of our readers will shed the orphan's tears? Who will follow the wife of his youth to the "city of the dead?" Who will shed the widow's tears and sigh for the morn when the tomb shall restore its treasured gems to the grief-stricken mourner.

Who of us will plant the summer rose and twine flowery wreaths about the graves of our loved ones, who are now cheering us by their smiles of affection? May the Lord prepare us for the trials that remain, and guide us in the way that leads to the land where sorrow and sighing, sickness, pain and death are forever unknown.

Questions.

Bro. Grant:—Will you answer me through the Crisis a few questions?

1. Is 1 Kings. 17: 21—22 translated right? Elijah prays for the child's soul to come into him again, and it did so.

2. Again in Gen. 35: 18 it reads—"And it came to pass as her soul was in departing, for she died.",

Z. Grovier.

ANSWER.

No. 1. In 1-Kings, 17: 17, where we have the record of the sickness and death of the child, we read, "and his sickness was so sore, that there was no breath left in him."

This passage declares that his breath had left him. It does not say the child was gone, but his breath; then when his life returns, we should expect the return of that which caused his death; or in other words, that the breath of life would enter him again.

The Hebrew word here rendered breath is n'-shah-mah, the same one that is translated breath in Gen. 2: 7, where it is said, "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."

The same word is used in Gen. 7: 22 and is applied to beasts, and all living creatures that died in the flood. We find it again in Isa. 2: 22. "Cease ye from man whose breath (n'-shah-mah) is in his nostrils."

These examples show that the breath that left the child, was not the child himself.

We will now examine verses 21—22, referred to in the question, where we have an account of the return of the life of the child. "And he (Elijah) stretched himself upon the child three times, and cried unto the Lord, and said, O Lord my God, I pray thee let this child's soul come into him again. And the Lord heard the voice of Elijah; and the child's soul came into him again, and he revived."

The word soul, in these verses, is rendered from the Hebrew word, nephesh, which is translated in 44 different ways, and is applied indiscriminately to man and beast.

It is 33 times applied to beasts. This word is rendered life and lives 128 times, and had it been rendered life in the passage under consideration, all would have been plain and harmonious.

2. We will now turn to the second question, referring to Gen. 35: 18. "And it came to pass as her soul was in departing, (for she died.")

Nephesh is the word rendered soul in this passage also, and it may be seen at a glance, that had it been rendered life as in other places, it would have ne ded no comment. If the soul that departed was Rachel, then it was not immortal, for it is expressly declared—"she died."

Moral Signs.

We firmly believe, that we are in the last days of the history of this world in its present state.

Near the end of time, the state of things will be similar to that among the Antediluvians, and the Sodomites just before their destruction.

The Savior informs us in Luke 17: 26—30, that "as it was in the days of Noe," and "in the days of Lot, . . . even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of Man is revealed."

We are well convinced that the religious interest was very low just before the flood, and the overthrow of the cities of the plain. We are equally well persuaded that there will be a great similarity between those times and the days just preceding the second advent of our Savior. Says Paul in 2 Tim. 3: 1,—"This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come." And in the four verses following, he gives a description of man's moral condition in the last days. The picture is a sad one, but the present aspect of things seems to be in perfect harmony with the prophetic word of the apostle.

He says—"men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, . . . incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away.

Does this favor the doctrine of the world's conversion which many have preached and believed? Are these plain scriptures to be reversed, so as to read—"in the last days" good "times shall come?"

Admitting we are in the last days, as most believe who believe the Bible, we inquire what do the "Moral Signs" indicate? A progressive or retrograde march?

We subjoin a few facts and leave the reader to judge.

"It as asserted that church-goers have declined 30 per cent in New York during the last 30 years, while theatres have increased 50 per cent."

One, who has been a pastor over 20 years in the vicinity of Cincinnati, O., says,—"in all southern Ohio, the membership in all the Presbyterian churches is less than it was 20 years ago, while the population has far more than doubled, and not a few churches, which at that time had settled pastors, are becoming extinct."

Zion's Advocate, the organ of the Baptist denomination, Me., says: "For 11 years there has been, with one exception, a constant decrease of our numbers. In 1844, 23,860; in 1855 19,792. Decrease, 4,068." More than one-sixth.

In an editorial for the Feb. No. 1855, of the American and Foreign Christian Union, it is said;—"The increase of denominational zeal in many churches is greater than has been known before in more than a quarter of a century; and the spirit of worldliness generally confessed is prevailing in all denominations."

"Persons now-a-days may act like sinners, deal like sinners, talk like sinners, associate with sinners, and appear just like sinners, and still retain a standing in religious society. How has the fine gold become dim! When shall such stumbling blocks be removed out of the way of Zion."—Union Magazine.

"In 1837 there were 36 Presbyterian churches, and 10,860 members in the city of New York; and now, taking the minutes of both assemblies, there are but two more churches and 405 more members, notwithstanding the population has more than doubled."—New York Observer.

Says the New York Independent,—"There are in Vt. and N. H., several thousand less numbers in the Congregational denomination than there were ten years ago. While our churches are spiritually dying there never was such a willingness to pull down present houses of worship, and rear up in their stead most elegant and costly structures."

"No less than twelve clergymen were present at the fancy dress ball which took place in Bath, on Easter Monday."—London Record.

Says the New York Evangelist, Jan. 23, 1851, "The Congregational churches in N. H., in the space of three years have declined about 4,000, one-seventh part of the whole number. If the same ratio of decrease goes on, in 13 years every Congregational and Presbyterian church in N. H., will be extinct."

For the Crisis.

The Poor.

BY MARY.

"For the poor shall never cease out of the land; therefore I command thee, saying, thou shalt open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor, and to thy needy in thy land." Deut. 15: 11.

That poverty, and its attendant miseries and woes in their unnumbered phases, truly exists all around us, especially in our cities, is a fact too obvious to be controverted. The reality of it, which daily is made so apparent to our senses, is heart-sickening. O, the wretchedness, and want, and pinings for food and warmth, which ascend to heaven continuously, in piteous wailings and tearful prayers.

The very atmosphere around us is burdened with the cries of the suffering poor. They enter into the ears of Him, who seeth not as man seeth, who judgeth righteously; who heareth their cries. And where is there one who professes to be like God and his dear Son, and to follow the teachings of the word, that can habitually close his ears, and pockets, too, against the plaints of the needy? Show me one who does it, and, according to the word, that man's religion is vain! He is an abhorrence in the eyes of God, and to all his true-hearted children. He who can find no time, in his press of selfish care and worldly-mindedness, to seek out the haunts of indigence, often the abodes of God's chosen ones, though steeped in deepest poverty; who can allow a poor suffering neighbor (who, perhaps, is deprived of that employ which affords maintenance for his family) to pass on, from week to week, from month to month, with his helpless family clinging to him for their support, and he, heartsick and discouraged, with no means to supply their wants; I say, he who can stay his hand, notwithstanding the better promptings of his nature, from giving relief to his neighbor, because of any feeling of selfishness, or for a want of trust in Providence, as regards his own interests, is dreadfully destitute of that gospel charity which distinguishes ever, and renders so lovely the disciple of Jesus. How callous the heart which never feels, and prompts to deeds of benevolence, when everywhere coming in contact with distress.

But can a christian refrain his heart and hand? Nay, verily. He considereth the poor, and is pronounced "blessed" by the Lord, and him will He deliver in time of trouble.

To be a christian is to be Christ-like.—Christ walked daily with the poor, administering abundantly to their necessities, himself a companion of their poverty and homelessness. The Son of man had not where to lay his head. He was poorer than the foxes, who have holes, and the birds, who build their nests. But his whole life was a sacrifice for the forsaken and wretched. Does any one profess to be his follower? If so, to be like Him, he must consider, and have pity on the poor. He will not be found oppressing them, but cheerfully giving of his substance as the Lord hath prospered him. "The liberal soul shall be made fat." "He that hath pity upon the poor, lendeth to the Lord; and that which he hath given, will He pay him again. But "whoso stoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he also shall cry himself, and shall not be heard." "He that giveth unto the poor shall not lack; but he that hideth his eyes shall have many a curse."

Hear the Apostle James;—"Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love Him?" Jesus says; "the poor always ye have with you, but me ye have not always." So if we would do for Christ, who is now personally absent from us, we will do for the poor, who are with us, and Christ will accept it as done unto Him, and bless us in so doing. Then let all true-hearted lovers of the Lord Jesus, and of his blessed words, see to it that they are not lacking in this particular. Away with all sordid reasoning, self-love, and selfish promptings: shut not up your bowels of compassion against your needy brother, but "relieve him; yea, tho' he be a stranger, or a sojourner." "Give him, and thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him." "Open thine hand wide unto thy brother, to thy poor, and to thy needy." Is one cold and backslidden in the cause of truth and religion, and wishes to be revived, let him find his way to the abodes of want, and listen to the plaints of suffering innocence; visit the desolate home of the widow and fatherless in their affliction; tell them of Jesus, the friend of the poor, and distribute to their necessities according to the grace of God towards you; and his word for it, it shall "be a lengthening of thy tranquillity," here, and will insure unto thee, when the King comes, the eternal blessing—"inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; for, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Let each do their duty before God, in this respect, and with a cheerful spirit; practicing as well as professing pure and undefiled religion, and the church will breathe a freer, purer atmosphere; the cause will not be languishing; personal peace of mind, and contentment of spirit will be fanned to an intenser flame, and gospel charity thus cultivated, become a companion, rather than a transient visitor in the home of the heart. May the Lord free us perfectly from every feature of selfishness, and purify every inordinate affection, that the cries of the poor be no longer disregarded by us, (and have they not been?) that our daily practice of the royal law, and earnest desire to obey it, may exemplify the holy religion we profess, to the glory of God, and the real good of suffering humanity around us.

Boston, Dec. '56.

Domestic Summary.

The Rumored Slave Insurrection.

Washington, Dec. 15.

The people of Alexandria, Va., have been greatly alarmed for several days past in consequence of a threatened insurrection among the slaves. The military were called out last night, and thirty-two slaves were arrested at a ball where they had assembled without permission, against the laws of the State. Gov. Wise has supplied arms and ammunition, and the people throughout the counties of Alexandria and Fairfax are arming themselves in fear of a general outbreak. No evidence has been found against any of the slaves arrested.

I learn from one of the patrol of last night that each piece of property will be fined and whipped for violating the law by attending the ball. About twenty valuable slaves have escaped from that district recently.

Louisville, Dec. 15.

Rev. Wm. Anderson, a negro preacher of the Methodist Church North, was captured on Saturday on board the steamer Telegraph, with a carpet bag filled with incendiary documents.

He has been engaged in running off slaves in the vicinity of Carrollton, and documents in his possession implicated several distinguished Northerners.

Anderson was yesterday taken to Carrolton, where a large reward has been offered for him.

The insurrectionary movement in Tennessee obtained more headway than is known to the public, important facts being suppressed in order to check the spread of the contagion and prevent the true condition of affairs from being understood elsewhere.

Upwards of 60 slaves in the Iron Works belonging to John Bell were implicated, and nine hung, four by the decision of a Court, and five by the mob. Mr. Bell was absent at the time, and is now detained from Washington, owing to this cause.

These slaves were treated with care and humanity, under strict directions from Mr. Bell, who habitually visited the works where they were employed, during the recess of Congress.

Gallatin, Tenn., Dec. 17.

Thirty negroes have been arrested here on suspicion of being concerned in the conspiracy. The citizens have appointed a committee to examine into the matter.

Cincinnati, Dec. 17.

The latest advices from Cumberland river, state that twenty-five iron furnaces in that region have stopped operations, apprehending a negro insurrection.

Louisville, Dec. 20.

The Russellville Herald says the insurrection excitement still exists in the neighborhood of Volney and Gordonsville. A number of negroes had been arrested, one of whom pretended to know all about the plot, but said he would die before betraying it. He was ordered to be whipped, and received 750 lashes, when he died.

At Cadiz, Trigg Co., Ky., a free negro was hung yesterday in accordance with the sentence of a Vigilance Committee.

A number of other negroes are in Jail, some of them will be hung. The excitement runs very high, and Judge Cook had called the Court for Christmas day.

The Courier des Etats Unis, publishes two more letters from its Editorial Correspondent (C. G.) in reference to the negro conspiracy in the Southern States. From one of those letters, dated Sparta, White County, Tennessee, Dec. 11, we make the following extracts:—

Everything that I have seen on my journey is but the repetition, in similar proportions, of what I have already made known to you—everywhere negroes suspected, and quickly convicted, of being mixed up in the conspiracy, are arrested, whipped, and generally sent back to their masters, kept in prison if they are more culpable, or hanged if the crime is flagrant and if the degree of culpability commands the last chastisement.

At Sparta, where I have just arrived, after a jolting of 90 miles in distance and of 24 hours in duration, a free negro has been arrested, having in his possession six double barreled guns, rifles and pistols. His first answer as to the use he had for that arsenal, was that he intended to go hunting. The species of game, however, was not designated, but no one can have doubts upon that; so this Nimrod was retained a prisoner, as being too dangerous to let take to the woods.

Another negro, since arrested, possessing other arms, has declared that he received them from the first with the object of making use of them when the hour of deliverance should have arrived.

A persistent jet of smoke which proceeded nightly from the forge of a blacksmith living between Sparta and McKinville also attracted attention. This blacksmith was a free negro. There was a descent made upon him in the middle of the night, and he was found to be manufacturing bowie-knives.

Search led to the discovery, under a shed, of a chest full of these arms, already quite finished. Of an extraordinary length—two feet and a half—they resembled sabres so much that there can be no doubt as to what they were destined for. The contradictory answers of the rural Vulcan not being of a nature to palliate his crime, he was secured until his destiny should be decided upon.

In spite of these precautions, people will live in anxiety until the fatal date is passed. It must be confessed that these fears are legitimate, in face of people among whom credulity has no limits and who can be persuaded of the most absurd things. Their obstinacy is so great and their conviction so deep rooted, that in Stewart county two blacks have died saying, "We were engaged in the conspiracy, we know all about it, but we will let you kill us rather than tell you a word of it. At all events, in a few days Fremont will bring us to life again."

Louisville, Dec. 24.

The Mayor of Louisville has issued a proclamation stating that in consequence of information which shows a disposition on the part of the colored people to rise against the whites, that all slaves be imprisoned during the holidays who are absent from home after half past 8 in the evening.

The Servile Insurrection.—We find the following in the Memphis (Tennessee) Eagle of Dec. 11:—

"We learn from a gentleman just from the scene of action, that on Friday last four gallows were erected at Dover, and on Saturday four negroes were hung thereon. Some thirty or thirty-five slaves have been arrested at Gallatin, suspected of insurrectionary designs. Since their arrest, some of them have confessed that they were concerned in the projected revolt.

The negroes that were arrested at the Cumberland Iron Works having confessed that they were concerned in the plot, and detailed a horrible series of cruelties that they wer[illegible]o have perpetrated, have been hung. The people in that section are driving away the free negroes—leaving none—making all go.

A negro preacher at Paducah, guilty of incendiary sermons, fled to Chicago, (a fitting place,) but if he ever puts his foot in Paducah again, he will be hung without judge or jury. All negro schools and churches have been closed, and notices given that no holiday will be allowed between Christmas and New Year's day. People are deserting plantations and flocking into the towns, and every thing is alarm and confusion. We advise every one to watch their negroes closely.

The Murfreesboro' News has the following item on the same subject: On last Thursday evening there was some excitement in town, which increased after dark and continued throughout the next day. It was not caused by a resurrection nor an insurrection of the slaves, nor by any well-grounded apprehension of either at this time, but by a self-constituted sort of Vigilance Committee or mob, that whipped, as we have been told, nearly every male free negro to be found in town, and ordered each one to leave the corporation and to return no more.

From California.

New Orleans, Dec. 12.

The steamship Texas, with California dates to Nov. 20, has arrived here.

The news from Nicaragua is highly important.

Gen. Walker has been successful in a series of battles with the Central Americans.

On the 10th ult., Gen. Hornsby, with 200 men, defeated 1100 of the enemy, under the Costan Rican General, Canas. The enemy lost 200, while Hornsby had only 2 killed and 11 wounded.

Four days fighting at Massaya ended in the entire defeat of the enemy.

Gen. Walker had returned to Granada, and after giving three days notice of his intention to allow time for the removal of valuables, fired the place, not leaving a vestige of it.

The inhabitants of Granada had removed to Rivas, with all their effects which will hereafter be the capital of Nicaragua.

Supplies for Walker.—The steamship Tennessee sailed this afternoon for Nicaragua without hindrance from the authorities. She took out a large number of passengers and a bountiful supply for Walker's army.

From Oregon—The Indian War Renewed.—The Indians, it appears, have again become troublesome in the Walla-Walla country. They had full possession of the entire country to the north and east of the Dalles, excepting a block-house or two. There were in the vicinity of that point about three thousand savages, mostly armed with guns. Gov. Stevens had been obliged to come to the Dalles, and Col. Steptoe was likewise on his way to the same point.

It appears that while Gov. Stevens was at the council ground endeavoring to effect a treaty of peace, the chiefs of the Nez Perces undertook to destroy him and his party, and would have succeeded had not Col. Steptoe sent two companies to his relief. These troops, on arriving, found a large body of Indians on the Governor's right, upon whom they fired a volley of grape shot, which, killing and wounding thirteen of their number, put the rest to flight.

The Indians having burned the prairie about Walla-Walla, Col. Steptoe was obliged to fall back upon the Umadilla. In this encounter, Elijah Hill, of Benton Co., was killed, and three whites wounded. From the disposition now manifested by the Indians, it is thought no peace can be concluded with them until they are met and severely punished. It is even feared they will become so emboldened by the temporizing course pursued towards them, as to attack the Cascades, and perhaps massacre the whites in both the Wasucall and Washington Territory; the regular troops not being sufficient to prevent their advancing upon those points.

The Hog Cholera.—The Cincinnati Times computes that between sixty and seventy thousand hogs have fallen victims to what is called the hog cholera during the past six months in that city and the surrounding region. Mr. Thomas Gaff of Lawrenceburg has lost about four thousand.

The dead hogs have been cut up and critically examined by physicians, but no clue to the disorder has been found. It is alleged that the disease is infectious. The first symptoms are manifested in the staggering motion of the hog, which is succeeded with violent purging, with spasms. The disease then extends to the throat, which inflames and swells until the hog stifles and dies. In this respect, the disease may be said to resemble erysipelas.—In fact, as it is from this cause chiefly that death is produced, the malady seems more nearly allied to erysipelas in the throat than to cholera.

Most sins begin in the eyes; by them, commonly, Satan creeps to the heart.—That man can never be in safety that hath not covenanted with his eyes.

When Melancthon was dying an attendant asked him if he would have anything. He replied: "Nihil aliud nisi cœlum"—nothing else butheaven!

In London, out of a population of two and a half millions, only five hundred thousand attend church.

Poetry.

FAITH.

Ye who think the truth ye sow
Lost beneath the winter's snow,
Doubt not Time's unerring law
Yet shall bring the genial thaw.
God in nature ye can trust,—
Is the God of mind less just?

Read we not the mighty thought
Once by ancient sages taught?
Though it withered in the blight
Of the mediæval night,
Now the harvest we behold;
See! it bears a thousand fold.

Workers on the barren soil,
Yours may seem a thankless toil;
Sick at heart with hope deferred,
Listen to the cheering word:
Now the faithful sower grieves;
Soon he'll bind his golden sheaves.

If Great Wisdom has decreed
Man may labor, yet the seed
Never in this life shall grow,
Shall the sower cease to sow?
The fairest fruit may yet be born
On the resurrection morn!

[Fritz and Leolett.

Foreign News.

ARRIVAL OF THE CITY OF BALTIMORE.

Philadelphia, Dec. 17.

The steamer City of Baltimore, from Liverpool, arrived off Cape Island at 8 o'clock last evening. Her dates are to Dec. 3—noon.

Neither the political or the commercial news by this arrival are of any exciting interest.

It was reported in London that England had agreed with the other Powers, to the reassembling of the Peace Conference in Paris.

An insurrection had broken out in Sicily.

There were rumors in England of dissension in the British Ministry.

The Insurrection in Sicily.—Our intelligence as to the extent of this movement is yet meagre. The following is all we have in regard to it:—

Paris, Monday, Dec. 1—6 P. M.—A telegraphic dispatch was this day received at the French Foreign-office announcing the commencement of an insurrection in Sicily. The scene of the revolt was, it appears, Cefalu, on the sea coast, about fifteen leagues to the east of Palermo. The insurgents were headed by a person named Bentiveuga, who had been formally pardoned by the King.—Troops had been sent against them, but it is not stated whether a collision had taken place. Disturbance is also said to have taken place at Girgenti (the ancient Agrigentum), on the southern coast of Sicily.

Naples was tranquil at the date of the dispatch.

Paris, Dec. 2.—An insurrectionary movement took place on the 23d ult., in some communes of the province of Palermo. The government authorities had been driven out. A deputy of the parliament of 1848 is at the head of the movement. The Neapolitan Government had dispatched troops to the disturbed places. Arrests had taken place in Palermo, but nothing is known of importance attaching to the insurrection.

The London Post's Paris correspondent writes that a dispatch received on Monday states that, when the courier left Palermo, order had not been established, and the movement was expected to spread.

Beyond the report that disturbances had also occurred at the Girgenti, there is no later news.

The Express says that there is an impression among the Italians in London, there will be a great sympathetic movement in Calabria.

The New York Journal of Commerce comments on the insurrection as follows:

"The news by the City of Baltimore announces the outbreak of a revolutionary movement in the province of Palermo, on the island of Sicily. This is the part of the Neapolitan dominions from which we should naturally expect to hear first of political disturbances, both because its remoteness from the centre of power has produced a greater recklessness of oppression and tyranny in the administration of the government, and because the means at hand to redress the manifestation of disaffection are likely to be less potential and formidable there than in the continental portions of the kingdom. Besides, a revolutionary sentiment has never ceased to pervade the Sicilian population, and the severity with which its occasional revolts have been crushed, and the dreadful retribution visited on those who participated in rebellion, rankling in the minds of survivors, have kept alive a feeling of resentment and a desire for revenge, eager to seize the first chance to accomplish its gratification. The movement appears to have been the result of a conspiracy extending over a considerable district of country. We are told that it broke out on the 22d ult. simultaneously at several points of the province. It seems to have taken the authorities by surprise, and continued to be, up to the date of our intelligence, successful in every quarter. The city of Palermo had not risen, but arrests were made there of suspected persons, and troops had been dispatched from the capital to attack the insurgents in the interior. The movement has the appearance of a deliberate and organized political insurrection, led by persons experienced in rebellion, whose liberalism was attested by service in the Sicilian Parliament of 1848. This is all we know in connection with an event which may kindle the flames of another European war. It is precisely what was predicted to result from the intervention exercised by France and England at the Neapolitan Court, and from the proceedings adopted by those powers to resent the impulse which it met from the resistance of the King. Russia supported the attitude of Naples, and met the demonstrations of the allies in a meaning protest. We do not look, however, for any present active assistance from Russia in repressing the revolt in Sicily. Such interference on the part of Russia would involve her in a new war with the allies, for which she is not yet prepared. But if the movement started on the island should extend to the continent, the Papal States and Austrian Italy may be expected to become the scene of a fresh conflict waged for Italian liberty and independence.

ARRIVAL OF THE CANADA.

Halifax, 23.

The Royal Mail Steamship Canada, Capt. Lang, arrived at this port, this forenoon, en route for Boston.

The steamship America, which left Liverpool 6th inst., and the arrival of which we have been expecting for a week past, encountered a furious storm, when off Cape Clear, which swept her decks, and so disabled her that she had to put back to Liverpool, where she arrived on the 10th inst.

The Canada was immediately got ready to take out the passengers and mails of the America, and left Liverpool, as above indicated, on the 12th inst.

A dispatch from Bordeaux announces the arrival, at that port, of a vessel having on board the captain and fifteen other persons, who were wrecked on the ill-fated Lyonnais. No names or other particulars given.

It is officially announced that the Congress of Paris will meet some time during the present month.

An attempt has been made to assassinate the King of Naples, but it proved unsuccessful.

The Russian Note.—The Times, in a leader, says:—

"It is wonderful how much that is absurd and how much that is base can be concealed, wrapped up, and overlaid by the pomp of diplomatic diction, and carried off by the authority of a great and powerful government. We have convincingly shown Russia that we are not to be overcome by force; and we have now to show her that we will not be overmatched by artifice."

Concentration of Russian Troops.—St. Petersburg, Dec. 8.—50,000 Russians, commanded by Gen. Beruloff, are ready to march upon the frontiers of Persia at the first call of the Shah. Besides which two complete "corps d'armee" are ready to march for the Austrian frontiers.

Insurrection in Sicily.—The Paris correspondent of the Daily News writes:—"I can assure you that the movement in Sicily is more serious than the Moniteur pretends.—There can be little doubt that the despatches of the official journal have been toned down for publication. At all events, it is certain that the government must have received by the same mail other and more important information. According to the trustworthy but of course incomplete intelligence which has been communicated to me, the insurrection is of a very general character, and is likely to spread throughout the island.—There is every reason to think that the stoppage of the mail on the Cefalu road was a stratagem executed for the purpose of making a diversion and drawing away troops from Palermo. The Governor of Sicily seems to have fallen into the trap, for he at once sent there a much larger body of troops than the Moniteur speaks of. I believe that the total number sent from Palermo was nearly 4000, including artillery.

It will be observed that, so lately as the 28th, a boat left Messina to fetch 1000 men and artillery from Naples; but the Swiss Guards, of which the Moniteur says nothing, had left Naples long before. I learn, moreover, that both Messina and Palermo were declared in a state of siege. The movement is, I believe, in no way republican, but is managed by that party—the strongest in Sicily—which desires to depose the King and proclaim his son with the constitution of 1848."

All the despatches from Naples concur in stating that the insurrection in Sicily has been suppressed, and that the chief of the insurgents, Baron Bentivenga, has been arrested.

"Palermo is tranquil." Messina, too, we are told, is tranquil, "notwithstanding the clandestine landing of a quantity of muskets on the coast."

Naples, however, in consequence of the lamentable attempt on the life of the King, was much agitated, and large bodies of troops occupied the streets.

There was a rumor of a revolutionary movement in the Neapolitan provinces. Some persons are inclined to believe that the Sicilian revolt was got up by the police; but this notion is not generally credited. Other persons more frankly admit that the attempt was a "bona fide" one, but that it was premature and unskillfully conducted.

The Attempt to Assassinate the King of Naples.—An attempt has been made on the life of the King of Naples. This fact has been announced in several telegraphic despatches, one of which appeared in the Mercury of Wednesday—but there is no harmony in the subsidiary facts briefly recorded by those despatches. As we know from previous advices, there was to be a grand review at Naples on the 8th, in honor of the Immaculate Conception, and an expectation was entertained that a military demonstration would be made in the sense of the constitutional address to the king, said to have been lately signed by a great many soldiers. The review did take place, as fixed, and one account states that whilst the troops were defiling a soldier of the 3d battalion of Chasseurs rushed from the ranks and struck the king on the left side, but that his Majesty was not wounded, and that the soldier was knocked down and siezed by Colonel Latour.

A second account states that a soldier fired a carbine at the king, who was slightly wounded, and that the soldier was killed on the spot.

A third version is that the king received a bayonet thrust and was slightly wounded, and that the assassin was arrested.

The Austrian Correspondence says that the bayonet of the soldier struck his Majesty on the right side above the waist.

The Soundings for the Atlantic Telegraph.—The following account, addressed to the editor of the "London Illustrated News," will be read with interest:

Not a single rock has been met with, not a particle of gravel or sand has been brought up, but it appears as if nature had provided a bed "soft as a snow bank" to use Maurey's own words, for the express purpose of receiving a telegraphic cable. Lieut. Berryman says that he is satisfied that the lead, with the sounding apparatus, has frequently buried itself ten or fifteen feet deep in this soft material, and he doubts not that the cable will likewise sink and imbed itself in a similar manner.

The greatest depth attained has been two thousand and seventy fathoms, (about two and a third miles) but perhaps the most remarkable, and at the same time the most satisfactory result is the perfect confirmation which these soundings give of the opinion expressed by Lieut. Maurey as to the existence of a great level at the bottom of the ocean, unparalleled by anything on the surface of the earth; and which he proposes to name "The Telegraph Plateau."

For more than thirteen hundred miles the bottom of the Atlantic, in the direct line of our track, is found by these soundings to present an almost unbroken level plain. Nature has thus placed no obstacle in the way of this great undertaking which may not, by cautious perseverance, be overcome—nay, rather (if we except the enormous length of the cable which will be required,) it would seem that the line to be followed by the Atlantic cable presents absolutely fewer engineering difficulties than the shorter route, (though more complex from the nature of the bottom) on which the Mediterranean cable must be laid.

Position of the Waldenses in Piedmont.—In the Piedmontese valleys are 15 Waldensian parishes, confided to 15 pastors. These valleys contain about 22,000 souls. The number of Roman Catholics mixed with these 22,000 Waldensians is somewhere about 3000, with 20 priests.

Signor Revel, Moderator of the Waldensian Church, at the commencement of his ministry, having been sent as minister of a parish at the very highest point of one of the mountains, there found a priest, whose charge consisted of one good old man of 70 years of age. The poor priest had never succeeded in making a single proselyte; and one thing that sadly afflicted him was that very often he could not say mass for want of some one to assist him.

According to the testimony of the Rev. Mr. Noel, who some months ago visited these valleys, it appears that a truly evangelical revival has taken place among them. The Waldensians have 169 elementary schools, many however, are only open for four months in the year. The number of the scholars average 4826. They possess two little hospitals, each containing 26 beds.

In various parts of the Sardinian kingdom they have succeeded in establishing missionary stations. In Pinerola, a town containing 15,000 inhabitants, the first stone has been laid of a Waldensian temple. The "Table" maintains a preacher there, a teacher and a colporteur.

In Turin, the population of which is 150,000 they have a beautiful temple, a pastor who preaches in French, and two preachers who preach in Italian; three masters, one mistress, and two colporteurs. They publish a small journal in the Italian language, La Buona Novella, and have a depository of books and religious tracts, under the direction of a committee.

In San Mauro they have a master, who is at the same time colporteur.

In Genoa, a city of 90,000 inhabitants, they have a preacher a missionary, a master, a mistress, and two colporteurs.

In Supier d' Arena, a suburb of Genoa, a master and preacher.

In Favale a little congregation exists, directed by a teacher who studied at the Normal school of Torre, the capital of the valleys.

In Nice, a city of 20,000 souls, they maintain a pastor an evangelist, a minister, a mistress, and two colporteurs. In all, there are 24 agents in the service of the Waldensian Church in Italy.

The college of Torre possesses 12 professors, and 105 students, comprising those of the normal school, and of the theological faculty.

The details we have derived from a letter of the moderator written to an English journal.

The American and European Telegraph.—The British government has, at the request of Cyrus W Field, of New York, ordered a steamer to be fitted out under efficient officers to examine thoroughly the coasts of Ireland and Newfoundland, and to sound across the Atlantic between these countries to ascertain the best place for laying and landing the submarine telegraph cable.

The British government has further agreed to guarantee four per cent. interest per annum on the whole capital required to manufacture and lay down the cable between Newfoundland and Ireland. Contracts for the whole extent of the Atlantic cable were signed in London on the 19th of November, one-half to be manufactured by W. Kaper, Glass & Co., of London, the other half by R. S. Nowell & Co., at Liverpool. It is all to be completed and placed on board two steamers ready for sea on or before the thirty-first day next, and by the 4th of July next it is confidently expected here that we shall be in telegraphic communication with the United States.

Mr. Field and Mr. Brett of London were received Thursday morning by the Chamber of Commerce at Manchester, and on the afternoon of the same day by the Commercial Association of that city.

Capt. Newell, of the whaling barque Alice Fraser, of New Bedford, at San Francisco, reports that on the 26th July last, a volcano burst out on the island of Ounimask, in the Pacific, throwing the water several feet into the air, followed by an ejection of lava which covered the deck of his ship.

The Polar Sea.—A correspondent writing to the New York Tribune, commenting upon an article which was copied from the Traveler into that paper says:—

Near 40 years ago, a Capt. Henning sailed from New York in the barque Aspasia, on a sealing voyage to the Falkland Islands and the then unknown region of the South Pole. In his published narrative he states that south of Cape Horn, he encountered boisterous and intensely cold weather. The ice accumulated so rapidly on his ship that several times she nearly foundered.

Beyond this region of cold he sailed into a comparatively genial climate, free from ice and storms; but finding no land he changed course northward and soon encountered the cold and storms from which he had so recently escaped. In connection with these statements he suggests the probability of an open sea and warm climate at the extreme south.

The book to which I refer may now be out of print; I have not seen a copy of it for 20 years, but it can doubtless be found in some of your city libraries.

The State of Europe.—The Liverpool Post says that the state of Europe is such as to excite the utmost disquietude in the minds of the peaceably disposed. The ferment in Italy increases.

Obituary.

Died, at Seneca Falls, N. Y., December 2d, of consumption, Mary Louisa, wife of Alver Parmelee, in the 26th year of her age.

In life, sister Parmelee evidenced to all, by her daily walk and conversation, in sickness and health, through the varied scenes of mortality that she loved the Savior; that her life was "hid with Christ in God;" and now the weary pilgrim sleeps in Jesus, and awaits the resurrection morning, when she will be raised to immortality to share with the sanctified in that "inheritance which is incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away."

She exercised the grace of patience in all her pain, and went down to the grave willingly, having treasured up in her heart the comforting words of her Savior—"I am the resurrection and the life, he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live;" and of Bro. Paul "them that sleep in Jesus, will God bring with him."

She leaves a loving husband and three young children to mourn her loss.

T. G. N.

Died, in Stockbridge, Vt., Dec. 13, Nancy Alvara, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Perkins, aged nine years. Allen Cleaveland.

Stockbridge, Dec. 22, 1856.

Died 19th inst., Edward Eugene, youngest son of Silas H. and Mary Ann S. Waldron.

Portland, Me. Dec. 20, '56.

APPOINTMENTS.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

If the Lord will, O. G. Smith will preach at Melvin Village, Sabbath, Jan. 4.
Vittum School House, Monday evening, Jany. 5.
January 6th and 7th, as the Brethren Hoyt and Hodsdon may appoint.
Lake Village, Sabbath, Jan. 11.

CONFERENCE.

The Eastern Iowa, and Rock Island Conference is expected to meet in Moline, Ill., Friday Jan. 2nd, 1857. P. B. Morgan.

Fairhaven Mass. first Sabbath in Jan.
(Head of river in the eve.)
Lowell, 2nd and 3d Sabs. in Jan.
Communications received at the above places after Dec. 18th.

W. S. Campbell.

Eld. J. Couch appoints to preach at Boston the first Lord's day in Jan.

Eld. M. Grant appoints to preach at Portsmouth, N. H. the first Lord's day in Jan.

Bro. Brewer will be at Cheshire, Friday eve, Jan. 2d, and continue over the Sabbath. Will some Bro. meet him at Meriden, on Friday on the arrival of the express from Hartford.

Bro. Brewer and myself will commence a series of meetings at Waterbury, Wednesday eve. Jan. 7th, to continue over the Sabbath. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend. S. G. Mathewson.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Charlemont, Mass. Friday eve, Jan. 2.
North Adams, Sunday Jan. 4.
South Adams, " " 11th
Cheshire, Mass. " " 12th.
Lebanon Springs, N. Y. 14th and continue evenings through the week and over the Sabbath.
Otis, Mass. Sunday 25th.
Winsted, Ct. Wednesday, 28th and continue through the week.
Campville, Monday eve, Feb. 2nd.
Northfield, Tuesday and Wednesday, 3d and 4th.
Litchfield, (South Farms,) Thursday eve, and continue through the week.

C. Goodrich.

Any brethren wishing to address me, will please direct to any of the above Sunday appointments. C. G.

BUSINESS MATTERS.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

A Perkins, J Boutwell, E Turner, J Dudley, T J Dudley, D Mosher, J Wight, J S Blaisdell, J S Moulton, Eld. G Waugh, G Colville, N Rathburn, T Lee, C Fleming, J A Barker, J A Smith, T B Davis, M D Staples, H Perkins, M A Stevens, T P Perkins, R G Kirk, H Harrington, R N Stetson, B Woodside, R Pendleton, W Payne, H N Allen, A B Robinson, H Slater, A Spoor, D N Stocking, H Leach, J Gray, A S Whitney, E Knight, C Perry, $1.00 each.

A sister, $4.00, E J Gilman, $2.00, C Churchill $2.00, J Harrington, $2.65, C Newell, $2.00, G Hall, $2.00, C Page $1.89, S Trumbull, $1.30, M M Ross, 48 cts.

A Crabtree, I Quimby, J Rofe, L Monk, H Finn, J Stevens, Smith & Miller, C B Turner, Mrs. Duell, Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. McNelta, G Horton, 50 cts. each.

For the Poor.—L Mills, $2.00, A Friend $1.65.

For Bro. Sheldon.—A Crabtree, D T Cooper, $1.00 each.

Books sent.—A S Richards, A Crabtree, R G Kirk, J Harrington, C B Turner, C Page.

Gardner Hall—You have paid to No. 95.
Charles Page—You have paid to No. 94.
R. Pendleton—You have paid to No. 120.
Mrs. M. M. Ross—You have paid to No. 111.

Bro. C. W. Perkins' P. O. address is New Hampton, N. H

Eld. E. Bellows' P. O. address is Lafayette R. I.

BOOKS AND TRACTS

FOR SALE AT THE OFFICE OF THIS PAPER.

Persons ordering publications will do well to send a small amount to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts, if sent in packages of eight ounces, or more, is only one half cent per ounce.

THE THREE COVENANTS. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents; postage 1 cent.

TREATISE ON MATT. XXIV. By I. C. Welcome. 33 cents; postage 6 cents.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE BOOK OF SEVEN SEALS. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents; postage 1 ct.

FUTURE PUNISHMENT. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents: postage 16 cts.

THE UNITY OF MAN, or Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

BOUND TRACTS. By H. L. Hastings. Containing nearly 200 pages, in plain cloth binding. 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

THE CHRISTIAN'S ONLY HOPE: or, the Faith once Delivered to the Saints. By Z. Campbell. Price 10 cents; postage 1 ct.

PAULINE THEOLOGY, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. 15 cents; postage 1 ct.

THE SAINTS' INHERITANCE. By William Shepherd. Price—four copies, 25 cents; nine copies, 50 cents; eighteen copies, $1; one hundred, $5—post-paid.

CHURCH DEBTS. By William Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents: postage 9 cents.

THE WORLD AS IT WAS, AS IT IS, AND AS IT WILL BE. With several poems. By Mrs. A. C. Judson. 38 cents; postage 3 cents.

THE DISCUSSION: Between Prof. H. Mattison, of the Methodist E. Church, and George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price 25 cents; postage 3 cents.

THE PLAIN WAY, or Conviction and Conversion, and The New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Single copy, 12 cents; $8 per hundred. Postage 1 cent per copy.

THE VOICE OF THE CHURCH ON THE REIGN OF CHRIST. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1. Postage 18 cents.

A VIEW OF THE SCRIPTURE REVELATIONS Concerning a Future State. By Richard Whately, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin. Price $1; pastage 18 cents.

THE SEVEN SEALS: with Scriptural Facts concerning the Four Angels, the Four Winds, the Sealing Angel, the Seal of the Living God, &c. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cents.

THE FIRST FRUITS: a Scriptural Inquiry into the Time and Season of the First Resurrection, and Change of Those who are Alive and Remain. Price 10 cents per copy; postage 1 cent.

THE OLD PATHS, or the Primitive Doctrine of a future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolical fathers, with arguments and remarks. 18 cents; postage 1 cent.

JUBILEE HARP. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns well adapted to the present wants of the church. Price, singly, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2,50; per hundred, $20. Postage 7 cents.

SPIRITUALISM A SATANIC DELUSION and a Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price in paper covers, 38 cents—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cts.—postage 8 cents.

GLAD TIDINGS, or Bible Proof that Woe and Sin are to End in the Universe, by a Literal Destruction of Wicked Men and Devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment Collected and Arranged. By Jacob Blain. Price 10 cents postage 1 cent.

THE LIFE AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE OF HIRAM MUNGER, Including many Singular Circumstances connected with Campmeetings and Revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining book, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cents; postage 10 cents.

BIBLE vs. TRADITION: in Which the True Teaching of the Bible is Manifested, the Corruptions of Theologians Detected, and the Traditions of Men Exposed. By Aaron Ellis. Revised and much enlarged by Thomas Read. Price, in paper covers, 50 cents. postage 6 cents.

THE WORKS OF JOHN CUMMING. "Benedictions or the Blessed Life," "The Church before the Flood," "Lectures on the Apocalypse," (series 1 and 2,) "Signs of the Times," "The End," "The Tent and the Altar,"—75 cents per volume. "Lectures on Romanism," $1. Postage 16 cents per volume.

A REVIEW: Giving the Main Ideas in Dr. E. Beecher's 'Conflict of Ages,' and a Reply to Them, and to his many Reviewers. To which is added the Bible meaning of the word Hell. Also, two hundred texts quoted, to show the Nature of Future Punishment. By Jacob Blain, Baptist minister. Price 8 cents; postage 1 cent.

TRACTS.—The Church not in Darkness—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—by H. L. Hastings. The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—by D. T. Taylor. Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—by John Cumming. State of the Dead, by Milton. Intermediate State, by Drew. Each 24 pages. Price 5 cents single, $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the gloast of Man; Ancient Landmarks; Destiny of the Wicked; The Great Incentive; 3 cts. single; $1.50 per hundred. ——Future Punishment, The Key of Truth, The Night Cometh, price 2 cents single, $1 per hundred.

The above named publications can be obtained at the office of the World's Crisis, 157 Hanover street, Boston; H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y.; W. Pratt, Moline, Ill.; A. F. Porter, 20 Erie street, Philadelphia, Pa.; S. S. Brewer, 54 Wilson street, Providence, R. I.; S. W. Bishop, Portsmouth, N. H.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

Bro. Grant:—On taking up the "Guide to holiness" this morning, I observed some lines entitled, "I want to live always," which reminded me of some I wrote to a friend at the south, last year, which you are at liberty to publish if you think them worthy. They are as follows:

I would live always, but not in this world,
Where joys are so fading, and hearts grow so cold;
Where sorrow so often drives pleasure away,
As the shadows of night, the glories of day.

O, I would live always, but wait for the time,
When Jesus in power and glory shall come,
To change this vile body of dust and of clay,
And cause me to soar from earth's sorrows away;

Away from the trials which compass me here—
Away where there's never a sigh or a tear—
Away with my Savior in glory to reign—
Away from all trouble, all sorrow and pain.

Would you not live always, my cousin and friend,
'Mid glories unfading which never shall end,
And join with the ransomed of earth in a song,
Ascribing salvation to Jesus our King?

I know you'd live always, but ask yet to stay,
Where storm after storm surges dark o'er the way;
Still hoping these storm-clouds may soon pass away,
And leave yet the future an unbroken day;

But let me assure you, while time shall endure,
That tempests and storm-clouds will everywhere lower;
In the bright sunny south—the cold chilly north—
No place is exempt o'er the breadth of the earth.

But in the bright Eden which God will restore,
No storm-clouds or tempests will evermore lower;
But the beams of His glory eternally shine—
O would you live always?—be wise then in time.

D. D. C.

So. Wilbraham, Nov. 9, '56.

THE CROSS.

Written on seeing an evergreen cross entwined with flowers.

The Cross—emblem of death and shame.
We glory in thy hallowed name;
For thou dost bid our sorrows cease—
Thy presence gives the sinner peace.
Thou art our hope, we turn to thee
When earthly hopes like shadows flee.

The Cross—to it our Lord was nailed;
On it his brow in anguish paled;
There, from his pierced and wounded side,
Rolled forth a cleansing, crimson tide.
Now, through the merits of that blood,
I come, and am at peace with God.

The Cross—once it was robed in gloom,
Deep as the clouds that shade the tomb;
When foes of God and foes of men
Exulted, and the Lamb was slain.
He lives again—with flowers we twine
This token of his love divine.

The Cross. Here may the sinner rest;
Here may he be with pardon blest;
Here is the refuge of the lost;
Here is the Christian's joy and boast.
Here light from Heaven dispels the gloom,
And tells of life beyond the tomb.

The Cross—when scenes of time are done—
Faith's conflicts fought—its victories won;
When glorious crowns shall deck the blest;
When all the saved shall be at rest;—
Then, then, throughout eternity,
Ne'er shall the Cross forgotten be.

H. L. H.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Last Light-House.

BY M. BATCHELOR.

As I understand the four monarchies in Daniel 7, Rome is the last; and by all Bible students it is considered that we are somewhere in the last end of it. The question before me is, can we know any thing as to where we are in its history?—The great outlines given by Daniel are filled up, with the exception of its destruction, and that must be done by the brightness of the Redeemer's coming. 2 Thess. 2: 1—9. But is there anything more definite than those great outlines? As I understand Rev 12th 13th and 17th chapters, we have first,—Rome Pagan; second,—Rome Papal; and third,—Rome in its last stage as it goes to the judgment. The first is past, also the second. Some may demur at the last statement as some affirm that the image of the beast is yet in the future. If so, the plagues are in the future, Rev. 15: 2, and there is to be a great killing time for the saints yet to come.—Rev. 13: 15. To my mind all the different forms and changes in Rev. 13: are Roman. See again, Rev. 15: 2. They had gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name. Thus, if the last is Roman, so are all the rest.—The 17th chapter describes the woman as she goes to judgment. See 1st verse. "I will show unto thee the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters." I will quote from the Rev. E. Bickersteth of England, who wrote in 1826.

"The first beast (Rev. 12:) represents Pagan Rome; the second beast. (Rev. 13:) Papal Rome; the third beast, Infidel Rome—Rev. 17: 8. This beast is represented as supporting the papacy, verses 3 to 8; verse 10, speaks of seven kings, or the seven distinct forms of government that have existed in Rome since its foundation. Five were fallen when the Apostle wrote—Kings, Consuls, Dictators, Decemvirs and Military Tribunes, with consular authority.

It is then said, 'one is,' which is the sixth, or imperial head, established B. C. 27, and which existed at the time of the vision. After the death of Theodosius the Great, his headship was divided into the Eastern and Western branches. The Eastern fell in 1453, when Constantinople was taken by the Turks. The Western ceased to exist in 1806, when Francis the Second, of Austria, was deprived of it by Napoleon, who became the seventh, or infidel head, and who was to continue a short space, which ended in 1815 after the battle of Waterloo. But this Infidel head is to re-appear, and is to be the eighth, and "is of the seven; that is, it is to be one of the seven forms of governments that have already appeared. There is therefore, yet to arise some other infidel form of government—uncrowned."

So wrote a student of prophecy when all Europe was combined to support the throne of France against any revolution in favor of the Napoleon dynasty—the beast that was; and the combined powers said, he shall be no more. But the Revelator said, verse 8,—"He shall ascend out of the bottomless pit"—and the world have wondered after "the beast that was, is not, and yet is." Now if the last revolution in France has brought about a fulfillment of this prophecy, then Rome will go to perdition, in unity with France in this last form, whether this Napoleon is put an end to, or not. God will fulfil his word. If we are right in applying this to the Napoleon form of government, then there will soon be a great move in all the Italian States or Kingdoms in favor of France, and rapid will be the movement of things. Then the next form of government is God's everlasting kingdom, which will break in pieces every other kingdom and stand forever. This to me is a living evidence that the kingdoms of this world are numbered. That we may be ready for the last event, is the prayer of

Yours in hope,
Matthew Batchelor.

"Objections to Church Fairs."

[The following article was handed to us in Fairhaven, Mass., in tract form, published, I think, by some one in New York, who has evidently torn the veil from his eyes, and is looking at things in their true light.—Ed.]

"We object to them, first, because they are wrong in principle; secondly, because they are injurious to the spiritual interests of the Church.

1st. Wrong in principle. Why? Because a church of Jesus Christ is organized for purely spiritual or religious services—not for a great copartnership in trade, or an assembly for social enjoyment. All the meetings of a church, as such, should be spiritual, not carnal: not to eat and drink; not to buy and sell ginger-nuts and doll-babies, or more substantial viands and fancies, to raise means to pay church expenses, (which seems to be the soul and body of a church fair.) Further, they are wrong and corrupt in principle, because they appeal to the appetites and passions of worldly men to obtain aid from them to support Christ's Gospel, not to their judgment and conscience, to sustain it on its own merits. Indeed, a Church fair has some of the essential elements of the Romish sale of Indulgences!

2d. We object to Church Fairs, because what is wrong in principle cannot be otherwise than corrupt in practice. Who that has been conversant with the getting up and carrying out of Fairs can doubt for a moment that their whole or main tendency is to worldliness and carnal mirth? Who does not know that they make the pulpit an advertising stand for sale of worldly goods, and some parts of God's house a place of merchandise, and feasting too? thereby adding something to the desecration of God's house of prayer beyond that of which the ancient Jews were guilty, and for which Christ scourged them out of the Temple. Perhaps those very Jews thought, as modern Christians do, that they were trading for the benefit of the people of God, and therefore any means might be used, and no place too holy for them to make a scene of merchandising. A good tree does not bring forth corrupt fruit; but fairs have brought forth gambling by lotteries, and post-offices filled with utter nonsense. Alas! churches have been built by lotteries, and Doctors of Divinity (a few at least) have purchased lottery-tickets; and we know not but some would have continued to do so to this day had not worldly Legislatures become so convinced of their immoral tendencies as to pass stringent laws to suppress the whole abomination.

Truly we must 'call no man Father on the earth.' We must make use of that right that Rome denies us, the right of private judgment. To convince, if possible, our Church Fair-making Christians of the scorn they bring upon Christ's cause, and the injury they inflict on the spiritual interests of a church, by holding them, we seriously ask the following questions, viz: Would you be glad to find it recorded in the Acts of the Apostles that the Jerusalem Church were so poor or illiberal, and the worldly or unconverted so unwilling to aid them, that in order to sustain Peter, James, and John, in preaching the Gospel, they had to get up a fair in one of their synagogues and sell fancy articles, and, perchance, the garments made by Dorcas for the poor? We judge not. As our concluding question, we ask: Have you, my Christian brother, my Christian sister, ever witnessed an increased attendance on church prayer-meetings, and an increased spirit of prayer amongst professors, while arranging and bringing out a Fair in a church lecture-room; or a revival of religion pure and undefiled springing up simultaneously with a Church Fair? If prayers and fairs are not congenial to each other, away with the latter, at once and forever! But for fear our prose reasonings may not convince all whom we, by these presents, address, we will try the power of song.

"We have fallen upon evil times," said a minister of Christ lately, alluding to Church Fairs.

The Church and world amalgamate,
A union worse than with the State,
Though motives are the same.
The love of pleasure and of gold
On some professors have such hold,
They oft forget their name!

In olden time, saints used to pray,
And fast, and keep a solemn day,
When Zion was distressed;
But now, the way to heal her woes,
Save her from penury and foes,
And make her fully blessed,

Is just to hold a feast, a fair,
A graceless frolic, without prayer,
For prayer would spoil the fun,
Scare all the Goats at once away,
(Whose milk alone comes by this play,)
And make them wildly run!

Therefore, avaunt! all sober looks,
All prayers, and hymns, and godly books;
Your holy sanctum clear
Of all, that Goats in heart despise,
And Sheep appear in Goats' disguise,
So they'll have nought to fear.

Make God's own house a place of trade!
Its lecture-room, a mere arcade
For vanity—a Fair!
Doll-babies there—all bagatelles
Be bought by beaux, and sold by belles;
Grand means, for them to PAIR!

Such charming scenes subdue the heart,
Make misers free with gold to part
To help our church extension;
When, on the merits of the cause,
They would not give two wheaten straws
To save it from declension!!!

But money must be made, you know,
To keep up pageantry and show,
Or get the Gospel preached;
So any means, that brings good ends,
May now be used by Jesus' friends,
Most sure, where money 's reached!

And if there should by any wrong
In fairs, and feasts, and mirthful song,
The cause of Christ to aid,
Why, then protracted meetings hold,
Convert all sinners, young and old,
Till full atonement 's made!!!

Oh, false in doctrine! and in act!
The Church turned merchant! hateful fact!
God's house the place for fairs!!
My Savior, make my song a scourge,
Thy house and people thereby purge,
And fit them both for prayers!"

For the Crisis.

God is Great.

How great is our God! The heavens with all their sublime and glorious variety are but "the work of" His "fingers." The earth, with all its furniture, is but the effect of His mighty Word—for "He spake, and it was done." "He holds the winds in His fists, and the waters in the hollow of His hand." "He taketh up the islands as a very little thing. Before "Him the inhabitants of earth" are like grasshoppers." Let all the nations tremble before Him.

E. B.

Revival.—After a time of time of general religious declension, indications are of the outpouring of God's spirit in various sections of the country. In Paoli, Geo., Cincinnati, and in the congregations of the Southern Methodist Episcopal Church, one thousand conversions are reported.

Poetry.

HUMAN LIFE.

Slow pass our days
In childhood, and the hours of night are long
Betwixt the morn and eve; with swifter lapse
They glide in manhood; and in age they fly;
Till days and seasons flit before the mind
As flit the snow-flakes in a winter's storm,
Seen rather than distinguished. Ah! I seem
As if I sat within a helpless bark
By swiftly running waters hurried on
To shoot some mighty cliff. Along the banks,
Grove after grove, rock after frowning rock,
Bare sands, and pleasant homes and flowery nooks,
And Isles, and whirlpools in the stream appear
Each after each, but the devoted skiff
Darts by so swiftly that their images
Dwell not upon the mind, or only dwell
In dim confusion; faster yet I sweep
By other banks, and the great gulf is near.

Wisely, my son, while yet thy days are long
And this fair change of seasons passes slow,
Gather and treasure the good they yield—
All that they teach of virtue, of pure thoughts
And kind affections, reverence for thy God
And for thy brethren; so when thou shalt come
Into these barren years, thou mayest not bring
A mind unfurnished and a withered heart.

Bryant.

Corespondence.

For the Crisis.

From Sr. V. N. Cudworth.

Dear Children:—With a heart swelling with gratitude to God, I can say I am happy. It may seem to many, a careless word, easily spoken; but why should I not be? Wisdom's "ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace." "The blessing of God maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow therewith." Now let us not deceive ourselves, for God is not mocked; if we are continually complaining, and fretting, we are not in wisdom's paths. If we are miserable, and wretched, in my humble opinion, we are also poor, and blind, and naked.

Perhaps some may say, "Sr. Cudworth has nothing to make her sad."

Well, I am having at present some evidence that God loves me, which I should not have if not chastened. The heart sometimes shrinks too, when my Father presents some little cup, exquisitely painful, but for many years I have been trying to cultivate a cheerful trust in God. While blest with faith hope and charity, our frail bark glides safely over the rolling wave; and pain, scorn, buffeting, temptation and bereavement, cannot make me miserable, for I can be "sorrowful, (on account of these things) yet always rejoicing," and I can exclaim,—all, all things must work for my good, while I endure, as seeing Him who is invisible. And though the winds may blow, the rains descend and beat upon my house, which may sometimes tremble, still it cannot fall, for it is built upon the rock. I am heir to an inheritance, incorruptible, and undefiled, and that will never fade away.

Glory to heaven's King! with such a such a prospect in view, and a heart filled with love, pure, burning love, we must be glad. O, for more of that love which many waters cannot quench, nor floods drown. There is a potent charm in it; 'tis a spark from the heavenly furnace—a drop from the crystal stream. It sheds a glory on our pathway, and lights up death's valley, with its soothing power.

And now, children, send articles to the paper that will edify, and strengthen. There are some points upon which the brethren differ; don't contend forever about them. I believe the soul is mortal, and can die, but I cannot be fed well on any one isolated truth all the time.

When Bro. Grant said, "let the sabbath question rest for awhile," my heart responded, Amen—and the Age to come too.

We must have things new as well as old, to make a paper interesting, and practical sermons, I think, are greatly needed. I want something, as Sammy Hick has said,—"fresh from the bake-stone." I can say of our paper—

Thou sanctified minion, I'm jealous for thee,
Thou hast long borne the impress of purity, truth;
And borne on thy bosom the thoughts of the free,
All stainless and meek in thy weakness and youth.

And my prayer is, let not its gray hairs go down in dishonor to the grave.

Your sister in Christ,
Vesta N. Cudworth.

The Portland Advertiser says that about five thousand of the citizens of Portland are believers in, or investigators of Spiritualism.

For the Children.

The Bridal Wine-Cup.

'Pledge with wine—pledge with wine,' cried the young and thoughtless Harvey Wood. 'Pledge with wine,' ran through the crowd.

The beautiful bride grew pale; the decisive hour had come. She pressed her white hands together, and as the leaves of her bridal wreath trembled on her pure brow, her breath became quicker, and her heart beat wilder.

'Yes, Marion, lay aside your scruples for this once," said the Judge in an easy tone, going toward his daughter, 'the company expect it. Do not so seriously infringe upon the rights of etiquette; in your own home act as you please, but in mine, for this once, please me."

Every eye was turned towards the bridal pair. Marion's principles were well known. Henry had been a convivialist, but of late his friends noticed the change in his habits, and to night they watched to see, as they sneeringly said, if he was tied down to a woman's opinion so soon.'

Pouring a brimming beaker they held it with tempting smiles toward Marion. She was very pale, though more composed, and her hand shook not, as smiling back, she gracefully accepted the crystal tempter and raised it to her lips. But scarcely had she done so when every hand was arrested by her piercing exclamation of 'oh! how terrible!'

'What is it?' cried one, all, thronging together, for she had slowly carried the glass at arm's length and was fixedly regarding it, as though it was some hideous object.

'What!' she answered, while an inspired light shone from her dark eyes; 'wait and I will tell you. I see,' she added slowly, pointing her jewelled finger at the sparkling liquid, 'a sight that beggars all description, and yet listen—I will paint it for you if I can. It is a lonely spot; tall mountains, crowned with verdure, rise in awful sublimity around; a river runs through, and bright flowers grow on the water's edge. There is a thick warm mist that the sun seems vainly to pierce. Trees, lofty and beautiful, wave to the airy motion of the birds; but there—a group of Indians gather; they flit to and fro, with something like sorrow on their dark brows, and in their midst lies a manly form—but his dark cheek how deathly; his eyes wild with the fitful fire of fever. One friend stands beside him—I should say kneels—for see, he is pillowing that poor head upon his breast.

'Genius in ruins—oh! the high, holy looking brow, why should death mark it, and he so young! Look how he throws back the dark curls! see him clasp his hands! hear his thrilling shrieks for life! mark how he clutches at the arm of his companion imploring to be saved! Oh! hear him call piteously his father's name; see him twine his fingers together as he shrieks for his sister—the twin of his soul,—weeping for him in the distant native land.

'See! she exclaimed, while the bridal party shrank back, the untasted wine trembling in their grasp, and the Judge fell overpowered upon his seat; 'see, his arms are lifted to heaven—he prays, how wildly, for mercy! but fever rushes thro' his veins. The friend beside him is weeping! awe-stricken, the dark men turn silently away, and leave the living and the dying together."

There was a hush in that princely parlor, broken only by what seemed a sob from some manly bosom. The bride stood yet upright, with quivering lip, and tears stealing to the outward edge of her lashes. Her beautiful arm has lost extension, and the glass, with its little troubled red waves, came slowly toward the range of her vision. She spoke again; every lip was mute. Her voice was low, faint, yet awfully distinct. She still fixed her eyes sorrowfully upon the wine cup.

'It is evening now; the great white moon is coming up, and her beams lie gently on his forehead. He moves not—his eyes are set in their sockets; dim are the piercing glances; in vain the friends whispered the name of father and sister; death, and no soft hand, no gentle voice to soothe him. His head sinks back! one convulsive skudder! he is dead!'

A groan ran through the assembly, so vivid was her description, so unearthly her look, so inspired her manner, that what she described seemed actually to have taken place then and there. They noticed, also, that the bridegroom held his face in his hands and was weeping.

'Dead!' she repeated again, her lips quivering faster, and her voice more broken; and there they scoop him a grave; and there, without a shroud, they lay him down in that damp, reeking earth. The only son of a proud father, the idolized brother of a fond sister. And he sleeps to-day in that distant country, with no stone to mark the spot. There he lies—my father's son—my twin brother! a victim to this deadly poison. Father," she exclaimed, turning suddenly, while the tears rained down her beautiful cheeks, "father, shall I drink it now?'

The form of the old Judge was convulsed with agony. He raised not his head, but in a smothered voice he faltered—'No, no, my child, in God's name—NO.'

She lifted her glittering goblet, and letting it suddenly fall to the floor, it was dashed in a thousand pieces. Nany a tearful eye watched her movement, and instantaneously every wine glass was transferred to the table on which it had been prepared. Then, as she looked at the fragments of crystal, she turned to the company saying, 'Let no friend hereafter, who loves me, tempt me to peril my soul for wine. Not firmer are the everlasting hills than my resolve, God helping me, never to touch or taste that terrible poison. And he to whom I have given my hand—who watched over my brother's dying form in that solemn hour, and buried him there by the river in that land of gold, will, I trust, sustain me in that resolve. Will you not, my husband?"

His glittering eyes, his sad. sweet smile, was her answer. The Judge left the room, and when, an hour after, he returned, and with a more subdued manner took part in the entertainment of the bridal guests, no one could fail to see that he, too, had determined to banish the enemy at once and forever from his princely home.

Those who were present at the wedding, can never forget the impression so solemnly made.—Christian Secretary.

Domestic Summary.

From Nicaragua.—New York, Dec. 15.—The steamship Tennesce arrived this morning, from Nicaraugua via Key West.

Gen. Walker had fought several successful battles since the departure of the last steamer. He had, however, on account of sickness prevailing at Granada, found it necessary to evacuate and burn that city, having removed his sick and wounded to Ometepe. This is an island of some extent in Lake Nicaragua, lying nearly opposite Virgin Bay. The terrible news has transpired that the natives, who are all terribly exasperated against Walker, had arisen and massacred these unfortunate people. The island is inhabited principly by Indians. When the sick and wounded were landed there, all the Indians fled, save a few who were retained as nurses. There were no provisions, no beds, and no medicines provided for them. Several of the patients were for days without food. The larger part of the sick and wounded lay on the beach all night The next day all of them were distributed among the huts, or taken into the church of the village—converted into a hospital—except some twenty, who lay out in the rain. Two died on the steamer and several on the beach. The village was filled with the sick and wounded, the women and children. An effort was made by the Commandant of the place, who arrived next day, to separate the healthy from the sick. There were about sixty men able to bear arms. The entire work of feeding, landing, quartering, burying the dead, &c., was performed by some twelve men, among whom Captain Baldwin was conspicuous for his courage and humanity.

During the five days thirty-six died. Then one night the enemy crept into the village and surprised the Americans.—Some twenty persons escaped in three boats. Whether the rest were slaughtered or merely made prisoners, was not known to a certainty. Those who escaped in the boats sufferred dreadful hardships. There was only one woman among them, Mrs. Aikens, wife of one of the musicians. All the American women in Nicaragua were on the island with their children—perhaps forty in number. Col. Skerritt, Col. Thompson, Gen. Fry, and a number of other officers, were on the island, but there was no organized military force. The landing, the subsequent sufferering of the sick and wounded, with only miserable reed huts to shelter them, and no provisions for the sick but beef and plantains, the deaths, the promiscuous burying of men, women and children in common hole, and the subsequent night attacks and probable massacre or captivity of three hundred persons of all ranks and ages and of both sexes—all conspire to form one of the most dreadful pictures of war.

All this time where was Walker? After leaving Hennigsen in charge of Granada, he accompanied the sick and wounded to Ometepe and left them there. When he got back to Grenada he found Hennigsen besieged, as we have shown, and he has been ever since cut off from all communication with him.

All Walker's forces then consisted of the 400 men under Henningsen, besieged in Grenada, of the 250 men under Col. Jacques, who were garrisoning Virgin Bay, and of 100 at the two forts of Serapiqui and Port Collis,—in all 750 men. This is all that is left him out of over 5000 men who have gone from this country to join his standard. It is no wonder that the mortality has been so great in his army; for all accounts concur in representing him to have been most profligate in his waste of human life. He knows nothing and never would learn anything of the art of war.

His average loss of men since he went to Nicaragua, has been some 300 per month. The allied force that is opposed to him is not known. It probably amounts to some 5000 men. He received recently reinforcements of 250 men from New Orleans, and 30 from New York. These were ascending the river as the passengers for the Tennessee were coming down. Poor fellows! a hard fate seems to be in store for them, even though Walker should escape from his perilous position, of which, however, there does not seem to be much probability. Many Americans, in transit through Nicaragua, or who have visited it for business or pleasure, have been forced in spite of themselves to attach themselves to his fortunes. They cannot leave without passports, and these he would not give until they found themselves compelled, to avoid starvation, to join his army. He was playing a desperate game, and was reckless as to the instrumentality he used. The game, however, seems nearly played out, and fillibusterism is at a discount.

Never neglect small matters and expenses.